Words are not to be construed in a frivolous or ineffectual sense, when a contrary exposition can be given them. They should have a reasonable construction, according to the intent of the parties. Chitty, Cont. 79. In Gunnison v. Bancroft, 11 Vt. 490, it is held that language used by one party to a contract is to receive such a construction as he at the time supposed the other party would give to it, or such a construction as the other party was fairly justified in giving to it. In Judevine v. Goodrich, 35 Vt. 19, where one, in reply to the request of another for a license to do something in respect to the former's property, did not intend to accede to the request, but purposely used language susceptible of a double interpretation in this respect, with the intention that the other party should derive the impression that he did accede to the request, and the other did derive such impression and relied on it, it was held that he was bound to the same extent as if he had, in express words, granted the license. When the plaintiff said to the officers of the bank, in reply to their request that he leave the money, that he would accept a new certificate signed by the defendant, otherwise he wanted his money, they had the right to understand him as offering to leave the money for a reasonable time if such a certificate were furnished. They accepted of his offer, furnished the certificate, he accepted of it, and forbore for a reasonable time the exercise of his right to draw the money. All parties seemed to have understood that such was his undertaking, and what was said and done admits of no other interpretation, and such will be deemed to have been the contract.

It is insisted that the defendant's promise was without consideration, because no time of forbearance was agreed upon. A promise to forbear and give further time for the payment of a debt, although no certain or definite time be named, if followed by an actual forbearance for a reasonable time, is a valid and sufficient consideration for a promise to pay the debt by a person other than the debtor. King v. Upton, 4 Me. 387, 16 Am. Dec. 266; Elton v. Johnson, 16 Conn. 258; Hove v. Taggart, 133 Mass. 284; Prouty v. Wilson, 123 Mass. 297; Robinson v. Gould, 11 Cush. 55; Moore v. McKenney, 83 Me. 80. In Hove v. Taggart, supra, Field, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, says: "It seems to have been assumed in this Commonwealth that an agreement to forbear bringing suit for a debt due, even although for an indefinite time, and even although it cannot be construed to be an agreement for perpetual forbearance, if followed by actual forbearance for a reasonable time, is a good consideration for a promise." In Moore v. McKenney, supra, decided by the Supreme Court of Maine in 1890, the defendant wrote his name upon the back of the note declared upon, intending thereby to guarantee its payment. He did this in consideration of the plaintiff's promise to forbear and give further time for the payment of the note; no time of forbearance was agreed upon, and it was held that the court properly ordered a verdict for the plaintiff. Walton, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, says: "If the promise is in general terms, no particular time being named, the law implies that the forbearance shall be for a reasonable time.

16 L. R. A.

Such is the legal construction of such a promise. The debtor, therefore, by such promise, does obtain a right, not only to some delay, but to a reasonable delay; such, as, under all the circumstances, he is reasonably entitled to." In King v. Upton, supra, the promise counted on was to pay the debt of another, in consideration that the creditor would "forbear and give further time for the payment of the debt," naming no time. The plaintiff averred that he did thereupon forbear, and the consideration was held sufficient. In Calkins v. Chandler, 36 Mich. 320, 24 Am. Rep. 593, it is held that an agreement to pay the debt of another in consideration that the creditor would forbear and give further time for payment is founded upon a good consideration, although no definite time of forbearance is named. In Hakes v. Hotchkiss, 23 Vt. 235, it is said: "If no agreement be made as to the length of time during which the promisee will forbear, the law will presume that he undertakes to forbear for a reasonable time; and this is sufficiently certain, and is a good consideration." Parsons, in his work on Contracts (vol. 1, p. 442,) says: "Nor need the agreement to delay be for a time certain, for it may be for a reasonable time only, and yet be sufficient consideration for a promise."

The Revised Statutes of the United States (sec. 5242, relating to banks) provide, among other things, that all payments of money made after the commission of an act of insolvency, or in contemplation thereof, with a view to prevent the application of its assets in the manner provided in that chapter, or with a view to the preference of one creditor to another, except in payment of its circulating notes, shall be utterly null and void. It is insisted by the defendant that a payment by the bank at the time the plaintiff called for his money would have been void under this provision of the statute; that the plaintiff lost nothing by his agreement and forbearance; and that neither the bank nor the defendant were benefited thereby. Notwithstanding this statute and the insolvency of the bank, the plaintiff waived a legal right in consideration of the defendant's promise. Before he agreed to forbear, the certificates were not subject to any defense, and he could have negotiated them, and they would have been payable on presentation at the bank. By surrendering them, and taking a new certificate impaired by his agreement to forbear, he made his claim subject to a defense that would be likely to affect its negotiability and value. Had the plaintiff drawn his money, it is not certain that the receiver would have called for it, or that he would have recovered it by an action. A determination of the receiver's right to the money might necessitate a trial of doubtful issues of law and fact. The plaintiff had a right to draw, and to try and hold, the money. He waived this right in consideration of the defendant's promise. But for this promise he would have drawn his money January 14, 1884. The receiver was not appointed until some three months thereafter, during which time no one could have rightfully called on him for the money; and during this time, at least, he waived his right to have and enjoy his money. He may, or may not, have been damaged by waiving these rights. He waived them in consideration of the defendant's promise, and that is sufficient.

Consideration does not necessarily depend upon whether the thing promised results in a benefit to the promisee, or a detriment to the promisor. It is enough that something is promised, or the exercise of a present right is forborne. In Anson, on Contracts, p. 62, it is said: "Courts will not inquire whether the thing which forms the consideration does, in fact, benefit the promisee or a third party or is of any benefit to any one. It is enough that something is promised, done, forborne, or suffered by the party to whom the promise is made, as a consideration for the promise made to him." The law will not enter into an inquiry as to the adequacy of the consideration for a promise, but will leave the parties to be the sole judges of the benefits to be derived therefrom, unless the inadequacy of the consideration is so gross as of itself to prove fraud or imposition. Judy v. Louderman, 48 Ohio St. 562. In general, a waiver of any legal right, at the request of another party, is a sufficient consideration for a promise. 1 Parsons, Cont. p. 444. Any damage or suspension or forbearance of a right will be sufficient to sustain a promise. 2 Kent, Com. 12th ed. p. 465. In Burr v. Wilcox, 13 Allen, 273, Wells, J., in defining "consideration," says: "Any act done at the defendant's request, and for his convenience, or to the inconvenience of the plaintiff, would be sufficient." The exchequer chamber, in 1875, defined "consideration" as follows: "A valuable consideration, in the sense of the law, may consist either in some right, interest, profit, or benefit, accruing to the one party, or some forbearance, detriment, loss, or responsibility given, suffered, or undertaken by the other." Any act done by the promisee at the request of the promisor, however trifling the loss to himself or the benefit to the promisor, is a sufficient consideration for a promise made without fraud, and with full knowledge of all the circumstances. Doyle v. Dixon, 97 Mass. 213, 98 Am. Dec. 80. Pollock, in his work on Contracts, p. 166, says: "Consideration means, not so much that one party is profiting, as that the other abandons some legal right in the present." In Boyd v. Freize, 5 Gray, 554, Shaw, Ch. J., says: "An agreement, therefore, to forego one's legal right; or forbear collecting a debt, or enforcing any other beneficial right, is a good consideration for an express promise made upon it. Such agreement may be express or implied by law."

There was evidence tending to show that the defendant was a maker of the certificate, and, if such maker, his undertaking was to pay the plaintiff the amount called for by the certificate when it, properly indorsed, should be returned to the bank. The bank having been closed, and a receiver appointed, a return of the certificate, properly indorsed, to the receiver, was all that was required. No other demand or notice was necessary before bringing suit. There were no officers of the bank to whom the certificate could be returned. The funds of the bank were in the hands of the receiver, and, for the purpose of returning the certificate as therein provided, the receiver was the bank. The plaintiff was allowed to testify that he would not have left his money in the bank, if he had not understood that the defendant was obligated to pay it. The plaintiff was allowed to testify, without objection, that he went to the bank for the purpose of drawing his money; and there was no error in allowing him to state that he would have done what he proposed to do, but for the defendant's promise. The defendant requested the court to instruct the jury "that if Albert Sowles and Edward S. Sowles signed the certificate as indorsers, with the right of demand and notice, then, under the testimony, the defendant is not liable." We think, from the testimony, that, if Albert and Edward A. Sowles were indorsers, then the defendant was an indorser; but the necessity for such instruction was obviated by the instruction that, if the jury found that the defendant was an indorser, then the plaintiff could not recover, and it was not error to decline to give the instruction requested. Whatever may have been the relation of the signers of the certificate to each other, they were for the purpose of determining their liability to the plaintiff, either makers or indorsers of the certificate. The evidence showing the understanding between the signers of the certificate as to their respective liability to the plaintiff, and as between each other, was not withdrawn from the consideration of the jury; and it was for them to say, from all the evidence, whether the undertaking of the defendant was that of a maker or that of an indorser. The court told the jury that, if nothing was said to the plaintiff to explain to him that their obligation on the certificate was that of indorsers, and not makers, he had the right to understand that they were makers and absolutely liable upon it. It is insisted by counsel for the defendant that the affixing of the word "surety" to the defendant's name was notice to the plaintiff that the defendant intended to limit and restrict his liability, and that this fact should overcome the presumption of law laid down by the court. The word "surety," affixed to the defendant's name, only indicated to the plaintiff the fact that the defendant was surety for the bank, and this was already known to him. He knew that the bank had the money; that the defendants E. A. Sowles and A. Sowles did not have it; and that, in fact, they were sureties for the bank; but this fact did not change the undertaking of the defendant from that of a maker to that of an indorser entitled to demand and notice. A surety is an original maker, and becomes primarily and absolutely liable, as much so as the principal, to any person lawfully holding the paper. Bank of Newbury v. Richards, 35 Vt. 264. The defendant was liable, prima facie, as a maker of the certificate. National Bank of Bellows Falls v. Dorset Marble Co. 61 Vt. 106, 2 L. R. A. 428; Strong v. Rikers, 16 Vt. 554. But this presumption was susceptible of being controlled by evidence of the real obligation intended to be assumed by the defendant, and known to the plaintiff. The court made a proper application of this rule in admitting evidence as to what transpired before and at the time of the execution of the certificate of deposit, as affecting the liability of the defendant, and told the jury that, if they found that the defendant was an indorser, then the plaintiff could not recover. To justify the verdict returned by the jury, they must have found that the defendant's undertaking was that of a maker of the certificate. The court told the jury that, if the defendant put his name upon the certificate for the purpose of stopping a run on the bank and tiding it over its then exigency, this would be a sufficient consideration. If this was not the true test of consideration, the defendant has no reason to complain. It was not necessary that he receive a consideration. As the evidence stood, the question as to whether he received a consideration was an immaterial issue, and the defendant was not prejudiced by the court's submitting such issue to the jury. It appeared from the undisputed facts that his principal received a sufficient consideration to support his promise. This was all that was required. Moore v. McKenney, King v. Upton and Howe v. Taggart, supra. The court might have properly held that a sufficient consideration was established by the uncontradicted facts, and withheld this question from the consideration of the jury. The plaintiff concedes that there was error in the pro forma ruling of the court upon the question of interest, and offers to remit the excess of interest included in the judgment rendered in the county court.

Judgment reversed.

Judgment for the plaintiff to recover $962, with interest to be computed at the rate of 4 per cent per annum from the date of the certificate to the date of the writ, and 6 per cent thereafter, and his costs in the county court, less the dividends paid on the certificate by the receiver, and the defendant's costs in this court.

Taft, J.:

On the 14th of January, 1884, the bank was hopelessly insolvent and the plaintiff had no right to withdraw his money. I therefore, while not dissenting, doubt on the subject of consideration.

TEXAS SUPREME COURT.

Hyman BLUM, Appt.,
v.
L. A. SCHWARTZ et al.
(.....Tex.....)

1. An execution lien is superior to a prior unrecorded conveyance of which the creditor had no notice at the time of the levy, and notice thereof after the levy is immaterial.

NOTE.—Priority of liens of judgment or of prior unrecorded conveyance.

In absence of express statutory definition.

Where the statute avoids an unrecorded conveyance only as against subsequent purchasers in good faith and for a valuable consideration, being silent as to creditors, the lien of a judgment is inferior to an unrecorded mortgage. Vaughn v. Schmalele, 10 L. R. A. 411, 10 Mont. 186.

The liens of judgment creditors are not within the protection of the Registry Acts unless expressly named. They are not "purchasers" or "mortgagees." Hunter v. Watson, 12 Cal. 363, 78 Am. Dec. 543; Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127; Beavan v. Oxford, 6 DeG. M. & G. 492, 517; Runyan v. McClellan, 24 Ind. 185; Bell v. Evans, 10 Iowa, 363; Cover v. Black, 1 Pa. 498; Rodgers v. Gibson, 4 Yeates, 111; Helster v. Fortner, 2 Binn. 40; Cover v. Black, 1 Pa. 493; Greenleaf v. Edes, 2 Minn. 264; Sparks v. State Bank, 7 Blackf. 469; Orth v. Jennings, 8 Blackf. 420; Schmidt v. Hoyt, 1 Edw. Ch. 652, 6 L. ed. 279; Jackson v. Dubois, 4 Johns. 216; Schroeder v. Gurney, 73 N. Y. 430; Thomas v. Kelsey, 30 Barb. 268, 275; Crisfield v. Murdock, 127 N. Y. 315; Evans v. McGlasson, 18 Iowa, 150; Sigworth v. Meriam, 66 Iowa, 477; First Nat. Bank of Tama City v. Hayzlett, 40 Iowa, 659; Moorman v. Gibbs, 75 Iowa, 537; Norton v. Williams, 9 Iowa, 523; Bell v. Evans, 10 Iowa, 363; Seever v. Delashmunt, 11 Iowa, 174; Hayes v. Thode, 18 Iowa, 51; Wright v. Jones, 2 West. Rep. 350, 103 Ind. 17.

The lien of a judgment is not a "conveyance." Wilcoxson v. Miller, 49 Cal. 193.

Under a statute providing that mortgages shall take effect only from their recording the lien of a judgment is superior to a prior unrecorded mortgage. Home Bldg. & Loan Asso. v. Clark, 1 West. Rep. 337, 43 Ohio St. 427; Mayham v. Coombs, 14 Ohio, 423; White v. Denman, 16 Ohio, 60, 1 Ohio St. 16 L. R. A.

2. Proof of payment of a valuable consideration for land bid off by a judgment creditor at a sale under his execution lien which was superior to a prior unrecorded deed is not necessary to enable him to hold the land against the prior grantee.

(June 14, 1882.)

APPPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the District Court for Wise County in 110; Holliday v. Franklin Bank of Columbus, 16 Ohio, 533; Bloom v. Noggle, 4 Ohio St. 45; Fosdick v. Barr, 3 Ohio St. 471; Van Thornhill v. Peters, 26 Ohio St. 471.

Under the Missouri Registry Act avoiding unregistered conveyances except between the parties and such as have actual notice thereof the lien of a judgment is preferred to an unrecorded deed. Reed v. Austin, 9 Mo. 723, 45 Am. Dec. 336; Frothingham v. Stacker, 11 Mo. 77; Waldo v. Russell, 5 Mo. 387.

Under a statute providing that "the mortgages not recorded in time remain valid against the mortgagor but are postponed to all other liens created or obtained, or purchases made prior to the actual record," and that of "the younger lien is created by contract and the party receiving it has notice of the prior unrecorded mortgage, or a purchaser has the like notice, then the lien of the older mortgage shall be held good as against them," a judgment, being a lien not "created by contract," although obtained with notice of a prior unrecorded mortgage, is superior thereto. Andrews v. Mathews, 69 Ga. 466.

The return of an unrecorded deed to the grantor for the purpose of getting another deed with a different grantee does not revert the title in the grantor so that the lien of a judgment against him will attach. Old Nat. Bank of Evansville v. Findley (Ind.), April 26, 1882.

Priority of judgment by virtue of statutes.

It is expressly provided by the Virginia Recording Act that an unrecorded conveyance shall be void as to creditors, and under it, the lien of a judgment is superior to an unrecorded conveyance. McClure v. Thistle, 2 Gratt. 182; Young v. Devries, 31 Gratt. 304.

So, too, in West Virginia, (Anderson v. Nagle, favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to try title to certain real estate. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the commissioner's opinion.

Messrs. Carswell, Fuller & Terrell, for appellant:

A statement by A. Devereux, a third person, in the hearing and presence of appellant's agent, that Dannanbarg had sold the land was insufficient to charge appellant with notice of an unrecorded vendor's lien against same held by Schwartz & Co. by transfer from Dannanbarg.

Wethered v. Boon, 17 Tex. 148; Harrison v. Boring, 44 Tex. 255; Dalton v. Rainey, 75 Tex. 516; Wade, Notice, § 7.

The superior title not being in the assignees of the vendors' lien notes and H. Blum being a subsequent purchaser with his deed on record at the date of the institution of the suits on the vendors' lien notes by the assignees to foreclose same, he was a necessary party to said suits and said judgments were insufficient to support the title of plaintiff against defendant, and the court should have rendered judgment for defendant.

The vendors' lien notes having been assigned by Dannanbarg, the legal title to the land sold did not pass to the assignees, but remained in Dannanbarg and the title was vested in appellant by his purchase at execution sale against Dannanbarg, and the court should have found that Dannanbarg and appellant were both necessary parties to suits to foreclose, and failing to join either of them in such foreclosure proceedings, the legal title was in defendant which should have prevailed over the title asserted through such foreclosure proceedings.

Ufford v. Wells, 52 Tex. 612; Pitman v. Henry, 50 Tex. 857; Dyler v. Johnson, 45 Tex. 509; Black v. Black, 62 Tex. 296; Hamblen v. Folts, 70 Tex. 188.

The recitations in a sheriff's deed is evidence of the bid of the appellant at the sale and the payment by them of the purchase money, and no additional proof was required of appellant to make prima facie this proof.

Miller v. Alexander, 8 Tex. 85; Leland v. Wilson, 84 Tex. 79.

The court erred in not giving judgment for defendant because the proof showed that defendant held title under an execution against Dannanbarg, the levy of which was made without notice of sale by Dannanbarg, actual or constructive, and a valuable consideration paid.

Morton v. Lowell, 56 Tex. 649, and cases cited.

Messrs. Soward & Martin for appellees.

Hobby, P. J., filed the following opinion:

This was an action in the ordinary form of trespass to try title brought by L. A. & E. M. Schwartz, appellees, against H. Blum, appellant, for the recovery of 1,280 acres of land located by virtue of veteran certificate issued to George Ramsdale, and situated in Wise and Jack counties. Suit was instituted July 8, 1890. The defendant answered by general demurrer and a plea of not guilty. Trial was had before the court, and judgment rendered 12 W. Va. 96; and Mississippi (Washington v. Doe, 54 U. S. 18 How. 283, 14 L. ed. 149); and the District of Columbia. Metropolitan Bank of Washington v. Hitz, 1 Mackey, 111.

The New Jersey Recording Act expressly places subsequent judgment creditors on an equal footing with bona fide purchasers as to unrecorded conveyances and without actual or constructive notice thereof at the time of the recovery of judgment such conveyances are void as to such creditors. Hodge v. Amerman, 2 Cent. Rep. 741, 40 N. J. Eq. 99; Garwood v. Garwood, 9 N. J. L. 242.

The lien of a judgment creditor without notice of a prior unrecorded conveyance is superior although the title of the judgment debtor was not disclosed by the record and was unknown to the creditor till after the entry of the judgment. Vreeland v. Clafflin, 24 N. J. Eq. 813.

Under a Registry Act making unrecorded conveyances void as against judgment creditors not having notice thereof, the lien of an unrecorded mortgage given by the ancestor is superior to that of a judgment against the heir obtained in the ancestor's lifetime. Voorhis v. Westervelt, 11 Cent. Rep. 226, 43 N. J. Eq. 642.

But after if the judgment was obtained after the ancestor's death. Ibid.

A bona fide purchaser of the heir's estate sold after the ancestor's death under such judgment, without notice of the unrecorded mortgage, will take free from the lien of such mortgage. Ibid.

Under a statute providing that no unrecorded conveyance "shall be good or effectual in law or in equity against creditors or subsequent purchasers for a valuable consideration and without notice," the claim of a judgment creditor to his debtor's share of the moneys arising from a sale in partition is superior to that under an unrecorded conveyance of such debtor's interest in the land of 16 L. R. A.

which the judgment creditor had no notice prior to the recovery of his judgment. Eldridge v. Post, 20 Fla. 579.

In Pennsylvania under a statute providing that no unrecorded mortgage "shall be good or sufficient to convey or pass any freehold or inheritance," it is held that an unrecorded mortgage is postponed to a judgment of subsequent date (Sample v. Burd, 7 Berg. & R. 290; Friedley v. Hamilton, 17 Serg. & R. 70, 17 Am. Dec. 638; Jaques v. Weeks, 7 Watts, 261; Corpman v. Baccastow, 84 Pa. 363); unless the judgment creditor had actual notice of the unrecorded mortgage. Manufacturer's & M. Bank v. Bank of Pennsylvania, 7 Watts & S. 335, 43 Am. Dec. 240.

In Columbus Buggy Co. v. Graves, 106 Ill. 459, 462, it is said: "Authorities from another state under a different statute do not apply under our statute, which provides that all deeds and title papers shall be in force and take effect from and after the time of filing the same for record, and not before, as to all creditors and subsequent bona fide purchasers without notice, and that as to them, all such deeds and title papers shall be adjudged void until the same shall be filed for record. A creditor, under the statute, is held to be one who effects a lien upon land. A judgment creditor and a purchaser are equally protected, and it is the settled law of this state that a judgment lien attaches to whatever interest in real estate the records disclose in the judgment debtor, in the absence of notice from other sources; and notice at the time of the levy of execution and sale, of an unrecorded deed or mortgage, will avail nothing as against the force of the lien."

A purchaser and a judgment creditor having a lien stand upon the same equity. Massey v. Westcott, 40 Ill. 160.

The judgment lien is superior to an unrecorded on March 10, 1890, in favor of appellees for the land and cost of suit, to which appellant excepted, and gave notice of appeal. At request of appellant, the court filed his conclusions of law and findings of fact. To these findings and conclusions appellant excepted and filed his bill.

Both parties derive title from and under G. Dannanbarg, as a common source. The land in question was transferred by G. Dannanbarg to T. J. Chenoweth and T. J. Cox on the 15th day of August, 1882, by bond for title. At the same time Cox and Chenoweth paid G. Dannanbarg $400, and gave their three several promissory notes to G. Dannanbarg for $400 each, which notes became due on August 15, 1883, 1884, and 1885, respectively. The bond for title was not recorded until May 12, 1884. One of these notes was transferred to D. Schwartz & Co., and the others to P. O. Saunders. The first note was transferred before maturity, (August 15, 1882,) and prior to the levy of appellant's execution. Schwartz & Co. instituted suit on this note on September 17, 1888, against Cox and Chenoweth as makers, and Dannanbarg as indorser, and foreclosed their lien on the land involved, on November 5, 1888. Under this foreclosure, an order of sale was made, the land was sold in February, 1884, and Schwartz & Co. became the purchasers. The other two notes were assigned to P. O. Saunders, who also brought suit on them against Cox and Chenoweth and Max Steifel. In this suit judgment was rendered March 18, 1887, and the lien on the land foreclosed. It was sold in June, 1887, and the appellees bought in the same. On March 17, 1888, the firm of Leon & H. Blum, a firm composed of Leon Blum, defendant Hyman Blum, and Sylvan Blum, obtained a judgment against G. Dannanbarg in district court of Galveston county. That execution was issued on said judgment, and levied upon the land involved in this suit on the 31st day of March, 1888, and sold on the first Tuesday in June, 1888, to appellant, H. Blum. That said land was levied upon as the property of G. Dannanbarg. It appears, from further findings of the court, that appellant had no notice of the sale of the land owned by Dannanbarg to Cox and Chenoweth prior to the levy of the execution. But that after the levy, and before the sale, the court finds that "A. Devereux told Hendrix, agent of defendant, that G. Dannanbarg had conveyance of which the judgment creditor had no notice before his lien attached. Ibid.; Roane v. Baker (Ill.) 1 West. Rep. 378.

The holder of a judgment for costs is within the protection of the Recording Act as a "creditor." McFadden v. Worthington, 45 Ill. 383.

Under the South Carolina statute avoiding unrecorded conveyances "as to the rights of subsequent creditors," a judgment on a debt contracted before the execution of an unrecorded mortgage rendered after the date of such mortgage is inferior to the mortgage. Carraway v. Carraway, 27 S. C. 576.

Prior to the Act of 1876, extending the protection of the Recording Acts of subsequent creditors, the lien of all judgments was inferior to an unrecorded mortgage. Ibid., referring to Ash v. Ash, 1 Bay, 806; Smith v. Smith, 1 McCord, Eq. 148; Barnwell v. Porteus, 2 Hill, Eq. 221; Steele v. Mansell, 6 Rich. L. 442; Ashe v. Livingston, 2 Bay, 80.

Under the Nebraska statute providing that all deeds, mortgages, and other instruments shall be void "as to all such creditors and subsequent purchasers without notice whose deeds, mortgages, and other instruments shall be first recorded," a prior unrecorded deed made and delivered in good faith for a valuable consideration will take precedence of a judgment if recorded before any deed to the premises be recorded which is based upon such judgment. Mansfield v. Gregory, 8 Neb. 432; Haral v. Gray, 10 Neb. 186.

Under this statute it is not enough to defeat a prior unrecorded conveyance that one is simply a creditor of the grantor but it must appear that his claim or lien is evidenced by some instrument required to be recorded. Galway v. Malchow, 7 Neb. 285, overruling Bennet v. Fooks, 1 Neb. 465.

By the Minnesota statute an unrecorded conveyance is expressly declared void as against any judgment obtained against the vendor prior to the recording of such conveyance and while the vendor has the record title. Dutton v. McReynolds, 81 Minn. 66; Windom v. Schuppel, 39 Minn. 35; Coles v. Berryhill, 37 Minn. 53.

Prior to this provision of the statute a judgment became a lien on the judgment debtor's actual interest in the land regardless of what interest the record showed was apparently his. Greenleaf v. 16 L. R. A.

Edes, 2 Minn. 264; Johnson v. Robinson, 20 Minn. 189; Baze v. Arper, 6 Minn. 220.

A judgment takes precedence of a prior unrecorded deed by the judgment debtor and also of an equity against him to have a recorded deed reformed so as to include other land, the judgment creditor having no notice of the error. Wilcox v. Loominster Nat. Bank, 43 Minn. 541, 19 Am. St. Rep. 259.

Under the Michigan statute creditors may avoid an unrecorded mortgage who have during its absence from the record done anything material which they may be fairly considered to have done on the basis of its non-existence. Root v. Harl, 63 Mich. 420.

Effect of notice on rank of lien of judgment.

If a judgment creditor have actual notice of a prior unregistered mortgage it is the same to him as though registered, and when registered will relate back to the time of its execution and delivery of which the judgment creditor had notice. Morris v. White, 36 N. J. Eq. 324, citing Priest v. Rice, 1 Pick. 164; Jackson v. Van Valkenburgh, 8 Cow. 260; Jackson v. Winslow, 9 Cow. 13.

The lien of a judgment is subordinate to the equitable title of a vendee in possession under an unrecorded contract where the judgment creditor had notice, actual or constructive, of the rights of such vendee, at the time of the entry of his judgment. Baker v. Thompson, 36 Minn. 814.

Although the statute making the lien of a judgment superior to prior unrecorded conveyances is silent on the question of notice, still notice to the creditor of such a conveyance prior to the entry of his judgment will postpone his judgment to the unrecorded conveyance. Daniels v. Sorrella, 9 Ala. 433, 445; Woods v. Legg, 31 Ala. 611; Lamberton v. Merchant's Nat. Bank of Winona, 24 Minn. 231; Byers v. Engles, 16 Ark. 542.

But under the Virginia statute notice of the unrecorded conveyance to the creditor prior to the recovery of his judgment does not postpone the lien of the judgment to the conveyance. Edson v. Huff, 29 Gratt. 338.

Notice of an unrecorded mortgage intermediate the perfection of judgment and sale on execution will not postpone the lien of the judgment to that sold the land, and also, on the day of sale, Deveaux made the same statement in the presence and hearing of said Hendrix." The court further finds "from this evidence that defendant had notice of the sale of the land and the existence of the note of Schwartz & Co., and that it was a lien on the land." Defendant was not a party to the suit of Schwartz & Co. against Chenoweth & Cox. The court found that there was no evidence of the payment of a valuable consideration by defendants for the land, except that contained in the recitals in the sheriff's land. From the foregoing statement it will be seen that on the 31st of March, 1888, when Blum levied on the land, the bond for title which Dannanbarg had executed was not recorded. He had acquired by virtue of the levy a fixed, certain interest in the land from the date of the levy.

The question whether the lien and rights secured under such levy of the execution by appellant are superior to those of appellees, holding under the unrecorded bond for title of which appellant had notice at the sale of the land, but of which he had no notice when the judgment was obtained and the levy made, has been thoroughly discussed in several well-considered and frequently cited cases in this state. Grace v. Wade, 45 Tex. 524; Ayres v. Duprey, 27 Tex. 598, 86 Am. Dec. 657; Grimes v. Hobson, 46 Tex. 417; Borden v. McKee, Id. 400; Senter v. Lambeth, 59 Tex. 263. An execution lien, it is well settled, is superior to an unrecorded conveyance previously made to a third party by the judgment debtor; and, where such lien has been fixed or acquired without notice, the purchaser at the execution sale is protected, without regard to any knowledge he may have of an unrecorded conveyance at the time of the purchase. McKamey v. Thorp, 61 Tex. 651. In Grace v. Wade, supra, it was held that the lien of the judgment creditor, who, without notice, had caused a levy to be made by virtue of his judgment, was superior to the unrecorded deed of the vendee of the defendant in execution. By reason of our Registration Laws, it was said in that case an unrecorded deed was void against a creditor who had acquired a specific lien or interest in the land by the levy of the execution. In Grimes v. Hobson, supra, citing Grace v. Wade, it was, with reference to the question of notice, held that "the creditor or any one else who might purchase the land unof the mortgage. Guitau v. Wisely, 47 Ill. 438; Reichert v. McClure, 28 Ill. 516.

By the Louisiana statute an unrecorded deed is void as against third persons, and under it the lien of a judgment rendered intermediate the execution and recording of a deed of the judgment debtor's land is not abrogated by the recording of the deed. McCoy v. Rhodes, 52 U. S. 11 How. 131, 13 L. ed. 684.

If a deed is not recorded until after a judgment is rendered against the vendor, the subsequent registration of the deed does not relate back so as to defeat the lien of the judgment rendered without notice of the deed. Pollard v. Cocke, 19 Ala. 188, 195.

A deed executed before judgment against the grantor, under which the purchaser had paid the purchase money and had been put in possession but which was not recorded until after the judgment was obtained, is void as against such creditor and the land thereby conveyed is subject to satisfy the judgment. Parkersburg Nat. Bank v. Neal, 28 W. Va. 744.

The title of an execution creditor under a levy upon his debtor's real estate is not affected by notice of a prior unrecorded conveyance of which he had no knowledge at the time of the attachment upon his writ. Emerson v. Littlefield, 12 Me. 148.

The lien acquired by the levy of execution upon lands is superior to that of a prior unrecorded mortgage, even though the mortgage be subsequently recorded before sale. Hawkins v. Files, 51 Ark. 417; Cleveland v. Shannon (Ark.) Nov. 23, 1889. Contra, Righter v. Forrester, 1 Bush, 278.

Priority of right of purchaser at sale under judgment.

Although the rights of judgment creditors are not protected by the statute against prior unrecorded conveyances, yet when a sale is had under the judgment the purchaser is protected as a bona fide purchaser. Jackson v. Chamberlain, 8 Wend. 620; Jackson v. Post, 15 Wend. 588; Vaughn v. Schmalsie, 10 L. R. A. 411, 10 Mont. 186; Jackson v. Dubois, 4 Johns. 216; Harrison v. Hollis, 2 Nott & McC. 578.

In New Jersey the lien of a judgment is superior to a prior unrecorded mortgage and a sale under the judgment operates, in equity, as an assignment to the purchaser of the judgment creditor's interest in the land. Wait v. Savage (N. J.) Aug. 6, 1888.

A purchaser at a sheriff's sale is within the protection of the Registry Act the same as purchasers at private sale. Scribner v. Lockwood, 9 Ohio, 184; Paine v. Mooreland, 15 Ohio, 435, 45 Am. Dec. 585; Draper v. Bryson, 28 Mo. 108; De Vendell v. Doe, 27 Ala. 156, 164; Barker v. Bell, 37 Ala. 354; Woods v. Legg, 91 Ala. 511.

A purchaser at a sale on execution, who has his deed first recorded gains the same preference over a prior unrecorded conveyance as if he had bought directly from the debtor himself. Ellis v. Smith, 10 Ga. 238.

The title of one other than the judgment creditor who bona fide purchases land at a sheriff's sale is unaffected by a prior unrecorded conveyance by the judgment debtor, of which such purchaser had no notice. Doe v. Hall, 2 Ind. 556.

In Duke v. Clark, 58 Miss. 465, 476, it is said: "We regard it as the settled doctrine in this state that purchasers at execution sales are, to the same extent as other purchasers, entitled to the benefit of the statutes requiring instruments affecting the title to lands to be registered,"—citing Henderson v. Downing, 24 Miss. 106; Harper v. Tapley, 35 Miss. 506; Taylor v. Lowenstein, 50 Miss. 278; Humphreys v. Merrill, 52 Miss. 32; Loughridge v. Bowland, Id. 546.

When judgment creditor purchases at sale.

If the creditor is not expressly protected by the statute as against prior unrecorded conveyances when he purchases with notice at a sale under his judgment he takes subject to such conveyances even though he had no notice thereof when his lien attached. Norton v. Williams, 9 Iowa, 523.

It seems that the result would be the same if he purchased utterly without notice. It is there said: "The ordinary purchaser pays a new consideration. Not so with the judgment creditor. Such creditor comes in under the debtor, and not as does the purchaser through him. The consequence is that the creditor is entitled to the same rights as the debtor had, and no more. By his purchase he stands in the place of the debtor, and the same rule applies to a third person purchasing at the sheriff's sale, with notice of the outstanding title." But see cases next following.

der the execution would get title against the unrecorded deed, notwithstanding he might have full notice of the deed when he purchased, provided the creditor had no notice prior to the levy of the execution." To the same effect is Borden v. McRae, 46 Tex. 899. If there was no question of the right of a judgment creditor entering into this case, and if, instead of the purchase by appellant at the execution sale against Dannanbarg under the levy made in March, 1883, without notice of the conveyance of the land by bond for title, then unrecorded, appellant had bought directly from Dannanbarg, and, instead of the sheriff's deed, had received one from Dannanbarg, it would, by virtue of the Registration Laws, have been superior to the rights accruing under the unregistered bond for title executed by Dannanbarg. In such case, however, proof of the payment of a valuable consideration would have been necessary by the junior purchaser, which we do not understand to be the rule in the present case. This results from our Registration Laws, which render conveyances void as against subsequent purchasers for value without notice, and creditors having liens of a certain character on the property. The distinction between this class of cases, where the party whose rights are affected by the unrecorded instrument acquires the legal title, and that class where such party's rights coming through the judgment debtor are of an equitable character, and are not, in their nature, susceptible of registration, and therefore do not come within these acts, is very clearly stated in Parker v. Coop, 60 Tex. 111; McKamey v. Thorp, 61 Tex. 651; Seater v. Lambeth, 59 Tex. 268. In the former class, the purchaser at the execution sale, whether plaintiff in execution or not, by the lien which his levy (made without notice) secures, is protected, and his title is not affected or disturbed by subsequent notice. McKamey v. Thorp, supra. "But as resulting trusts are not within the registration statutes, and the holder of such equity cannot spread his title on record, these rules are not applicable to them." Ibid. "Hence an execution or judgment lien, obtained without notice of the resulting trust, cannot inure to the benefit of one buying at the sheriff's sale made under the execution." Parker v. Coop, supra. In such case, "the title of the purchaser, as against the resulting trust, is determined without reference to any notice of it at the time the judgment is obtained or the levy made. It depends on whether he had notice at the time of the sale. If not, then whether he was a purchaser for value." It is unimportant in this case to determine, and it is wholly unnecessary to do so, whether the court erred in finding that the statement of A. Devereux to Hendrix, appellant's agent, made after the levy of the execution, to the effect that Dannanbarg had sold the land, was, in contemplation of law, notice. It may be admitted that this was notice. The court

A judgment creditor purchasing at the sheriff's sale under his judgment is protected against prior unrecorded conveyances of which he has no notice the same as any other purchaser. Evans v. McGlasson, 18 Iowa, 150; Butterfield v. Walsh, 36 Iowa, 534; Gower v. Doheney, 38 Iowa, 36; Walker v. Elston, 21 Iowa, 629.

A purchaser at a sheriff's sale under his own judgment and who parts with no money is not a bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration. Williams v. Hollingsworth, 1 Strobb. Eq. 103, 47 Am. Dec. 527; Wright v. Douglass, 10 Barb. 97; Ayres v. Duprey, 27 Tex. 593, 606; Orme v. Roberts, 38 Tex. 768. Contra, Hunter v. Watson, 12 Cal. 353, 577.

In Wood v. Chapin, 18 N. Y. 509, 519, 67 Am. Dec. 62, Denio, Ch. J., says: "I am, moreover, of opinion that a purchaser, under judicial proceedings instituted by himself, though the purchase be made on account of the debt for the recovery of which the proceedings were had, is a bona fide purchaser within the statute. The legal expenses necessarily incurred, which have to be advanced by the party promoting the proceeding, are something in addition to the existing debt which the purchaser has parted with as a consideration for the conveyance which he received."

"The reason that an unrecorded deed is given the preference over the judgment lien is that the judgment creditor is in no more unfavorable position than he was before he obtained his lien. This reason must apply with equal force, when he takes a sheriff's deed, without advancing a new consideration. If, however, he bids for the property more than the amount of his judgment, and pays the excess to the judgment debtor, there can be no doubt, as we understand the law, that he would occupy the position of any other purchaser. In such a case he does advance a new consideration on the faith of the purchase, and should accordingly be regarded as a bona fide purchaser. Nor would it, in our opinion, make any difference how small the amount was over the judgment." Devlin, Deeds, § 642.

16 L. R. A.

Effect of notice to purchaser at judgment sale.

The equity of a purchaser by an unrecorded deed is superior to that of a purchaser under execution with notice. Morton v. Roberts, 4 Dana, 258.

The recording of a prior deed at any time before the sale under a judgment is notice to the purchaser at such sale. Wlloxson v. Miller, 49 Cal. 193.

Under a statute providing that "no such instrument in writing shall be valid except between the parties thereto, and such as have actual notice thereof, until the same shall be deposited with the register of deeds for record," it is held that the lien of an unrecorded mortgage is superior to that of a subsequent judgment, and if the mortgage is recorded after levy but before sale under the judgment, the purchaser buys subject to the lien of the mortgage. Holden v. Garrett, 28 Kan. 98; Davis v. Ownsby, 14 Mo. 170, 55 Am. Dec. 105.

The lien of a judgment does not take precedence of a prior unrecorded mortgage, and if the mortgage be recorded before sale under the judgment the purchaser is affected with notice. Chapman v. Coats, 26 Iowa, 288.

The same is true if the purchaser have actual notice of the unrecorded conveyance. Hoy v. Allen, 27 Iowa, 208.

The Missouri and Kansas Registry Acts are identical. See Holden v. Garrett and Davis v. Ownsby, supra. The statute does not mention creditors, and as the lien of the judgment is by statute confined to the land of the judgment debtor, if he has previously conveyed it, although the deed is unrecorded, it is no longer his and the lien does not attach, and if notice is given before an actual bona fide purchase at sale, the vendee in the unrecorded deed is protected.

In Sappington v. Oesohli, 40 Mo. 244, 247, it is said: "Ever since the decision in the case of Davis v. Ownsby, 14 Mo. 170, 55 Am. Dec. 105, it has been the settled law of this state that the title of a bona fide purchaser or mortgagee under a deed or mortgage not recorded is good against creditors at large and is also good against sales under judgments and ex-found as a fact that he had no notice before the levy. So, then, if it be conceded that Devereux's statements were of that character and emanated from that source which would unquestionably be sufficient to charge appellant with notice after the levy, it would be immaterial; because, however complete and adequate may have been the notice in law at the sale or after the levy, under the authorities cited it could not have affected or impaired appellant's rights. Since the case of Blankenship v. Douglas, 28 Tex. 228, the rule there announced has been frequently cited in this state, that a judgment lien on the land of the debtor is subject to every equity against the land in the debtor's hands when the judgment was rendered. Our Registration Laws ingraft on this rule the qualification that, if the judgment lien attaches before the creditor has notice of the existence of an unrecorded conveyance, then the unrecorded instrument is subordinated to the lien, and subsequent notice would not have the effect to change the rights of the party. Calvert v. Roche, 59 Tex. 464; Catlin v. Bennatt, 47 Tex. 170; Simpson v. Chapman, 45 Tex. 564. Hence we do not think that the suit brought on the notes of September 17, 1883, subsequent to appellant's levy, in March, 1883, could have impaired his rights. Where, as in this case, the rights of the parties are determined by the proper construction of the Registration Laws, two classes are protected,— creditors who, without notice, have fixed their liens; and subsequent purchasers for a valuable consideration, without notice. In this case, there was no proof of the payment by appellant of a valuable consideration for the land, independently of the recitals contained in the sheriff's deed; and it is claimed by appellees that, although the appellant may not have had notice prior to the levy, he could not recover in the absence of proof of payment of a valuable consideration. If this be correct, the protection afforded the judgment creditor who secures his lien by a levy is unimportant. The court held that it was essential that appellant should prove the payment of a valuable consideration for the land, and that the recitals alone in the sheriff's deed were not sufficient for that purpose. Where this fact is necessary to be established to secure or protect a right it is required to be shown by evidence independent of the recitals in the deed. Watkins v. Edwards, 28 Tex. 448. But if appellant was protected by reason of the fact that he was a judgment creditor with his lien secured by levy without notice, it was not necessary that he should have been a purchaser for value, as that term is usually understood. In the class of cases to which we have referred, as not embraced within our registration statutes, because the equities or rights of the party were not susceptible of registration, we have seen that notice at the time of the sale is sufficient.

executions, if the deed or mortgage is duly recorded before such sales." Valentine v. Havener, 20 Mo. 138; Stillwell v. McDonald, 39 Mo. 232; Potter v. McDowell, 43 Mo. 98; Reed v. Ownby, 44 Mo. 204.

By the Minnesota Recording Act judgment creditors are placed on an equality with bona fide purchasers as to prior unrecorded conveyances, and the title of the creditor obtained by sale under the judgment is not affected by notice of the unrecorded conveyance after the docketing of the judgment and before execution was levied. Lash v. Hardick, 5 Dill. 505.

The protection of the Alabama Recording Acts is expressly extended to creditors. If a creditor secures a judgment lien without notice of an unrecorded mortgage, although he purchases the land at a sheriff's sale under his judgment with notice of the mortgage, his title is unaffected thereby. Fash v. Ravesties, 22 Ala. 451.

Notice to the purchaser at an execution sale of an unrecorded conveyance prior to the judgment is immaterial if by virtue of lack of notice to the creditor the lien of the judgment is superior. Daniel v. Sorrells, 9 Ala. 436; Pollard v. Cooke, 19 Ala. 183.

Under a statute avoiding unrecorded conveyances "as to all creditors, and subsequent bona fide purchasers and mortgagees, without notice," an attaching creditor levying an attachment without actual notice of an unrecorded deed acquires a lien, which if perfected by judgment, execution, sale, and deed will hold the legal estate, against the purchaser in the prior unrecorded deed, though at the time of the levy of his execution and sale he had notice of such deed. Martin v. Dryden, 6 Ill. 187.

The Mississippi statute declares unrecorded conveyances void as against creditors without notice, and it is there held that knowledge of the conveyance acquired subsequent to the attachment of the lien will not affect it or displace it. Henderson v. Downing, 24 Miss. 106; Harper v. Tapley, 35 Miss. 306; Humphreys v. Merrill, 52 Miss. 92; Loughridge v. Bowland, Id. 542; Mississippi Valley Co. v. Chil- cago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. 53 Miss. 846; Heilmann v. Stricklin, 60 Miss. 234.

The lien of a judgment in the hands of an assignee thereof without actual notice of a prior unrecorded conveyance by the judgment debtor is superior to that of such conveyance although the assignor of the judgment knew of such conveyance before the rendition of the judgment. Duke v. Clark, 68 Miss. 463.

In Low v. Blinco, 10 Bush, 381, with reference to a statute providing that no unrecorded conveyance "shall be good against a purchaser for a valuable consideration, not having had notice thereof, or any creditor," it is said, p. 334: "Reconciling as far as practicable the various reported cases, we deduce from them the following views:

"1. A purchaser at an execution sale, who has no notice of a title bond or deed that has not been recorded within the prescribed time, will be protected in his title even in a court of equity.

"2. A purchaser with notice will also be protected, in case the execution creditor acts in good faith and without notice. Under such circumstances the creditor has the right to sell, and the purchaser necessarily takes all the title that the creditor can require the sheriff to sell.

"3. That notice to the purchaser after his purchase does not affect him. He is by his purchase invested with an inchoate legal title, which he has the absolute right to perfect by procuring a conveyance from the sheriff, and this right does not depend upon his being a stranger to the execution. In such cases the execution creditor is as much entitled to protection as a stranger.

"4. That notice to the creditor at any time before he may purchase affects his conscience, and he may be compelled, in obedience to the equity evidenced by the bond or unrecorded deed, to transfer the legal title to the party against whom he ought not in good conscience to hold it."

In support of the principal case, see Stevenson v. Texas & P. R. Co. 105 U. S. 703, 23 L. ed. 12, 15.

J. G. G.

If not, then it must be determined whether he is a purchaser for value. In McKamey v. Thorp, the question was discussed whether one who paid the amount of his bid by crediting it on the judgment against the defendant in execution was a purchaser for value. The cases were reviewed by the court, and it was held that, while there were "intimations" in a few cases to the effect that one buying under such circumstances might be a bona fide purchaser, still the rule had been distinctly laid down to the contrary in other cases; and, in the case cited, it was held that a creditor buying at his own sale, and crediting his bid upon the judgment, is not a purchaser for value. But in a case like the present, which is governed by our Registration Law, and under the authority of the cases of Grace v. Wade, Grimes v. Hobson, Borden v. McRae, the judgment creditor is only required to fix his lien by the levy of the execution, without notice of the prior conveyance by the defendant in execution, to entitle him to protection. He is not required as in the case of a subsequent purchaser at the sale, without notice, to pay a valuable consideration. Under our Registration Laws, as construed, "lien creditors who have no notice of adverse rights at the time their lien attaches, may be protected as purchasers, who are not bona fide purchasers, as these terms are ordinarily understood." Parker v. Coop, supra. If he is only protected as a purchaser, it is said, "it would destroy competition in bidding, and compel the creditor to take property for his debt when he is entitled to money." He is not protected because he is a purchaser, but because he is a creditor whose lien is fixed by a levy, without notice; and it is not necessary that he should pay a valuable consideration, in the sense contended for. There is no finding in this case showing that appellant credited the amount of his bid on the judgment against the defendant in execution, and it is not important that there should be.

Because, as we have before said, the appellant's rights are not dependent on the amount paid by him, nor the character of the consideration, we think the judgment should be reversed, and the cause remanded.

Adopted by Supreme Court, June 14, 1892.

OHIO SUPREME COURT.

CINCINNATI, HAMILTON & DAYTON
R. CO., Plff. in Err.,

v.

Henry KASSEN, Admr. of Joseph J. Kassen, Deceased.

(.....Ohio.....)

*1. It is a well-settled rule of the law of negligence that the plaintiff may recover, notwithstanding his own negligence exposed him to the risk of the injury of which he complains, if the defendant, after he became aware, or ought to have become aware, of the plaintiff's danger, failed to use ordinary care to avoid injuring him, and he was thereby injured.

2. Where the employees of a railroad company engaged in operating one of its trains have notice, such as a person of ordinary prudence would believe and act upon, that a passenger had stepped or fallen from the train, while moving at a high rate of speed, onto the track, where he is exposed in a helpless condition to the danger of injury from another of its trains, the company owes him the duty of observing due care to prevent his being so injured, although he was guilty of negligence in so stepping or falling from the train, and this was known to the employees thereon; and in such case the company should, in the exercise of proper care, stop the train from which the passenger fell, and remove him from the track, if that could be done without danger to the passengers or employees on the train, or notify those in charge of the train from which he was in danger of receiving injury, and cause it to be operated with a due regard for his safety, or adopt some other reasonable precaution to avoid injury to him. The omission to use such care, if injury in consequence ensue, is actionable negligence.

*Head notes by the COURT.

NOTE.—As to the right of a negligent person to recover when injured by one aware of his danger, see Kelly v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. 8 L. R. A. 783, and note, 101 Mo. 67.
16 L. R. A.

3. The rule that the negligence of the injured party, which proximately contributes to the injury, precludes him from recovering, has no application where the more proximate cause of the injury is the omission of the other party, after becoming aware of the danger to which the former party is exposed, to use a proper degree of care to avoid injuring him.

(March 23, 1892.)

ERROR to the General Term of the Superior Court of Cincinnati to review a judgment affirming a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

Statement by Williams, Ch. J.:

On the evening of the 23d of October, 1883, the defendant below ran an excursion train over its road, from Hamilton to Middletown, returning to Hamilton about 12 o'clock that night. The distance between the two points is twelve miles, and the time occupied in running it, each way, was about thirty minutes. Joseph Kassen, who was a passenger both ways, while on the return trip, and when the train was in rapid motion, walked through the rear car, onto the platform, and stepped or fell off onto the railroad track, where, about two hours afterwards, he was run over by another of defendant's trains, and was thereby, it is claimed, killed. The action below, to recover damages for wrongfully and negligently causing his death, was brought by the administrator of his estate, against the defendant, in the Superior Court of Cincinnati. The petition-charges that, by reason of the negligence of the defendant and its servants, there was no light upon the platform, nor was there any barrier or guard there placed to prevent passengers falling from said platform, so that without any fault on his part he fell upon the track of the railroad, and was greatly and permanently injured thereby, and he was unable by his own exertion to move from the track; that the agents of the defendant in charge of the train were at once notified of the falling of Kassen from the train, but they failed and refused to stop the train or to care for the fallen passenger, but permitted him to remain on the track, where he had fallen; and that within an hour or two after Kassen had fallen upon the track, and while he yet remained there, injured as aforesaid, another train, owned and controlled by the defendant, passed over the road at this place, where Kassen was lying, and, notwithstanding the notice which defendant had received, and by reason of the negligence of the defendant and its agents, the said train ran over the said Kassen, and he was thereby killed." These allegations were denied by the answer. A trial of the issues to the jury having resulted in a verdict for the plaintiff, upon which judgment was rendered, and afterwards affirmed in general term, the defendant prosecuted error to this court.

The record shows that on the trial the plaintiff gave evidence tending to prove that the cars of the excursion train on which the plaintiff's intestate was a passenger were crowded with people, and that he was passing through looking for a seat; that the night was dark, the door of the rear car through which he passed was open, and the platform from which he stepped or fell was unprovided with any guard or light; that he was seen to fall upon the railroad track, immediately after which the alarm was raised, the brakeman in that car was notified, and he was requested to stop the train; that nothing was done, the train was not stopped, but passed on to the next station, and finally to Hamilton; that the train could have been stopped without danger to the passengers or the train, and without great inconvenience; that there were telegraph offices, which were open, at each of the stations where the train stopped before reaching Hamilton, and also at the latter place, which was reached in time to have given notice of the accident by telegraph to those in charge of any subsequent train coming from the direction of Middletown, before leaving that place, and that no notice was given or attempted. The evidence further tended to prove that by the fall Kassen was rendered unconscious and disabled, but was not killed; and, while lying upon the track in that condition, another train passed over the road from Middletown to Hamilton, an hour or two after he had fallen, and ran over and killed him, which train did not reach Middletown until nearly an hour after the train from which the deceased fell had arrived at Hamilton.

At the conclusion of the evidence, and before the argument, the defendant requested the court to give in charge to the jury the following instructions, which were given: "(1) Kassen was guilty of negligence in falling or stepping off the train, and if he was killed thereby, or injured so that he would have died from such injuries, your verdict must be for the defendant. (2) There is no evidence of negligence on the part of the persons operating the train which ran over Kassen. (3) If Hess [the brakeman] was not told that a man had fallen off the train, or if Hess did not hear such statement, your verdict must be for the defendant." The defendant also requested the court to instruct the jury as follows: "(4) It was Kassen's own fault that he fell or stepped off the train, and the railroad company was under no obligation to stop the train simply for the purpose of picking him up and carrying him as a passenger to Hamilton." The court gave this instruction with the following modification: "But if the employees running the train, or any of them, had such notice at the time of the fall as would lead a man of ordinary average prudence to believe that by the fall Kassen was thrown unconscious or helpless upon the track, and so exposed to danger from a train following, then it was their duty to stop their train, and rescue him from such danger, if such stop might have been made without danger to themselves or to the passengers of their train; and failure to discharge such duty would render the company liable if death was caused by the following train, while Kassen lay unconscious or helpless on or near the track." The court in its general charge, after the argument, instructed the jury as follows: "I have already stated in the special charges which were given you before the argument that the evidence in this case shows that the young man in falling or stepping off the car was himself not acting with ordinary care, so that for the falling off the car he has no right of action against the company. Again, I have charged you that there is no evidence of negligence in the employees of the company who were running the train which ran over the man. The only question left in this case, therefore, for you to determine, is whether or not the company had notice, through the employees of the train from which he fell, that the man had fallen upon the track, and was there in an unconscious or helpless condition, such that his death or injury would be likely to occur from a following train." Exceptions were taken by the defendant to the refusal of the court to give in charge the fourth instruction above set forth, without modification, and also to the modification given by the court. These exceptions present the questions in the case.

Messrs. Ramsey, Maxwell & Ramsey, for plaintiff in error:

The claim of the plaintiff is really this: that every time a drunken passenger negligently falls, or willfully jumps, from a train, it devolves upon the brakeman to stop the train, abandon the duties for which he is employed, get off and walk back over track and bridges, it may be for miles, and in the dead of night, to see if perchance the man has added trespass to negligence. If that be the law this judgment can be sustained; otherwise, not.

In McClellan v. Louisville, N. A. & O. R. Co., 94 Ind. 276, plaintiff's intestate, being a passenger upon the defendant's train, was, owing to his drunken condition, carried past his destination, and then, failing to comprehend his liability to pay further fare or get off the train, the train was stopped and he was removed by the conductor and assistants, and placed at a short distance from the track. Subsequently he wandered upon the track, where he was run over and killed by another train, at a point where those in charge of the latter train did not and could not see him in time to prevent the accident. It was held that the company was not liable for his death, and was not chargeable with notice of his condition or whereabouts.

See also Henderson v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 128 U. S. 61, 31 L. ed. 92.

Kassen by his own act had ceased to be a passenger, and had become a trespasser upon the defendant's roadway. It is immaterial that he had been a passenger. The case is the same as if he had come upon the track from an adjoining field, or fallen upon it from a crossing wagon.

Com. v. Boston & M. R. Co. 129 Mass. 500, 37 Am. Rep. 382.

It is sought to raise corporate liability by imputing to the engineer of the second train the knowledge of the brakeman of the first, and in that way and by that fiction, making culpable that which was in fact innocent. By some artful sophistry, a wrong is to be deduced from what two persons did, neither of whom committed a wrong. But two rights cannot possibly make a wrong.

McClellan v. Louisville, N. A. & O. R. Co. supra; Congar v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 24 Wis. 157, 1 Am. Rep. 164.

Mr. C. W. Baker, for defendant in error: Notice to the brakeman was notice to the company.

Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Ranney, 87 Ohio St. 665.

The notice given to the brakeman in this case was vastly more certain and specific than the notice claimed to have been given the conductor in the case of Cleveland, C. C. & I. R. Co. v. Manson, 80 Ohio St. 451, a case that not only upon this point, but we submit upon all the points involved in this case, is authoritative and decisive.

Williams, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The instructions of the court relieved the jury from the inquiry whether there was any negligent omission of duty on the part of the railroad company with respect to providing a light or guard for the platform of the car from which Kassen fell, and exonerated the company from any blame for his fall. The single question submitted to the determination of the jury was whether the company, through its employes, had notice that Kassen "had fallen upon its track, and was there in an unconscious or helpless condition, such that his death or injury would be likely to occur from a following train;" and upon that question the jury was instructed that, if the company had such notice, its duty was to exercise due care to prevent such death or injury, and its failure to do so would render it liable, "if death was caused by the following train, while Kassen lay unconscious or helpless on or near the track." As no motion for a new trial was made, the finding of the jury upon the issues of fact 16 L. R. A.

submitted to it is not open to review. Westfall v. Dungan, 14 Ohio St. 276; Randall v. Turner, 17 Ohio St. 262; Boerett v. Sumner, 33 Ohio St. 562. But, if it were, we cannot say there was no evidence to sustain the verdict. In the disposition of the case here, therefore, it must be accepted as established by the verdict that the death of Kassen did not result from his fall, but was caused by the train which subsequently ran over his body; and also that the defendant had due notice of Kassen's fall, in time to have prevented his death, by the exercise of ordinary care, either by stopping the train from which he had fallen, and removing him from the track, or by such notice to those in charge of the following train as would have enabled them, by proper precaution, to prevent injury from it. Assuming, then, that by his own negligent act Kassen was on the defendant's track, in a disabled and helpless condition, likely, if not removed, to be run over and killed by a train operated by the defendant, and of this the defendant, through its employes, had such notice as a person of ordinary prudence would believe and act upon, was it under any obligation to use proper care to prevent the destruction of his life, which otherwise probably would, and in fact did, result from the movement of one of its trains? or did Kassen's own negligence relieve the defendant from the observance of ordinary care to prevent the injury which ensued, or so contribute to it as to deprive his representative of a right of action on account of that injury?

The court properly instructed the jury that the employes operating the train which ran over Kassen were without fault. They had no notice that he was on the track, and were not required to anticipate his presence there. Until they discovered him, they were justified in running the train as if the tracks were clear, and it is not contended that after his discovery they omitted any precaution for his safety. If those employes had received notice of Kassen's situation in time to have avoided the injury, it is clear that it would have been their duty to exercise due care in the management of the train to do so, notwithstanding he was there through his own fault, which was known to them, and for their omission to use such care the defendant would be liable. While they were ignorant of the situation, the defendant was not; and, though the injury might have been easily averted, no means were employed for that purpose. The train from which Kassen fell might have been stopped, and he removed from the track. It is not contended that to have done so would have endangered the passengers or employes on the train, or caused any considerable inconvenience. The defendant's servants in control of the train which ran over Kassen could have been notified by telegram at Middletown of his exposed condition, and they, by the use of ordinary care in the operation of the train, could have saved him from the injury. Either precaution would have prevented the injury; and a reasonably prudent person, under the circumstances, would, we think, have adopted one or the other. A proper appreciation of human life would dictate as much to a person of ordinary prudence. It is a well-settled rule of the law of negligence that the plaintiff may recover, notwithstanding his own negligence exposed him to the risk of injury, if the defendant, after he became aware, or ought to have become aware, of the plaintiff's danger, failed to use ordinary care to avoid injuring him. The danger to which Kassen was exposed while on the railroad track, after his fall, was that of injury from a train belonging to the defendant, operated by machinery and agencies under its control, for which it was responsible, and not from some independent cause; and, though the defendant may not have been under any obligation to use care to prevent his injury by others, it owed him the duty of observing ordinary care to avoid injuring him in the use of its own property. And, in the exercise of such care, it should have stopped the train from which he had fallen, and removed him from the track, or notified those in charge of the train which followed it, or would first pass over that part of the road, and cause it to be run with a due regard for his safety, or adopted some other reasonable precaution to avoid the injury. The omission to do so was actionable negligence; and Kassen's death having been caused by such negligence, as found by the jury, the defendant is liable, unless the negligence of Kassen so contributed to his death as to defeat the action, and we think it did not. The rule that the negligence of the injured party, which proximately contributes to the injury of which he complains, precludes him from recovering, does not apply, where, as in this case, the more proximate cause of the injury is the omission of the other party, after becoming aware of the danger to which the former party is exposed, to use a proper degree of care to avoid injuring him. In Kerwhacker v. Cleveland, O. & C. R. Co., 3 Ohio St. 172, 63 Am. Dec. 246, it is held that, "when the negligence of the defendant, in a suit upon such ground of action is the proximate cause of the injury, but that of the plaintiff only remote, consisting of some act or omission not occurring at the time of the injury, the action for reparation is maintainable." And such is the well-settled law. The negligence of the plaintiff's intestate, in stepping or falling from the train while moving at a high rate of speed, was only the remote, and not the proximate, cause of his death; the proximate cause being the omission of the defendant to use proper care after having become aware of the danger to which the negligent act had exposed him. We find no error in the charge of the court or in the refusal to charge as requested.

Judgment affirmed.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

Margaret LEWIS et al.
v.
James M. ARBUCKLE et al.
Margaret LEWIS et al.
v.
Frank MILLER et al.

(.....Iowa.....)

1. An apparent absence of consideration is only a circumstance to be taken into account with other facts and circumstances in the case in determining whether or not a conveyance was procured through fraud and undue influence.

2. A belief in spiritual manifestations and in having had communication with deceased persons is not necessarily evidence of such a disordered mental condition as to make one incompetent to make a conveyance of real estate.

(May 19, 1892.)

CROSS-APPEALS from a decree of the District Court for Delaware County setting aside a portion of certain conveyances by which NOTE.—Belief in spiritualism, witchcraft, etc., as affecting capacity to make will or deed.

A belief in witchcraft does not invalidate a will. Re Veider, 6 Dem. 22; Re Forman's Will, 54 Barb. 297; Van Guysling v. Van Kuren, 35 N. Y. 70.

It is not sufficient to invalidate a will that the testator's imagination was generally controlled by a belief in witches, devils, and evil spirits which he fancied continually worried him. Lee v. Lee, 4 McCord, L. 183.

In Addington v. Wilson, 5 Ind. 137, 61 Am. Dec. 81, the court said that there might be cases where a belief in witchcraft as well as in Millerism, or the doctrine of predestination if permitted to constantly occupy the mind, might have the effect to obscure its perceptions, destroy its balance in regard to the ordinary transactions of life, make the believer in short a monomaniac; but it was held that a belief in witchcraft is not of itself sufficient evidence of insanity to disable a person to make a will.

In Kelly v. Miller, 39 Miss. 12, the court refused to recognize a belief of the testator in witchcraft as a ground for disturbing a verdict sustaining the will.

16 L. R. A.

See also 40 L. R. A. 256.

The belief that the souls of men after death pass into animals, although so strong as to cause one to leave his property by will to the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, is not such evidence of insanity or insane delusion as to render the will invalid. Re Bonard's Will, 16 Abb. Fr. N. S. 123.

Belief in spiritualism will not invalidate the will. Re Smith's Will, 62 Wis. 548.

The fact that one is a spiritualist is not of itself sufficient ground for setting aside his will for want of capacity to make it. Otto v. Doty, 61 Iowa. 22.

A belief in spiritualism cannot be held as matter of law or fact to be evidence of insanity. Re Keeler, 12 N. Y. S. R. 157.

In Turner v. Hand, 3 Wall. Jr. 88, Greer, J., charged the jury, "that although a man should believe in spiritualism his deeds could not be avoided on that account; neither would it prove that he was not of disposing mind and memory, so as to set aside his will."

In the Chafin Will Case, 32 Wis. 560, the court refused to set aside the will although testator had faith in the statements of professed clairvoyants, fortune tellers, and spiritual mediums.

the land of one Margaret Walsh, since deceased, had come into the possession of the defendants Arbuckle and Miller. Reversed.

Statement by Kinne, J.:

These two causes were consolidated and tried together in the court below. They are actions in equity to set aside certain deeds executed by Margaret Walsh to Michael Walsh, her son, and to Mary Ann Adams, her daughter; also deeds made by the said Michael and Mary Ann to defendants Arbuckle and Miller, —on the ground that the deed from Margaret Walsh was procured by undue influence. It is averred that Arbuckle and Miller took their deeds with knowledge of the fact that their grantors had acquired title by undue influence and fraud practiced on their mother. Defendants Miller and Arbuckle claim to have purchased in good faith, and for a valuable consideration, and without knowledge or notice that the title of their grantors was obtained by fraud or undue influence. The defendant Walsh was not served with notice, and made no appearance. The defendant Adams denies the allegations of fraud and undue influence, and avers that the conveyance was made to her and Michael Walsh in pursuance of an oral contract, whereby they were to pay certain indebtedness then existing, maintain their mother (the grantor) through life, and at her death erect a monument for her and her husband, pay her funeral expenses, and pay each of the plaintiffs $50. That said contract has been carried out on their part except the payment to the plaintiffs of $50 each, which sum is paid into court for their use. The district court set aside the deed of Margaret Walsh in so far as the same conveyed any interest to Michael Walsh; also set aside the deeds from Michael Walsh and Mary Ann Adams and her husband to James Arbuckle and Frank Miller, so far as they convey any interest of Michael Walsh to Arbuckle and Miller. In all other respects it confirmed title in Arbuckle and Miller to the land conveyed to them, ordered that the money tendered by defendant Adams be turned over to plaintiffs, and taxed the costs to Mary Ann Adams. Mary Ann Adams, James M. Arbuckle, and Frank Miller, defendants, each separately appeal.

Messrs. Blair, Dunham & Norris, for plaintiffs:

The grantees sold the land a few days after they got it for $3,000 cash. The consideration in the deed to them of $1 is certainly inadequate as a consideration. And unless they can show some other valid consideration, it is upon its face a fraud against the rights of plaintiffs. Such a deed cannot be supported, even if Mrs. Adams did keep her mother part of the time; she was under a natural obligation to do so, and the deceased was under no obligation to compensate her.

See Elee v. Kennedy, 67 Iowa, 876, and other cases there cited.

The testimony of Mary Ann Adams shows that her mother did not intend to give her the land. And yet we find an absolute deed made out and signed by the deceased, no mortgage given back to her, and no binding agreement of any kind to support her, nor to pay a penny to the heirs, or do anything else for the land.

That such a fraud would vitiate the deed, there can be no doubt.

Williams v. Collins, 67 Iowa, 413; Harper v. Kissick, 52 Iowa, 733; Tucke v. Buchholz, 43 Iowa, 415.

The deed from decedent to defendants is void because of the want of capacity to execute the same.

Where the testator before his death was perfectly competent to, and did, transact business, to a very large extent for himself and as trustee for others, and as a director of several incorporated institutions his will was held valid notwithstanding he exhibited many eccentricities and claimed to be more or less influenced by spiritual manifestations. Thompson v. Thompson, 21 Barb. 107.

Where a testator believed in spiritualism and in making his will appeared to be influenced by the request of his departed wife, made through a spiritualistic medium, to make provision for her mother in his will, the will was held valid, the court saying that it cannot be said that a person who believes in the reality of spiritual manifestations is, because of such belief, of unsound mind or subject to an insane delusion. Middleditch v. Williams, 4 L. R. A. 738, 45 N. J. Eq. 723.

So it was held in Brown v. Ward, 53 Md. 373, 36 Am. Rep. 422, that a belief in spiritualism does not incapacitate from making a valid will, even where the testatrix acted under supposed instructions from the spirit of her deceased brother, unless actual unsoundness of mind is found.

A belief in modern spiritualism is not evidence of mental unsoundness unless it appears that the will was the offspring of that delusion. Labau v. Vanderbilt, 8 Redf. 384.

Evidence that one believes in ghosts and supernatural influences is admissible in a will contest as having some tendency to show unsoundness of mind or such weakness of mind as to be easily imposed upon. Woodbury v. Obear, 7 Gray, 470, 16 L. R. A.

Belief in spiritualism is compatible with a disposing mind but the fact of its existence is proof to be considered with reference to the question of the susceptibility of the testator to the arts of those who would mislead him for purposes of their own. Re Storey, 30 Ill. App. 196.

If spiritual communications dictated the will it is void. If they influenced the mind but did not control it in making the will, or any part of it, then the will will not be void because of undue influence. Robinson v. Adams, 62 Me. 369, 16 Am. Rep. 473.

Where the medium used his power to procure a conveyance of a person's property, the conveyance will be set aside. Lyon v. Home, L. R. 6 Eq. 653.

If because of testator's belief in spiritualism the medium artfully succeeds in alienating the testator from his only child and getting possession of his property, the will will be set aside as made under undue influence. Thompson v. Hawks, 14 Fed. Rep. 902.

Where, prior to making the will, the testatrix accompanied the legatee to a seance where a pretended letter from her husband was read, advising her to fix her property so that her son could not get it, the court held the facts were evidence of an attempt to unduly influence the testatrix, and went to impeach the will. Greenwood v. China, 7 Or. 17.

In Leighton v. Orr, 44 Iowa, 601, the court set aside conveyances made by a man to a woman with whom he was living in adultery and who professed to be a medium, but just what influence the latter fact had, does not appear.

H. P. F.

She was on account of extreme old age, and nearness to dissolution, of weak, infirm and disordered mind.

She had for a long time an hallucination that she could see fairies; conversed with them. Knowing this condition of mind, the defendants, Mary Ann Adams and Michael Walsh, were constantly teasing her to make her property over to them, and Mike even went so far as to threaten her if she did not do so.

Deeds made under such circumstances have been invariably set aside.

Fitch v. Reiser, 79 Iowa, 84; Leighton v. Orr, 44 Iowa, 679; Smith v. Hickenbottom, 57 Iowa, 787; Spargur v. Hall, 62 Iowa, 498.

The deed should be set aside on account of undue influence exercised over deceased, by defendants. Mary Ann Adams and Michael Walsh. The last-named defendant was with his mother, the decedent, for the last year before she died, and he had won the confidence of his mother to the extent that as soon as he came back and commenced living with her, she signed a note with him for $140; she gave a mortgage at his instance.

Mary Ann Adams was ready the moment Michael suggested a deed to them, to accept it, and then began to plan for it; was present when Lewis was sent for, and brought over to talk with the decedent about deeding to them. She led her mother to believe, as her testimony shows, that she was going to be fair. All this shows such an undue influence that the deed in question should be set aside.

Bispham, Eq. 288; Owings Case, 1 Bland, Ch. 370, 17 Am. Dec. 311; Allore v. Jewell, 94 U. S. 506, 24 L. ed. 260; June v. Willis, 80 Fed. Rep. 11; Samson v. Samson, 67 Iowa, 258; Churchill v. Scott, 8 West. Rep. 818, 65 Mich. 485; McDaniel v. McCoy, 12 West. Rep. 664, 68 Mich. 382; Greene v. Roworth, 118 N. Y. 462; Norton v. Norton, 74 Iowa, 161.

Benefits obtained by undue influence cannot be held by third parties.

Bispham, Eq. 302.

Where a purchaser is put upon his inquiry, he must pursue it or he is not an innocent purchaser.

Wade, Notice, § 17, p. 12.

Messrs. Yoran & Arnold, for defendants:

Arbuckle and Miller had no notice, such as would charge them with knowledge of infirmity of title in their grantors, if such existed.

All the notice (if such it can be called) that was given to either Arbuckle or Miller, is the opinion of two strangers, Mrs. Moreland and Elias Faust, that Mrs. Walsh was not insane, but of such weak mind that she was incompetent to make a conveyance of land.

It is not shown that either witness was competent to express such an opinion. Neither seems to have been possessed of any knowledge of facts which they have detailed that made them competent.

The opinion of each was wholly incompetent.

Re Norman, 72 Iowa, 84. See also Ashcraft v. De Armond, 44 Iowa, 229.

The information must come from some one who is interested in the estate, or from some authoritative source. Mere rumors are not notice, nor do they impose upon a purchaser the duty of inquiry.

116 L. R. A.

Satterfield v. Malone, 85 Fed. Rep. 445; Wilson v. Miller, 16 Iowa, 115.

It does not lie in plaintiff's mouth to say that possible inquiry in every direction would have revealed such and such conditions.

Wade, Notice, § 29.

Few purchasers could ever be better fortified with evidences of good faith on honest inquiry than are these defendants.

Wade, Notice, § 84.

Evidence to set aside a deed should be clear, distinct, and satisfactory.

Fifield v. Gaston, 12 Iowa, 218; Parker v. Pierce, 16 Iowa, 227; Ray v. Teabout, 65 Iowa, 157.

As neither of the grantees in her deed were present when it is alleged the declarations of the old lady as to threats against her were made, it is clear they are utterly incompetent.

De France v. Howard, 4 Iowa, 524.

As an essential element in this case it is important that the consideration of the deed receive due attention.

Where fraud is charged, the latitude is generally enlarged to negative as well as to establish fraud.

Wharton, Ev. 2d ed. § 1046.

Where the consideration proposed to be proven is not repugnant to the deed, it is competent.

Trayer v. Reader, 45 Iowa, 272.

Preferment by parents does not always take the line of mathematical calculation as to relative merit.

The law recognizes the right of the parent to distribute at will, and we believe the distribution made by this old lady is about as near equitable as is usually found, and certainly plaintiffs have no just cause for complaint.

Malcomsen v. Graham, 75 Iowa, 54. See also Johnson v. Johnson, 52 Iowa, 586.

Where a contract accompanied by a conveyance is reasonable, and performed in good faith by the grantee, the deed will be upheld.

See Marshall v. Marshall, 75 Iowa, 182.

If a contract is partly performed and the parties cannot be placed in statu quo, it will be upheld.

Gardner v. Lightfoot, 71 Iowa, 577.

Where witnesses differ so widely in their opinions as in this case, the acts of the party are the best test of capacity.

Des Moines Nat. Bank v. Chisholm, 71 Iowa, 675.

Conduct that is consistent with reason and previously declared intentions as to disposition of property is invariably upheld.

Campbell v. Campbell, 51 Iowa, 713; Brookway v. Harrington (Iowa) Jan. 29, 1891.

Something must be done by the stronger mind to influence the weaker.

Gardner v. Lightfoot, supra.

Even were we to concede what is against the preponderance of the evidence that there was "mental unsoundness," as to Mrs. Walsh, the defendants, Arbuckle and Miller, at least, would still be entitled to prevail.

Abbott v. Creal, 56 Iowa, 175.

Kinne, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. The plaintiffs and the defendants Mary Ann Adams and Michael Walsh are children of Margaret Walsh, deceased. Less than two months prior to her death she conveyed 80 acres of land to the defendants Mary Adams and Michael Walsh, the consideration named in the deed being $1. Plaintiffs insist that this conveyance was procured by undue influence and false promises, and on the representation of the grantees that they would give the grantor a mortgage on the land for its full value, which said grantees did not do. Defendants' contention is set out above. The facts disclosed by this record are that Margaret Walsh was 80 years old or over, the evidence as to her exact age being indefinite; that her husband died about a year before she executed this deed; that Margaret Lewis, one of the daughters, had resided in Floyd county, Iowa, for two years or more. She visited her mother after her father's death, and wrote her two letters. Catherine McQuirk, another daughter, lived in Sioux county for twelve years, and never visited or saw her mother during all of that time. There is nothing to show that during this time she ever wrote to or in any way communicated with her mother. Ella Merry, another daughter, lived in O'Brien county for six years; visited her parents four years ago. Martin Walsh has lived in California for about thirty years. He has never visited his mother, and, so far as appears, he did not write her for years before her death. Michael Walsh lived with his mother for about a year prior to her death, and cared for her and assisted her in her housework. For several years prior thereto he had been absent, and his whereabouts were unknown to his relatives. Mary Ann Adams had for the last nine years of her mother's life lived just across an alley from her. While the testimony is somewhat conflicting, it is clear that Mrs. Adams helped provide for her mother, assisted her in her house, and in every reasonable way ministered to her comfort and support. We have stated the situation of these children with reference to their mother quite fully, as to our minds it has an important bearing upon the question we must determine. It is clear that for the last nine years of her life the daughter Mrs. Adams was constantly relied upon by her mother for aid and support.

2. A material question is as to the intention of Mrs. Walsh as to selling the land in controversy. It seems that at the time her husband leased the land to Miller she was not satisfied with the amount of rent to be paid. She and her husband wanted to sell the land at least three years prior to her death. She then complained that they were not getting enough out of it to support them. The plaintiff Lewis, in October, 1888, thought her mother had better sell the land, take the money, and use it. After her husband's death Mrs. Walsh borrowed money on the land to pay debts which had accumulated. During the holidays in 1888, she told John Lewis the farm did not bring enough to live on, and that she and Mike had tried to sell it, and could not find any one to buy. In January, 1889, she offered to sell it to defendant Miller, but he thought her price too high. There is no question from the testimony that the intent to sell this land had been in Mrs. Walsh's mind for several years, and it was not the result of the influence of any one. It is equally clear that originally she intended to give this land to the defendant Adams. She told Grimes so, and gave as a reason the absence in the west of the other girls, the fact that they paid no attention to her, did not help her, nor write to her. In a conversation with Mrs. Sloan the fall before her death Mrs. Walsh spoke of Mrs. Adams' kindness in providing for her, and said she was going to give Mary Ann the biggest part of her property on account of her kindness.

16 L. R. A.

3. Was there any undue influence? We may say that much evidence was introduced which is incompetent, and cannot be considered. Mrs. Moreland testifies that deceased told her that Mike had threatened to kill her if she did not fix the property as he wanted, and that he and defendant Adams were worrying her about the property. Mrs. Strader also testifies that Mrs. Walsh told her of Mike's threats. There is some testimony as to the desire of Mike to get the tenant, Miller, off of the place, and that he and Mrs. Adams wanted their mother to sell the land. The force of Mrs. Moreland's testimony is much weakened by the unhappy relations existing between her and Mrs. Adams. Clearly there is no evidence which would justify a court in saying that Mrs. Adams, so far as she was concerned, obtained the conveyance through the exercise of any undue influence. It is insisted, however, that Michael, after he came home, won his mother's confidence to such an extent, and by such means, that the conveyance as to him was properly set aside. There are, it is true, some circumstances which, in and of themselves, would seem to point to the exercise of improper influence on his mother by Michael in procuring this conveyance, but viewed in the light of the circumstances surrounding the execution of the conveyance, we do not think they are sufficient to justify us in setting the deed aside as to him. Wilson, the justice who made the deed, says Mrs. Walsh was cheerful, like any lady of her age; that it appeared to be her voluntary act and deed,—her own choice. He was in the house an hour, and he says during this time she took part in the conversations, talking intelligently and rationally. He says: "There was not the least apparent effort on the part of Mrs. Adams or Michael to induce her to make this conveyance." If this deed had been procured by undue influence, if the grantees were attempting to induce their mother, against her will, to part with the title, we do not think they would have proceeded in the manner shown by the testimony. The scrivener was not advised that there was anything wrong about the transaction. It does appear that Michael and Mrs. Adams were present during all the time that the justice was in Mrs. Walsh's house, talking with her, and preparing the deed. Decedent got up from her chair, and looked in her bureau drawer for an old deed to get the description from. This was done on her own motion. From these and other facts we conclude that there was no undue influence used which resulted in the procurement of the deed from Mrs. Walsh. The question of consideration is only a circumstance to be taken into account with other facts.

and circumstances in determining whether the conveyance was procured through fraud and undue influence.

4. Had the decedent the capacity to execute the deed? She was at least eighty years old, and infirm in body and mind. "She had for a long time an hallucination that she could see fairies; conversed with them; set the table for them; thought sticks of stove wood fairies; wanted to keep on the good side of them; imagined she could see departed spirits, particularly of her children; imagined she could see their whitened bones, and could not be led to believe but that some of them were dead; called people's attention to seeing their spirits out in the road. She was illiterate; could neither read, write, nor count money." It is insisted with much confidence that these and other facts show that decedent was not competent to execute the conveyance in question. This question may be determined from the testimony of those witnesses who are not interested in the event of this suit. The record shows that many of the witnesses gave an opinion as to decedent's mental unsoundness without disclosing any sufficient facts as a basis therefor. The rest of them based their opinions chiefly on the facts above stated. The physician who attended the deceased in her last illness, and who had been her family physician for years, says she did not appear different from what people always do when suffering as she was. He never observed anything in any manner indicating mental unsoundness. Joseph Grimes, a citizen of excellent repute, had known deceased since 1846. He had for years been her trusted adviser. He had frequently drawn papers for her and her husband. He says they were both believers in spirits. He was present January 2, 1889,—about two months before her death,—when a settlement was had with the tenant. His testimony shows she evinced a lively interest in the matter of the settlement, and called the attention of the tenant to certain things which he had agreed to do and had not done. He saw her also about a month before she died. She always did her own business. He says she always, in her business affairs, exercised judgment and reason, and he never heard her capacity to transact business called in question until after her death. This testimony is corroborated by several other persons well qualified to speak with accuracy concerning her mental condition. We cannot doubt, in view of the evidence as to the interest, activity, and knowledge of the deceased as to her business matters, that she possessed the capacity to make the deed. Many persons believe in spiritual manifestations, insist that they have communication and conversations with deceased friends, and the like; yet such things are not necessarily evidence of such a disordered mental condition as to show that those who hold such opinions are unfit to make a disposition of their property.

5. It follows from what we have said that the conveyance from Mrs. Walsh to Michael Walsh and Mary Ann Adams was valid, and hence we need not consider the questions raised as to whether defendants Arbuckle and Miller purchased in good faith and without notice of Mrs. Walsh's mental condition. Even if Mrs. Walsh's mental condition was such as to render her incompetent to make the deed, still these defendants had no actual knowledge of it; and, if it be conceded that they had sufficient knowledge to put them upon inquiry to ascertain the facts, it is shown that they investigated the facts disclosed to them in good faith and with diligence, and from such investigation they were warranted in believing Mrs. Walsh capable of conveying the real estate. Wade, Notice, §§ 28, 29, 31; Wilson v. Miller, 16 Iowa, 111. The evidence, to justify us in setting aside these deeds, should be clear, satisfactory, and conclusive. It is not of that character. Fifield v. Gaston, 12 Iowa, 218; Parker v. Pierce, 16 Iowa, 227; Ray v. Teaboul, 65 Iowa, 157.

The judgment of the district court will be reversed, except as to the amount tendered and paid into court, which will be paid over as directed by the district court, and plaintiffs' bill will be dismissed at their costs. The cause will be remanded for judgment and decree in the lower court in conformity with this opinion.

Reversed and remanded.

Re Guardianship of Mary and Maggie LALLY, Minors.

Michael LALLY

v.

Nellie FITZ HENRY, Appt.

Michael LALLY

v.

James SULLIVAN and Wife, Appts.

(.....Iowa.....)

1. The statutory right of a parent to the custody of his children is not absolute. Whether or not he shall have it in case he is intemperate and shiftless will be determined by a consideration of their best interests.
2. A widower, intemperate, without work, and with no property but a homestead, loses all right to the custody of his child in favor of one who legally adopts it, by leaving it at a neighbor's, substantially without clothing, with the promise to send for it in a few days and then leaving the city and remaining away ten weeks without contributing anything toward its support; especially where his only resource for its support is the indefinite promise of the tenant of his homestead, a poor man, to support the child for the use of the property, which is not adequate compensation for the service.
3. The alleged reformation of an intemperate widower is not sufficient to cause the restoration to him of his child, which has been adopted and given a good home by relatives, when such reformation, if it exists at all, must have occurred within a few weeks of his application for the child.
4. A promise by an intemperate father to quit drinking is not sufficient to cause the withdrawal of his children from the custody of a competent guardian, and their restoration to him.

NOTE.—As to the father's right to the custody of his child, see Sheers v. Stein, 5 L. R. A. 781, and note, 75 W. 44.

(May 11, 1892.)

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the District Court for Lee County restoring to the custody of plaintiff his minor children which had been placed by the court in the control of the defendants. Reversed.

Statement by Kinne, J.:

The first cause stated is a proceeding to annul and set aside the appointment of appellant as guardian of the minors Mary and Maggie Lally. The second is a suit in equity to annul and set aside the articles of adoption whereby James and Mary Sullivan, appellants, hold possession of the minor Lizzie Lally. The court below ordered the children turned over temporarily to their father, Michael Lally, and continued the cause for final determination. From this order both the guardian and James and Mary Sullivan appeal. Both causes were tried below to the court without a jury, and it is agreed that both shall be tried together here on the same evidence.

Messrs. Parsons & Dolan, for appellants

This court in Farrar v. Farrar, 75 Iowa, 125, condemns in forcible language a woman who left her child only ten days as evincing a want of affection, and for that alone deprives her of its custody. Then ten weeks surely ought to be enough to convince the court below that appellee had no regard for his children.

Neither father nor mother has any absolute rights to the custody of their children.

Bonnett v. Bonnett, 61 Iowa, 202, 47 Am. Rep. 810; Sturtevant v. State, 15 Neb. 459; United States v. Green, 3 Mason, 482; Corrie v. Corrie, 42 Mich. 509; Jones v. Darnall, 1 West. Rep. 283, 108 Ind. 569; Sheers v. Stein, 5 L. R. A. 781, 75 Wis. 44; Giles v. Giles, 80 Neb. 624.

Whatever rights the parents have may be lost or forfeited by abandonment, misconduct, misfortune, or by voluntary act and absence.

State v. Bratton, 15 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 362; Bonnett v. Bonnett and Jones v. Darnall, supra; Heinemann's App. 96 Pa. 112.

Where the custody of children is in controversy the controlling fact to govern the court the law declares is their welfare.

Re Bort, 25 Kan. 310.

The matter of primary importance is the interest of the child. To this the right of the parents must yield.

Bonnett v. Bonnett, supra; Jenkins v. Clark, 71 Iowa, 556; Fouts v. Pierce, 64 Iowa, 73; Drumb v. Keen, 47 Iowa, 437; Shaw v. Nachwey, 43 Iowa, 653; Corrie v. Corrie, 42 Mich. 509; Re Stockman, 71 Mich. 180.

Regarding the people with whom the father wishes to place the children the language of Maxwell, J., in Giles v. Giles, supra, is apt: "We have no means of knowing the qualifications of this family to care for and train a child of tender years; nor, indeed, is there any evidence of a valid contract for the support of the child. For aught that appears, they might at any time—in a day, a week or month—abandon the care of the child, without bad faith or a violation of the agreement."

The home offered by the guardian is superior in every respect, to say nothing of its permanency to the one the court below would consign them. The best interests of the children require that the order so made be reversed.

Drumb v. Keen, Fouts v. Pierce, Bonnett v. Bonnett, Sturtevant v. State, Jones v. Darnall, and State v. Bratton, supra.

The court erred in sustaining said motion by giving any weight to the promises of reform.

All the world knows that promises made by a drunken man are always broken.

York v. Ferner, 59 Iowa, 490.

Mr. D. F. Miller, Sr., for appellee.

Kinne, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. March 18, 1890, Nellie Fitz Henry was appointed and qualified as guardian of the minors Mary Lally, aged six years, and Maggie Lally, aged four years, on the grounds that Michael Lally, their father, had abandoned them; that he was an habitual drunkard, and an unfit person to have the control and custody of said children. On the same day Lizzie Lally, then two years old, and a daughter of said Michael Lally, was adopted by James and Mary Sullivan, his wife. Articles of adoption were duly filed for record, being signed by James and Mary Sullivan and the mayor of Keokuk, where said minors then resided. March 18, 1890, Michael Lally instituted these proceedings for the revocation of the appointment of a guardian on the grounds that he had resided in Keokuk for seventeen years; that his wife died August 5, 1889; that he owned a homestead in the city; that he had made arrangements for the care of said children; and that the grounds alleged for the appointment of said guardian were untrue. At the same time he began his suit against the Sullivans, making substantially the same allegations, and attaching thereto the articles of adoption heretofore referred to, and praying that they might be annulled. The guardian appeared and admitted the residence of plaintiff; that he had a homestead, which it was averred he acquired by descent. She further avers that he abandoned said children and left the state while under the influence of liquor, making no provision for their support; that they were not in good condition, and showed evidence of want of proper care; that, after such abandonment, the child Lizzie was adopted by the Sullivans, and had a good home; the plaintiff, though absent for over two months, did not contribute anything towards the support of said children; that plaintiff had been left with ample means by his mother, which he had squandered by excessive drinking and continual intoxication, and that when he left the state he had no property except his homestead and furniture; that he has no means; that the guardian had provided a permanent home, in fulfillment of the wishes of the ward's mother, at the Immaculate Conception Academy of Davenport, Iowa, an educational institution, where they are to be cared for, supported, and educated free of expense. She also avers that said wards have no estate. She states that plaintiff has for a long time been given to the excessive use of intoxicants, whereby he had lost his position, and was unfit to have the care and control of said children; that the best interests of the children will be attained by leaving them where they are, and that plaintiff did not intend to care for said children, but intended to turn them over to the care of others who are irresponsible, and of a different religious belief from said children and their parents. James and Mary Sullivan answer plaintiff's petition by a general denial, and also state that they are only blood relations of the child Lizzie; that they give her a good home, and the same care and love as their own children. They also make the answer of the guardian their answer herein, and plead that they hold the child by the articles of adoption heretofore referred to.

2. The only question involved in these cases is the custody of the three minor children, all under seven years of age. Our statute provides that the parents "are the natural guardians of their minor children, and are equally entitled to the care and custody of them." Code, § 2241. Also that on the death of one parent the survivor becomes the guardian. Id. § 2242. Notwithstanding the statutory provisions, the weight of modern decisions is clearly favorable to the holding that the right of the parent to the custody of the child is not absolute. It must be determined, in a case like this, in view of the best interests of the child. That is the controlling consideration. Bonnett v. Bonnett, 61 Iowa, 301, 47 Am. Rep. 810; Shaw v. Nachtweg, 43 Iowa, 658; Drumb v. Keen, 47 Iowa, 437; Fouts v. Pierce, 64 Iowa, 73; Jenkins v. Clark, 71 Iowa, 556. It is said in Joab v. Sheets, 99 Ind. 328, that "the question of the custody of the child was one in which the rights of the child were primarily involved, and where those of the parents were of secondary consideration." In United States v. Gren, 8 Mason, 485, Story, J., says it is an entire mistake to suppose that the father has an absolute vested right in the custody of an infant. In Corrie v. Corrie, 42 Mich. 509, it is said: "In contests of this kind the opinion is now nearly universal that neither of the parents has any right that can be allowed to seriously militate against the welfare of the child. The paramount consideration is what is really demanded by its best interests." In Re Bort, 25 Kan. 310, the doctrine announced is that "the best interest of the children is the paramount fact. Rights of parents sink into insignificance before that." Sturtevant v. State, 15 Neb. 459; Re Stockman, 71 Mich. 180. See also Code, § 2301. This just rule may now be regarded as settled.

3. Now, it is clear that a parent may lose the right of custody by his own voluntary act, by misconduct, and even sometimes by misfortune. He may lead such a grossly immoral and profligate life, may become so habituated to the use of intoxicants, as to be utterly unfit to have the custody of a child, or may by neglect to provide for it justify a court in refusing to place it in his custody. State v. Bratton, 15 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 359.

Applying the law to the facts first of the equity case, we find that Lizzie Lally was two years old when this proceeding commenced; that she was then adopted by appellants James and Mary Sullivan, with the consent of the mayor of Keokuk, as provided by Code, §§ 2308, 2309; that the child was treated as having been abandoned by her father, and it was also alleged he was an habitual drunkard. It will serve no useful purpose to refer in detail to the evidence, but, after a careful examination of it, we think it fully appears that at the time Lizzie was adopted by the Sullivans plaintiff had abandoned all his children. Before going to St. Louis he took his children to Mrs. Connor's, stating that he would send for them in a few days. The children then showed that they had not been properly cared for. They were substantially without clothing. Plaintiff had no money. He was gone ten weeks, and did not send or contribute anything towards their support. He wrote, proposing to distribute the children around to three different persons. Now he wants the Browns to have them, and expects them, for the rent of his house, —$7 per month, —to keep and properly support the children, which service is shown to be worth $20 per month. It appears that Brown earns $1.50 per day, and has a family of his own to support. Nor do the Browns agree to keep the children for any definite time. Surely these and other facts appearing justify us in the conclusion that plaintiff lost all right he had to have the custody of his children.

In Giles v. Giles, 30 Neb. 62, the court, in a case in some respects much like this, said: "The testimony shows that he [the father] has no home of his own; that he proposes to place the child in the family of a friend. . . . For aught that appears, they might at any time —in a day, a week, or a month—abandon the care of the child," etc. So in this case there can be no assurance that the Browns will, under the circumstances, keep these children for any length of time, even if plaintiff's prayer be granted. It will not do to take this child from a good home, and put her in a position of such uncertainty. What assurance is there or can there be from the evidence in this case that this child of tender years will not, if plaintiff's wish be granted, be thrown by him on the charities of the world, with no protector, no one to provide her with the necessities of life, or to look after her education and moral training.

4. If, however, it should be conceded that the acts of plaintiff would not amount to an abandonment of his right of custody, there is yet another reason why he ought not to have the control of this child. It is charged, and, we think, fully established, that plaintiff is a man of dissolute habits, an habitual drunkard; that he was so long prior to his wife's death, —August 5, 1889,—and since; that by reason of these habits he was forced to seek employment in some place outside of Keokuk; that he was drunk at a funeral; that he had mistreated his children; that on July 4, 1889,—but a month prior to his wife's death,—he was driving through the streets with them at a dangerous rate of speed; that his wife had expressed the wish that the children should be placed in a convent, away from their drunken father.

Against this testimony and this record we have the assurance of the plaintiff that he had reformed. We are unable to so find from the evidence; and, even if it were so, the reformation is of so recent a date that we should not feel justified in taking this child from a good home with her relations; and turning her over to her father, in view of the experience of mankind as to the probable permanency of such reformation. If this plaintiff had for a reasonable length of time shown his ability to keep sober and to provide for his children, the case might be different. But his dissipation continued after his wife's death, and the court below found that, unless there was a reform as promised on plaintiff's part, he would have no legal or moral right to the custody of his children. To our minds, the habits and conduct of plaintiff bar his right to the custody of this child. The interest of the child being the controlling question, and in view of the fact that Lizzie is now well cared for, and has a good and permanent home with the only relatives she has other than her father, it seems certain that we shall promote her interest by letting her remain with those who have adopted her.

This case between the plaintiff and guardian was tried as a law action, and the court found, among other facts, that plaintiff had quit drinking; that the guardian was a worthy and proper person to direct the education and moral training of the minors; that plaintiff had contracted an unfortunate habit of dissipation, and to such an extent as to render him unfit to properly care for his children; that, unless there is a reform as promised, the father would have no legal or moral claim to the custody of his children. It is evident that the learned judge below was led to believe that plaintiff had quit drinking, and that he relied on plaintiff's promised reformation. In this, we think, he was in error. The testimony shows plaintiff continued his dissipation up to the very day he left his children and went to St. Louis. There is not the slightest thing in the case to hang a hope of reformation on except his naked promise to quit. The findings of the court below stand as the verdict of a jury, and we should not disturb them if they find support in the evidence; but it seems to us that the evidence does not support the findings of the district court. We may also add that we see no reason for taxing any part of the costs to appellants. For the reason heretofore given both cases are reversed, and, as the law action must go back to the district court, they will both be remanded for further proceedings in conformity with this opinion.

Reversed and remanded.

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT.

PEOPLE of the State OF ILLINOIS,

Appts.,

v.

James M. BRIDGES.

(.....Ill.....)

1. A lake wholly upon lands of a private owner and connected with an unnavigable river only during times of high water, is included within a statutory prohibition against fishing with a seine during a certain part of the year in "any of the rivers, creeks, streams, ponds, lakes, sloughs, bayous, and other watercourses" within the state.
2. A statutory prohibition of fishing with a seine during a part of the year is not unconstitutional even as applied to a lake wholly upon lands of a private owner and connected with an unnavigable stream only in time of high water.

(May 11, 1892.)

APPEAL by prosecutors from a judgment of the Appellate Court, Third District, reversing a judgment of the Circuit Court for Sangamon County, which convicted defendant and imposed upon him a fine for alleged violation of the statutes concerning the protection of fish. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John C. Mathis, A. J. Lester and E. S. Smith for appellants.

Messrs. Palmer & Shutt for appellee.

NOTE.—As to the power of the Legislature to regulate the right of fishery, see Lawton v. Steele, 7 L. R. A. 184, and note, 119 N. Y. 220, 16 L. R. A.

Bailey, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a prosecution commenced in the name of the people of the state of Illinois against James M. Bridges before a justice of the peace of Sangamon county for a violation of the provisions of the Act entitled "An Act to Encourage the Propagation and Cultivation and to Secure the Protection of Fishes in All the Waters of This State," approved May 31, 1887, as amended by an Act approved June 3, 1889. Laws 1887, p. 189; Laws 1889, p. 158. The trial before the justice of the peace resulted in a judgment in favor of the defendant. The cause was thereupon removed to the circuit court by appeal, where a trial de novo was had, resulting in the conviction of the defendant, and the imposition upon him of a fine of $10. From that judgment the defendant appealed to the appellate court of the third district, where said conviction was reversed, and a final judgment rendered in favor of the defendant. The present appeal is from said judgment of reversal, the judges of the appellate court having granted a certificate that the case involves questions of law of such importance, on account of principal and collateral interests, that it should be passed upon by this court.

The trial in the circuit court was without a jury, the facts being all admitted by the following stipulation: "Jacob Miller is the owner of the southwest quarter of section 8, in township 15 north, range 8 west of the 8d P. M., in Sangamon county, Illinois, in which what is known as 'Sand Prairie Lake,' is situated. The small body of water known as 'Sand Prairie Lake' is about one quarter of a mile in length, and its width ranges from about twenty-five to one hundred yards. It is situated in the bottom of the north fork of the Sangamon river, and is distant from said river only a few yards at the furthest point. There is a low place or depression in said northwest quarter of said section 8, reaching from the north end of said lake or pond to the bed of said river at most seasons of the year, but in case of high water this depression or slough fills with water, and connects directly the waters of this pond or lake with the waters of said stream or river, and at times this connection lasts for a period of several days or weeks. The rises of said river or stream generally occur in the spring of the year or the early summer, and again in the fall.

When there is no high water in the river or stream, the said lake or pond is entirely shut in, and its waters do not mingle at all with the waters of said stream. In July, 1889, the defendant, James Bridges, obtained the consent of said Jacob Miller to fish with a seine in said body of water so situated on said premises, and to catch and kill fish in said pond with a seine. After consent was given defendant by Jacob Miller so to do, the defendant, with the help of others, went in and upon said pond, and with a large seine, with meshes of one and one half inches, and about seventy yards long, (not a minnow seine) dragged said pond or body of water, and caught and killed thereby a large number of fish of different kinds, of the varieties common to the waters within the state of Illinois. The north fork of the Sangamon river is not a stream or river used for navigation." The foregoing being all the evidence offered at the trial, the circuit court held as matter of law, in substance, that the catching and killing of said fish by the defendant, in manner and form as shown by said stipulation, was unlawful, and rendered the defendant guilty of the offense charged in the complaint.

The statutory provisions for the violation of which the prosecution was instituted are to be found in the sixth section of said amendatory Act, and are as follows: "That it shall be unlawful for any person to catch or kill any fish with any seine or other device used as a seine in or upon any of the rivers, creeks, streams, ponds, lakes, sloughs, bayous, or other watercourses wholly within or running through the state of Illinois; nor shall the meshes of any weir, basket, or trap, or any device for catching fish in such waters not above prohibited, except for catching minnows for bait, be less than two inches square: provided, however, that seining shall be lawful and allowed between the first day of July in each year and the first day of April in the following year, with seines, the meshes of which shall not be less than two inches square, in such rivers, or streams as are used for navigation, wholly within the state, and not above or beyond any private or corporate dam on said rivers or streams, and also in the navigable bays or lakes connected with such navigable streams, wholly within the state, and not extending beyond the overflowed bottoms of such rivers or streams; . . . and any person offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and fined as provided in this Act." Rev. Stat. 1891, chap. 56, § 6. The questions presented are, (1) whether this statute applies to the lake or pond in controversy; and (2) whether, as applied to said lake or pond, it is valid. The first of these questions is solely one of construction, and has no dependence upon the second, except so far as it involves the rule that a statute should, if possible, be so construed as to sustain its provisions, by avoiding, where that can be done, all conflict with the fundamental law. Do the provisions of said statute apply, and were they intended by the Legislature to apply to bodies of water of the character of the one in question here? The object of the statute, as expressed in its title, is "to encourage the propagation and cultivation and to secure protection of fish in all the waters of this state," and section 6 of the amendatory Act prohibits the catching or killing of fish with any seine, etc., "in or upon any of the rivers, creeks, streams, ponds, lakes, sloughs, bayous, and other watercourses wholly within this state, or running through the state of Illinois." The body of water in question, as the stipulation admits, is a lake or pond of considerable dimensions, lying wholly within this state, and one which, in its natural state, is stocked with a considerable amount of fish of the varieties common to the waters of this state. The language of the statute is certainly broad enough to include it, and we are unable to yield our assent to the reasons which are urged in favor of the construction which would exclude it.

It is contended that the general words, "other watercourses," should be held to operate as a limitation upon the scope or meaning to be given to the more specific enumeration of different classes of streams or bodies of water, so as to exclude all waters which do not properly fall under the designation of watercourses. It is true that, where several words susceptible of an analogous meaning are coupled together, the maxim nocturnus a sociis is often applied; that is to say, they take, so to speak, color from each other, but that is usually, if not uniformly, by way of restricting the more general to a sense analogous to the less general. Re Swigert, 119 Ill. 83, 6 West. Rep. 725; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, §§ 400-411. The rule, however, does not seem to have the converse operation. Thus, where various specific terms are associated with words of a more general character, and the ordinary signification of the general words is more restricted than that of all the specific terms taken collectively, the meaning of the general words may be enlarged, but the scope of the specific words used will not be restricted, or their force practically nullified, by their association with general words of that character. To constitute a watercourse, according to the ordinary signification of that term, there must be a stream usually flowing in a particular direction, and in a definite channel, and it must usually discharge itself into some other stream or body of water. Palmer v. Waddell, 22 Kan. 353; Robinson v. Shanks, 118 Ind. 125. If, then, the words "other watercourses" should be given their ordinary signification, and should be allowed to control the more specific words of the statute, they would practically eliminate from it the words "ponds" and "lakes," and perhaps also the words "sloughs" and "bayous," as the first two of these words most usually, and the last two very frequently, are not included within the ordinary meaning of "watercourses." It is manifest that this latter term was used, not by way of restricting anything which had already been mentioned, but for the purpose of including any other watercourse of the same general nature as those specified, if such there should happen to be in the state, which were not sufficiently described in the specifications already made. Whether or not there were such in fact is not material. The general words were obviously used by way of precaution, so as to render it certain that no waters of that general nature should be omitted.

Again, it is contended that the body of water in question cannot be deemed to have been within the contemplation of the Legislature when it passed said statute, because the land covered by said water, as well as all the lands by which it was surrounded, are the private property of Miller, and that said body of water, by reason of its situation, is subject to no right of navigation in favor of the public, and no right of easement in favor of other riparian proprietors. It has no outlet, and during the greater portion of the year it is cut off from and has no communication with the watercourse near which it is situated. It is said that Miller's rights in said body of water are so paramount and exclusive that, if he choose to fill it up, and thereby destroy it as a lake or pond, no rights of any private party or of the public would be infringed; and this is put forward as the test of the legislative intention to include said lake among the waters enumerated by said Act. It seems to us to be a sufficient answer to this contention that the statute itself, neither expressly nor by implication, has established any such test. There may be, and doubtless are, various, and perhaps many, lakes, ponds, sloughs, and bayous in the state, which are so far private property that the owner may drain them or fill them up without infringing any public or private right, but which, so long as they are permitted to remain in their natural condition, are places where fish common to the waters of the state are propagated and raised. And, while this is so, the statute makes no distinction between bodies of water thus situated and those in respect to which public rights or private easements exist. Its language applies to all alike. Nor would there seem to be any reason why the legislative policy in relation to the protection and preservation of fish in rivers and streams should not apply to waters of this character, especially where they have such connections, either permanent or during occasional periods of high water, with streams or other bodies of water in which fish abound, as to draw therefrom their stock of fish. Indeed, the power to protect and preserve the fish in the waters of the state would be practically nugatory, if, as is contended, it was confined to streams and watercourses, and was excluded in case of all bodies of water which were so far subject to private ownership that the owners would have a right to drain them or fill them up, and thus destroy them as bodies of water. It is well known that lakes, ponds, sloughs, and bayous, many, if not most, of which are thus subject to private ownership, are the very places which are most sought by the various species of migratory fish for the purpose of depositing their spawn, and which are therefore of the highest importance in the propagation and multiplication of those varieties of fish. If the power of the Legislature to make provision for the protection and preservation of fish depended upon the existence of some other right, like that of navigation, or of some private easement, such as usually belongs to riparian proprietors, a different conclusion might follow. But we do not understand that to be the case. The power, where it exists, rests upon other grounds. It is because of the great importance of fish as an article of human food that their protection and preservation has been regarded as a matter of public concern, and it is upon that ground that Legislatures have assumed the right to interpose their authority by way of preventing any undue or improper hindrance in the way of their natural increase and of prohibiting the use of improper means for their extermination.

It being clear, as we think, that the statute is broad enough to include the pond or lake in question, and that bodies of water of that character are within the legislative intent, the inquiry involving the greatest difficulty is whether, as applied to such bodies of water, the statute is obnoxious to any constitutional objection. The only objection of that character which seems to be suggested is that it is an undue and unwarrantable interference with the property rights of the owner of the land upon which said pond or lake is situated. Fish, in streams or bodies of water, have always been classed by the common law as ferae naturae, in which the riparian proprietor or the owner of the soil covered by the water, even though he may have the sole and exclusive right of fishing in such waters, has at best but a qualified property, which can be rendered absolute only by their actual capture, and which is wholly divested the moment the fish escape to other waters. We are unable to see that there is anything in the situation or character of the pond or lake in question that takes it out of the rule. While said body of water has no continuous connection with the river situated but a few yards away, such connection is established during all periods of high water, and continues for a sufficient length of time to allow fish to pass into it, or the fish in the lake to escape therefrom. During such periods of high water, which occur once or twice, if not oftener, every year, and continue sometimes for several weeks, said lake, so far as the passage of fish to and from it is concerned, becomes, for all practicable purposes, a part of the river. During these periods, as we may presume, migratory fish, passing up the river in search of proper places for depositing their spawn, are liable, for such purpose, to pass into this as into other bayous where the waters are quiet, but with this difference: that while, in case of ordinary bayous which maintain their connection with the stream, the fish, after accomplishing their purpose, are at liberty to leave and go elsewhere, here by the receding of the water, their exit is for the time being cut off, and they, as well as their progeny, are compelled to remain. As soon, however, as another flood occurs,—a thing which may happen at any season of the year,—the fish thus impounded are at liberty to escape, and if they do so any qualified property the owner of the lake may have in them is at once devastated.

We are unable to see how the mere fact that said lake, instead of having a continual connection with the river, has such connection only during periods of high water, can have any essential bearing upon the rights which the owner of the soil has in the fish that happen for the time being to be in the lake. It undoubtedly greatly increases his opportunities for obtaining an absolute title by catching and reducing them to possession, but until he does so he has only the same and no better title to them than he would have if the lake were merely a bayou having uninterrupted connection with the river. It is impossible, therefore, to distinguish the present case from those arising in relation to other waters in the state to which the statute is applicable. The public interest is involved in both in the same way, if not to the same extent, and the public interest in both is such as to justify legislative interposition. The power of the Legislature to pass laws for the protection and preservation of fish in the waters of the state has been so frequently exercised in this and other states, and such exercise has been so long and so uniformly acquiesced in, that the existence of the power, at the present day, is scarcely open to question. Thus in Weller v. Snover, 42 N. J. L. 341, the court reviews various authorities bearing upon the question, and says: "The great interest of the general government and the government of our state, in protecting fisheries, in stocking them with fish, in guarding them as a supply of food for our people, and in fostering and raising game fish, has been manifested by frequent legislation and appropriations for these purposes. The right of the state thus to legislate cannot be disputed." See also Doughty v. Conover, 42 N. J. L. 193. In People v. Reed, 47 Barb. 235, which was an indictment for taking fish with a net in violation of a statute prohibiting the taking of fish in that manner within the waters of the state, the court says: "There is no force in the objection to the power of the Legislature to pass a valid law to prevent taking fish, at certain seasons, within the waters of this state. It is a power which the Legislature has always exercised, and the right is founded in considerations of public policy." In Gentile v. State, 29 Ind. 409, which was a criminal prosecution for a violation of a statute prohibiting the trapping, netting, or seining of fish, it is said: "We find nothing in the Constitution restricting the powers of the Legislature over the subject, and therefore hold the statute constitutional." In Drew v. Hilliker, 56 Vt. 641, a similar statute was held constitutional. Legislation of this character is directly or incidentally sustained in the following decisions: State v. Roberts, 59 N. H. 256, 47 Am. Rep. 199; State v. Roberts, 59 N. H. 484; State v. Beal, 75 Me. 289; State v. Blount, 85 Mo. 543; Maney v. State, 6 Lea, 218; Com. v. Look, 108 Mass. 452; Com. v. Richardson, 142 Mass. 71, 2 New Eng. Rep. 53; Holyoke Water Power Co. v. Lyman, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 500, 21 L. ed. 133; State v. Franklin Falls Co. 49 N. H. 240; State v. Boone, 80 Ind. 225; Vinton v. Welsh, 9 Pick. 87; State v. Hockett, 29 Ind. 302. These are but a few of the numerous cases to be found in the reports bearing on the subject, but, as the general power of the Legislature to pass laws for the protection of fish and the regulation of fisheries does not seem to be questioned, further reference to the decisions of other states is unnecessary. In none of these cases, so far as we have been able to examine them, has the fact that a particular individual has the sole and exclusive fishery right been held to exclude the legislative power to control and regulate the exercise of such right. In Beckman v. Kremer, 48 Ill. 447, 92 Am. Dec. 146, such exclusive fishery right is defined and limited as follows: "By the common law a right to take fish belongs so essentially to the right to the soil in streams or bodies of water, where the tide does not ebb and flow, that, if the riparian proprietor owns upon both sides of such stream, no one but himself may come upon the limits of his land and take fish there; and the same rule applies so far as his land extends, to wit, to the thread of the stream, where he owns upon one side only. Within these limits, by the common law, his right of fishery is sole and exclusive, unless restricted by some local law or well-established usage of the state where the premises may be situate." It may be observed that under this definition the fishery right of the landowner in the case before us is no more exclusive than is that of a riparian proprietor on one or both sides of a stream above tide water, and both are equally subject to such rules as may be imposed by law or usage under its exercise.

Laws regulating the exercise of fishery rights stand, so far as the questions now under consideration are concerned, upon substantially the same footing with ordinary game laws, and we think the rule will not be questioned that a general statute regulating the killing of game, or restricting the right to kill it, to certain portions of the year, apply as well to the game which a particular landowner may chance to find on his own premises as to that which may be found on the land of others, or upon lands belonging to the public. Precisely the same considerations of public policy prevail in the one case as in the other. The object of laws restricting the killing of certain game birds to particular seasons of the year is to favor their increase and prevent their undue extinction, and that object may be quite as successfully thwarted by each proprietor killing them on his own premises as by hunting and killing them on the land of others. In Magner v. People, 97 Ill. 820, this court, in affirming the validity of certain laws restricting the killing of game, said: "No one has a property in the animals and fowls denominated 'game' until they are reduced to possession. Whilst they are untamed and at large the ownership is said to be in the sovereign authority,—in Great Britain in the king, but with us in the people of the state. The policy of the common law was to regulate and control the hunting and killing of game, for its better preservation; and such regulation and control, according to Blackstone, belong to the police power of the government. . . . The ownership being in the people of the state,—the repository of the sovereign authority,—and no individual having any property rights to be affected, it necessarily results that the Legislature, as the representative of the people of the state, may withhold or grant to individuals the right to hunt or kill game, or qualify or restrict it, as, in the opinion of its members, will best subserve the public welfare. Stated in other language, to hunt or kill game is a boon or privilege granted, either expressly or impliedly, by the sovereign authority; not a right inhering in the individual; and consequently nothing is taken away from the individual when he is denied the privilege, at stated seasons, of hunting and killing game. It is, perhaps, accurate to say that the ownership of the sovereign authority is in trust for all the people of the state, and hence, by implication, it is the duty of the Legislature to enact such laws as will best preserve the subject of the trust, and secure its beneficial use in the future to the people of the state. But, in any view, the question of individual enjoyment is one of public policy, and not of private rights." What is here quoted applies with equal appropriateness to laws having for their object the preservation of fish in the waters of the state, and such application is made in said opinion, by way of argument, in the following language: "So far as we are aware, it has never been judicially denied that the government, under its police powers, may make regulations for the preservation of game and fish, restricting their taking and molestation to certain seasons of the year, although laws to this effect, it is believed, have been in force in many of the older states since the organization of the Federal government. On the contrary, the constitutional right to enact such laws has been expressly affirmed, in regard to fish,"—citing several of the cases to which reference has already been made, in which the constitutionality of such acts is affirmed, and adding, "Upon principle, the right is clear."

Testing the case, then, in the light of both reason and authority, we are of the opinion that the statute under consideration was intended to and does apply to the lake or pond in question, and, as so applied, it is constitutional and valid. In reaching a contrary conclusion the Appellate Court erred, and its judgment will therefore be reversed, and the judgment of the circuit court will be affirmed.

INDIANA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Indiana, ex rel. Richard H. HARTFORD et al., Appls., Riley H. CRAIG.

(.....Ind.....)

1. The removal of a councilman from the ward for which he was elected to another ward of the same city will not of itself create a vacancy in his office where the only constitutional provision as to the residence of municipal officers provides that they shall reside "within their respective counties, townships, and towns," while the statutes provide that a councilman must at the time of his election "be a resident of the ward and in case of removal therefrom" the common council shall have power to declare his office vacant and order a special election to fill the vacancy.
2. A member of a city council is not an officer of the ward from which he is chosen, but of the entire city.

(May 24, 1892.)

APPEAL by relators from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Jay County in favor of NOTE.—The above appears to be a pioneer case upon the point involved.

16 L. R. A.

defendant in a proceeding to have the office of councilman of the City of Portland, which had been held by defendant, declared vacant because of his removal from the ward for which he was elected. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Messrs. R. H. Hartford and D. H. Taylor for appellant.

Messrs. Frank H. Snyder and George W. Beryman for appellee.

McBride, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellee was duly elected a councilman for the third ward of the city of Portland. He qualified and entered upon the duties of the office. He was at that time a resident of said ward and was otherwise qualified. Afterward he removed from the third to the second ward, where he resided when this suit was commenced, which was a proceeding against him in the nature of quo warranto. Since his removal he has still assumed to be councilman for the third ward and has been acting in that capacity. The only question we are required to decide is, Did his removal from the third ward vacate the office? The court below held that it did not. The precise question has never heretofore been before this court. Indeed, no authority is cited and counsel presents the question as one of first impression.

The law providing for the incorporation of cities requires that the city shall be divided into wards, and that two councilmen shall be elected from each ward, by the legal voters of their respective wards. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 3043.

The section referred to contains the following provision: "No person shall hold the office of councilman unless, at the time of his election he is a resident of the ward from which he is elected, and in case of the removal of any councilman from the ward from which he was elected, the common council shall have power to declare his office vacant and order a special election to fill the vacancy."

It is conceded that the city council has never taken any action in the matter. The only constitutional restriction upon the residence of officers of municipal corporations is found in section 6, article 6, of the Constitution, which provides that "all county, township, and town officers shall reside within their respective counties, townships, and towns." The word "town" is generic, and includes cities. Flinn v. State, 24 Ind. 286.

It is, however, competent for the Legislature to impose additional conditions and restrictions not in conflict with any express provision of the Constitution. It may, without doubt, as is done in the statute now under consideration, prescribe that only those shall be eligible for election as councilmen who are at the time residents of the ward for which they are elected. We think it equally clear that it may provide that removal from that ward will of itself operate as a vacation of the office. We do not think, however, that it has done so. In our opinion, it has not only committed to the city council the power to declare a vacancy in such a case, but it has also left the exercise of that power to the discretion of the council. Until that body has acted, the mere fact of removal to another ward will not of itself have the effect to create a vacancy.

The law providing for the organization and election of boards of county commissioners provides for the division of counties into districts, and that a commissioner shall be elected from each district, who shall reside in the district. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 5782.

In the case of Smith v. State, 24 Ind. 101, it was held that the statute did not require that a commissioner should continue to reside in the district for which he was elected. It is true, the statutes are unlike in this, that boards of county commissioners are elected by the vote of the entire county and not by the vote of the district which they represent, while members of a city council are elected by the votes alone of the voters of their respective wards. But when they are once elected and enter upon the discharge of their official duties, these duties are such as affect alike all portions of the city and are in no sense local. As is said of the county commissioner in Smith v. State, supra, when he assumes the duties of his office, "at that time he takes an oath of office and assumes duties and a jurisdiction co-extensive with the limits of the county."

So the member of the city council, when he takes his oath of office, assumes duties and a jurisdiction co-extensive with the limits of the city. He is not an officer of the ward, but an officer of the entire city.

Judgment affirmed.

UTAH SUPREME COURT.

Elwood N. JENKINS, Appt.,

v.

Jedediah BALLANTYNE, Resp't.

(.....Utah.....)

1. A dog is "property" within the meaning of the constitutional provision against taking property without due process of law.
2. An ordinance making a dog liable to be killed by any person unless registered and collared as provided by the ordinance is not in violation of the constitutional provision against depriving a person of property without due process of law, but is a valid police regulation.

(August 4, 1892.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the District Court for Weber County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover damages for the alleged wrongful killing by defendant of plaintiff's dog. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Mr. L. R. Rhodes, for appellant:

NOTE.—As to the right to kill dogs, see Hubbard v. Preston (Mich.) 15 L. R. A. 249, and note. 46 L. R. A.

In the American courts dogs have generally been held a species of property and an action for injury may be maintained by their owners.

Woolf v. Chalker, 81 Conn. 121; Dunlap v. Snyder, 17 Barb. 561; Harrington v. Miles, 11 Kan. 480, 15 Am. Rep. 855.

The following courts have held that dogs are subject to larceny and are property:

Dodson v. Mock, 20 N. C. 146, 32 Am. Dec. 577; State v. Brown, 9 Baxt. 53, 40 Am. Rep. 81, note; Harrington v. Miles, supra; Mullaly v. People, 86 N. Y. 865.

This ordinance provided a penalty to be inflicted upon the person who neglected to pay license for his dog. That was the proper punishment; not the killing of the dog by a private person.

See Heisrodt v. Hackett, 84 Mich. 288, 22 Am. Rep. 529.

Messrs. Kimball & Allison, for respondent:

It was admitted by the plaintiff upon the witness stand that he had not complied with the provisions of sections 1 and 4 of the Ordinance. The Ordinance was valid, and its admission in evidence was not error.

State v. McDuffie, 84 N. H. 523, 69 Am. Dec. 516; Blair v. Forehand, 100 Mass. 186, 1

Am. Rep. 94, 97 Am. Dec. 82; Morewood v. Wakefield, 138 Mass. 240; Heisrodt v. Hackett, 84 Mich. 283, 23 Am. Rep. 529; Carpenter v. Lippitt, 77 Mo. 242; Marshall v. Blackshire, 44 Iowa, 475.

Zane, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was instituted to recover the value of an Australian kangaroo hound, killed by the defendant while at large on his premises in Ogden city. The evidence on the trial tended to establish that the hound was worth $800, the value alleged in the complaint. The defendant claims that the facts proven and the ordinance in evidence authorized the killing. The ordinance is as follows: "Sec. 3. It shall be the duty of the recorder to register any dog on application of the owner or keeper, and issue a certificate of registration, under the corporate seal, on payment by such owner or keeper to said recorder, for the use and benefit of the city, the sum of three dollars. Such certificate shall be numbered in the order of issue, and shall be in force for one year only from and after the date of the same; but may be renewed annually, on the payment of the sum of three dollars, as aforesaid. Sec. 4. All dogs so registered shall wear a suitable collar, with the name or initials of the owner or keeper, and the number corresponding with that of the certificate of registry inscribed thereon; and all dogs found running at large within the limits of the city, not so registered and collared, shall be liable to be killed by any person." The provision of the charter of Ogden city authorizing the ordinance is as follows: "The city council shall have power to license, tax, regulate, or prohibit the keeping of dogs, and to authorize the destruction of the same when at large contrary to ordinance."

The question is presented, Had the Legislature the power to authorize the city to provide by ordinance for the registration and collaring of dogs within its limits, and to authorize their destruction when at large contrary to such provisions? Though the common law recognized dogs as property, it extended to them less legal regard and protection than to more harmless and useful domestic animals. They were not the subject of larceny at the common law. Later cases, however, in the United States hold that such property is also the subject of larceny. The Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States declares that "no person shall . . . be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law," and dogs being property, as we have seen, their owners cannot be deprived of them without due process of law. The question is, Was the killing of plaintiff's dog by the defendant, in view of the facts in evidence, under the ordinance "due process of law?"

The term "law," as used in this Constitutional provision, embraces all legal and equitable rules defining human rights and duties, and providing for their enforcement; not only as between man and man, but also between the state and its citizens. The term "due process of law" includes all the steps essential to deprive a person of life, liberty, or property; it includes all the forms and acts essential to its application and to give effect to it. The 16 L. R. A.

means that may be employed to accomplish the purpose of the law is the process; in other words, "process" is the mode by which the purpose of the law may be effected. And this mode as to similar subjects, under similar circumstances, must be the same to all persons. This is "due process of law." Judicial action is usually required to determine property rights against its owner, but in some cases administrative or executive action is sufficient. The emergency may be such as not to admit of the delay essential to judicial inquiry and consideration, or the subject of such action or process may be of such a nature, or the conditions and circumstances in which the act must be performed to effect the protection and give effect to the law may be such, as to render judicial inquiry and consideration impracticable. If a man is assailed under circumstances inducing in him a reasonable belief that it is necessary for him to take his assailant's life to save his own or to prevent great bodily injury, he may lawfully do so. The destruction of houses is lawful to prevent the spread of a conflagration. The killing of a horse or other valuable animal, if necessary to prevent serious injury from his attacks, is lawful. In such emergencies, and under such circumstances, the deprivation of life or liberty or the destruction of property is lawful, and not without due process of law. The purpose of municipal laws is the protection of life, liberty, and property; and, in order that they may afford such protection, they should be adapted to all situations and emergencies. The police power of the state has been used to regulate and control property in dogs to a greater extent than property in any other class of domestic animals. It is a peculiar kind of property. Such animals increase rapidly; they are usually of little expense to their owners when allowed to run at large; and in a domestic state they retain to a considerable degree their wild, mischievous, and ferocious natures. Their trespasses and invasions of rights not belonging to their masters are often such as are impossible to prevent, and when the mischief is done sometimes it is impossible to identify the dog or his owner, and when found the latter is sometimes as irresponsible as the former; in fact, judicial process and inquiry is altogether inadequate to redress such wrongs. Hence such laws and ordinances as those in question are adopted, requiring the owners of dogs to register and collar them. By such means the owner is ascertained and made responsible, and all dogs not deemed worth the trouble and expense of registration are outlawed when at large, and liable to be killed. Such was the law regulating the right of property in dogs at the time the constitutional provision in question was adopted. That provision was not intended to abrogate or add to the laws then in force. The purpose of its authors was to secure each and all impartially the benefits of such rules and regulations as had been established for the protection of life, liberty, and property, and such as experience and reason might suggest to the law-making department of the state and be enacted in the future. In Weimer v. Bunbury, 80 Mich. 201, the court said: "We are therefore of necessity driven to an examination of the previous condition of things, if we would understand the meaning of 'due process of law,' as the Constitution employs the term. Nothing previously in use regarded as necessary in government and sanctioned by usage can be looked upon as condemned by it. Administrative process of the customary sort is as much due process of law as judicial process. We should meet a great many unexpected and very serious embarrassments in government if this were otherwise. The words, it has very justly been said, 'were intended to secure the individual from the arbitrary exercise of the powers of government, unrestrained by the established principles of private rights and distributive justice.' Per Johnson, J., in Bank of Columbia v. Okely, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 285, 4 L. ed. 559."

The enactment of the provision of the charter above quoted by the Legislature was an exercise of the police power of the territory, and the ordinance in question was authorized by that provision. "By this general police power of the state, persons and property are subject to all kinds of restraints and burdens, in order to secure the general comfort, health, and prosperity of the state." Tiedeman, Pol. Powers, p. 2, § 1; Id. p. 507, § 141; Morewood v. Wakefield, 188 Mass. 240; Blair v. Forehand, 100 Mass. 186, 1 Am. Rep. 94, 97 Am. Dec. 82; State v. McDuffie, 84 N. H. 523, 60 Am. Dec. 518. The court is of the opinion that the ordinance relied upon is valid, and that it justified the defendant in killing plaintiff's dog while running at large without being registered according to its provisions. Other errors are alleged on the record, but we do not think them well assigned.

The judgment of the court below is affirmed.

Anderson and Blackburn, JJ., concur.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Minnesota, ex rel. Carrie OLSON, Appt.,

v.
J. W. BROWN, Supt. of State Reform School, Respnt.

(.....Minn.....)

*1. The statutes (Gen. Stat. 1878, chap. 35, § 44, etc.), and the various Acts amendatory thereto, which confer upon justices of the peace power to commit infants, in consequence of incorrigibly vicious conduct, to the care and guardianship of the board of managers of the state reform school for terms exceeding a period of three months, are not repugnant to section 7 of article 6 of the Constitution, relating to the jurisdiction of probate courts, or to section 8 of the same article, relating to the jurisdiction of justices of the peace.

*Head notes by COLLINS, J.

2. The mode of procedure pointed out in this legislation is not in violation of that NOTE.—Commitment of minors to reformatories without conviction of crime.

A statute authorizing a magistrate to commit to the reform school any minor "who he has reason to believe is a vagrant, or is destitute of proper parental care, or is growing up in mendicancy, ignorance, idleness, or vice," is unconstitutional because such commitment is not by "due process of law." People v. Turner, 55 Ill. 281, 5 Am. Rep. 645.

This was a habeas corpus proceeding by a father to liberate his minor son, who had been committed under this statute. Thornton, J., said, p. 237: "Even criminals cannot be convicted and imprisoned without due process of law,—without a regular trial, according to the course of the common law. Why should minors be imprisoned for misfortune? Destitution of proper parental care, ignorance, idleness, and vice, are misfortunes, not crimes. In all criminal prosecutions against minors for grave and heinous offenses, they have the right to demand the nature and cause of the accusation, and a speedy public trial by an impartial jury. All this must precede the final commitment to prison. Why should children, only guilty of misfortune, be deprived of liberty without 'due process of law?' It cannot be said that in this case there is no imprisonment. This boy is deprived of a father's care, bereft of home influences, has no freedom of action, is committed for an uncertain time, is branded as a prisoner, made subject to the will of others, and thus feels that he is a slave. Nothing could more contribute to paralyze the youthful energies, crush all noble aspirations, and unfit him for the duties of manhood."

Another statute authorizing the commitment of minor girls for similar reasons, which provided for the ascertainment of the facts by a jury, upon 16 L. R. A.

notice to parents, was upheld in Re Ferrier, 103 Ill. 367, a distinction being taken on the less summary procedure and the more liberal character of the confinement prescribed.

Of this latter Act it is said in McLean County v. Humphreys, 104 Ill. 378, 388: "We perceive no force in the objection that the Act in question is an infringement upon the personal liberty of the citizen as guaranteed by the Constitution. The restraints which the Act imposes are only such as are essential to the comfort and well-being of the unfortunate class of persons who are brought within its provisions."

In Mason v. Barnett (Wash.) Jan. 21, 1892, it is said that homeless and incorrigible minors committed to the state reform school "are not subject to the penal laws of the state, have no right to trial by jury, . . . and do not come within pardonin^g power, any more than persons committed to the insane asylums. They are wards of the state, which stands to them in loco parentis, and whose courts are its agents to make commitments, after which the trustees take full charge and control of them."

The summary commitment by virtue of a statute of an incorrigible minor to a house of refuge is not imprisonment without "due process of law." Ex parte Crouse, 4 Whart. 9.

The court said: "The House of Refuge is not a prison, but a school. Where reformation, and not punishment, is the end, it may indeed be used as a prison for juvenile convicts who else would be committed to a common gaol; and, in respect to these, the constitutionality of the Act which incorporated it stands clear of controversy. It is only in respect of the application of its discipline to subjects admitted on the order of a court, a magistrate, or the managers of the alms-house, that a doubt is entertained."

portion of the fundamental law of the state which provides that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate.

3. Other questions, raised on habeas corpus proceedings, as to the regularity of certain proceedings which resulted in the commitment of an infant to the care and guardianship of said board of managers, considered and disposed of.

(July 1, 1892.)

A PPEAL by relator from an order of the District Court for Goodhue County dismissing her proceeding in habeas corpus to procure the release of her son from the custody of defendant. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Sawyer, Abbott & Sawyer, for appellant:

The jurisdiction of justices of the peace is defined and limited by the Constitution.

Minn. Const. art. 6, § 8.

It is not an industrial school, a benevolent institution to which the convict is committed under the Act.

See Wis. Stat. Providing Industrial Schools, § 3208; Kelly Stat. Minn. Act Providing Home for Dependent & Neglected Children, §§ 8234, 8251.

Inmates of state reform school are transferable to reformatory at will of managers.

Kelly Stat. § 8214.

The same convict is transferable from reformatory to state prison at the will of managers of reformatory.

Ibid.

Confinement in a reform school as above constituted is a disgrace not a misfortune, imprisonment and not adoption by the state. If a justice of the peace has the constitutional power to commit to a reform school for a period of more than three months, there is no logical reason why he cannot be granted the power to commit to the state reformatory for a series of years.

A justice of the peace has no jurisdiction over matters of guardianship.

Minn. Const. art. 6, § 7.

And again: "As to abridgment of indefeasible rights by confinement of the person, it is no more than what is borne, to a greater or less extent, in every school; and we know of no natural right to exemption from restraints which conduce to an infant's welfare."

The decision in Roth v. House of Refuge, 81 Md. 329, is based entirely upon and follows Ex parte Crouse, 4 Whart. 9.

In Jarrard v. State, 116 Ind. 98, it is said: "We think it settled in accordance with principle that the Legislature has power to provide for the reformation of boys who are entering upon a career of wickedness, by prescribing measures for committing them to a reformatory institution."

The Indiana Constitution expressly empowers the Legislature to establish "houses of refuge for the correction and reformation of juvenile offenders," and warrants an Act for the commitment of boys thereto which provides a method for ascertaining by a judicial investigation, in a court of general superior jurisdiction, whether there is cause for taking bad boys from the control of parents and placing them in charge of such reformatories. Jarrard v. State, supra.

The Ohio statute authorizes a grand jury to whom any accusation is made against a minor under sixteen years to return to the court that such minor is a proper subject for commitment to the house of refuge, and provides that the court shall thereupon order such commitment. It is held that such commitment does not infringe upon the constitutional right of trial by jury, or the rights of an accused in criminal prosecutions. Prescott v. State, 19 Ohio St. 184. But see State v. Ray, 1 New Eng. Rep. 68, 63 N. H. 406.

The provision for the commitment of homeless children is valid although no notice is required to be given to parents, but the necessity of detention can be inquired into at any time on habeas corpus. House of Refuge of Cincinnati v. Ryan, 37 Ohio St. 197.

In this case it is said: "The commitment is not designed as a punishment for crime, but to place destitute, neglected and homeless children, and those who are in danger of growing up as idle and vicious members of society, under the guardianship of the public authorities, for their proper care, and to prevent crime and pauperism. As to such infants, it is a home and a school, not a prison."

In Farnham v. Pierce, 2 New Eng. Rep. 225, 141 Mass. 203, 55 Am. Rep. 452, a statute authorizing the summary commitment of minors who are made to 46 L. R. A.

appear to any magistrates to be without salutary control is held to be not in conflict with the Declaration of Rights, but that such commitment is subject to be terminated by a showing by the parent that cause for it does not exist.

An amendment since the last decision made provision for notice to the parent, but under this it is held that the parent is not concluded from showing that cause for further detention does not exist. Re Kelley, 152 Mass. 432.

The California statute provides for the ascertainment by the court prior to conviction, with the consent of a youthful offender, of the fact whether he is a suitable person to be committed to the state reform school. Ex parte Liddell (Cal.) March 19, 1892.

The court says that the power of the state is clear "to arrest the downward tendency of those who have offended against its laws and manifested a disposition to follow a criminal career, by placing them in an institution where they will receive the care, education and discipline necessary to prepare them for honorable citizenship."

A minor sentenced in the alternative to the state reform school during his minority, or to imprisonment in the workhouse for six months, and who, because of his incorrigibility, has been removed to the workhouse from the reform school, in pursuance of R. L. Pub. Stat., chap. 254, § 9, authorizing the state board of charities and corrections to make such removal for the term of his sentence to the school, or until he may be returned thereto without detriment, and not under section 8, providing for removal in pursuance of the alternative sentence, is not entitled to discharge after six months' confinement in the workhouse. Re Bonn, 17 R. L.

A statute authorizing a justice of the peace to commit to the industrial school minors under the age of seventeen, who are charged with certain felonies, for a term not less than a year nor extending beyond their majority, instead of requiring such minor to recognize for his appearance at the supreme court, conflicts with the Bill of Rights, prohibiting the deprivation of a citizen's liberty "but by the judgment of his peers or the law of the land." State v. Ray, 1 New Eng. Rep. 68, 63 N. H. 406.

This case expressly repudiates Prescott v. State, 19 Ohio St. 184, supra, which arrived at a different conclusion as to a similar enactment.

J. G. G.)

Said Act contemplates that the parent should be made a party to the proceedings.

Milwaukee Industrial School v. Milwaukee County Supra. 40 Wis. 339, 23 Am. Rep. 702; People v. Turner, 55 Ill. 280, 8 Am. Rep. 645.

The very object of the statute is to foreclose such parent or guardian of future claim upon the infant by making him a party to the action, otherwise the act is clearly unconstitutional and void on the ground that the Act provides for no proceedings on the part of the parent for the recovery of the infant, in case of the removal of the disability.

Ibid.

Appellant was deprived of his constitutional right of a jury trial.

Minn. Const. art. 1, § 4.

Where the Constitution itself prescribes the manner in which a jury may be waived no other form of waiver can be had.

Ward v. People, 80 Mich. 116; State v. Lockwood, 48 Wis. 403; Re Staff, 63 Wis. 285; Dillingham v. State, 5 Ohio St. 280.

Messrs. Moses E. Clapp and H. W. Childs, for respondent:

The proceeding is purely statutory, and the commitment is not punishment.

Prescott v. State, 19 Ohio St. 184; House of Refuge of Cincinnati v. Ryan, 87 Ohio St. 197; Farnham v. Pierce, 2 New Eng. Rep. 225, 141 Mass. 208, 55 Am. Rep. 452.

Such legislation is savagely assailed by Justices Thornton in People v. Turner, 55 Ill. 281, 8 Am. Rep. 645.

But such views are said to be "unsound" in a note in 7 Crim. L. Mag. 85.

And they are not adhered to by the same court in Re Ferrier, 103 Ill. 367; McLean County v. Humphreys, 104 Ill. 378. See also Mankato v. Arnold, 86 Minn. 62.

The proceeding being purely statutory, it was unnecessary to make the parent or other person in behalf of the relator a party defendant.

Fitzgerald v. Com. 5 Allen, 509; Milwaukee Industrial School v. Milwaukee County Supra. 40 Wis. 339, 23 Am. Rep. 702.

For the same reason relator was not entitled to a jury trial.

Re Ferrier, supra.

Collins, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Appeal from an order dismissing a habeas corpus proceeding wherein the writ was directed to the superintendent of the state reform school, commanding that he produce one Oscar E. Olson, a minor son of the relator, said to be unlawfully restrained at said school. Young Olson and one Conolly were brought before the municipal court of the city of Waseca on the charge of incorrigibly vicious conduct, and were committed to the guardianship of the board of managers of the reform school at the same time and on the same testimony. The proceedings had in the municipal court and as they were certified to the district judge, in so far as we were then advised, fully appear in a statement found in State v. Brown (Minn.) 50 N. W. Rep. 920. But the technical points upon which the latter case was decided and the relator released from the reform school do not now arise; for the record in this case, as we view it, affirmatively shows that all the evidence introduced before the municipal court was reduced to writing, and transmitted to the judge of the district court, who approved the commitment. The additional evidence upon this hearing in the district court was competent, and in no way tended to impeach the record of the municipal court. There is nothing in the point that the municipal judge did not reduce to writing the questions propounded to the witness, but simply took the testimony in a narrative form. Neither is there anything in the point that he transmitted a typewritten copy of the evidence to the district judge, instead of the original. In proceeding to commit infants to the care and guardianship of the board of managers of the reform school, the right of the municipal court in question is derived through the statute under which it was organized, conferring upon it the authority, powers, and rights of a justice of the peace, under the general laws of the state. It follows that, if a justice has no power to commit to the reform school, the municipal court for the city of Waseca has not, and the claim is made by the relator that the statute by which this power is given to justices is unconstitutional and void. We are therefore obliged to consider the relator's contention that the legislation of this state, whereby justices are authorized and empowered to commit infants to the care and guardianship of the board of managers of the reform school in consequence of incorrigibly vicious conduct, and for a time exceeding three months, is not a valid exercise of legislative power, under the Constitution of this state. Two propositions are laid down in support of this contention—First, that the authority is conferred upon a justice of the peace to punish a criminal by imprisonment for a period exceeding three months, contrary to section 8, art. 6, of the Constitution; and second, that jurisdiction in the matter of "persons under guardianship" has been conferred on such justices, contrary to the provisions of section 7 of the same article, by which jurisdiction over such persons is granted unto another constitutional tribunal, the probate court.

The questions raised by the first of these propositions have often been discussed by the judicial tribunals of this country. Legislation which, brushing aside and disregarding the views, wishes, or supposed rights of natural guardians, has had for its object the future welfare of the minor children of incapable and unworthy parents, or the care, custody, and proper training of incorrigible and vicious youth by the state, has occasionally been denounced with great vigor by the courts. A notable example of this species of denunciation may be found in the opinion in People v. Turner, 55 Ill. 281, 8 Am. Rep. 645, written by Mr. Justice Thornton. But legislation of this character has been adopted in nearly all of the northern states, and its validity has often been upheld. We do not propose to add to the very many pages which, in the Reports and textbooks, have been devoted to the support of the position, now taken almost universally by the courts, that a person committed to the care and custody of a board in charge of an institution of the character of the Minnesota state reform school is not "punished," nor is he "imprisoned," in the ordinary meaning of those words. Hence the constitutional provision which regulates and limits the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in criminal matters has no application. We can do no better than to call attention to some of the leading authorities on this subject, and to quote from the case first cited the clear language used therein by the late Chief Justice Ryan: Milwaukee Industrial School v. Milwaukee County Supra, 40 Wis. 328, 22 Am. Rep. 702; Farnham v. Pierce, 141 Mass. 203, 2 New Eng. Rep. 225, 55 Am. Rep. 452; Prescott v. State, 19 Ohio St. 184; House of Refuge of Cincinnati v. Ryan, 37 Ohio St. 197; Roth v. House of Refuge, 31 Md. 329; Ex parte Crouse, 4 Whart. 9; Re Ferrier, 103 Ill. 387; McLean County v. Humphreys, 104 Ill. 378; Tiedeman, Pol. Powers, chap. 13.

In the Wisconsin case, commencing on page 337, Judge Ryan thus expressed his views: "And in the first place, we cannot understand that the detention of the child at one of these schools should be considered as imprisonment, any more than its detention in the poorhouse,—any more than the detention of any child at any boarding school, standing, for the time, in loco parentis to the child. Parental authority implies restraint, not imprisonment. And every school must necessarily exercise some measure of parental power of restraint over children committed to it. And when the state, as parens patriæ, is compelled, by the misfortune of a child, to assume for it parental duty, and to charge itself with its nurture, it is compelled also to assume parental authority over it. This authority must necessarily be delegated to those to whom the state delegates the nurture and education of the child. The state does not, indeed we might say could not, intrude this assumption of authority between parent and child standing in no need of it. It assumes it only upon the destitution and necessity of the child, arising from want or default of parents. And, in exercising a wholesome parental restraint over the child, it can be properly said to imprison the child no more than the tenderest parent exercising like power of restraint over children. This seems too plain to need authority; but the cases cited for the respondent and others amply sustain our view."

We pass to an examination of the claim that, under the Constitution, a justice has no power to place a person under the guardianship of this board of managers, because jurisdiction has been conferred solely upon the probate courts in all matters of guardianship. When committing an infant to the care and custody of the board of managers of the reform school, the magistrate is not appointing a guardian for him, nor does such officer or the board of managers assume any control over his estate, if he has one. A proceeding of this nature would not stand in the way of, nor would it be prevented by, the appointment of a statutory or testamentary guardian,—the only guardian coming within the purview of the Constitution. It is no more a violation of the fundamental law for the magistrate to commit a child to the guardianship of the managers of an institution of this kind than it would be for a competent court to appoint a guardian ad litem for him. The language of the Constitution does not apply where the state acts as the common guardian of the community, exercising its power whenever the welfare of an infant demands it, or where the state acts in the legitimate exercise of its police power. Therefore the law-makers were not prohibited from conferring jurisdiction in such cases upon any of the judicial officers of the state.

The mode and method of procedure, as fixed by statute and followed in this case, is also attacked by relator's counsel. The proceeding is wholly statutory, and the party proceeded against is not punished or imprisoned. What has been said heretofore in regard to the nature of the proceedings, as well as the views expressed in Mankato v. Arnold, 36 Minn. 62; State v. Brown, 52 N. W. Rep. 387, (this term,)—disposes of the claim that Olson was deprived of his constitutional right to a jury trial.

It is not necessary for us to pass upon a further claim made by the relator, that in all such cases the parent or guardian or next friend must be made a party, and that because such parent or guardian or next friend stands charged in the complaint (Gen. Stat. supra, chap. 35, § 44, subd. 2), with moral depravity, or of being incapable or of unwillingness to care for and discipline the infant, the justice has no right to proceed until he has obtained jurisdiction over the parent or the guardian or the next friend, as the case may be. There may be a stronger reason than the one suggested why the natural or legal guardian of the infant should be made a party to the proceeding in question, but the statute does not seem to contemplate it, and it is possible that it is not necessary. Milwaukee I. School v. Milwaukee County Supra. supra; Fitzgerald v. Com. 5 Allen, 509.

But from the record in this case it affirmatively appears that the relator herein, the only living parent of the boy, did appear in his behalf in the municipal court, and did take part in the proceedings which resulted in his commitment. She has no cause for complaint on that score.

This disposes of such of the assignments of error as are of importance, and our conclusion is that Olson is not improperly held at the reform school.

Order affirmed.

WISCONSIN SUPREME COURT.

City of COLUMBUS, Appt.,
v.
Town of COLUMBUS et al., Respts.

(.....Wis.....)

The control of a cemetery which has been acquired by a town solely for public use and in which it has no beneficial interest may lawfully be taken from it by the Legislature and vested in a city which has been organized within its limits and which embraces the cemetery within its boundaries, if the rights and beneficial interests in the property of the inhabitants of both city and town are saved to them.

(May 24, 1892.)

A PPEAL by complainant from an order of the Circuit Court for Columbia County dissolving a preliminary injunction restraining defendants from interfering with complainant's control of a certain cemetery and granting an injunction restraining complainant from interfering with defendants' control of the same. Reversed.

Statement by Lyon, J. :

By chapter 57, Laws 1874, the city of Columbus, consisting of territory taken from the town of Columbus, was organized, with the usual powers of such municipal corporations. Included within such territory is a town cemetery, which the town of Columbus had theretofore acquired, partly by dedication and partly by purchase. It contained about ten acres of land, the legal title to which was in the town. The city charter provided that the right of the citizens of the town and city, respectively, to the use of such cemetery for burial purposes, shall not be impaired, and that the citizens residing in the city "shall always have and enjoy the same rights and privileges in said cemetery as the citizens of the town of Columbus, and the said city shall contribute its just share of the expenses of maintaining said cemetery." Chapter 57, Laws 1874, subchap. 13, § 19. Chapter 266, Laws 1876, provides by way of amendment to the statutes concerning town cemeteries, that, "whenever any such town cemetery is or shall become embraced within the limits of any city, the duties and powers of the town board relating to such cemetery shall be exercised by the common council of such city, and the conveyance of lots shall be executed by the mayor thereof in the name of the town, and attested by the city clerk, but the right of burial in such cemetery shall not be changed nor im-

NOTE.—Authority of Legislature to remove municipality from trusteeship.

While the purposes for which a municipal corporation may act as trustee have not been definitely determined, the tendency is to hold that the object for which the trust was established must be within the corporate or administrative purposes of the municipality. See notes to Cary Library v. Bliss (Mass.) 7 L. R. A. 765; Smith v. Wescott (R. I.) 13 L. R. A. 217; Dailey v. New Haven (Conn.) 14 L. R. A. 69.

The general rule is that so far as the corporate or administrative functions which have been delegated to a municipality are concerned the Legislature may resume them at any time.

So a municipal corporation, trustee of a charity, cannot set up any vested right to maintain its organization in the form in which it was when the trust was organized and prevent the state from changing it as the best interests of the trust may require. Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. 170.

A township trustee may be abolished. Montpelier v. East Montpelier, 20 Vt. 12, 67 Am. Dec. 748; Bass v. Fontleroy, 11 Tex. 698.

In Girard v. Philadelphia, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 1, 19 L. ed. 53, the court said: "It cannot be pretended that the Legislature had not the power to appoint a trustee if it had dissolved the municipality which had been invested with the trust.

What the Legislature had power to do thus indirectly it may do directly by simply providing for a change of trustee.

Where the school property is held in trust for school purposes by a corporation authorized to control it, the Legislature may at its pleasure provide for a change in the trustee. Allen School Twp. v. Macy School Twp. 106 Ind. 559.

The Legislature may at any time change the trustee of school funds or property. Carson v. State, 27 Ind. 469.

An act changing the trustee of school property is proper if the trusts upon which the fund was held are all preserved. McGurn v. Chicago Board of Education, 133 Ill. 123.

16 L. R. A.

Where a fund was given to a school society for the benefit of schools upon a division of the district, the fund may properly be divided between the two portions. Willimantic School Soc. v. Windham First School Soc. 14 Conn. 458.

The Legislature may transfer the control of streets from the city to park commissioners if the purpose of ordinary travel is not interfered with. People v. Walsh, 96 Ill. 232.

Some limitations are found upon this absolute power.

The rights of the beneficiaries cannot be interfered with. State v. Springfield Twp. 6 Ind. 96.

No diversion of the fund can be made. Greenville v. Mason, 53 N. H. 518; Caledonia County School v. Burt, 11 Vt. 632.

Where the trustees were incorporated to hold the fund for school purposes it could not be diverted from them and given to other trustees. Plymouth v. Jackson, 15 Pa. 44.

So the power of the Legislature to change the trustees of a school fund was denied in New Gloucester School F. Trustees v. Bradbury, 11 Me. 118, 26 Am. Dec. 515, on the ground that the Act incorporating trustees and authorizing the transfer of the property to them constituted a contract which was protected by the Constitution. See also Yarmouth v. North Yarmouth, 84 Me. 411, 56 Am. Dec. 666.

In Indiana it has been held that one corporation cannot be given control of property outside of its own limits and within those of another corporation. State v. Shields, 56 Ind. 529.

In Michigan under an application of the doctrine of local self-government it has been held that the control of city parks cannot be given to state agents. People v. Detroit, 23 Mich. 223, 15 Am. Rep. 202.

Where the municipality is not simply trustee but has both the legal and beneficial title to the property the principles upon which the above decisions rest do not apply. See Helzer v. Yohn, 37 Ind. 415; Beckert v. Peru, 60 Ind. 473.

H. P. F.

paired." Rev. Stat. § 1489. The common council of the city attempted to exercise the powers and perform the duties in respect to the cemetery expressed in chapter 266 of 1876, but were prevented to some extent from doing so by the active opposition and resistance of the town authorities. The foregoing facts are practically undisputed. Thereupon this action in equity was brought by the city against the town and its supervisors, to restrain them from interfering with the control and management of the cemetery by the common council of the city. The complaint contains an elaborate history of the dealings by the city and town officers, respectively, with the cemetery, from the organization of the city in 1874, down to the time this action was commenced, in 1891, and the struggles of each, from time to time, during that period to maintain or obtain control thereof. A preliminary injunction was granted by a court commissioner, ex parte, restraining the town as prayed in the complaint. The town answered the complaint, going still more extensively into the history of the controversy, and denying many of the averments of fact in that behalf in the complaint. The answer also contains a counterclaim, repeating the averments in the defensive portion thereof, and demanding the same relief against the city which the city demanded against the town. The city interposed a reply to such counterclaim, traversing with much particularity of statement many of the averments of fact therein concerning the acts and doings of the town and city authorities. This closed the somewhat voluminous pleadings. The town then obtained an order to show cause why the preliminary injunction against it should not be dissolved, and an injunction against the city granted as prayed in the counterclaim. The order was based upon the pleadings and certain affidavits served with the order. On the hearing of the order to show cause several affidavits were read on behalf of the city, and the court permitted additional affidavits to be read on behalf of the town. These affidavits cover over one hundred regulation pages in the printed case. They relate mainly to the controversy between the city and town authorities for the control of the cemetery, which controversy occupies so large a space in the pleadings. The circuit court found as a fact that the town never surrendered its right to manage and control the cemetery, and never conceded that the city had such right, and for that reason alone granted the motion of the plaintiff by dissolving the injunction obtained by the city, and granting an injunction against the city and its officers restraining them from interfering with the management and control of the cemetery by the town and its officers, but saving the rights of burial therein to the inhabitants of the city, and the right to enforce therein reasonable police regulations of the city.

The city appeals from the order of the circuit court in that behalf.

Messrs. George W. Bird and A. G. Cook, for appellant:

The lands were acquired for a specific public purpose, and could be used for no other, 16 L. R. A.

and the town had no interest in them, under the statute, except, as the representative and trustee of the public, to apply them to that purpose.

The town was simply the instrument employed by the state to enable the public to enjoy them.

M. E. Church Trustees v. Hoboken, 83 N. J. L. 18; Darlington v. New York, 81 N. Y. 164; Stockton v. Newark, 7 Cent. Rep. 458, 42 N. J. Eq. 581; Montpelier v. East Montpelier, 27 Vt. 704; Re St. Pancras Burial Ground, L. R. 8. Eq. 178; Reed v. Stouffer, 56 Md. 258; Woodlawn Cemetery Assn. v. Everett, 118 Mass. 854; Gilman v. Milwaukee, 55 Wis. 323.

Where lands have been conveyed to a public corporation for burial purposes, they become public property devoted to a public purpose, and subject to state and municipal control.

Evangelical Church Trustees v. Walsh, 57 Ill. 368; Sohier v. Trinity Church, 109 Mass. 1; Cooley, Const. Lim. 594; Duenger v. Geary, 118 Ind. 106, 12 West. Rep. 691; Page v. Symonds, 63 N. H. 17; Patterson v. Patterson, 59 N. Y. 588.

Where property is held and acquired for a specific public purpose to which it is unalterably devoted, it is competent for the Legislature to change the officers or agents charged with its control, and designate others as the representatives of the public to apply the property to such purpose.

Allen School Trp. v. Macy School Trp. 109 Ind. 558; Carson v. State, 27 Ind. 465; Leesburgh School Trp. v. Plain School Trp. 86 Ind. 582; McGurn v. Chicago Board of Education, 183 Ill. 122; Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. 169.

The Legislature, by the city charter, chapter 57 of the Laws of 1874, has intrusted to the city the care, control, and management of this cemetery, and designated its officers as the representatives of the public to apply the property to the purposes for which it was acquired.

This Act is a valid exercise of the legislative power, for upon the division of a town, the Legislature may apportion its property among the parts into which it is separated or even assign all to one of those parts.

North Yarmouth v. Skillings, 45 Me. 183, 71 Am. Dec. 530; Laramie County Comrs. v. Albany County Comrs. 92 U. S. 807, 23 L. ed. 552; Willimantic School Soc. v. Windham First School Soc. 14 Conn. 457; Greenville v. Mason, 53 N. H. 515; Granby v. Thurston, 28 Conn. 416; Mt. Pleasant v. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514, 25 L. ed. 699; Depere v. Bellevue, 81 Wis. 120; Knight v. Ashland, 61 Wis. 238; Seymour v. Seymour, 64 Wis. 16.

Under charter provisions even less comprehensive than those of plaintiff, the city may pass and enforce ordinances, not only regulating the manner of burial in cemeteries, but entirely prohibiting interments therein, and closing them as cemeteries.

New York v. Slack, 3 Wheel. C. C. 237; Com. v. Goodrich, 18 Allen, 546; New Orleans v. Wardens of Church of St. Louis, 11 La. Ann. 244; Charleston v. Wentworth Street Bapt. Church, 4 Strobb. L. 806.

Chapter 266 of the Laws of 1876, in express terms confers upon the city, and charges it with, the care, management, and control of the cemetery, and fully authorizes it to exercise all powers relating thereto.

This is a valid statute. It does not impair the obligation of any contract, nor disturb or interfere with any vested rights.

Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. 169; People v. Power, 25 Ill. 187; Willimantic School Soc. v. Windham First School Soc. 14 Conn. 457; Lake View v. Rose Hill Cemetery Co. 70 Ill. 191.

Chapter 266 may be sustained also as an exercise by the Legislature of the police power of the state.

Donnelly v. Decker, 58 Wis. 461, 46 Am. Rep. 687; Com. v. Tewksbury, 11 Met. 55; Com. v. Carter, 132 Mass. 12; Boston & M. R. Co. v. County Comrs. 4 New Eng. Rep. 657, 79 Me. 886; Regents of the University of Md. v. Williams, 9 Gill & J. 865; Campbell v. Kansas City, 10 L. R. A. 598, 102 Mo. 826.

Messrs. John S. Maxwell and Olin & Butler, for respondents:

The purchase of each of the three parcels of land vested in the town the absolute title in fee, free from any condition annexed to the grant as to the purpose to which the land should be devoted.

Board of Suprs. v. Patterson, 56 Ill. 111; Beach v. Haynes, 12 Vt. 18.

There is nothing in the circumstances of the acquisition of this property, or its subsequent use, which unalterably devotes it to cemetery purposes, and on the contrary the most ample powers were and are conferred upon the town to dispose of the property, or such part of it at least as has not been actually appropriated for burial purposes.

It does not follow that because the town purchased this land with the intention of using it as a cemetery ground, and has in fact treated it as such, that it would not be proper for the town, if the interests of its inhabitants demanded it, to make some other disposition of it, at least of that portion of it not already conveyed away for burial purposes. In so doing it would simply be exercising the powers expressly conferred upon it by the Legislature.

Milwaukee v. Milwaukee, 12 Wis. 98; Beaver Dam v. Frings, 17 Wis. 398.

This court has sustained the right of a municipality to dispose of its property in a case where the provisions of the law under which such disposition was sought to be justified were more narrow and restricted than in the case at bar.

Konrad v. Rogers, 70 Wis. 492.

It would clearly have been within the power of the town board to have leased, had it desired to do so, such unappropriated portion of the land, or otherwise to have obtained a revenue from it, and this income, following the ownership of the property, would have gone into the treasury of the town, and lightened the burden of taxation upon the citizens of the town.

Bell v. Platteville, 71 Wis. 189; Stone v. Oconomowoc, Id. 155; Bolling v. Petersburg, 8 Leigh, 224.

The town remained the owner of the cemetery in question after, the same as before, the incorporation of the city.

Windham v. Portland, 4 Mass. 384; Lamarie County Comrs. v. Albany County Comrs. 92 U. S. 807, 23 L. ed. 552; Montpelier v. East Mont- 16 L. R. A.

pelier, 29 Vt. 12, 67 Am. Dec. 748; Hampshire County v. Franklin County, 16 Mass. 76; North Yarmouth v. Skillings, 45 Me. 133, 71 Am. Dec. 580.

Town property does not cease to belong to the old town simply because it falls within the limits of another corporation.

Milwaukee v. Milwaukee, 12 Wis. 98; Goodhue v. Beloit, 21 Wis. 686; Depere v. Bellevue, 81 Wis. 120; Scriber v. Langlade, 66 Wis. 616; Buena Vista Twp. Board of Health v. East Saginaw, 45 Mich. 257; Winona v. School Dist. No. 82, 40 Minn. 18; Greenville v. Mason, 53 N. H. 515; Union Baptist Soc. v. Candia, 2 N. H. 20; South Hampton v. Fowler, 52 N. H. 225; Heizer v. Yohn, 87 Ind. 418; Reckert v. Peru, 60 Ind. 478; Whittier v. Sanborn, 88 Me. 32; Veazie v. Howland, 47 Me. 121; White v. Fuller, 83 Vt. 193; Parish of West Carroll v. Gaddis, 34 La. Ann. 928.

There is a line of cases often confounded with but clearly distinguishable from, such a case as the one at bar, namely, where the old corporation has been entirely abolished and the whole territory either attached to another corporation, or new corporations created out of its territory. In such cases the courts hold that the new corporations are to be deemed as the successors of the old one, and as such liable for all its debts and entitled to all its property. In such a case, in the absence of any legislation on the subject, it has been held that the new corporations will take the property that falls within their respective limits.

Stoneham School Dist. No. 1 v. Richardson, 28 Pick. 62; Danvers School Dist. No. 6 v. Tapley, 1 Allen, 49; Robbins v. Anoka County School Dist. No. 1, 10 Minn. 849; Scriber v. Langlade, 66 Wis. 616; North Hempstead v. Hempstead, 2 Wend. 109.

There is no provision in the charter of the city of Columbus which divides, or attempts to divide, the cemetery in question between the town and the city, or which transfers, or attempts to, the control and management of this cemetery from the town to the city.

The most favorable view that can be taken of plaintiff's rights under its charter is, that the defendant town continues the owner, with the right to control and manage the cemetery grounds for the people both of the city and of the town. This view gives to the town the exclusive control and management of the property and with this no court will interfere so long as the town extends to the citizens of the city the same rights in the use of the cemetery as it extends to the citizens of the town.

North Yarmouth v. Skillings, 45 Me. 133, 71 Am. Dec. 580.

In Bogert v. Indianapolis, 18 Ind. 134, the court held that a provision in the city charter giving the common council power "to establish cemeteries or burial places," gave the city no authority to control or interfere with cemeteries lying within the city limits, but not owned by the city.

Laws 1876, chap. 266, is unconstitutional. Milwaukee v. Milwaukee, 12 Wis. 83; Fletcher v. Peck, 10 U. S. 6 Cranch, 143, 8 L. ed. 180; Hampshire County v. Franklin County, 16 Mass. 76; State v. Tappan, 29 Wis. 681, 9 Am. Rep. 622; Grogan v. San Francisco, 18 Cal. 590; People v. Hurlburt, 24 Mich. 44, 9 Am.

Rep. 108; People v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228, 15 Am. Rep. 202; Louisville v. University of Louisville, 15 B. Mon. 642; New Orleans, M. & C. R. Co. v. New Orleans, 26 La. Ann. 478; Aberdeen Female Academy v. Aberdeen, 13 Smedes & M. 645; New Gloucester School Fund Trustees v. Bradbury, 11 Me. 118, 26 Am. Dec. 515; Savannah v. Steamboat Co. of Georgia, R. M. Charl. (Ga.) 342; Bailey v. New York, 3 Hill, 581; Atkins v. Randolph, 31 Vt. 227; Darlington v. New York, 31 N. Y. 164, 83 Am. Dec. 248; State v. Haben, 22 Wis. 101; Den v. Foy, 5 N. C. 58, 8 Am. Dec. 672; Montpelier v. East Montpelier, 29 Vt. 12, 67 Am. Dec. 748; Caledonia County School v. Burt, 11 Vt. 682; Webb v. New York, 64 How. Pr. 10; Benson v. New York, 10 Barb. 228; Cooley, Const. Lim. 3d ed. pp. 290-293; 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 3d ed. §§ 66-68, and note.

Laws 1876, chap. 266, is not an exercise of police power.

Stockton v. Newark, 7 Cent. Rep. 458, 42 N. J. Eq. 531; Lake View v. Rose Hill Cemetery Co. 70 Ill. 191.

Lyon, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

It seems to us quite immaterial whether the city or the town has succeeded in maintaining the control of the cemetery in question. Chapter 266, Laws 1876, (Rev. Stat. § 1439), by its terms gives the common council of the city all the powers, and imposes upon it all the duties in respect to the cemetery, conferred and imposed upon the town board by the statutes in force when that chapter was enacted. That is to say, chapter 266 attempts to give the control and management of the cemetery exclusively to the city authorities, subject to the rights of burial therein by the inhabitants of the town. If that statute is a valid enactment, the city authorities are exclusively entitled to exercise such control and management, even though such right was never recognized by the town or asserted by the city. Hence the controlling question is whether chapter 266 is a valid law and not (as the circuit court held) whether the town ever surrendered to the city the management and control of the cemetery. The question thus to be determined is not a difficult one. The town holds the naked legal title to the cemetery grounds in trust for the inhabitants of the town and city, exclusively for burial purposes. The town has no beneficial interest whatever in the property. It is powerless to convey it for any other than burial purposes, without special legislative authority, or to appropriate to its own use any portion of the proceeds of sales of burial lots. Such proceeds must all be used to pay for the cemetery grounds, and to defray the expenses of caring for, fencing, and embellishing the same. Rev. Stat. §§ 1438-1440, inclusive. Because the town has no beneficial interest in the property, and because the use for which it holds the legal title thereto, in trust, is purely a public use, the fact that it holds the legal title is no impediment to the exercise by the Legislature in its discretion of the power to change the trustee, saving to the inhabitants of the town and city all their beneficial interests and rights in the trust property. The Act of 1876 merely changes such trustee and saves all the rights of the beneficiaries under the trust. It is therefore a valid law. The authorities cited by council for the city in support of the power of the Legislature to change the trustee in such a case fully sustain it. These citations will not be repeated here, but will be preserved in the report of the case.

Counsel for the town place much reliance upon the case of Milwaukee v. Milwaukee, 12 Wis. 98, as holding the opposite doctrine. We do not think it sustains the position. In that case the town held the legal title to 40 acres of land within its limits, "in trust for the sole use and benefit of said town forever." A conveyance in fee of land to A. in trust for the sole use and benefit of A. is necessarily a conveyance to him of the absolute title in fee. Hence the absolute title in fee to the land was in the town so far as the town was competent under the statute to take and hold the same. This 40 acres was afterwards detached from the town; and made a part of the city of Milwaukee, and the city took actual possession thereof. The town brought ejectment to recover the land, and succeeded in the action. This court affirmed the recovery. The real controversy was necessarily confined to the questions of legal title and right of possession, which are purely proprietary, and therefore vested rights. The case did not involve the question we have in the present case of the power of the Legislature, where one municipality holds the mere naked title, without any beneficial interest therein, to land in another municipality, in trust for the beneficial use and enjoyment of the inhabitants of both municipalities for a specified purpose, to enact that the municipality in which the land is located shall have the exclusive care and management thereof for the beneficiaries. We do not think that case negatives the power of the Legislature to enact chapter 266 of 1876. It must be held, therefore, that chapter 266 of 1876 is a valid law, and that under it the common council of the city of Columbus is vested with the management and control of the cemetery in the interest and for the beneficial use of the inhabitants, both of the town and city.

The order of the circuit court dissolving the preliminary injunction of the city and granting a similar injunction against the city and its officers, must be reversed, and the cause will be remanded for further proceedings in accordance with this opinion. The printed case is unnecessarily voluminous. In the adjustment of costs the clerk will only allow for printing one hundred pages thereof.

WASHINGTON SUPREME COURT.

Re ESTATE OF Hiram C. McLAUGHLIN, Deceased.Norman F. HESSELTINE, Appt.,

v.

Ruth A. McLAUGHLIN, Resp't.

(..... Wash.....)

A common-law marriage is not valid under a statute requiring a license for a marriage and providing that certain persons shall be authorized to perform the ceremony and expressly providing further that a marriage shall not be void because solemnized by a person not legally authorized to perform it if the parties to the marriage or either of them believe they are lawfully married, and also that marriages solemnized before or in any religious organization or congregation according to the ritual or form commonly practiced therein shall be valid.

(July 11, 1892.)

A PPEAL from a judgment of the Superior Court for King County recognizing the right of one claiming to be the widow of Hiram C. McLaughlin, deceased, to control the appointment of an administrator for his estate, as against the right of his daughter. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Norman F. Hesselstine and John G. Barnes for appellant.Messrs. Truett P. Dyer and Thompson, Edson & Humphries, for respondent.

The statutes of Indiana and Washington are similar; in fact, we believe the statute of Washington was taken from that of Indiana, in substance, and the supreme court has recently passed upon the Indiana statute in the case of Teter v. Teter, 101 Ind. 129, 51 Am. Rep. 742, and held that a verbal marriage was good although no license was issued and no solemnization had as provided by statute.

See also Hutchins v. Kimmell, 81 Mich. 126, 18 Am. Rep. 164; Meister v. Moore, 96 U. S. 76, 24 L. ed. 826; Dickerson v. Brown, 49 Miss. 357; Port v. Port, 70 Ill. 484; Lewis v. Ames, 44 Tex. 819; Dyer v. Brannock, 66 Mo. 891; Campbell v. Gullatt, 48 Ala. 57; Askew v. Dupree, 30 Ga. 173; 2 Lawson, Rights, Rem. & Pr. § 711, and note; 14 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, pp. 527, 528.

Scott, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 12th day of December, 1891, Hiram C. McLaughlin died intestate at La Grande, in the state of Oregon. He was a citizen of this state, residing at Seattle, and left personal property to the amount of about $5,000 in King county. He had a daughter over twenty-one years old, whose mother is not now living, and this daughter claims to be the only heir. One Ruth A. McLaughlin, with whom he was living at the time of his death, claims to be his wife by a marriage under the common law. She was married to Hiram C. McLaughlin on the 13th day of August, 1887, by a judge of probate, at Tacoma, in this state. At that time she had another husband living, by the name of Van Every. There was some testimony to show that at the time she was married to McLaughlin she believed Van Every was dead. She continued to live with McLaughlin as his wife until July, 1890, at which time she received information that her first husband was still living; whereupon she and McLaughlin separated, and divorce proceedings were instituted by her against Van Every, wherein she obtained a divorce from him in January, 1891; whereupon she and McLaughlin resumed their former relations, although no marriage ceremony was ever performed between them subsequent to the time she obtained a divorce from Van Every. There is testimony to show that she and McLaughlin continued to live together as husband and wife up to the time of his death; that they held themselves out to the public as husband and wife, and believed themselves to be such, and believed no marriage ceremony was required to render the marriage valid. There was some testimony to contradict this state of affairs, and to show they did not regard themselves as husband and wife. It appears that at one time, while they were living together prior to her obtaining the divorce from Van Every, she left McLaughlin, and was gone some time, and he had no knowledge of her whereabouts for some weeks; that he subsequently found her at Tacoma, and instituted criminal proceedings against her for some purpose, which the evidence does not make clear. These difficulties seem to have been adjusted, however, and the parties resumed their former relationship up to the time the proof shows that she discovered Van Every was still living. Upon the death of McLaughlin, Norman F. Hesselstine, the appellant, who was holding a power of attorney from Bertha McLaughlin, authorizing him to represent her in the settlement of the estate, petitioned the superior court of King county for letters of administration. Said Ruth A. McLaughlin also petitioned said court, as the widow of said Hiram C. McLaughlin, for the appointment of one Frank A. Pontius as administrator. On the 15th day of January, 1892, said court appointed one John Fairfield, special administrator. On the 4th day of February following said court found upon a trial of the rights of the parties that said Ruth A. McLaughlin was the widow of deceased, as she claimed, and was entitled to have letters of administration issue to the person whom she had requested to have appointed in her petition, and a decree was entered granting her petition. From this finding and decree an appeal was taken to this court, the said John Fairfield continuing as such administrator pending the appeal.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes and the validity of a common-law marriage, see White, v. White, 7 L. R. A. 799, note, 82 Cal. 427
16 L. R. A.

As to how far cohabitation is proof of marriage where it began unlawfully, see Collins v. Voorhees, 14 L. R. A. 364, note, 47 N. J. Eq. 315.

Several questions are presented by the appellant, one of which is that there can be no such thing as a common-law marriage in this state; that under our statutory regulations a marriage ceremony must be performed in one of the ways pointed out by the statute in order to render a marriage valid. Another one is that the proof is entirely insufficient to establish the marriage relationship between said parties, even though they could become husband and wife by a mere agreement between themselves as at the common law, according to some holdings. Under the view we have taken of the first point raised, we do not find it necessary to pass upon the sufficiency of the evidence, as, after a careful consideration of all the authorities we have been able to find upon this subject, we have come to the conclusion that the first point made by the appellant is well taken. We find this to be the case with some hesitancy, for the greater number of adjudicated cases in this country hold the parties may contract the marriage relationship by an agreement between themselves. In most of the states the statutory provisions upon the subject of marriage have been held directory only, and where there was no express provision in the statutes declaring all marriages void, other than those contracted in some one of the ways provided by the statute, that the parties could become husband and wife by a mutual agreement. Mr. Bishop lays down the doctrine very strongly that, unless such a marriage is absolutely prohibited by the express language of the statute, it should be sustained, and that evidence of cohabitation, and of the parties holding themselves out to the public as husband and wife, should be sufficient to establish the relation in all cases. In Hutchins v. Kimmell, 81 Mich. 126, 18 Am. Rep. 164, Cooley, J., in rendering the opinion of the court, says: "Whatever the form of ceremony, or even if all ceremony was dispensed with, if the parties agreed presently to take each other for husband and wife, and from that time lived together professedly in that relation, proof of these facts would be sufficient to constitute proof of a marriage binding upon the parties, and which would subject them and others to legal penalties for a disregard of its obligations. This has become the settled doctrine of the American courts, the few cases of dissent or apparent dissent being borne down by a great weight of opinion in favor of the rule as we have stated." In Meister v. Moore, 96 U. S. 78, 24 L. ed. 827, Mr. Justice Strong, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Marriage is everywhere regarded as a civil contract. Statutes in many of the states, it is true, regulate the mode of entering into the contract, but they do not confer the right. Hence they are not within the principle that, where a statute creates a right, and provides a remedy for its enforcement, the remedy is exclusive. No doubt a statute may take away a common-law right; but there is always a presumption that the Legislature has no such intention, unless it be plainly expressed. A statute may declare that no marriages shall be valid unless they are solemnized in a prescribed manner, but such an enactment is a very different thing from a law requiring all marriages to be entered into in the presence of a magistrate or a clergyman, or that it be preceded by a license, or publication of banns, or be attested by witnesses. Such formal provisions may be construed as merely directory, instead of being treated as destructive of a common-law right to form the marriage relation by words of present assent.

16 L. R. A.

. . . In many of the states, enactments exist very similar to the Michigan statute; but their object has manifestly been, not to declare what shall be requisite to the validity of a marriage, but to provide a legitimate mode of solemnizing it. They speak of the celebration of its rite rather than of its validity, and they address themselves principally to the functionaries they authorize to perform the ceremony. In most cases the leading purpose is to secure a registration of marriages, and evidence by which marriages may be proved; for example, by certificate of a clergyman or magistrate, or by an exemplification of the registry. In a small number of the states, it must be admitted, such statutes have been construed as denying validity to marriages not formed according to the statutory directions. Notably has this been so in North Carolina and in Tennessee, where the statute of North Carolina was in force. But the statute contained a provision declaring null and void all marriages solemnized as directed, without a license first had. So, in Massachusetts, it was early decided that a statute very like the Michigan statute rendered illegal a marriage which would have been good at common law, but which was not entered into in the manner directed by the written law. . . . In Parton v. Hervey, 1 Gray, 119, where the question was, whether a marriage of a girl only thirteen years old, married without parental consent, was a valid marriage, (the statute prohibiting clergymen and magistrates from solemnizing marriages of females under eighteen, without the consent of parents or guardians,) the court held it good and binding, notwithstanding the statute. . . . As before remarked, the statutes are held merely directory; because marriage is a thing of common right; because it is the policy of the state to encourage it, and because, as has sometimes been said, any other construction would compel holding illegitimate the offspring of many parents conscious of no violation of law." The learned judge, however, said: "It is unnecessary, however, to pursue this line of thought. If there has been a construction given to the statute by the Supreme Court of Michigan, that construction must, in this case, be controlling with us. And we think the meaning and effect of the statute has been declared by that court in the case of Hutchins v. Kimmell, 81 Mich. 126, 18 Am. Rep. 164, a case decided on the 18th of January, 1875. There, it is true, the direct question was where a marriage had been effected in a foreign country. But in considering it, the court found it necessary to declare what the law of the state was:"

and gives the quotation above given from that case, with a statement that it cannot be regarded as mere obiter dicta. In the case of Askeo v. Dupree, 80 Ga. 178, Lumpkin, J., says: "Marriage was held to be a civil contract, and that if a contract be made per verba de presentis, and remains without cohabitation, or if made per verba de futuro, and be followed by consummation, it amounts to a valid marriage, in the absence of all civil regulations to the contrary, and which the parties (being competent as to age and consent) cannot dissolve. . . . That acts in relation to the solemnization of marriages were not generally construed as in the case of acts relating to general subjects, because marriage was essentially distinguished from every other species of contract, whether of legislative or judicial determination; that this distinction has been universally admitted; that not only is all legal presumption in favor of the validity and against the nullity of marriage, but it is so on this principle: that a legislative enactment to annul a marriage de facto is a penal enactment, not only penal to the parties, but highly penal to the innocent offspring, and therefore to be construed according to the acknowledged rule most strictly. . . . After the marriage relation is entered into, it is then considered in the light of a civil institution, in which the state itself has an interest as well as the parties. And the interest of the state is that these contracts shall be permanent, and not revocable at the will and pleasure of the sexes; that parents may be held responsible for the support, maintenance, and education of their offspring; and that the legitimacy of their offspring may be known and established beyond dispute. . . . The conclusions to be deduced from the whole matter are these: That marriage is founded on the law of nature, and is anterior to all human law; that in society it is a civil contract; that if the contract is per verba de presentis,—that is, 'I take you to be my wife,' and 'I take you to be my husband,'—though it be not consummated by cohabitation, or if it be made per verba de futuro, and be consummated, it amounts to a valid marriage, in the absence of all municipal regulations to the contrary; and that notwithstanding there be statutes directing a license to issue, as in this state, and inflicting a penalty on any minister or magistrate who shall unite the parties in wedlock without such license, yet, in the absence of any positive enactment, declaring that all marriages not celebrated in the prescribed form shall be void, a marriage deliberately and intentionally entered into by the parties, who are able to contract according to the rules of the common law, without conforming to the enactment, is still a valid marriage. . . . In this state no marriage, within our knowledge, has been declared a nullity because the statutory regulations were not complied with, and, while the law inflicts penalties upon the celebrator, it has cautiously abstained from interfering with the marriage itself. For myself, I approve the law as it is. True, it will be sometimes abused. What human institution is not? Rarely, however, will the parties forego the benefits resulting from a compliance with the statutes. It adds so much both to the respectability as well as the security of the contract. I have never known of a self-solemnized marriage. But suppose such should occur; better far for the parties, especially the female, that the law should be as it is. Her honor is saved, and this is worth more than everything, even life itself. All other contracts may be rescinded, and the parties restored to their former condition; marriage cannot be undone. Why does this law, in utter disregard of what seems to be the usual protection and restraint thrown around the inexperience and imprudence of infancy, allow infants—the male at fourteen and the female at twelve—to enter into the binding contract of marriage? It is at this age the sexual passions are usually developed; and the law, with a wise forethought, looking beyond exceptional cases, and to the general interests of society, to guard against the manifold evils which would result from illicit intercourse, declares even infants capable of forming this relation."

26 L. R. A.

It was contended by the appellant that the sections of our Code which prescribe how marriages shall be solemnized, and which also make the exception that all marriages shall be deemed to be valid although the ceremony is performed by a person not authorized by law to perform it, preclude the contracting of the relationship in any other manner than as provided; that the Legislature, having made a provision especially legalizing marriages in certain excepted cases, must be held to have contemplated all others not entered into according to the manner provided by the statute, and not within the exceptions, as void. We find very similar provisions, however, in other states; and undoubtedly it is the case in the most of them where the validity of common-law marriages is recognized, and the argument loses something of its force in consequence of this.

The position taken by the appellant, however, is directly sustained in the case of Beverlin v. Beverlin, 29 W. Va. 732, in which state marriages at the common law were held to be abrogated; and the decision was put upon this very ground, that the Legislature had provided a method for contracting the marriage relationship, and had specially excepted those cases and declared them valid, notwithstanding the ceremony was performed by some person not authorized as by law required. In that case, Snyder, J., says: "There is much controversy as to what constitutes a common-law marriage. It always has been and still is a doubtful question in England. In the American states, where such marriages have been recognized and held valid, there is considerable diversity as to their requisites. In North Carolina, Tennessee, Massachusetts, Maine, and Maryland some ceremony or celebration seems to be necessary to a valid common-law marriage, and in most or all of these states it has been questioned whether or not the statutes have not superseded common-law marriages, and that a marriage, to be valid, must be in accordance with the statutes. . . . In New York it has been held that no religious form or ceremony of any kind is essential to the validity of the marriage; all that is required in that state is that the parties should be capable of contracting, and that they should actually contract, to be man and wife. . . . In Pennsylvania it has been decided that 'marriage is in law a civil contract, not requiring any particular form of solemnization before the officers of church or state, but must be evidenced by words in the present tense, uttered for the purpose of establishing the relation of husband and wife, and should be proved by the signature of the parties or by witnesses present, when made; therefore, when the evidence of the contract was the declaration of the wife, that "about thirty-one years ago she went to the house of A. S. to live and keep house for him under a mutual promise and agreement that they would sustain towards each other the relation of husband and wife, and that they did thus live and cohabit together," it was held that there was not proof of a marriage in fact.' " But stating that it was unnecessary to consider the evidence in said case, the court said: "We think our statute has wholly superseded the common law, and in effect, if not in express terms, renders invalid all attempted marriages contracted in this state which have not been solemnized in substantial compliance with its provisions. The statute in force in this state in 1878, when it is alleged the marriage now in question occurred, is embraced in chapter 68 of our Code of 1868. The first section of said chapter provides for the issuance of marriage licenses, the third, fourth, and fifth sections by whom and the manner in which marriages may be solemnized, and the sixth section is as follows: 'Every marriage in this state shall be under a license, and solemnized in the manner herein provided; but no marriage solemnized by any person professing to be authorized to solemnize the same shall be deemed or adjudged to be void, nor shall the validity thereof be in any way affected, on account of any want of authority in such person, if the marriage be in all other respects lawful, and be consummated with a full belief on the part of such persons so married, or either of them, that they had been lawfully joined in marriage; nor shall any marriage celebrated within this state between the 17th day of April, 1861, and the 1st day of January, 1866, be void by reason of the same having been solemnized without such license.' After stating that marriage is a natural right, which existed independent of statutes, and that ordinarily the statutory provisions regulating the contract of marriage should be held to be directory; that the general rule is that a marriage good at common law is valid notwithstanding the existence of any statute on the subject, unless the statute contains express words of nullity; but adding, however, that this rule is not universal, (1 Bishop, Mar. & Div. § 283.)—the court further said: "It seems to me, therefore, that when the terms of the statute are such that they cannot be made effective to the extent of giving each and all of them some reasonable operation without interpreting the statute as mandatory, then such interpretation should be given to it. The statute under consideration, in express words, declares that 'every marriage in this state shall be under a license, and be solemnized in the manner herein provided.' It is possible that these words, standing alone, should, under the general rule just stated, be interpreted as merely directory. But the statute does not stop here. It qualified these words by provisions which would be wholly useless and unnecessary, if it were intended and should be held that the preceding provisions are simply directory. It is declared that certain marriages shall not 'be deemed or adjudged void' because the persons solemnizing them did not in fact have authority to do so. It also declares that certain other marriages shall not be void because they were solemnized without a license. These exceptions or qualifying provisions seem to me to be equivalent to an express declaration that marriages had in this state, contrary to the commands of the statute, and not saved by the exceptions, shall be treated as void. It is apparent that the Legislature must have interpreted the statute as making the excepted marriages null and void without the excepting clauses, for otherwise the exceptions would be useless, and would not have been made."

In Com. v. Munson, 127 Mass. 466, 34 Am. Rep. 411, it is stated: "Under all changes in the form of the statutes, it has always been assumed in this commonwealth, and in the state of Maine, which was originally a part thereof, that (except in the single case of Quakers or Friends, whose marriages are made valid by a special provision limited to that sect, and, though not solemnized by any magistrate or minister, are witnessed, recorded, and returned by the principal officer of the meeting at which the ceremony is performed) a marriage which is shown not to have been solemnized before any third person, acting or believed by either of the parties to be acting as a magistrate or minister, is not lawful or valid for any purpose." And in Norcross v. Norcross, a late Massachusetts case, decided in January, 1892, to be found in 29 N. E. Rep. 506, it was said: "According to the law of New Hampshire, as declared in Dunbarton v. Franklin, 19 N. H. 257, if parties enter into a contract of marriage between themselves, and live together in accordance with it, such facts do not constitute a marriage. We are referred to no statute or decision which shows that the law of that state has since been changed. The finding that there was no marriage under the laws of New Hampshire was therefore well warranted. The law of Massachusetts is similar, and there was nothing to show any formal ceremony of marriage here." In that case there seems to have been some proof that no marriage ceremony was ever performed between the parties. They had cohabited as husband and wife in Massachusetts and New Hampshire, where common-law marriages are not allowed; they went to New York, and continued in the same apparent relation as husband and wife, at one time for three days, and another time for one week, where marriages at the common law are held valid; but this was held to be insufficient, under the circumstances, to establish the relationship, there being no evidence that the parties while in New York entered into any contract of marriage between themselves. In Holmes v. Holmes, 1 Abb. U. S. 525, Deady, J., says: "The consent to become husband and wife—the contract out of which arises the relation—must be given as herein prescribed,—before a person authorized to solemnize marriage, and in the presence of two witnesses. Without the observance of these formalities, the marriage relation, it seems to me, cannot be created within the states of Oregon and California, particularly the former. Neither ought it to be. To prevent fraud and litigation, the law wisely requires certain contracts to be in writing, and signed by the parties. A single rood of land cannot be conveyed except by the deed of the vendor. How much more important it is to society and individuals that the contract upon which rests the marriage relation, the most important of all others, should not be made except with such attending circumstances and formalities as will serve to manifest the consent of the parties beyond question, and also preserve the evidence of it. . . . Nor do I think that citizens of this state can purposely go beyond its jurisdiction, and not within the jurisdiction of another state,—as at sea,—and there contract marriage contrary to its laws. Such an attempt to be joined in marriage is a fraudulent evasion of the laws to which the citizen of the state is subject and owes obedience, and ought not to be held valid by them." In Denison v. Denison, 35 Md. 373, Alvey, J., says: "By the canon law of Europe, founded mainly upon the Roman Civil Law, prior to the Council of Trent, in the sixteenth century, the contract of marriage was regarded as simply of a consensual nature, only differing from other contracts in its being indissoluble even by the consent of the parties. In form, a contract per verba de presenti, or a promise per verba de futuro cum copula, constituted a valid marriage, without the offices of a priest, till the decrees of the Council of Trent, which required the intervention of the parish priest to give validity to the marriage. The promise per verba de futuro, when followed by carnal intercourse, was considered as equivalent in legal effect to the contract per verba de presenti. In the matrimonial law, as administered by the canonist, it was a maxim, consensus non concubitus facit nuptias; and this remains the law to the present day in some parts of Europe, where the civil and canon law prevail, and where the decrees of the Council of Trent have not been accepted,—as in Scotland."

The American doctrine undoubtedly is that the relation of husband and wife originates in contract. In most of the states, and in our own, it is so declared by statute. This contract, unlike all others, is indissoluble at the will of the parties. At common law it may be entered into by persons of proper age and mental capacity by a mutual agreement or understanding. This seems to be the general doctrine, although in some of the states a ceremony of some kind is held to be necessary, even though common-law marriages are recognized. There is a considerable conflict in the authorities as to the acts which are necessary to establish a common-law marriage, some courts even going to the extent of holding that continued cohabitation alone is sufficient, while others hold that there must have been a contract between the parties, and others to the still further extent that this must have been evidenced by some kind of a ceremony, or, at least, a declaration to that effect in the presence of other parties. In Northfield v. Plymouth, 20 Vt. 590, and 591, in speaking of the case of Cunninghams v. Cunninghams, 2 Dow, 482, Redfield, J., says: "Lord Eldon and Lord Redesdale held that in cases of cohabitation the presumption was in favor of its legality; but, where it was known to have been illicit in its origin, that presumption could not be made,—"and after mentioning certain cases, said: "In these stress is laid upon the fact that a marriage per verba de presenti is valid in that state, and also at common law, if followed by cohabitation. This, I think, could hardly be regarded as law in this state, without virtually repealing our statute upon that subject. It certainly has never been so regarded under the English Statute of 26 Geo. II. and 4 Geo. IV. chap. 76; and I see no reason why it should be here, when it is clearly a dispensation with all the requisitions of the statute upon the subject. Wherever that rule in regard to the law of marriage prevails, as it does in Scotland, cohabitation as man and wife is marriage, since it implies, in the strongest sense, a contract in presenti to be husband and wife." In Dickerson v. Brown, 49 Miss. 370, Tarbell, J., says: "With reference to the consent necessary to the consummation of marriage, it is said: 'Nothing more is needed than that, in language which is mutually understood, or in any mode declaratory of intention, the parties accept of each as husband and wife.' And Swinburne lays down the doctrine that if the words do not of their natural meaning, or by common use, 'conclude matrimony,' yet, if the parties intend marriage, and their intent sufficiently appears, 'they are inseparably man and wife, not only before God, but also before men.' And this, 'consent may be either verbal or written; and where there was no ceremony, but the parties merely lived together as husband and wife for many years, they were held to be, in law, married,'—citing Hicks v. Cochran, 4 Edw. Ch. 107, 6 L. ed. 814. Quoting from Mr. Bishop on Marriage and Divorce, par. 12, the court also said: "The institution of marriage, commencing with the race and attending man in all periods, in all countries of his existence, has ever been considered the particular glory of the social system. It has shown forth in dark countries, and in dark periods of the world, a bright luminary on his horizon. And but for this institution all that is valuable, all that is virtuous, all that is desirable in human existence, would long since have faded away in the general retrograde of the race, and in the perilous darkness in which its joys and its hopes would have been wrecked together. Marriage, then, is to be cherished by the government as the first and choicest object of its regard. Therefore every court, in considering questions not clearly settled or defined in the law, should lean towards this institution of marriage; holding, consequently, all persons to be married who, living in the way of husband and wife, may accordingly be presumed to have intended entering into the relation, unless the rule of law which is set up to prevent this conclusion is distinct and absolute, or some impediment of nature intervenes."

In Levins v. Ames, 44 Tex. 341, Roberts, Ch. J., says: "A marriage is a mutual agreement of a man and woman to live together in the relation and under the duties of husband and wife, sharing each other's fate or fortune for weal or woe, until parted by death, which, in organized society, is subject to certain impediments, and legalized by compliance with certain forms of law. The relation itself is natural; the prescribed impediments and the forms of laws for its legal consummation are artificial, being the work of government. What was known as and called 'marriages null in law' was a real marriage according to nature, and so intended by the parties, deficient only by the existence of some legal impediment or the want of compliance with the forms of law in contracting it. Our laws relieved against the impediment and the want of legal forms, but did not make an attempt to make concubinage marriage." It is there held that a merely conventional arrangement for illicit intercourse and mutual assistance in living, making one a willing mistress and the other the protecting paramour, was not sufficient to establish a marriage. In Jackson v. Winne, 7 Wend. 50, it is held that the marriage is complete if there has been a full, free, and mutual consent between the parties, capable of contracting, to take each other as husband and wife, though not followed up by cohabitation. In 2 Lawson, Rights, Rem. & Pr. § 711, citing various cases, it is said: "At common law, to constitute marriage, no particular solemnization or forms were necessary. Mutual consent to enter into the relation of husband and wife was all that was essential. . . . But, a marriage will not be presumed, even where, for convenience, the parties hold themselves out as man and wife before third persons, provided their cohabitation has the elements of a purely meretricious relation. Betrothal alone, followed by cohabitation, but without a present agreement to become husband and wife, does not constitute a valid marriage. A. offer to prove that a man and woman lived together as husband and wife is not an offer to prove their marriage. At common law, the fact of sexual intercourse after an agreement to marry at a future day does not constitute marriage. The copula must have been in fulfillment of the agreement to marry. Where the beginning of a cohabitation is illicit, there can be no presumption of marriage from the cohabitation and reputation,"—and that "circumstances of cohabitation, acknowledgment, reputation, and recognition by the family form a presumption that a connection was matrimonial, and not meretricious."

16 L. R. A.

In all cases, whether common-law marriages are recognized or not, evidences of cohabitation and repute are admissible, as tending to show a valid marriage. Holding each other out as husband and wife to the public, and continued living together in that relationship has ordinarily, if not universally, been held sufficient proof, unless contradicted, to establish it, even within those states where common-law marriages are not recognized. This presumption could always be rebutted, however, by showing that the parties intended their connection to be illicit, and, if it was so intended at its commencement, it is presumed to continue unless evidence is produced of a change of mind. In some cases it is held that although when the connection began there was an impediment, known to the parties, preventing them from marrying each other, yet if they desired or intended marriage, and this desire or intention is shown to have continued after the impediment was removed, with the continuance of cohabitation, it has been held sufficient. And in 1 Bishop, Mar. & Div. §§ 970-975, 979, citing a number of cases, it is stated: "Sec. 970. If the parties desire marriage, and do what they can to render their union matrimonial, yet one of them is under a disability,—as where there is a prior marriage, undissolved,—their cohabitation, thus matrimonially meant, will in matter of law make them husband and wife from the moment when the disability is removed; and it is immaterial whether they knew of its existence or its removal, or not, nor is this a question of evidence." "Sec. 975. Though a cohabitation was introduced by a formal ceremony of marriage, and the parties erroneously supposed the impediment of a former marriage to have been taken away, and never had their mistake corrected, still, in localities where formal solemnization is not essential, valid marriage may be presumed to have occurred after the impediment was removed. To employ words more nicely accurate, and cover a larger ground, the living together of marriageable parties a single day as married, they meaning marriage, and the law requiring only mutual consent, makes them husband and wife; for here are all the elements of a contract of present matrimony." "Sec. 979. Where a woman had formally married, believing her husband to be dead, and, on his returning, still continued to cohabit under the second marriage, and kept it up for several years after he really died, a second marriage after such death was presumed. And in another case, where a married man, knowing his wife to be alive, entered into a form of marriage with another woman, who did not know of the impediment, and continued the cohabitation under this second marriage until after the death of the first wife, a marriage after such death was inferred." As an instance in which a contrary view is taken, see Reading Fire Ins.

A. T. Co's App. 118 Pa. 207, 4 Cent. Rep. 678. The court said: "Undoubtedly they lived together for a long time under circumstances sufficient to prove intimate sexual relations. But cohabitation and reputation alone are not marriage. They are merely circumstances from which a marriage may sometimes be presumed. It is a presumption, however, that may be rebutted by other facts and circumstances. When the relation between a man and woman living together is illicit in its commencement, it is presumed so to continue until a changed relation is proved. Without proof of subsequent actual marriage, it will not be presumed from continued cohabitation and reputation of a relation between them which was of illicit origin."

Thus it will be seen that in the various cases relating to common-law marriages there is quite a difference of opinion as to just what facts and circumstances are sufficient to establish the relation. Courts undoubtedly in many instances indulge in refinements of distinction that never entered into the minds of the parties, which sometimes resulted in holding the marriage relation to have been established by the conduct of the parties where there was no real intention to take each other as husband and wife. There may have been no great harm in this in such instances, but it is clearly apparent that under similar circumstances, where the parties, or one of them, intended to assume the relationship of husband and wife, and under no other circumstances would have consented to cohabitation, believing that the relationship thus formed by the agreement between themselves, or by cohabitation as husband and wife, and so holding themselves out to the community, would be a valid marriage, have subsequently found, to the shame and sorrow of one of them at least, that such an arrangement constituted nothing more than an illicit cohabitation or concubinage, subject to abandonment by either at pleasure. In Akew v. Dupree, cited, the learned judge approves the recognition of the common-law marriage, but admits that it is sometimes abused. He states, however, that "rarely will the parties forego the benefits of the statute, because it adds so much to the respectability as well as the security of the contract." Here, it seems to us, a strong argument is afforded against recognizing them at all, for it is evident, if the parties once understand they can form this relationship only in compliance with the statutory requirements, there will be no attempt to establish it in any other manner, and the instances of resorting to cohabitation for that purpose, instead of being few, would become entirely abrogated. The decision in that case is put upon the ground that marriage is a natural right, which always existed prior to the organization of any form of government, and all laws in restraint of it should be strictly construed in consequence thereof. It is held that it should be the policy of the law to sustain all such contracts and relations whenever possible, and that this should always be done unless the Legislature has expressly declared all marriages entered into or solemnized in any form, other than the ways provided for in the statute, void. We must remember, however, that in many ways the natural rights or privileges of mankind have to be restrained in order to promote the welfare of the community and the government of the many.

This question, involving as it does the best interests of society and the preservation of the home and family,—the foundation of all society,—has ever been regarded as a most important one, but we do not think it would serve any good purpose to attempt a more full review of the many authorities bearing upon it, as the arguments advanced are pretty fully stated in the opinions quoted from. It has been a question so often before the courts, and involved in so many contradictions and shades of distinctions, it is impossible to reconcile them, and an attempt at anything more than a limited review would be profitless. Our only desire is to interpret the law as it should be, and to arrive at a conclusion best calculated to promote the welfare of society. In order to sustain the validity of common-law marriages in many of the states, the courts have practically overruled the statutory law upon the subject, and we do not feel justified in following them when it results in the violation of the most ordinary rules recognized in construing statutes, nor do we think the true interests of the people lie in that direction. It is important that publicity should be given to such contracts, to guard against deceptions and to provide accessible evidence to prove the relationship. The most important of all human contracts should not be left free from all impediments or restrictions, or with no formalities requisite for its realization. Our own statutes (sections 1881-1896, Gen. Stat. inclusive) provide how such a contract may be entered into, and the evidence thereof perpetuated. Certain persons are authorized to perform the ceremony, and it is also provided that if it be performed before an unauthorized person the validity thereof shall not be questioned, if such marriage be consummated with a belief of the persons so married, or either of them, that they have been lawfully joined in marriage. It is also provided that "all marriages to which there are no legal impediments, solemnized before or in any religious organization or congregation, according to the established ritual or form commonly practiced therein, are valid." It is clear that in making provisions for these excepted cases the Legislature was of the opinion that all attempts to establish the relationship, other than in accordance with the ways provided by the statute, would be void, and would be so held. Various safeguards are thrown around the entering into this relationship, such as the requirement of a license to be first procured before any persons can be joined together as husband and wife; and should one be a girl under the age of eighteen years, or a youth under the age of twenty-one years, it is provided that the license shall not issue except upon the consent of the parents or guardians. It is provided that marriage is a civil contract, which may be entered into by men of the age of twenty-one years, and women of the age of eighteen years, otherwise capable; and it is provided that none under that age, respectively, shall marry, except the consent of the parents or guardians shall first be obtained,—those persons who are supposed to be the most interested in the welfare of the individuals most directly concerned, and who would carefully consult such interests before consenting. If common-law marriages are to be recognized, this provision becomes wholly powerless, as, by a simple agreement, a man, though forty years a senior, and a girl of the age of twelve years, can enter into this relationship, regardless of the will of the parents, or even a boy of fourteen years could be inveigled into this relationship by a woman many years his senior. It is true such instances are rare, but that affords no reason why they should be tolerated in any case. While the marriage state is the most commendable one, and ought to be encouraged in all legitimate ways, having, as it does, its origin in divine law, it seems to us, if the statutory requisites are dispensed with, it would to some extent set a premium upon illicit intercourse. If a mere contract between the parties, to which there are no witnesses, is to be recognized as valid, it is evident that a contract thus lightly made might as easily be repudiated, or, if cohabitation and reputation without any agreement constitute marriage, the former must precede the latter, for it is the cohabitation which raises the presumption and causes the reputation or assumption of the relationship of matrimony. If an agreement between the parties is to be required, with the further condition that it be made before some third person as a witness, without any other proof of it, or any means provided for preserving such proof, the death of the witness removes all the evidence, aside from the parties themselves. And what would be easier than for parties to agree privately to become husband and wife, and after cohabiting for a time mutually agree to dissolve the relationship, or to conceal the fact that they had ever entered into the contract, and repudiate it? It is contrary to public policy and public morals, and revolting to the senses of enlightened society, that parties could be placed in such a condition that they might mutually repudiate an arrangement of this kind previously entered into, whatever the reason might be, and yet this would follow if common-law marriages are to be recognized. By adhering to the statutory provisions all objectionable cases of this kind are eliminated, parties are led to regard the contract as a sacred one, as one not lightly to be entered into, and are forcibly impressed with the idea that they are forming a relationship in which society has an interest, and to which the state is a party. Illicit intercourse would to a great extent be prevented, and there would be no attempts upon the part of either one to form the relationship in any clandestine way, or any attempt by one to overreach the other in such a way, knowing that such attempts would be ineffectual.

There is a growing belief that the welfare of society demands further restrictions in this direction, and that this will find voice in future legislation; that an institution of this kind, which is so closely and thoroughly related to the state, should be most carefully guarded; and that improvident and improper marriages should be prevented. All wise and healthful regulations in this direction, prohibiting such marriages as far as practicable, would tend to the prevention of pauperism and crime and the transmission of hereditary diseases and defects, and it may not be regarded as too chimerical to say that in the future laws may be passed looking to this end. Certainly it is a legitimate subject for legislation, for the state has an interest in each act, contract and relation of its individual members that in any wise affects the public welfare, or tends to the injury of the individual, and these will become regulated more and more in various ways, as the government of man approaches greater degree of perfection, and the rights, relations, and responsibilities of one person with regard to another, and to all others, become better understood. Every thoughtful person would desire this should be so, even though in some cases it might seem to result in individual hardship. It is true the Legislature may expressly provide that all marriages not entered into in the ways pointed out by the statute, and not within the exceptions provided for, shall be held invalid, but this affords no reason for not giving effect to the clear intention otherwise expressed in the legislation existing, because the Legislature has not expressly declared all others void. Our statutes in relation hereto would, if upon any other subject, be held mandatory and prohibitive, and we see no reason why the same effect should not be given to them here, for the law could as well say that all attempted marriages should be valid, notwithstanding the statutory requisites were not complied with. However this question is decided, it may result in hardship in some cases, but we think the lesser injury will come from an adherence to the statutory requisites than otherwise, to the end that these contracts should be made permanent, and not revocable at the will and pleasure of the parties; that parents may be made responsible for the support, maintenance, and care of their offspring, and the legitimacy of the offspring established beyond dispute. Our statute, has to some extent undertaken to protect the innocent by providing that children born in unlawful wedlock shall become legitimate in case of the subsequent intermarriage of the parents, and the Legislature may go still further in this direction, should it be deemed advisable, even to the extent of conferring all the rights upon them that children born of lawful wedlock have. This, although opposed to the old doctrine of preventing the parents by punishing the issue, would seem to be more in accord with principles of justice and modern ideas thereof.

Reversed and remanded.

Anders, Ch. J. and Dunbar, Stiles, and Hoyt, JJ., concur.

MAINE SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

William E. MANN et al.

v.

Helen S. JACKSON.

.....Me.....)

The clause "unless she shall be married, in which case her life estate shall cease," is not void as a restraint on marriage, in a will giving testator's daughter a life estate in his homestead and providing that in the event of her marriage the homestead together with the testator's other property should be equally divided among his children; where from the whole will it is apparent that the testator's intention was not to restrain his daughter from marrying, but to provide for her support until she did so.

(March 29, 1892.)

REPORT by the Supreme Judicial Court for Penobscot County for the opinion of the full court of a bill in equity filed to obtain construction of a clause in the will of William Mann, deceased, by which he gave his daughter a life estate in his homestead, unless she married, in which event it was to be divided among his children. Judgment declaring the defeasance clause valid.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Mr. A. W. Paine, for plaintiffs:

Can a parent make provision for his daughter to terminate on her marriage? That the negative of this question was the well-established doctrine of the old English law is admitted, but it is claimed that if not wholly otherwise now, the principle is so far overruled as not to be applicable to the case at bar. Lord Loughborough, chancellor, in review of the whole doctrine in Stackpole v. Beaumont, 3 Ves. Jr. 89, strongly criticised the same as "having no just application to the English law," his conclusion being strongly supported by the distinguished author on Wills.

2 Redf. Wills, 290, 291, 295, 298.

But when the principle is applicable, if there be a specific devise over, upon the happening of such marriage, the devise is held good. Some authorities are to the effect that if the devise over is to the heirs the same is void; but this is the case only where the devise is of the residuum. If it be special or specific the devise over is valid. This is our case.

Parsons v. Winslow, 6 Mass. 169, 4 Am. Dec. 107; Rea v. Cotton, 2 Ves. Sr. 298; Wheeler v. Bingham, 1 Wils. 188; 2 Jarman, Wills, 1880 ed. 570; Giles v. Little, 104 U. S. 291, 26 L. ed. 745.

Bequests of personal property in such cases may be void where real-estate devises would be good.

2 Jarman, Wills, 570; Jones v. Jones, L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 279.

Here there is no absolute forfeiture of an estate upon marriage, but she is simply made equal with her married sister and brother, each to have a third when she was placed in like condition with them by matrimony. This is an important consideration.

The courts very generally agree that the principle does not apply to widows or second marriages—that specific devises over to others prevent the application of the principle—and that the principle only applies to cases where there is evidently an intention on the part of testator to discourage marriage by terrorizing the maiden party.

4 Kent, Com. 26; Jones v. Jones, L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 279; Crompton v. Crompton, 9 East, 267; Randall v. Marble, 69 Me. 313, 81 Am. Rep. 281; Mansfield v. Mansfield, 75 Me. 509; Nash v. Simpson, 1 New Eng. Rep. 699, 78 Me. 148; Parsons v. Winslow, 6 Mass. 169, 4 Am. Dec. 107; Gibbens v. Gibbens, 1 New Eng. Rep. 98, 140 Mass. 102, 54 Am. Rep. 458; Olney v. Hull, 21 Pick. 311; Dana v. Murray, 122 N. Y. 604; Meyer v. Cahen, 111 N. Y. 270; Misterson v. Townshend, 10 L. R. A. 816, 128 N. Y. 458; Graydon v. Graydon, 28 N. J. Eq. 230, 25 N. J. Eq. 561; Courter v. Stagg, 27 N. J. Eq. 305; Kouvalinka v. Gesbel, 40 N. J. Eq. 443; Phillips v. Medbury, 7 Conn. 568; Giles v. Little, 104 U. S. 291, 26 L. ed. 745; 2 Jarman, Wills, 568-578; Adams v. Mason, 85 Ala. 452; Re Reinhardt, 74 Cal. 365; Davidson's App. 19 Pitts. L. J. N. S. 258; Phillips v. Ferguson, 1 L. R. A. 837, 85 Va. 509; Reuff v. Coleman, 80 W. Va. 171; Rowland v. Rowland, 29 S. C. 54; Squier v. Harvey, 6 New Eng. Rep. 503, R. I. Index CC. 35; Beahore v. Lytle, 18 West. Rep. 788, 114 Ind. 8; Coppage v. Alexander, 2 B. Mon. 313, 38 Am. Dec. 153; Williams v. Vancleave, 7 T. B. Mon. 888; Vaughn v. Lovejoy, 34 Ala. 437; Best v. Best, 88 Ky. 569; Siddons v. Cockrell, 181 Ill. 653; Brotsman's App. 133 Pa. 478; Martin v. Seigler, 32 S. C. 267; Leenogood v. Hoople, 124 Ind. 27; Doyal v. Smith, 28 Ga. 262.

Mr. Charles H. Bartlett, for respondent:

The provision in the will by which the life estate of the testator's daughter Helen was to cease, if she married, and the homestead go to his three children, is a condition subsequent in general restraint of marriage, without a valid limitation over, and therefore void.

Both Webster and Worcester define the word "unless" as meaning "if not;" the clause which follows, "so long as she shall live and remain unmarried, etc.," is merely explanatory of the preceding clause and is only surplusage.

In a devise to trustees to pay over the net income to the testator's grandson, "so long as he shall remain unmarried," the condition was held void and the grandson was entitled to the income after his marriage.

Otis v. Prince, 10 Gray, 581.

Unqualified restrictions on marriage are void on grounds of public policy.

2 Jarman, Wills, 5th Am. ed. 572.

The condition was held void where the testator did not regard his daughter as being in a fit state of health to marry on account of a supposed nervous affection.

Morley v. Rennoldson, 2 Hare, 570.

NOTE.—For a collection of authorities upon the subject of testamentary conditions in restraint of marriage, see note to Phillips v. Ferguson (Va.) 1 L. R. A. 837.

A condition subsequent annexed to a devise or conveyance of real estate, if of a general character, is void.

Randall v. Marble, 69 Me. 810, 31 Am. Rep. 281; Otis v. Prince, supra.

The limitation over to the testator's heirs is void.

Randall v. Marble and Otis v. Prince, supra; 4 Kent, Com. *506.

The condition is void because the estate limited over is incorporated with the whole residue of the testator's estate.

Parsons v. Winslow, 6 Mass. 167, 4 Am. Dec. 107.

When a subsequent condition is annexed to a gift of land, if general, it is void, and, although broken, the estate of the donee continues.

2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 933.

Whitehouse, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a bill in equity brought for the purpose of obtaining a judicial construction of the following will:

"(1) I will that the money which may come from the policy of insurance which I hold on my own life be appropriated to the payment and discharge of any and all mortgages then existing on my homestead house and lot on Cedar street, in said Bangor, so that said homestead may be free from all incumbrances, and any balance to be applied to pay any taxes then due or unpaid, on said homestead, and any balance to go with my other estate.

"(2) My said homestead house and lot aforesaid I give and devise to my unmarried daughter, Helen S. Mann, for and during her natural life, unless she shall be married, in which case her life estate shall cease. So long as she shall live and remain unmarried she is to have the exclusive right of occupation, use, and enjoyment of said homestead, but subject to the duty of keeping it in good repair at her expense, and paying all taxes and keeping the property well insured. If all parties interested see fit to sell the property, they may do so, in which case said Helen is to receive the net income from the proceeds of sale, the same to be well invested for that purpose; and, if the buildings are burned in whole or part, the insurance money shall be applied to repair or rebuild, unless all agree to a different appropriation of the money, viz., all parties interested.

"(3) All other estate, real and personal, of all kinds, which I may own or possess at death, including the remainder of my homestead house and lot aforesaid, my farm on the 'Odlin Road,' so called, and all other property, I give in equal shares to my three children, William E. Mann, Mrs. Augusta S. Harden, and Helen S. Mann, to have and to hold the same to them, and their heirs and assigns, forever."

After the death of the testator, Helen S. Mann married, and is the defendant in this suit.

The language of the second item of the will is specially brought in question. The plaintiff says that the defendant's "life estate" in the homestead was terminated by her marriage, while the defendant contends that the clause limiting her exclusive title by her marriage is void, as being a condition in restraint of marriage, and that she is entitled to the sole use and occupation of the homestead during her natural life.

It is undoubtedly an established rule of law that, even with respect to devises of real estate, a subsequent condition which is intended to operate in general and unqualified restraint of marriage, or the natural effect of which is to create undue restraint upon marriage and promote celibacy, must be held illegal and void, as contrary to the principles of sound public policy. It appears from the early English cases that this doctrine was borrowed by the English ecclesiastical courts from the Roman civil law, which declared absolutely void all conditions in wills restraining marriage, whether precedent or subsequent, whether there was any gift over or not. But the courts of equity found themselves greatly embarrassed between their anxiety on the one hand to follow the ecclesiastical courts, and their desire on the other to give more heed to the plain intention and wish of the testator as manifested by the whole will. Thereupon the process of distinguishing commenced for the purpose of preventing obvious hardships arising from the application of that technical rule to particular cases. As a result there has been ingrafted upon the doctrine a multitude of curious refinements and subtle distinctions respecting real and personal estate, conditions and limitations, conditions precedent and conditions subsequent, gifts with and without valid limitations over, and the application of the rule to widows and other persons. Indeed, it may be said of the decisions upon this subject with even more propriety than was observed by Lord Mansfield in regard to another branch of law, that "the more we read, unless we are very careful to distinguish, the more we shall be confounded." The whole subject as to what conditions in restraint of marriage shall be regarded as valid and what as void would seem to be involved in great uncertainty and confusion both in England and in this country. There is clearly discernible, however, through all the decisions of later times, an anxiety on the part of the judges to limit as much as possible the rule adopted from the civil law. "The true rule upon the subject is," says Mr. Redfield, "that one who has an interest in the future marriage and settlement of a person in life may annex any reasonable condition to the bequest of property to such person, although it may operate to delay or restrict the formation of the married relation, and so be in some respect in restraint of marriage. . . . Where there are hundreds of conflicting cases upon a point, and no general principle running through them by which they can be arranged or classified, what better can be done than to abandon them all, and fall back upon the reason and good sense of the question, as the courts have of late attempted to do?" 2 Redf. Wills, *290, § 20, and note. See also Id. 297, and 2 Jarman, Wills, 569.

Beyond the general proposition first stated, the cases seem finally to resolve themselves for the most part into the mere judgment of the court upon the circumstances of each particular case. 2 Redf. Wills, *297, § 81; 2 Pom. Eq.

Jur. 988; Coppage v. Alexander, 2 B. Mon. 818, and note to same, 38 Am. Dec. 153.

But the rule was so far modified and relaxed that conditions annexed to devises and legacies restraining widows from marrying have almost uniformly been pronounced valid. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. supra. From the numerous decisions upon the subject in the United States, the conclusion is fairly to be drawn that such conditions will be upheld in the case of widows, whether there is a gift over or not. 2 Jarman, Wills, p. 564, note 29; 2 Redf. Wills, 296; Schouler, Wills, 608. See also recent cases of Knight v. Mahoney, 152 Mass. 523, 9 L. R. A. 573, and Nash v. Simpson, 78 Me. 142, 1 New Eng. Rep. 699.

In 2 Redf. Wills, 296, the author says: "We apprehend there is no substantial reason, either in law or morals, why a man should be allowed to annex an unreasonable condition in restraint of marriage, one merely in terrorem, in case of a wife, more than of a child or any other person, in regard to whose settlement in life he may fairly be allowed to take an interest; but the cases certainly, many of them, maintain such distinction."

It is unnecessary, however, to enter upon an elaborate discussion of the subject. The existence of the rule as recognized in Randall v. Marble, 69 Me. 310, 81 Am. Rep. 281, is not here questioned. In that case the rule was applied to a "crude and ill-defined" proviso in a deed of real estate. We have no occasion to question the soundness of that decision. It was the judgment of the court upon a particular set of words in that deed. It is not an authority to control the judgment of the court respecting the construction of an entirely different set of words in a testamentary gift of real estate.

There is a recognized distinction between conditions in restraint of marriage annexed to testamentary dispositions, and restraints on marriage contained in the very terms of the limitation of the estate given.

In Heath v. Lewis, 8 De G. M. & G. 954, (1853,) a testator made a gift of £30 a year to an unmarried woman during the term of her natural life, "if she shall so long remain unmarried." Lord Justice Knight Bruce said: "It must be agreed on all hands that it is, by the English law, competent for a man to give to a single woman an annuity until she shall die or be married, whichever of these two events shall first happen. All men agree that, if such a legatee shall marry, the annuity would thereupon cease. 'During the term of her natural life, if she so long remain unmarried,' is the technical and proper language of limitation, as distinguished from a condition."

Lord Justice Turner said: "It may either be a gift for life defeated by a condition, or it may be a gift to her so long as she remains unmarried, that is, for life if she be so long unmarried; and the question is therefore purely one of intention, in which of the two senses the words were used."

Jones v. Jones, L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 279 (1876), is an important authority. It related to a devise of real estate, the testator's language being as follows: "Provided said Mary remains in her present state of single woman; otherwise, if she binds herself in wedlock, she is liable to lose her share of the said property immediately, and her share to be possessed by the other party mentioned." Blackburn, J., said: "A number of cases have been referred to, from which it appears that the courts of equity have adopted from the ecclesiastical or civil law, it is unnecessary to say to what extent, the rule that conditions in general restraint of marriage are invalid. The attempt to escape from the consequences of this rule led to decisions in which a great many nice distinctions were established as to whether the bequest amounted to a condition or only a limitation. If this point had been as to a bequest of personal estate, it would have been necessary to look at these decisions. But this is a devise of land which is governed by the rules of the common law, and it is admitted that there is no case which extends the rule as to conditions or limitations to devises of land.

"There is, I admit, strong authority that, when the object of the will is to restrain marriage and promote celibacy, the courts will hold such a condition to be contrary to public policy and void. But here there appears to be no intention to promote celibacy. Now here, I think, when one sees the scope of the testator's dispositions, it comes to this: 'I have left to three women enough to live upon, and if one of them dies I bring in Jemima and Mary. But if Mary (I suppose as the youngest she was most likely to change her state) happens to marry, her husband must maintain her, and her share shall pass to the rest.' Now, if he had said this in express words, could it have been contended that his provision was contrary to public policy? I think not. It is admitted that the limitation to Mary until she marries is perfectly good, but it is said that here, because the disposition is in the form of a condition, it is bad."

Lush, J., said: "We ought to take the words in such a sense as to carry out the object of the testator, unless it is illegal; and, as I read the words, the testator only meant to provide for her while she was unmarried. There is nothing in these words which compels us to think it was the testator's object that this niece should never marry at all; he probably supposed that she would be maintained by her husband, and did not mean to provide for husband and wife." See also Hotz's Estate, 38 Pa. 422; Cornell v. Lovett, 85 Pa. 100; Graydon v. Graydon, 23 N. J. Eq. 230; Courier v. Stagg, 27 N. J. Eq. 305.

It is the enlightened policy of courts of equity, when not restrained by compulsory rules, to seek to discover the intention of the testator from the whole instrument, rather than from any particular form of words.

In the case before us, the testator makes careful provision in the first item of the will for the appropriation of so much of the proceeds of his life insurance as might be necessary to discharge all mortgages on the homestead. In the second item he devises the homestead to his unmarried daughter "for and during her natural life, unless she shall be married, in which case her life estate shall cease. So long as she shall live and remain unmarried she is to have the exclusive right of occupation, use, and enjoyment of said homestead." In case all parties interested agree to a sale of the property, this daughter is to receive the net income of the proceeds, "the same to be well invested for that purpose;" and, in the event of the destruction of the buildings by fire, the insurance money shall be applied in rebuilding them. In the third item he gives the residue, including the remainder of his homestead, to his three children in equal shares.

Here, then, is the case of a parent who has a recognized right, and was under a moral obligation, to interest himself in the settlement of his daughter. To the ordinary mind, untrammelled by the "medievalism of the law," there is nothing in the will indicating any other thought or feeling than an affectionate regard for the welfare and happiness of a beloved daughter, and an anxious desire to provide for her a permanent and comfortable home. The modern court, free from the incubus of arbitrary legal dogmas, must fail to discover in the language of this will any suggestion of a purpose on the part of the father to impose a condition in terrorem in restraint of his daughter's marriage. It discloses no other disposition than a praiseworthy desire to secure to the daughter the continued occupation and enjoyment of the old homestead until, by reason of her marriage, she should cease to need it; then she was to share equally with her sister and brother in the entire estate. It is manifest from the whole tenor of the will that nothing was more remote from the real purpose of the testator than the idea of discouraging the marriage of this daughter. The intention was not to promote celibacy, but simply to furnish support until other means should be provided. Because of the inadvertent use by the scrivener of the word "unless," this court is not compelled to impose upon this instrument an intention which it is manifest from the context the testator never had. There is no such inflexible rule; the rights of the parties are not to be determined by an application of such a Procrustean method. The provision is in no respect contra bonos mores. It is not violative of any principle of sound policy; and, if it is here necessary and proper to recognize and maintain the distinction between a limitation and a condition subsequent, the language of this will should be held to constitute a valid limitation, and not an illegal condition.

The defendant's exclusive right to the possession and enjoyment of the entire homestead ceased upon her marriage.

Decree accordingly.

Peters, Ch. J., and Virgin, Libbey, Emery and Foster, JJ., concurred.

WYOMING SUPREME COURT.

Kinch McKINNEY, Pff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF WYOMING.

(.....Wyo.....)

1. A motion for a new trial must be made within the time fixed by the statute or all errors occurring at the trial are waived.
2. The overruling of a motion to quash the entire panel of petit jurors summoned to serve at the term, interposed before the trial began, may be considered on appeal independently of a motion for a new trial in which it was unnecessarily embodied, but which was filed too late.
3. Orders of the trial court dismissing the regular panel of jurors and summoning a new one cannot be sufficiently authenticated by affidavit of a party to the suit to justify their consideration on appeal.
4. In a criminal action against a man, the constitutional right of women "to equal civil, political, and religious rights and privileges" with men cannot be raised by him, by way of challenge to the array, because the jury is composed exclusively of men.
5. The exclusion of women from a jury on the trial of a man for crime, even if wrongful, does not deprive him of any rights or privileges under a constitutional provision giving women the right to vote and hold office and declaring that both male and female citizens shall equally enjoy all civil, political, and religious rights and privileges.

6. A continuance for the testimony of absent witnesses is properly denied if substantially the same testimony as that which is absent is offered at the trial.

7. A convict may be sentenced to a prison located beyond the state when it is authorized and required by statute.

(June 20, 1892.)

ERROR to the District Court for Laramie County to review a judgment convicting defendant of the crime of grand larceny. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry St. Rayner, for plaintiff in error:

A continuance should be granted for the absence of evidence when proper legal means to obtain it has been used.

Rev. Stat. 1887, §§ 3897-3899; Montgomery v. Citizens Mut. Ins. Co. 18 La. Ann. 227.

If any unforeseen accident or casualty intervenes, which puts it out of the power of the party to prevent it, a continuance will be granted.

8 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, 805, and note 3, and cases cited. Eldridge v. State, 12 Tex. App. 208.

A judge cannot arbitrarily quash a venire regularly issued by the officers charged with this duty under the statute, and proceed to organize another jury under the powers conferred upon the court to do so in certain spe-

NOTE.—Attention is called to the above case as a novel application of the rule that only those who are prejudiced by an unconstitutional law can complain of it.

16 L. R. A.

cial cases. The proceedings of the body thus organized will be held void.

Thomp. & M. Juries, § 500, § 81, subd. 2, 551, and cases cited; O'Byrnes v. State, 51 Ala. 25; Wright v. Stuart, 5 Blackf. 121; Clinton v. Englebrecht, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 484, 20 L. ed. 659.

The court has no right of its own motion, without any exception being taken by either party, to quash a panel and issue a new venire.

Thomp. Trials, § 89; Cross v. Moulton, 15 Johns. 470; Williams v. Com. 91 Pa. 498; Rogers v. State, 33 Ind. 548.

The defendant was entitled to be tried by a panel summoned in a particular way as prescribed by statute, and when the irregular action of the court compels a resort to talesmen the right is impaired.

People v. Stewart, 7 Cal. 140; Stratton v. People, 5 Colo. 276; Atkins v. State, 16 Ark. 581.

The court is not vested with the power to summon jurors upon a special venire after discharge of the regular panel.

Thomp. & M. Juries, § 93, § 81 subd. 2; Williams v. Com. supra; Mosseau v. Feeder, 2 Or. 118; Judge v. State, 8 Ga. 178.

Chapter 47, Laws 1888, and chap. 85, Laws 1890, of the state of Wyoming relating to the qualifications of jurors are unconstitutional and void.

Wyo. Const. art. 6, § 1.

The statutes of Wyoming in effect single out and deny to the female citizens of Wyoming the right and privilege of participating in the administration of the laws as jurors because they are women though qualified in all other respects and discriminate against them.

Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 808, 25 L. ed. 664; Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 814; 25 L. ed. 668; Neal v. Delaware, 108 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 567; Williams v. State, 44 Tex. 84; Nashville v. Shepherd, 3 Baxt. 378.

Mr. Charles N. Potter, Atty-Gen., for the State:

The granting of continuances in criminal cases is matter within the sound discretion of a trial court and will not be interfered with by the appellate court unless a manifest injustice has been done.

State v. Hodges, 45 Kan. 389; State v. Emmons, Id. 397; Burrell v. State, 25 Neb. 581; Life Ins. Co. v. Gisborne, 5 Utah, 838; State v. Green, 43 La. Ann. —; Hicks v. State, 25 Fla. 585.

The record does not show all the proceedings touching the formation of the jury. To set forth the facts in a challenge or motion is not sufficient.

Miller v. State (Wyo.) Feb. 18, 1892; Neal v. State (Neb.) June 29, 1891.

It does not appear that female citizens were not summoned except as we find such a statement in the challenge. The record fails to disclose it.

State v. Kennedy, 77 Iowa, 208; State v. McGinnis, 17 Or. 332.

The language of the sentence designating the particular place or penitentiary for the confinement of the convicted prisoner was and is no part of the sentence proper; if it was a part of it and should be erroneous it will be disregarded and the valid portion of the sentence be permitted to stand.

The actual judgment of the court was that the prisoner be confined at hard labor in the state penitentiary for a period named, and that was all; a designation of the penitentiary was mere matter of description.

If the sentence is wrong it does not authorize a reversal of the judgment and a new trial.

Territory v. Conrad, 1 Dak. 363; Brantley v. State, 87 Ga. 149; People v. Harrington, 75 Mich. 112; Herrington v. State, 87 Ala. 1; Ex parte Shaw, 7 Ohio St. 81; Ex parte Van Hagan, 25 Ohio St. 426; Ex parte McGehan, 22 Ohio St. 442; Isaacs v. State, 28 Md. 410; Armstrong v. People, 37 Ill. 459.

It was proper legislation to authorize the state board to select a place to be used as a penitentiary.

Brown v. People, 75 N. Y. 487.

Groesbeck, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error was convicted in the district court of Laramie county, Wyo., on the 22d day of January, 1891, of the crime of grand larceny. He was indicted for feloniously stealing, taking, carrying away, leading away, and driving away, eight head of neat cattle, of the property of the Swan Land & Cattle Company, and eighteen head of neat cattle, of the property of the Laramie River Cattle Company, in the said county of Laramie, each of the value of $15. He was sentenced by the court to imprisonment in the penitentiary for the term of eight years. The petition in error and transcript containing the journal entries and the bill of exceptions were filed in this court September 8, 1891, and the cause was heard and submitted at the present term. Under the rules of this court, criminal causes have the precedence over other causes on the docket, and this cause is therefore determined in advance of other causes submitted. The assignments of error are disposed of hereafter in what seems to be their proper order.

1. The motion for a new trial was not filed within the statutory time, as it was filed five days after the verdict of the jury was rendered, instead of within three days thereafter, as required by the statute, which reads as follows: "An application for a new trial shall be by motion upon written grounds, which shall be filed at the term the verdict is rendered, and except for the cause of newly discovered evidence material for the party applying, which he could not with reasonable diligence have discovered and produced at the trial, shall be filed within three days after the verdict was rendered, unless additional time be granted by the court upon good cause shown." Wyoming Rev. Stat. § 3348, as amended by chapter 78, Sess. Laws 1890. The motion does not seek a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, but upon error of law occurring at the trial, nor does any reason appear, either in the motion or in the record, why this motion was not seasonably filed, nor was there any application made to the trial court for additional time in which to file it. Even when additional time is asked to file such a motion the applicant must show reasonable grounds for the delay and the necessity for the delay, and, further, that substantial reasons exist, in the interests of justice, requiring it. Bulliner v. People, 95 Ill. 394. No showing was made and no excuse was given for the delay. The rule is too firmly established to be shaken now, that the motion for a new trial must be made within the time fixed by statute, or all errors occurring at the trial are waived. A trial court may overrule the motion for the sole reason that it was not filed in time, and this may have been the ground upon which the motion was overruled. No reason for the denial of the motion is shown by the record, but this failure to comply with the imperative terms of the statute would certainly be ground for overruling it. Evansville v. Martin, 103 Ind. 206, 1 West. Rep. 196; Kent v. Lawson, 12 Ind. 675, 74 Am. Dec. 283; Bradshaw v. State, 19 Neb. 644; Ex parte Holmes, 21 Neb. 324; Osborne v. Hamilton, 29 Kan. 1; Hover v. Tenney, 27 Kan. 182; Lucas v. Sturr, 21 Kan. 480; Nesbit v. Hines, 17 Kan. 316; Barillett v. Feeney, 11 Kan. 593; Odell v. Sargent, 8 Kan. 80. We cannot, therefore, inquire into any matters occurring at the trial, because this motion was filed too late.

2. We agree with counsel for plaintiff in error that we should consider the motion to quash the entire panel of twenty-four jurors summoned to serve at the term. It was interposed before the trial began, and could not have been considered by the court during the trial or after it. It was unnecessarily embodied in the motion for a new trial, and must be considered independently of it, as the exception was taken at the proper time, and in due form, to the action of the trial court in disallowing or overruling the motion to quash the panel.

3. However, we cannot consider the facts set forth in the affidavit in support of the challenge to the array, purporting to be copies of the orders of the court below in relation to the dismissal and discharge of the regular panel of the petit jurors summoned for the term. The matters complained of in this respect, and the ordering and summoning of a new panel of petit jurors on an open venire, are presented only by this affidavit of the plaintiff in error. It purports to set out journal entries of the court, and these are authenticated only by the affidavit. The journal entries should have been certified by the clerk, or in case these were not full and explicit the facts should have been exemplified in the bill of exceptions certified by the trial judge or the court. We cannot substitute the authentication of the record by a party to a suit for the proper authentication of the clerk, judge or court. State v. Shaw, 5 La. Ann. 842; State v. Bruington, 22 La. Ann. 9; Ripley v. Coolidge, 1 Minor (Ala.) 11; State v. Millain, 3 Nev. 425. As there is no properly authenticated record of the court, showing its action in discharging the regular panel of the petit jury, and ordering a new one for service during the term, we must disregard the assignments of error predicated thereon.

4. In the challenge to the array of the petit jury objection is also made to the jury because it was exclusively composed of male persons. It is urged that the Constitution of this state requires that women, equally with men, shall be subject and eligible to jury duty, where they possess the same qualifications as men.

16 L. R. A.

Section 1 of article 6 of the Constitution provides that "the rights of citizens of the state of Wyoming to vote and hold office shall not be abridged or denied on account of sex. Both male and female citizens of this state shall equally enjoy all civil, political, and religious rights and privileges." Section 9 of article 1, (Bill of Rights) providing that the right of trial by jury shall "remain" inviolate in criminal cases, also provides that a jury in civil cases in all courts, or in criminal cases in courts not of record, may consist of less than twelve men, (not persons,) as may be prescribed by law. These provisions are borrowed from other constitutions, and were intended to maintain sacred and safe from legislative control the right of trial by jury already guaranteed. The provision relating to grand juries, found in the same section, is that such bodies may consist of twelve "men," nine of whom concurring may find an indictment, with power in the Legislature to alter, regulate, or abolish the grand jury system. It has been the settled law of this jurisdiction, ever since its organization, that male electors only were qualified to serve as jurors, although for that period women have been entitled to vote and hold office as well as men. At one time it was held by the nisi prius courts of the territory of Wyoming that women were competent jurors, but that ruling was speedily overturned by the same courts. The question was never passed upon by the supreme court, either state or territorial. We have not much doubt that women were not eligible as jurors under the territorial statutes, as the right to vote and hold office does not include the right, if right it may be termed, to serve as a juror. It is only when the Legislature, by an unreasonable exercise of its functions in prescribing the qualifications of jurors, impairs the right of trial by jury, that its acts are unconstitutional. The constitutional provision that the "right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate" means that the right of jury trial shall not be destroyed or annulled by legislation, nor so hampered or restricted as to make the provision a nullity. "It would be obviously incompetent for the Legislature to impose so many or such disqualifications as would restrict the number eligible to jury duty to a very small or select class; for this would substantially impair the right of trial by jury as it existed at the common law,—a thing which the foregoing provisions were designed to inhibit. Subject to this general reservation the enumeration of causes of disqualification has generally been left to the Legislature." Thomp. & M. Juries, §24. The difficulty arises in the construction and force of the last clause of section 1 of article 6, that "both male and female citizens of this state shall equally enjoy all civil, political and religious rights and privileges." Is jury service a right or privilege? The statute now in force restricts the qualifications to male citizens able to read and write the English language, having the qualifications of electors, and being of sound mind and discretion, and not being judges or clerks of any of the courts, sheriffs, coroners, jailers, or subject to any bodily infirmity disqualifying them for service as jurors, and not having been convicted of a felony. The statute exempts persons over sixty years of age, ministers of the gospel, county officers, licensed attorneys, practicing physicians, dentists, registered pharmacists, officers and employes of the United States government, firemen and militiamen in active service. Wyo. Sess. Laws 1890, chap. 35. This Act was passed prior to the admission of the state into the Union, and has not been altered or repealed. No provision has been made, then, by statute, for the admission of female electors to the jury box, unless the Constitution can be so construed as to confer the right without legislation. It may be that jury duty is no more a civil or political right than militia service, and that is by the terms of the Constitution restricted to able-bodied male citizens between certain ages, who have "no conscientious scruples averse to bearing arms." Wyo. Const. art. 17, § 1. It may be that jury duty is a right or privilege, that of assisting in the administration of justice, as it is put by some of the courts,—an important function of government, affecting the rights and interests of both sexes. We do not feel justified in deciding a question of such grave importance on the spur of the moment, and without a full argument. We do not find it necessary to do so in this case; for the plaintiff in error complains that, by the exclusion of women from the jury that tried him, he was not accorded the equal protection of the laws of this state, and was deprived of his rights, privileges, and immunities accorded to him under the provisions of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. He sought to have the cause removed to the Federal court for trial for this latter reason, and assigns this as error, also. He had no such right of removal, as the object of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution was against discrimination because of race or color, and not because of sex. "Its design was to protect an emancipated race, and to strike down all possible legal discriminations against those who belong to it." Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 810, 25 L. ed. 666. In this case the court said: "We do not say that within the limits from which it is not excluded by the Amendment a state may not prescribe the qualifications of jurors, and in so doing make discriminations. It may confine the selection to males, to freeholders, to persons within certain ages, or to persons having educational qualifications. We do not believe the 14th Amendment was ever intended to prohibit this." This was a cause where the removal from the state to the Federal court was granted. The plaintiff in error was a colored man indicted and tried for murder in the courts of the state of West Virginia, where he was convicted. He seasonably made his motion for removal of the cause to the Federal court, but was refused this by the state courts. The Supreme Court of the United States held that he was entitled to such removal, as the statute of the state restricted jury duty to whites. Such a statute was held to be a violation of the Amendment as the state law discriminated in the selection of juries against negroes, because of their color, and amounted to a denial of the equal protection of the law to a colored man put on trial for an alleged offense against the state. This decision was fortified by the later cases of Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 818, 25 L. ed. 667; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 839, 25 L. ed. 676; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 870, 26 L. ed. 567; Bush v. Kentucky, 107 U. S. 110, 27 L. ed. 354. These cited cases held that the removal should be granted under hostile statutes. They held also that discriminations against negroes on account of color, by officers charged with the duty of selecting jurors, would be corrected on error. But there appears to be no case where a white man has asked for a removal of a cause wherein he is a party, or its reversal on error, because a statute excluded other races than his own from a jury before whom he could be or is tried, or because officials charged with the duty of selecting or summoning jurors selected or summoned those of his own race only to serve as jurors in his cause. The right has, we believe, been always demanded by the citizen whose rights, or the rights of whose race, or color were infringed or discriminated against. No statute has been declared unconstitutional, no act held unlawful, because a white man was tried by his own race or color. In the case at bar the right of removal to the Federal court did not exist, because the discrimination under the Federal Constitution and under the Federal law was prohibited as against the African race, not as against female citizens.

If the plaintiff in error can complain, it is because the Constitution of this state, and not the Constitution of the United States, was violated in the exclusion of female citizens from the jury that tried him. It was said in the case of Strauder v. West Virginia, supra, that the very idea of a jury is that the body of men of whom it is composed are the peers or equals of the person whose rights it is selected or summoned to determine, and that they must be of the same legal status in society as that which he holds. The plaintiff in error asserts a right or privilege of having members of the opposite sex, as well as those of his own sex, to determine his rights, because they are unconstitutionally excluded from enjoying a right granted to them, and not because any one of his own sex is denied the right. If women have the right, if it is a right, to serve as jurors, and to "assist in the administration of justice," thereby, it seems that no one but a woman—one of the class or sex whose rights have been invaded—can assert that right. It must be demanded by one who has been denied the equal protection of the law, and a civil or political right or privilege of which she, in common with her sex, has been deprived. The courts will not listen to an objection made to the constitutionality of an Act by a party whose rights it does not affect, and who therefore has no interest in defeating it. Cooley, Const. Lim. 164. The Supreme Court of Kentucky has passed upon the question as to whether or not a white man could complain of a statutory exclusion of colored men from a grand jury that indicted him; and as the opinion is so pertinent on this point, we quote the same in extenso. "In Johnson v. Com., we held, in pursuance of authoritative decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, that a state law which excluded negroes from service on grand and traverse jurors would, if enforced, deprive colored persons of the equal protection of the law, and that such statute was therefore unconstitutional. We are now called upon to decide whether that statute deprives white persons of the equal protection of the law. In other words, whether a white person, indicted by a grand jury composed wholly of persons of the white race, can complain because negroes were excluded from the grand jury by which he was indicted. Only those who are prejudiced by an unconstitutional law can complain of it. Cooley, Const. Lim. 164."

In Marshall v. Donovan, 10 Bush, 681, Marshall, a white person, undertook to raise the question whether the exclusion of negroes from participation in the benefits of the common school system of the state was not a violation of the state Constitution. But the court refused to consider the question, because Marshall, being one of the favored race or class, could not raise it. The Act of the General Assembly which provided that only white persons should serve upon juries has been held to be unconstitutional because in the opinion of the supreme court the exclusion of negroes from juries on account of their race or color denied them the equal protection of the law, in contravention of the 14th article of Amendments to the Constitution of the United States. That conclusion was based on the ground that a race whose members are excluded from serving on juries is discriminated against as a race, and is not as well protected by the law as the race not so excluded. Surely, if this be true, it cannot be true that one belonging to the race not excluded, but from which the whole jury was required to be selected, can have been prejudiced by the fact that another race was excluded." Com. v. Wright, 79 Ky. 22, 42 Am. Rep. 208. See also Norman v. Boas, 85 Ky. 557.

The principle announced in these decisions governs the case before us. As a white man cannot urge as an infraction of his rights that the rights of another race have been assailed, so a member of one sex cannot complain because the members of another sex are denied the same rights as persons of his sex. The deprivation of the rights, privileges, or immunities of a class, race, or sex, which are guaranteed by the organic law, can only be determined in a proceeding instituted by one of the proscribed class, race, or sex, where relief may be given directly to the oppressed one in his suit and upon his demand. A woman must be on trial to demand the rights of her sex, or to assert that they have been unjustly or constitutionally discriminated against. A man cannot assert her right for her in his cause. He is not the party whose rights are affected, and he has no interest in defeating an unconstitutional or invalid law affecting those of the opposite sex. Without intimating, then, what our views might be as to the meaning and force of the constitutional provision providing that the members of both sexes should equally enjoy all civil, political and religious rights and privileges, when such a question is fairly and properly presented, without passing in this case upon the right, duty, or eligibility of female citizens to serve as jurors, where they possess the same statutory qualifications as men, without construing the various constitutional provisions bearing directly or remotely upon the matter; without attempting to say whether the constitutional provision conferring the right or privilege, if it is so conferred, requires legislation to clothe it with force and vitality,—we decide but this, and that is sufficient: that the plaintiff in error, a man, cannot claim that any civil, political, or other right or privilege of his or of his sex is infringed, invaded or annulled by a statute excluding members of the other sex from the jury which tried him, or which by its terms confines the selection of jurors trying him to those of his own sex. He has been tried by his peers. He has not been denied the equal protection of the law. He has not been discriminated against because of his sex. There was no error in the refusal of the trial court to order a removal of the cause to the Federal court, or in overruling the challenge to the array, because of the fact that the jury that tried the plaintiff in error was composed exclusively of members of his own sex, or in overruling the motion in arrest of judgment based on this ground alone.

5. A motion for the continuance of the cause was made on the ground of the absence of material witnesses for the defense, and this motion was overruled by the court. Such matters rest largely in the discretion of the trial court. The facts set forth in the affidavit for continuance do not show proper diligence. The witnesses who were absent at the trial all lived in Nebraska, and subpoenas were issued for them; but when this was done, or when they were served, does not clearly appear. Various reasons were given for their absence. One, a woman, was at the bedside of a sick child; another, a man, was attending a land contest; and the cause of the absence of the others was unknown. The testimony desired was either supplied by other witnesses at the trial, or was immaterial. The material testimony was cumulative; the same facts desired to be established having been testified to by witnesses who were examined during the trial. A continuance for the testimony of absent witnesses is properly denied if substantially the same testimony as that which is absent is offered at the trial. Hooper v. State, 29 Tex. App. 614; Duncan v. State (Tex. App.) 16 S. W. Rep. 753. When this motion for a continuance for the term was overruled a motion was made for a continuance for a reasonable time to enable the depositions of these absent witnesses to be taken, which was likewise denied. This is claimed as error, but no exception was taken to the ruling of the court thereon, and we will not consider this alleged error; yet the reasons here given for affirming the action of the trial court in refusing a continuance for the term may well apply to this ground of error.

6. The sentence and judgment of the court is in the following language: "It is therefore considered, ordered, and adjudged by the court that the said Kinch McKinney be imprisoned in the state penitentiary of the state of Wyoming, to wit, the Illinois state penitentiary, located at or near the city of Joliet, in the state of Illinois, and kept at hard labor, for a period of eight years." This is assigned as error on the ground that the court could not order the imprisonment of a convict at a prison located without the boundaries of the state, and beyond its territorial limits. This point was directly decided in the case of Kingen v. Kelley (Wyo.) 15 L. R. A. 177, after an exhaustive argument and a thorough examination by this court. We affirm the power of a district court, in that case upheld, to sentence a convict to a prison located beyond the state, as well as to change the place of imprisonment when authorized and required to do so by law, for the reasons there given.

We were not required to look into the evidence, but we have done so, although the record of the testimony is voluminous, though imperfect, as none of the maps or drawings submitted to the jury, and which were necessary to fix the location of ranges, fences, and boundary lines, are here. The locus of the crime was proven circumstantially, as the cattle alleged to be stolen were found in the neighboring state of Nebraska, with mutilated brands, and having the appearance of being recently and rapidly driven for some distance. In Laramie county, Wyo., the range of the cattle, they had been guarded thereon by line riders performing the duty of examining fences located in the vicinity of the boundary line between this state and Nebraska. The object in keeping them in Wyoming and out of Nebraska appears to have been to prevent violations of the herd law of the latter state. One witness testified that cattle were seen driven from this inclosed range into Nebraska in the direction of the ranch of plaintiff in error and that of Kingen, his codefendant, before the causes were separately tried. The defense claimed that the cattle might have drifted into Nebraska, and might have been taken and were taken there, or that there was no sufficient testimony on this point to overcome the presumptions in favor of the plaintiff in error on this proposition; but there was evidence of a quarrel between McKinney and Kingen, his partner or accomplice, overheard by a witness, in the course of which Kingen complained of and to McKinney that the latter had "always the best of the deal" whenever a drive was made from Wyoming. The evidence and all attendant circumstances show that these cattle were stolen by these parties from Laramie county, Wyo., with many others, their brands altered rather clumsily, and that these forays had been systematic, bold and extensive. The defense as to the ownership of the cattle was but feebly asserted. The finding of the jury was not against the weight of the evidence, but is supported by abundant testimony; and if we had the power to critically inspect it we could not disturb it. The instructions fairly present the law. The cause was on trial for seven days in the court below, and every point was fully and persistently contested.

The judgment of the District Court of Laramie county is in all respects affirmed.

Conaway and Merrell, JJ., concur.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT.

Alan WOOD, Jr.,

v.

Patrick McGRATH et al., Appts.

(.....Pa.....)

1. The power of municipal authorities over streets extends to the granting of permission to a private person to lay an underdrain therein from his premises without consent of other persons who own abutting lots as well as the soil of the street over which the drain runs.
2. An injunction against an alleged nuisance granted against a great preponderance of evidence will be reversed.

(July 13, 1892.)

APPEAL by defendants from a decree of the Court of Common Pleas for Montgomery County enjoining them from maintaining a drain in the highway adjoining plaintiff's premises. Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Messrs. N. H. Lazelere and M. M. Gibson, for appellants:

The municipality had the power to permit appellants to construct the drain.

Smith v. Simmons, 103 Pa. 32, 49 Am. Rep. 118; Susquehanna Depot v. Simmons, 8 Cent. Rep. 140, 112 Pa. 884.

To sustain an injunction the right at law, if not conceded, must be clear.

Cox v. Freedley, 83 Pa. 124, 75 Am. Dec. 584; Newville Road Case, 8 Watts, 174; Duncan v. Hollidaysburg & G. Iron Works, 26 W. N. O. 479.

There was no public nuisance. It is, if anything unlawful, a mere private trespass. There NOTE.—Power of municipality to authorize use of highway for private drain.

There has to a greater or less extent been a custom to allow persons to lay private drains in the streets, by the municipal authorities. See Kosmak v. New York, 117 N. Y. 367.

Laying a drain in an alley to connect a house abutting thereon with a public sewer in an adjoining street is a proper use of it. McElhones' App. 11 Cent. Rep. 362, 118 Pa. 606.

In Cone v. Hartford, 28 Conn. 375, the court said there is no doubt that the common council is not authorized to construct drains for mere private convenience or benefit of certain individuals.

16 L. R. A.

Authority to construct sewers whenever the public good requires it does not give the common council power to permit the construction of a private sewer along a public street; at least, where it is not intended to communicate with a public drain. Hutchinson v. State, 59 N. J. Eq. 572. See also Glasby v. Morris, 18 N. J. Eq. 72.

The commissioners of highways have no right to grant the privilege of placing a tiled drain along a public highway, it being an additional burden and servitude on abutting lands. Murray v. Gibson, 21 Ill. App. 491.

H. F. F.

was no attempt to prove any damage, let alone irreparable injury. No decree should be made to be followed by injunction unless irreparable injury be already established.

Lewis v. Jones, 1 Pa. 536, 44 Am. Dec. 188; Minzig's App. 82 Pa. 377.

Unless it be a strong and mischievous case of pressing necessity, or the right has been previously established at law, a party cannot ask for an injunction.

Richard's App. 57 Pa. 113, 98 Am. Dec. 203.

Messrs. James B. Holland and Henry Freedley, for appellee:

The master found that this drain was laid over and on the property of the plaintiff, Alan Wood; that it is a continuing trespass not abatable by the act of the party; that it is a private nuisance. These being facts found by the master and approved by the court below, this court will not reverse unless it be flagrant error.

Cox's App. 12 Cent. Rep. 294, 120 Pa. 106.

There can be no question of the jurisdiction of equity; for the restraint of continuing trespasses and nuisances are branches of equity jurisdiction coeval with the court.

Goodson v. Richardson, L. R. 9 Ch. App. Cas. 221; Sterling's App. 2 Cent. Rep. 49, 111 Pa. 35; Earley's App. 121 Pa. 496; Reading Iron Works v. Boro. 3 Lanc. L. Rev. 107; Bispham, Eq. 484; Angell, Watercourses, §§ 443, 447; Scheetz's App. 85 Pa. 88; Morgan's App. 25 W. N. C. 582.

As to the right of the courts to grant equitable relief for a trespass on a street where the abutting owner's deed describes to the side, see Ferguson's App. 10 Cent. Rep. 811, 117 Pa. 426.

While the borough authorities have full power to use the streets for the purpose of drainage, either above or under ground, and in the exercise of this power to adopt and construct public sewers, they cannot delegate this power to an individual and enable him to adopt and construct a system of his own and for his own benefit against the wishes or over the property of his neighbor.

Goodson v. Richardson and Sterling's App. supra.

Green, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

It was certainly proved, and not contradicted, at the hearing of this case before the master, that the borough council gave permission to the defendant James A. McGrath to construct the drain in question. In so far therefore, as it was in the power of council to authorize the digging and laying of the drain, the act of the defendant in doing so was a lawful act. The power of the council to dig up the surface of the streets of the borough, and to build sewers and drains, or to lay water or gas pipes thereunder, is ample under the borough charter, (Act May 15, 1850, Pub. Laws, p. 1051,) and the supplement thereto, (Act March 22, 1870, Pub. Laws, p. 522,) and is not contested by the plaintiff. But it is strenuously contended by the plaintiff, and it was decided by the master and the court below, that this right of the council is limited to public purposes only, and may not be exercised in favor of an individual citizen for a private purpose. So far as this contention alone is concerned, it has been disposed of by the decision of this court in the case of Smith v. Simmons, 103 Pa. 32, 49 Am. Rep. 113, in which we held that it was competent for the authorities of a borough to grant permission to a citizen to dig up a street of the borough for the purpose of laying a water pipe to lead water from a spring to his private house, and that the digging of the necessary ditch in the street for that purpose was not per se a nuisance. Our Brother Gordon, in a full discussion of the subject, said, in the course of the opinion: "If the ditch dug for, and at the instance of Dr. Smith was a public nuisance, then he and all engaged in sinking it were responsible for all damages resulting from it. . . . But we do not think it was per se a nuisance,—such a work that the borough council had no power to permit. This ditch was dug for the purpose of laying a pipe for the conveyance of water from a spring to one of the defendant's houses on Willow street. . . . In these days, when waterworks are common to all the larger towns, pipes are laid in the streets from which the water supply is drawn, both for public and private uses, and although the right thus to lay pipes is usually accorded to a corporation, it by no means follows that it might not be done by private persons acting under municipal authority. Necessity, as was held in the case of Com v. Passmore, 1 Serg. & R. 217, justifies many actions which would otherwise be nuisances. No one has the right to throw wood or stones in the street at his pleasure, nevertheless, as building is necessary, building material may be laid therein for a reasonable time and in a convenient manner. So may a merchant occupy the street with his goods; in like manner may the common highways be temporarily opened for the purpose of building vaults under them, or under like regulations, private drains may be connected with the common sewers or gutters, or houses and other buildings with the streets, by alleys, doorsteps, and the like. By such things as these and many others, which are justified by necessity or custom, may public highways be occupied temporarily or permanently, and it would be strange, indeed, if, in the face of all this array of precedents a private citizen, acting under municipal license, could not, without committing a public nuisance, lay a water-pipe along a street to his house." This doctrine was repeated in the case of Susquehanna Depot v. Simmons, 113 Pa. 384, 3 Cent. Rep. 140, in which we said: "It is settled that the defendant [the borough] had the right to grant the license to dig the ditch complained of; in this it did nothing unlawful."

The reasoning and the decisions in these two cases are entirely satisfactory to us: so much so that we do not think it necessary to repeat the reasoning or to vindicate the judgments. But it is too plain for argument that, if a borough has the power to grant to an individual the right to lay a water-pipe in the streets for his exclusive use, it must also, by parity of reasoning, possess the entirely similar power to grant permission to a citizen to lay a drain pipe in the streets to lead off the surplus or refuse water from his building. The objection in the latter case is that the streets can only be used for public purposes, and not for those which are private. But that objection would have required us to deny the private use in the Simmons Case. It is perfectly plain that the municipal power to grant the license cannot exist in the one case, unless it also exists in the other. The learned court below, in their opinion, thought that the doctrine in the Simmons Case was not applicable in this, because in that case there was no private abutting owner involved in the contest, and the right of such owner was not adjudged. But the least consideration will show that the right of a private abutting owner has nothing to do with the question. It is the extent of the municipal authority to grant the use of the street for a private purpose that is alone in question, and that authority does not depend in any degree upon the will of the abutting owner. If the power exists at all it exists as a function of the municipal authority, and is in no sense an emanation of the will of the abutting owners.

The conclusion, both of the master and court below, was based upon the idea that the abutting owner is the owner of the fee of the land occupied by the street, and the laying of a drain pipe under the street without his consent is an evasion of his right as owner of the land. How fallacious this proposition is, is at once apparent when it is considered that the right of the public in the streets of cities, boroughs, and towns is far more extensive than the mere right to use the surface of the land for the purpose of passage. It is beyond all question that, in the municipal organization referred to, the governing authority possesses just as clear a right to make use of the subsoil as of the surface, for very many purposes for which the surface is not, and, ordinarily, cannot be, used except with great inconvenience. It may undoubtedly, either by itself, or by its delegated authority to others, dig up the soil to lay water pipes, gas pipes, sewers, drains, electric wires, telegraph and telephone wires, cables, and doubtless subterranean railways, every one of which uses is in direct and exclusive hostility to the abutting owners' right in the fee; and the grant of these privileges may be made, and is constantly made, to other corporations or associations without the least regard to the will or consent or property right of the adjoining owner. He is not consulted about such matters. He has no right to prevent such uses if the public authorities agree to it; in short, he is not the unqualified owner of the subsoil of the street; and the cases are most rare where he has the opportunity to avail himself of his reversionary right resulting from the abandonment of the highway. If the municipality, or any locum tenens thereof, desired to lay water pipes, gas pipes, sewers, or drain pipes in the subsoil, he has no right to compensation on account of such use, nor can he intervene in the courts to prevent it. He has no title which will enable him to do so. The argument on the part of the plaintiff proves too much. It denies entirely the right of the borough to allow a private owner, along a street which has no drain, to connect with a drain of another street, unless the consent of all intervening owners be obtained. In many towns and boroughs of the commonwealth the pipe and drains and sewers are not laid on all the streets, but on a few of the principal streets. It follows from the contention of the plaintiff that all citizens owning properties on the side streets which have no pipes or drains, cannot obtain their gas or water, and cannot connect with the sewers and drains, because the municipal authorities cannot give them permission to do so. This certainly is not the law, and it is opposed to the only decisions we have on the subject. Nor is there any good reason for holding such a doctrine. The streets and alleys of cities, towns, and boroughs are under the control and direction of these municipalities, and they have all the power over them that can lawfully exist. They are the universally recognized channels of communication between the different parts of the municipal territory, and no private interest in, or ownership of, the subsoil is permitted to interfere with the free use of both the surface and the subsoil by the municipal authorities or by their delegated substitutes. Any other doctrine would entirely frustrate all beneficial uses of the public streets and alleys of the cities, towns, and boroughs of the commonwealth. It is clear, therefore, that the adjoining owners have no interest in the subsoil of the street which will enable them to demand that their consent must be obtained before any uses of the subsoil of the streets can be made. It does not lie with them to say they admit that the borough authorities can use them for all public purposes, but cannot permit their use for the same kind of a purpose by a private citizen, because we have already decided that they can do so; and if the use permitted is of the same kind, to which the surface or subsoil of the streets may be devoted, they have no more right to object in the one case than in the other. Having determined the question of the power of the borough to grant permission to the defendants to lay the drain in question, the next subject requiring consideration is whether a nuisance to the plaintiff has been produced by the use of the drain, such as is remediable by injunction. After the drain has been in use nearly a year, one of the tenants of the plaintiff made complaint of it to the plaintiff, who thereupon informed the defendants of the complaint, and requested them to remove the outlet of the drain, which they accordingly did within a few days after receiving the notice. They extended the drain to Sansom street, which was an open surface drain to the river for the surface drainage of that part of the borough. After that no further complaint was made by the plaintiff's tenants. It is, of course very clear that no injunction can now be granted against the maintenance of the discharge from the drain in front of the house occupied by Mrs. Tierney, as it was removed before the bill in this case was filed and that cause of complaint had ceased to exist. But whether before or after the removal of the mouth of the drain, and especially after, the testimony in the cause is entirely insufficient to warrant the granting of any injunction. After the removal, the overwhelming weight of the testimony is against the existence of any nuisance on account of the drain, and in our judgment, the case is brought within the class of decisions which hold that an injunction to restrain a nuisance will not be granted in a doubtful case, or until after the plaintiff has established his right to relief in an action at law.

In Rhea v. Forsyth, 37 Pa. 508, 78 Am. Dec. 441, where the subject of granting injunctions to restrain private nuisances was most fully considered, we said (Woodward, J.): "From these and many more authorities which might be cited to the same effect, it is apparent that where the plaintiff's right has not been established at law, or is not clear, but is questioned on every ground on which he puts it, not only by the answer of the defendant, but by proofs in the cause, he is not entitled to remedy by injunction. It is not enough that he is able to produce some evidence of his right, when there is conflicting evidence that goes to the denial of all right. In a case so situated, the plaintiff should first establish his right in an action at law, and then come into chancery, if necessary, for the protection of the legally established right." In New Castle v. Raney, 180 Pa. 548, 6 L. R. A. 737, a case far stronger in its proofs than the present, we reversed a decree granting an injunction to restrain a nuisance, and dismissed the plaintiff's bill, with costs. It was alleged, and the master and court below found, that a milldam and pool had become a public nuisance by reason of the emptying of cess-pools into it, and an injunction was granted to abate the dam. Mr. Chief Justice Paxson, in the course of his opinion, said: "We do not question the power of a court of equity to restrain and abate public nuisances. This is settled by a line of decisions. But the authorities uniformly limit the jurisdiction to cases where the right has first been established at law, or is conceded. It was never intended, and I do not know of a case in the books, where a chancellor has usurped the functions of a jury, and attempted to decide disputed questions of fact, and pass upon conflicting evidence in such cases. . . . But, as before observed, this milldam is not a nuisance per se. Whether it is a nuisance at all depends upon the testimony, and that is conflicting. . . . Heretofore the jurisdiction of equity has been confined to nuisances per se, or when the right is clear, or has been settled by the verdict of a jury. We think it better to adhere to the beaten track." In the still more recent case of Munday v. Moore, 133 Pa. 598, the same doctrine was applied, and we again reserved a master's report and decree of the court below granting an injunction to restrain a private nuisance. Our Brother Mitchell in stating the rule applicable in such cases said "that damage which is imminent and irreparable, or is not capable of adequate compensation in money, may be enjoined without waiting for the process of law, is not intended to be questioned, but the right must be clear, and the facts upon which it rests uncontested." He then reviews the testimony, and shows that it presented only a doubtful case at the best, and therefore the remedy by injunction was inapplicable, and could not be allowed.

16 L. R. A.

If we examine the testimony in the present case, we find that such annoyance as was sustained by the drain as at first constructed was remedied by the act of the defendant, and after that the annoyance ceased. This is proved by the plaintiff's witness Mrs. Tierney. One other witness for the plaintiff, William F. Smith, said he noticed an offensive odor once after the extension was made, but that was the only time, though he had passed up and down fifty times or more. George W. Evans, another of plaintiff's witnesses, testified that he had noticed an offensive odor when his attention had been called to it by Mrs. Tierney, but that was before the extension of the drain. He was asked: "Question. Have you ever smelled anything as the gutter is constructed now? Answer. No, sir. Q. The time that you alluded to is the time before the drain was extended? A. Yes, sir. Q. How long ago was that? A. I think the drain was extended some time last fall,—about last September. Q. Since that time there has been no trouble? A. No, sir." The plaintiff testified that he noticed an offensive odor once before the drain was extended, but said nothing as to how it was after the extension. Alfred Craft, also examined by the plaintiff, testified that Mrs. Tierney complained two or three times about the smell before the extension, but not afterwards, and that he himself had never smelled any disagreeable smell there. This was the whole of the plaintiff's testimony, and it proves that, excepting Smith's testimony, the only smell that was offensive was before the extension, and that by only three witnesses, one of whom, the plaintiff, only noticed it once. It also proves that after the extension only one witness, Smith, ever noticed it, and that was upon one occasion only out of fifty or more times when he passed the mouth of the drain. Against this testimony the defendants examined seven witnesses, the most of whom lived close by the mouth of the drain, and who passed by it almost every day, and all of whom testified they had never discovered any offensive smell there, and were not in the least disturbed by it. William McLaughlin, who lived three doors from the mouth of the drain where it emptied into Sansom street, and had lived there always from the time the drain was first laid, was asked: "Question. Well, now, have you ever been disturbed by any obnoxious smells or odors from that drain? Answer. No, sir." Having said he made some complaint to Smith about his own waste pipe getting stopped up, he said: "I never made complaint about the stench, because I was never annoyed by anything of that kind. Question. And, as I understand you, during all the time you lived there you had no cause?

Answer. No, sir. Q. What runs out of this pipe? A. Never saw anything, except clear water. Q. You very frequently saw it? A. Yes, sir, I have often seen it when no water was coming out of it at all,—for days at a time.” William Sommers, who lived on the opposite side, at the corner of Fayette and Elm streets, and knew when the drain was put in, and when the extension was made, was asked: “Question. Did you see or smell any bad effects from it? Answer. I never did. I inspected it once when it was at the upper end, at the corner of Elm and Fayette. There was no water running, and no offensive smell.” Brinton Woodward was asked: “Question. You know where this drain was put in? Answer. Yes, sir, I saw it put in. Q. Have you frequently seen the mouth of the drain? A. Yes, sir, I have visited it. Q. Well, describe its condition. A. Well, its condition is good. I never could find anything offensive about it. I have looked at the mouth of it several times. I never saw anything coming out of it.” Joseph Kindrigen testified that he was burgess one year, and that Smith made complaint to him about the drain, and they went and examined it together, and found no water coming down, and several times after he examined it, and still found no water coming down, and that all he saw was that there were some dead leaves that were caught at the mouth of the drain. He also said that Smith’s complaint was the only one that was ever made. James Tracy said his store was right on the corner of Elm street and Sansom alley, just across the street from the mouth of the drain; that he saw it every day going to his store. He was asked: “Question. What do you notice of its condition? Answer. When it rains I have not seen much water come out of it. Q. What odors have you noticed coming from it? A. I have never noticed any. Q. What complaints have you heard as to its condition? A. I have never heard anybody complain, that I know of.” John Crimeau was a member of town council, and chairman of the street and road committee, and testified that council gave permission to McGrath to lay the drain, and that he superintended the digging of it himself, and that it drains the rain water from the hotel and two new houses and a hotel shed into the old well under the pavement, and from there, when it overflows, down to the mouth of the drain. He said there was another well on the premises that was used for the overflow of the house and water-closets. He was asked: “Question. Have you noticed the condition of the mouth of this drain at any time? Answer. I never saw anything come out of the drain pipe except water, and that was on two different occasions after very heavy rains. Q. What was the odor of the water? A. Nothing. Q. How often do you go by the mouth of the drain? A. Sometimes seven or eight times a week; never less than three or four times a week.” James A. McGrath, one of the defendants, testified that only rain water and water from the house ran into the old well, and that none of the offensive matter from the water-closets went into it, a separate well being provided for it.

Now, the important point of time to be considered in adjudging this case is the time after the extension, and as to that but a single witness testified to ever having perceived any offensive odor escaping from the mouth of the drain, and that was but once out of fifty or more times that he passed it. All the other witnesses, both for plaintiff and defendants, make no complaint of it after the extension; and a part of the plaintiff’s witnesses, and all of the defendants’, testify that after the extension there was no offensive odor or discharge from the drain. It is almost needless to say that in this state of the testimony the case of the plaintiff is worse than doubtful, and the great preponderance of the testimony against the allegation of nuisance requires that the bill should be dismissed on the merits. We are of the opinion that it was grave error to award an injunction in such case, and that it is our duty to correct it by reversing the decree of the court below, as we now do.

The decree of the court below is reversed, and the bill is dismissed, at the cost of the plaintiff.

TEXAS SUPREME COURT.

Theodore ROTHSCHILD et al., Appls.,

v.
Annie M. DOUGHER.

(.....Tex.....)

A notary who is the trustee in a deed of trust cannot take an acknowledgment thereto.

(June 25, 1892.)

A PPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the District Court for El Paso County in favor of complainant in a suit brought to restrain the sale of certain property under a trust deed. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—Validity of acknowledgment of deed of trust taken by trustee.

The doctrine of the principal case that the acknowledgment of a deed of trust taken by the trustee is void, and that the deed is to be treated as an unacknowledged deed, is supported by the following authorities in addition to those cited in the opinion: Stevens v. Hampton, 48 Mo. 404; Dall v. Moore, 51 Mo. 589; Black v. Gregg, 58 Mo. 565; Bowden v. Parrish, 86 Va. 67.

16 L. R. A.

The reason assigned is that taking an acknowledgment is a judicial act and the trustee disqualified to perform it on account of his interest, which vitiates his act, although he is interested only to the extent of his commissions.

The taking of the acknowledgment of a deed of trust by the trustee avoids the acknowledgment as to all grantors, and where a valid acknowledgment by a married woman is essential to the validity of the deed her acknowledgment so taken vitiates the

Messrs. Davis, Beall & Kemp, for appellants:

The deed of trust is not invalid because acknowledged by the wife before a notary named in the instrument as trustee.

We recognize as correct the general rule that "an officer cannot take the acknowledgment of a deed in which he is interested" but, applying the reason of the rule, this is because of his interest, and not because he merely appears as a party—as in this case—neither claiming, nor having any interest that he could claim, under the instrument itself.

In the case of Brown v. Moore, 38 Tex. 648, the court held a similar instrument inoperative because "the trustee was interested in the conveyance to the extent of his commissions.

In Sample v. Irwin, 45 Tex. 578, it was held that an acknowledgment was improperly made before a notary who was the agent of the firm for whose benefit the deed was made.

In Titus v. Johnson, 50 Tex. 286, Judge Moore, speaking of the doctrine announced in the two foregoing cases says: "And this we think is as far as this court has ever gone or can, consistently with sound principles or due regard to public policy be asked to go."

The principle does not apply here, "that a grantee in a deed, or a beneficiary under it, is not allowed to take an acknowledgment of the deed by the grantor."

Davis v. Beasley, 75 Va. 491.

All the cases bearing on the question in issue turn upon the interest, expressed or presumed, of the trustee taking the acknowledgment, under the deed itself, or, as in a few cases (Withers v. Baird, 82 Am. Dec. 757, note), on the theory that the act of taking an acknowledgment is quasi judicial and an officer ought not to act "as a judge in his own cause."

In Bouden v. Parish, 86 Va. 67, the acknowledgment was held invalid because "the trustee was interested at least to the extent of his commissions." In the present case there were no commissions.

Gaines, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was brought by Annie M. Dougher, joined by her husband, against W. M. Chandler, trustee, Theo. Rothschild, substitute trustee, and Charles Jacobs & Co., beneficiaries in a certain deed of trust executed by the plaintiffs, to enjoin the sale under the power in the deed of certain real estate, the property of the wife. Chandler, the original trustee, having declined to make the sale, Rothschild was appointed by the beneficiaries as his substitute, and at the institution of the suit had advertised the property for sale. The deed in trust was accompanied by the privy acknowledgment of Mrs. Dougher, but it was taken before W. M. Chandler as notary public, who is the same person that is named as the original trustee in the instrument. Upon this ground the court below held the deed in trust void, and entered a decree perpetuating the injunction. There were other grounds upon which the validity of the proposed sale was attacked, but the conclusion at which we have arrived renders it unnecessary to consider them.

The precise question here presented has never been passed upon in this court, unless it was in the case of Brown v. Moore, 38 Tex. 648. In the deed of trust under consideration there is no express provision allowing the trustee any compensation for executing the trust. In the case referred to the report does not make it clear whether the instrument which was there held void contained such express provision or not. We would infer from the statement of the case that it did not. But the court, in the opinion, says: "The trustee was interested in the conveyance to the extent of his commissions, and was therefore incompetent as an officer to take an acknowledgment of the deed." Whether the court determined that a trustee was entitled to compensation in the absence of an express provision in the deed allowing it, or whether they understood the deed as containing such express stipulation, it is impossible to say. But in either event, if we should hold that without such stipulation a trustee is entitled to remuneration for his services in making the sale, the decision would be in point, and would be decisive of the question before us. But we are not prepared to so hold; and, leaving that point undecided, we will treat the question before us from the other standpoint. Conceding, for the sake of the argument, that the trustee would not have been entitled to compensation for his services in making the sale, the question is, Did he, in that case, have the power to take the wife's acknowledgment to the deed of trust? We think the case of Sample v. Irwin, 45 Tex. 567, approaches very nearly a decision of the question. In that case the notary who took the acknowledgment of the deed of trust had signed it as agent of the beneficiaries, and for that reason the acknowledgment was held void. The court, in the opinion, says: "If the fact of agency raises a presumption of pecuniary interest, the case of Brown v. Moore is in point. But, whether such be the presumption or not, we think that one who identifies himself with the transaction, by placing his name on the face of the instrument as the avowed agent of one of the parties, is not competent to give it authenticity as an officer."

A party to a deed is generally held incompetent as to her. Barrett v. Tracewell, 21 W. Va. 636, 686.

In Kentucky only county clerks and their deputies are authorized to take acknowledgments and it is there held that the Legislature intended to make the taking of acknowledgments a mere ministerial act, and that, therefore, an acknowledgment of a deed before a county clerk in which he is himself the vendee is valid. Stevenson v. Brasher (Ky.) 11 Ky. L. Rep. 799.

It is said in Lynch v. Livingston, 6 N. Y. 422, 434, that the act of taking and certifying the acknowledgment of a deed is a mere ministerial act but the decision was that it is not such a judicial act that the relationship of the officer to one of the parties which would disqualify him from acting as a judge or juror in an action between the same parties would not vitiate an acknowledgment taken by him.

An acknowledgment of a deed of trust taken by the cestui que trust is void. Wasson v. Connor, 64 Miss. 351; Groesbeck v. Seeley, 13 Mich. 329, 345.

J. G. G.

petent to take the acknowledgment of the grantor. The officer who took the acknowledgment of the mortgagors in the present case is a party to the conveyance. In form, at least, the instrument purports to convey the lot to him in trust, in order to secure the payment of the debt of the beneficiaries. Whether he have any pecuniary interest or not, he is identified with the transaction. We think it safe to hold that a party to a deed or mortgage is not competent to take the acknowledgment of the instrument. It is insisted, however, that because Chandler, the original trustee, declined to act under the instrument, and refused to make the sale, he was not a party to the deed of trust, and therefore was not disqualified to take the acknowledgment of the mortgagors. If it had appeared especially upon the instrument itself that he had declined to accept the trust before the acknowledgment was taken, the point would have been worthy of serious consideration. But when he took the wife's acknowledgment he was bound to know the contents of the instrument, and that he was the trustee in it, and yet it does not appear that he declined in any manner to accept under it. The presumption is that he did accept, and we therefore think that he was not competent to take the acknowledgment at the time it was taken, and that his subsequent refusal to act did not cure the original want of authority. If the deed of trust had been upon land not the separate property of the wife, and hence not dependent for its effect upon a certificate of her privy examination and acknowledgment, and if attested by subscribing witnesses, it would have been good between the parties and all persons holding under them with notice, although the acknowledgment was invalid. Bennett v. Shipley, 83

Mo. 448; Dorst v. Gale, 83 Ill. 186. But being a mortgage of the wife's separate estate, it is of no effect. In Dorst v. Gale, supra, the court says: "The trustees were empowered to act separately and in the alternative; that is to say, if by circumstances one became disqualified or was unable to act, another might act. The acknowledgment was taken by Grove, one of the parties named as trustees. This unquestionably rendered the deed void as to him; but we fail to comprehend how it affected the deed as to the other trustees. He and they had no community of interest, and his becoming disqualified had no tendency to disqualify them. But, aside from this, since the execution of the deed of trust is proved aliunde the acknowledgment, and the trustees had no beneficial interest in the trust, we are of the opinion that the proof of execution was sufficiency of the acknowledgment, so far as relates to the purposes of the case before us." In the last proposition we fully concur. But we will say, with due respect to the court whose opinion we quote, as we trust, that it seems to us the fact that one of the trustees took the acknowledgment did not make the deed any worse than it would have been without an acknowledgment. The fact, however, that the officer who took the acknowledgment was one of the trustees made the acknowledgment itself a nullity. And such, we think, was the effect of the same fact upon the acknowledgment to the deed of trust in the case now before us. To hold that a party to a deed is incompetent to take the acknowledgment of a party to it, we think a safe and salutary rule.

We find no error in the judgment, and it is affirmed.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT.

GRAND RAPIDS SCHOOL FURNITURE CO., Appt.,

HANEY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO.
et al.

(.....Mich.....)

An injunction may be granted to restrain defendants from using a decree in a patent case which they have obtained by fraud and collusion in any way or form to influence or threaten any person from purchasing articles from the complainant on the ground that the decree is an adjudication upon the merits as to the validity of the patent.

(July 28, 1892.)

A PPEAL by complainant from a decree of the Circuit Court for Kent County sustaining a demurrer to the complaint, in a suit brought to enjoin defendants from publishing statements to the effect that complainant was infringing defendants' patents, and from using an alleged fraudulent decree in furtherance of such claim. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.
Messrs. Taggart, Wolcott & Ganson, for appellant:

The better reason and the greater weight of authority sustain complainant, and recognize his right to relief by injunction.

Emack v. Kane, 84 Fed. Rep. 46; Casey v. Cincinnati Typo. Union No. 3, 45 Fed. Rep. 135.

A party cannot be required to remain quiescent and allow his property or property rights to be destroyed by the continuing wrongful acts of others, and await the slow and uncertain process of a suit for damages for his redress.

Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1855, note 2; Doty v. Martin, 83 Mich. 463; Payne v. Kansas & A. T. R. Co. 48 Fed. Rep. 546; Lewis v. Cocks, 90 U. S. 28 Wall. 470, 23 L. ed. 71; Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 180 U. S. 514, 33 L. ed. 1008;

NOTE.—Upon the question of the right to an injunction against false statements as to plaintiff's property or business, see Flint v. Hutchinson S. R. Co. (Mo.) 16 L. R. A. 248, and note.

Middleton v. Flat River Boom Co. 27 Mich. 538. See also Ryan v. Brown, 18 Mich. 212, 100 Am. Dec. 154; Koopman v. Blodgett, 70 Mich. 610.

The leading English cases upon the point of the jurisdiction of equity to restrain the circulation of threats of suit for infringement of patent are Rollins v. Hinks, L. R. 13 Eq. Cas. 855, and Azmann v. Lund, L. R. 18 Eq. Cas. 390 (In both of these cases injunction was granted). See also Kelley v. Ypsilanti D. S. Mfg. Co. 44 Fed. Rep. 19.

Messrs. Taggart & Denison for appellees.

Long, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The bill of complaint in this case alleges that the complainant is a manufacturing corporation, having its office and manufactory at Grand Rapids. That ever since its organization, in 1897, the defendants have been engaged in circulating thousands of circulars, containing the statement that the goods of complainant infringed a certain patent, and threatening to bring suit against any and all persons purchasing or using goods of the complainant's manufacture. These claims and threats were made in bad faith, and with full knowledge that the said patent was invalid, and that the complainant was in possession of facts and proofs sufficient to defeat any suit that might be brought for infringement of said patent. The said threats were made for the purpose of intimidating parties who were likely to be customers of the complainant, and had to a considerable extent accomplished their object; but no suits having been brought for infringement of said patent, the threats had lost their force, and hence a fraudulent and collusive suit had been instituted for the purpose of obtaining a decree which could be used to deceive and intimidate the public. Such decree had been obtained, and the defendants had begun to use it for the purpose aforesaid, and were intending to so use it continuously, and on a very large scale, to the great injury of the complainant's business, though the amount of such injury was very difficult to prove or determine by any accurate measure. The prayer of the bill is that the said defendants may be perpetually enjoined and restrained from stating, publishing, or claiming, in any manner, that the said decree is anything other or different from a decree obtained by collusion, and from claiming that it is an adjudication upon the merits as to the validity of the said Haney patent, and from using such decree in any way or form to influence or threaten any person or party against purchasing said school furniture manufactured and sold by the complainant. To this bill the Haney School Furniture Company, one of said defendants, filed a general demurrer, and, the case having come on to be heard upon said demurrer, the court held that the bill of complaint did not set up any facts giving a court of equity jurisdiction to grant relief and entered a decree sustaining the demurrer, and dismissing the complainant's bill. From this decree the complainant appeals to this court.

The English courts, by recent decisions, have exercised the injunctive jurisdiction to restrain injurious publications concerning property which operates as a slander of the owner's title, and libelous publications which are injurious to the plaintiff's business, trade or profession, and the wrongful use of a name by which the public would be misled, and the plaintiff injured in his business. Thus far, however, most of the American courts seem unwilling to follow the example of the recent English decisions, and decline to extend the jurisdiction, so as to restrain such torts as libels on business, slanders of title and the like. In Massachusetts the English decisions are expressly repudiated. Boston Distill Co. v. Florence Mfg. Co. 114 Mass. 69, 19 Am. Rep. 810; Whitehead v. Kitson, 19 Mass. 484.

Injunctions to restrain libelous publications concerning plaintiff's business were also refused in American Life Assn. v. Boogher, 8 Mo. App. 173; Mauger v. Dick, 55 How. Pr. 132; and Singer Mfg. Co. v. Domestic S. Mach. Co. 49 Ga. 70. In the case of Emack v. Kane, 34 Fed. Rep. 46, Judge Blodgett allowed the injunction. It appears that Kane issued and widely distributed circulars in which he claimed that Emack's goods infringed his patent. He stated that he should not sue Emack, but should bring suits against all customers of Emack, and collect royalty and damages from all of them. Judge Blodgett said: "The gravamen of this case is an attempted intimidation by the defendant of complainant's customers by threatening them with suits which defendant did not intend to prosecute. . . . If a court of equity cannot restrain an attack like this upon a man's business, then the party is certainly remediless, because an action at law in most cases would do no good, and his ruin would be accomplished before an adjudication could be reached." In the recent case of Casey v. Cincinnati Type. Union No. 3, 45 Fed. Rep. 135, the case of Emack v. Kane, supra, was cited and approved by Judge Sage. It appeared in the Casey Case that parties had conspired together to injure the complainant in his business. Circulars were gotten out and widely distributed, containing threats of pecuniary loss and injury to those who should do business with the complainant. The claim was made in that case, as in this, that equity had no jurisdiction, because the injurious publication was merely a libel on complainant's business, and, for any loss which the union inflicted, he had a plain and adequate remedy at law. Judge Sage remarked, however, that it is idle to say that such publications are nothing more than libels, and that the only remedy for the injury inflicted was an action at law; that, while they have certain characteristics of libels, they are more than libels, and there is no plain and adequate remedy at law for such injuries.

We think the bill in this case states a case materially different from the Massachusetts cases and the other cases holding that equity has no jurisdiction to restrain a libel. Here it is claimed and alleged in the bill that Elijah Haney and the Haney School Furniture Company entered into a conspiracy with defendant Bullard to obtain a decree in favor of Haney v. Bullard, which might and should be used by the conspirators to injure the complainant. The fact is recited that, in pursuance of such conspiracy, a bill was filed in the United States court for the eastern district of Michigan, and a decree obtained by fraud and collusion, for the purpose of benefitting the trade of the Haney School Furniture Company at the expense of complainant; that the defendants well knew the patent was invalid; and that the complainant was in possession of facts and proofs sufficient to defeat any suit that might be brought for the infringement of said patent. The prayer of the bill is, not that defendants be enjoined from making whatever claims they see fit concerning their patent, nor from threatening to bring suits, even though such threats be made in bad faith; but that the defendants be restrained from using a decree fraudulently and collusively obtained to the injury of complainant, and from claiming that such decree is an adjudication upon the merits as to the validity of such patent; or from using it in any way or form to influence or threaten any person or party against purchasing said school furniture manufactured and sold by complainant. The case, as stated in the bill, is certainly more than a mere claim for an injunction arising out of a libel of complainant's business. A conspiracy is claimed to have been entered into between the defendants for the very purpose of injuring the complainant, and that by such conspiracy a false and fraudulent decree was obtained, settling the rights of the Haney School Furniture Company to the patent, under which the complainant was and is operating; that the defendants are publishing to the world, and especially to the customers of the complainant, that such decree was valid, the defendants well knowing it to be false and fraudulent; and that, in any court where the complainant had the right to appear and be heard, it could establish the fact that such patent was absolutely void, and that Mr. Haney and the Haney School Furniture Company had no right under it, and that complainant was legally entitled to its use. Admitting that the weight of authority in this country is against the proposition that a court of equity has no jurisdiction by injunction to restrain the publication of a libel upon one's business, it is no answer to the questions here raised. The complainant has no adequate remedy at law, under the circumstances here stated. It cannot be said that it should lie by and wait the slow and uncertain processes of a suit for damages for its redress. Under the charge in the bill, which we must take as true, the complainant is rightfully operating under such patent, and it has no remedy adequate for the fraud and wrong perpetrated upon it, except as aided by a court of equity. The facts stated make a much stronger case than that of Casey v. Cincinnati Typo. Union No. 3, supra, calling for the aid of the injunctive power of a court of equity.

The decree of the court below must be reversed, with costs, and the demurrer overruled. The defendants will have twenty days to answer the bill.

The other Justices concurred.

OHIO SUPREME COURT.

Patterson A. REECE, Pf. in Err.,
v.

Charles H. KYLE, Assignee of James C.
McMillan.

(49 Ohio St.—)

- * An agreement between client and attorney by which, in consideration of an assignment to the attorney of a judgment obtained by him for the client, the attorney agrees to render legal services in an effort to collect the judgment, to advance costs and expenses in the first instance, one half to be repaid by the client in case of failure, and the net proceeds of the judgment, in case of success, to be equally divided, is not without consideration, nor unlawful on the ground of champerty, and if otherwise valid, will be enforced.

(June 20, 1892.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Greene County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to procure the cancellation of a contract by which a certain judgment had been transferred to defendant and to enjoin him from proceeding to enforce such judgment. Reversed.

* Head note by the COURT.

NOTE.—For a collection of authorities upon the subject of champertous contracts between attorney and client, see notes to Manning v. Sprague (Mass.) 1 L. R. A. 516; Gilman v. Jones (Ala.) 4 L. R. A. 113; Burnham v. Heselton (Me.) 9 L. R. A. 22, 16 L. R. A.

Statement by Spear, Ch. J.:

The action below was by the defendant in error, as assignee for the benefit of creditors, of one James C. McMillan against the plaintiff in error, brought to procure the cancellation of an assignment, executed by McMillan to Reece, of a judgment in favor of the former, against the West Hamilton Hydraulic Company, and to enjoin the prosecution of an action then pending in the court of common pleas of Hamilton county, which had been commenced by Reece, as assignee of the judgment, to enforce statutory liabilities against stockholders of the company.

The averments of the petition material to the present inquiry are, in substance, that at the date of the assignment to Reece, McMillan was insolvent, and that shortly thereafter he made a general assignment to plaintiff; that the pretended contract with Reece was without any consideration, paid or to be paid; that Reece was a practicing lawyer and well knew that any claim made against the stockholders would be contested by them, and that for the purpose of stirring up and maintaining a suit against the stockholders, he entered into the contract; that he caused an execution to issue on the judgment, which being returned unsatisfied, he then commenced an action in the common pleas of Hamilton county, against the company and the stockholders, for the purpose of enforcing stockholders' liability, which suit is pending, and that unless restrained, and the champertous agreement held to be void, Reece will appropriate to his own use the one half the net proceeds realized from the suit.

In his answer, Reece denied the improper motives and purposes charged. He also denied that the contract was without consideration, and averred that the assignment of the judgment was in consideration of his services therein, and for other valuable considerations, of which were the professional and legal services in obtaining the judgment, and that one half the expense of further proceedings to collect was to be borne by defendant in case nothing should be realized from the judgment.

A copy of the contract referred to is as follows:

"Xenia, Ohio, Nov. 9th, 1885.

"It is hereby agreed by and between James C. McMillan and P. A. Reece, that

"Whereas, in consideration of valuable legal services rendered and to be rendered, and one dollar and other good and valuable consideration from said P. A. Reece proceeding, the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged; and

"Whereas, said McMillan has this day assigned and transferred to said Reece a certain judgment obtained by said James C. McMillan against The West Hamilton Hydraulic Company (an incorporation duly incorporated under the laws of Ohio) and others defendants, in a certain suit had in the Butler county common pleas court, state of Ohio: Now, therefore, said Reece is to prosecute said judgment claim as may be expedient in his judgment and proceed to collect the same or so much thereof as may be practicable, and is to receive for his services therein, the one half of the net proceeds thereof, the other half of said net proceeds to be paid to said McMillan; said Reece to advance the amount necessary for expenses of the case; and one half of said expenses is to be repaid to said Reece in the event nothing is realized from said judgment. But, notwithstanding said McMillan was a stockholder in said company to the extent of one half of all the stock of said company during the time the said liability was incurred, the said McMillan is not to be made a party defendant to any proceedings to enforce or collect said judgment claim, nor in any way to be held liable for any part of said judgment.

"James C. McMillan,
"Patterson A. Reece."

Upon trial the circuit court found the contract without consideration, champertous and void, and adjudged that the same be canceled and held for naught. Motion for new trial being overruled, the case is brought to this court upon a bill of exceptions setting out all the evidence.

Messrs. Little & Spencer, Alfred Yaple and P. A. Reece, for plaintiff in error:

16 L. R. A.

The agreement was not illegal nor contrary to public policy.

There is no statute on the subject of champerty in Ohio.

There are but six cases bearing on the subject in the reports of our supreme court.

Key v. Vattier, 1 Ohio, 182, 143; Hall v. Ashby, 9 Ohio, 96, 99, 84 Am. Dec. 424; Weakly v. Hall, 13 Ohio, 174; Lewis v. Lewis, 15 Ohio, 715, 716; Reid v. Quigley, 16 Ohio, 445; Stewart v. Welch, 41 Ohio St. 483, 502.

The principles which can justly be deduced from them are that where the grantor either had: (1) good title (as here claim reduced to judgment); or (2) was assigned for a valuable consideration; or (3) where assignor was liable for his expenses and costs the contract was not champertous.

See the remarks of the court upon the question of champerty in Jeffers v. Lampeon, 10 Ohio St. 108.

Where a plea of champerty has been allowed to be made in a court of equity, it has always been allowed for the benefit and never to the injury of the original claimant or those rightfully claiming under him; the primary object of the court being the protection of the claimant or his judgment creditors, against the machinations of a champertor, and not as a means of shielding the claimant's debtors from paying their just debts.

Stewart v. Welch, 41 Ohio St. 485; Wright v. Tebbitts, 91 U. S. 252, 28 L. ed. 320; Wylie v. Coxe, 56 U. S. 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753, 1 Parsons, Notes & Bills, 218, 219; Knights v. Putnam, 8 Pick. 184.

Messrs. Charles H. Kyle, T. L. Magruder and Ramsey, Maxwell & Ramsey, for defendant in error:

The agreement was clearly champertous and void. It is immaterial that it was made to take the form of an assignment of the claim.

Stewart v. Welch, 41 Ohio St. 483, 484, syllabus 2.

Reece's agreement to advance the funds for carrying on the litigation would of itself make the agreement champertous.

Meeks v. Dewberry, 57 Ga. 263; Taylor v. Hinton, 66 Ga. 743; Stearns v. Feller, 28 Wis. 594; Thompson v. Reynolds, 78 Ill. 11; Coleman v. Billings, 89 Ill. 183; Coughlin v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 71 N. Y. 443; Million v. Ohnberg, 10 Mo. App. 432; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Johnson, 29 Kan. 218; Hutley v. Hutley, L. R. 8 Q. B. 112; Wald's Pollock, Cont. 295, and note.

In Meeks v. Dewberry, supra, it was held immaterial that the claim had been reduced to judgment, and that the champertous agreement was for the collection of the judgment.

The right of a court of equity is well established to cancel an illegal agreement at the suit of one of the parties before the unlawful purposes contemplated by the agreement have been carried out.

Congress & E. Spring Co. v. Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49, 26 L. ed. 347; White v. Franklin Bank, 23 Pick. 181; Debenham v. Or. 1 Ves. Sr. 276; Reynell v. Sprye, 1 DeG. M. & G. 660, 21 L. J. Ch. 633; Teppenden v. Randall, 2 Bos. & P. 467.

The following cases illustrate the principle in actions brought by or on behalf of corporations to undo ultra vires transactions, and to recover considerations paid thereunder:

Salomons v. Laing, 12 Beav. 877; Bryson v. Warwick & B. Canal Nav. Co. 4 DeG. M. & G. 711; Ernest v. Oroyadill, 2 DeG. F. & J. 175; Russell v. Wakefield Water Works Co. L. R. 20 Eq. 474; Atty-Gen. v. Daugars, 88 Beav. 621; Hardy v. Metropolitan L. & F. Co. L. R. 7 Ch. 427; Newcastle N. R. Co. v. Simpson, 21 Fed. Rep. 538; Knoxville v. Knoxville & O. R. Co. 22 Fed. Rep. 758; Auburn Academy v. Strong, Hopk. Ch. 378, 2 L. ed. 421; Mills v. Central R. Co. 41 N. J. Eq. 1; Chicago v. Cameron, 9 West. Rep. 507, 120 Ill. 447; Seirs v. Holchkiss, 25 Conn. 171, 65 Am. Dec. 557; Northwestern U. Packet Co. v. Shaw, 87 Wis. 660; Ashton v. Dashaway & Co. 7 L. R. A. 809, 84 Cal. 61; Green's Brice, Ultra Vires, 2d ed. 658.

Spear, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The real question is, whether or not the contract, as explained by the other evidence, is without consideration, illegal and void.

As a first step at the trial plaintiff sought to contradict and vary the terms of the written instrument by parol evidence, and for this purpose called McMillan, the assignor. The witness testified that he received no consideration whatever for the assignment of the judgment. In the light of his further testimony, it is fair to assume that he meant by this only that he received no money consideration, and that nothing was actually paid to him, for he proceeded then to state that the valuable services rendered and to be rendered, referred to in the agreement, formed no part of the consideration for the assignment. This statement, taken in connection with the whole testimony of the witness, is, after all, but an opinion—the stating of a conclusion of law. He stated further that the agreement was entered into on the afternoon of November 9, and that before noon of that day he had made a complete settlement with Reece, as the receipted bill would show. The bill referred to, which covers several pages, extends over four years of time, and contains a large number of items, is receipted thus: "Rec'd payment of all above accounts." This is a complete settlement of the items in the bill; it does not purport to be a settlement in full of all claims. Nor is it pretended that Reece had been paid his fees for obtaining the judgment save as appears by the bill. Among the items we find one of $10 which is a specific charge for services in the suit against the West Hamilton Company. It is possible that another charge of like amount is intended for services in this case, but if so, the two together would be an exceedingly meager charge, and wholly out of proportion to the probable work, and the amount involved. By reason of some misunderstanding, as it appears, Reece was not present at the trial. This left the plaintiff opportunity to give uncontradicted proof, and make the best case possible. Had McMillan been possessed of facts which would impeach the writing, as to services past and to come, it is presumed he would have stated them; at least nothing prevented. No proof was offered by defendant, and so we have a question upon the uncontradicted evidence of plaintiff. The proof actually made, we think, is not of that high character required to overcome the statements of the written agreement, signed by the parties, as to past and future services, and the presumption that, under all the circumstances as shown, there was, at the time, an understanding between them, that Reece still had an unsatisfied claim for services in procuring the judgment, and that he had such claim in fact.

This, then, was the situation. Reece had an unsatisfied claim for fees in obtaining a judgment for McMillan. His relation as attorney, as to that judgment, had not terminated. His claim gave him an equitable interest in the judgment, and a lien upon it. It was of uncertain value. McMillan was impecunious, and in fact, insolvent. He had not the means to then prosecute farther, and aside from that, was disinclined to do so because several stockholders of the Hydraulic Company were his relatives, and hence he wanted to dispose of the judgment. Reece was willing to take an assignment of it coupled with the obligation to proceed to enforce collection by action against the stockholders, within his discretion, at his own expense in the first instance, but if not made by the anticipated proceeding, then one half the expense to be repaid by McMillan, and the net proceeds, if successful, to be equally divided. The effect of the assignment, if legal, was to make them joint owners of the judgment, the legal title being in Reece. If the parties could not legally enter into such a contract, then the judgment of the circuit court is right; if they could, it should be reversed. There is no question of fraud as between debtor and creditor, nor of undue advantage, or bad faith between attorney and client, in the case; nor can we assume, considering the doubt as to the collectibility of the judgment, and the character of the proceeding which it would be necessary to prosecute and maintain in order to enforce it, that the contract was unreasonable.

The contract is assailed as being without consideration and champertous. If the agreement was illegal, because champertous, then there was no consideration, and the contract was void. So, there is at last but one question, and that is: "Will a promise by an attorney to render legal services in an effort to collect a judgment, for obtaining which the attorney has not been fully paid, and to advance costs and expenses in the first instance, one half to be repaid by the client in case of failure, form, as between attorney and client, a valid consideration to support an assignment of a judgment, the net proceeds of which are to be equally divided in case of success?"

Maintenance is defined to be an officious intermeddling in a suit that no way belongs to one, by assisting either party, to the disturbing of the community by stirring up suits; champerty, a species of maintenance, being a bargain with a party to divide the land or other matter sued for between them, if they prevail in the suit which the champertor undertakes to carry at his own expense; though if a man have any interest, however slight, in the subject of the matter about which the suit is to be brought, or is depending, the aid given has been held not to be maintenance. Statutes in relation to maintenance and champerty were first enacted in England at an early day. Additional legislation was found necessary during the reign of Henry VIII. It was common then for nobles and other powerful men to take transfers of pretended rights in action, especially of lands, from persons not in possession, and prosecute them, to the great oppression of the weak. Juries were made up in large part of the dependents of such men, and the processes of law were thus converted into engines of oppression. The Statute of 32 Henry VIII., chap. 9, recites that "the King our sovereign lord, calling to his most blessed remembrance, that there is nothing within this realm that conserveth his loving subjects in more quietness, rest, peace, and good concord, than the due and just ministration of his laws, and the true and indifferent trials and issues, as been to be tried according to the laws of his realm, which his most royal Majesty perceiveth to be greatly hindered and letted by maintenance, embracery, champerty, subornation of witnesses, sinister labour, buying of titles and pretended rights of persons not in possession, whereupon great perjury hath ensued, and much iniquity, oppression, vexation, troubles, wrongs and disinheritance hath followed among his most loving subjects, to the great displeasure of Almighty God, the discontentation of his Majesty, and to the great hindrance and let of justice within this his realm." The buying of pretended titles by those not in possession, and acts of champerty and embracery, were, by this statute, forbidden under penalty of sweeping forfeitures of lands, the one half to go to "the King, our sovereign lord," to relieve, it may be respectfully presumed, the "discontentation" referred to.

That there was necessity for such statutes, the history of that time, as gathered from Hume and other historical writers, as well as from law-writers, sufficiently shows. Hume says: "Instead of their former associations for robbery and violence, men entered into formal combinations to support each other in law-suits, and it was found necessary to check this iniquity by Act of parliament." And, speaking of the subject, Coke says: "Nothing in action, entry or re-entry, can be granted over, for so, under color thereof, pretended titles might be granted to great men, whereby right might be trodden down, and the weak oppressed." Rights in action were forbidden to be transferred "lest justice should fail and oppression result." But, as methods of judicial procedure improved, and a firmer and purer administration of justice was attained, and popular rights received wider recognition, the mischiefs complained of became less apparent, and the enforcement of such statutes became of less and less importance. Then followed judicial modifications and exception to the sweeping inhibition of the statutes. Exception was made where the person maintaining and the suitor stood in some social relation, as that of relatives by consanguinity or affinity, master and servant, or landlord and tenant. Other exceptions are adverted by Mr. Justice Buller, in Master v. Miller, 4 T. R. 340, 341 (1791), as follows: "It is laid down in our old books that for avoiding maintenance a chose in action cannot be assigned, or granted over, to another. The good sense of that rule seems to me to be very questionable; and in early as well as modern times, it has been so explained away, that it remains at most only an objection to the form of the action in any case. . . . It is curious and not altogether useless to see how the doctrine of maintenance has from time to time been received in Westminster Hall. At one time not only he who laid out money to assist another in his cause, but he that by his friendship or interest saved him an expense which he would not otherwise be put to, was held guilty of maintenance. Nay, if he officiously gave evidence, it was maintenance; so that he must have a subpoena, or suppress the truth. That such doctrine, repugnant to every honest feeling of the human heart, should be soon laid aside, must be expected. Accordingly a variety of exceptions were soon made; and amongst others it was held that if a person has any interest in the thing in dispute, though on contingency only, he may maintain an action on it. 2 Rolle, Abr. 115. . . . So an assignment of a chose in action has been held a good consideration for a promise, 1 Rolle, Abr. 29; [Loder v. Chesleyn], Sid. 213, and [Lewis v. Wallis], T. Jones, 222; and lastly, by all the judges of England, in Mouldesdale v. Birchall, 2 Wm. Bl. 820, though the debt assigned was uncertain. After these cases, we may venture to say that the maxim was a bad one, and that it proceeded on a foundation which fails."

Among the reforms in England may be mentioned the enactment of Statutes for the Limitation of Actions, the Statute of Frauds, the extension of the action for malicious prosecution, and that for awarding costs against unsuccessful parties, all which have been passed since the Acts relating to maintenance. These changes have contributed materially to the discouragement of groundless and vexatious litigation, and it has resulted that the law of maintenance, as originally understood and enforced in England, has been essentially modified, and is said by Story (Contracts, § 711,) "to be now confined to cases where a stranger, having no interest in the suit, improperly, for the purpose of stirring up litigation and strife, encourages others to bring actions, or make defenses which they have no right to make."—citing Lord Abinger, in Findon v. Parker, 11 Mees. & W. 675.

In several of the states of the Union statutes have been passed making maintenance in varying forms unlawful, while in other of the states the doctrine is scarcely recognized even by the courts. No statute similar to the English statutes has ever been enacted in Ohio. Champerty has, however, been the subject of judicial inquiry, and has been held to avoid contracts in which it was present. In Key v. Vattier, 1 Ohio, 182, the vice of the contract was that the attorneys were to save and keep the client harmless from all costs and charges, and no compromise was to be made except the attorneys join in it. In Weakly v. Hall, 18 Ohio, 167, the debt was released by the creditor to the debtor, after assignment by him under an agreement by which the assignee, not a lawyer, engaged to collect the claim in the assignor's name, to employ counsel, advance all money, procure bail, etc., reimburse himself for his allowances from the proceeds when collected, and receive a portion of the avails for his compensation, and the court held the release effectual, although suit had been commenced and money expended, in accordance with the contract. In Stewart v. Welch, 41 Ohio St. 483, by a divided court, it was held that a contract whereby the claim was assigned to Welch, who brought suit in his own name, could not be enforced, it appearing that the contract was made for the purpose of carrying on litigation without expense to and free from control of the assignor, who was to receive nothing except a share of the recovery.

It will be noted that there are important distinctions between these cases and the case at bar. In each case the suit was to be prosecuted wholly without cost or expense to the original owner of the claim, and it does not appear that the party maintaining the contract had any interest in or claim upon the cause of action other than that given by the assignment. So that, for the purpose of nullifying the contract between McMillan and Reece, we are asked to take a step in advance of previous decisions. Ought this to be done?

It is difficult, at best, to reconcile the strict law of maintenance and champerty with our ideas of the rights of property, and the right of the citizen to contract. Among the fundamental rights is the right to acquire, possess and dispose of property. The right of disposition necessarily inheres in the right of ownership. We are taught that a chose in action is as much property as a thing in possession, and that in this day the right to dispose of such property is as high and free from doubt as is the right to sell the horse or farm of which the seller has manual possession. And if one may lawfully dispose of such property why may he not dispose of it upon such terms as to him may seem advantageous?

That the consideration received by McMillan is a promise by Reece cannot be fatal to its legality. It would be conceded that McMillan might have assigned his judgment upon Reece's written agreement to dig a ditch, or plow a field, or build a house. So, too, Reece might have agreed to sell his legal services for a promise by McMillan for some labor or service on his part. And yet, while either can purchase of the other, there appears, under the early decisions, an insuperable objection to the valuable thing which each has, being the subject of barter between them. Upon reason, the objection would seem to lack substance. It has been based upon grounds of public policy.

16 L. R. A.

Of course, if a proposed contract is clearly against public policy the courts will say it cannot be entered into. But why, applying this test, should we limit the subject of contracts for compensation otherwise than by discriminating against transactions which are prohibited by statute, or are immoral, or hurtful, in their nature, in the sense of contravening some established interest of society? That contracts similar to the one at bar were regarded dangerous three or four hundred years ago is not a powerful reason for so regarding them now, when we consider that social conditions, and the law in other important respects, have undergone radical changes. Fortunately the condition of society to day is on a higher plane than in the chaotic times of Henry VIII., our judicial methods are more enlightened, and the day of combinations among the powerful to oppress the weak in the courts has gone by.

It will be borne in mind that great scrutiny was given in England to the acts of counselors and attorneys, because of the peculiar relation which the law placed those officers in with regard to their clients. The former were incapacitated to make any contract for compensation with the client, though he might accept a gratuity, while the latter might make such contract only as the law had made for him in fixing for every service a corresponding fee. A contract, therefore, between a counsellor or attorney, and his client, for a share of the thing in suit, would have been invalid on this ground, as well as others. No such strictness ever obtained here. Our laws have always recognized the right of either to compensation for his legal services, in a reasonable amount, either on a quantum meruit, or upon special contract. Beyond this, the propriety of accepting compensation by way of a fee contingent upon the event of the suit, and payable out of the thing recovered, has been recognized. Also the advancing by the attorney, for the benefit of the client, of funds in payment of costs and necessary incidental expenses. Indeed, such advances by the attorney in the progress of litigation, is so common that to denounce the practice as improper would be to condemn the daily acts of the most honorable members of the profession. Wylie v. Coxe, 56 U. S. 15 How. 415, 14 L. ed. 753; Stanton v. Embrey, 98 U. S. 548, 23 L. ed. 983; Allard v. Lamirande, 29 Wis. 502; Newkirk v. Cone, 18 Ill. 449; McDonald v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 29 Iowa, 171; Quint v. Ophir S. Min. Co. 4 Nev. 805. This upon the idea of duty on the part of the profession to investigate the claims, and give professional aid in redressing the wrongs of the indigent who have been injured, for in this way many poor people are enabled to obtain justice, where, without such aid they would be remediless. And it has been considered that there is no practical distinction between such an arrangement and one where counsel undertake, for an agreed fee, to be paid in the future, the prosecution of a case for a client so poor that unless the cause be gained the attorney could not possibly realize any compensation whatever. That a contract of the latter kind is legal was held in Moore v. Campbell Academy Trustees, 9 Yerg. 119.

As before stated, we have never had in Ohio, any legislation upon that phase of maintenance known as champerty. But the evil of stirring up suits and controversies whereby persons should be defrauded or injured was early the subject of legislation. By the Act of February 10, 1824, the encouraging, exciting, and stirring up of any suit, quarrel or controversy, between two or more persons, by certain named officers, including attorneys and counselors-at-law, with intent to injure such persons, was made an offense punishable by fine of not more than $500, and liability to the party injured in treble damages, which, as to the penal sanction, is the law to-day. It would seem that the terrors of this Act would be sufficient to protect the people from any vestige of the evil tendency to combinations by the strong to injure the weak by oppressive litigation.

The conduct of attorneys is subject to proper scrutiny by the courts. The maintenance of a high character for dignity and integrity on their part is essential to the security of community, and the due administration of justice. Any infraction of the letter of this statute would entail its penal consequences upon an offending attorney, and the courts would not hesitate to hold void any contract violative of its spirit, whether coming within the strict letter or not. So, too, the courts have been, and continue to be, careful not to sanction contracts which appear to encourage a gambling spirit, one leading to the prosecution of pretended or obsolete claims, for a possible high reward. And anything like sharp practice, or the taking of undue advantage by the attorney of the confidence or necessities of the client, would meet with no favor nor mercy at the hands of the courts. At the same time it would not be wise to carry rules adopted originally for the purpose of preventing the powerful from oppressing the weak by groundless suits in the courts, to the extent of hindering the weak in efforts to avail themselves of lawful remedies against the powerful, now that the conditions making the ancient rules necessary have substantially disappeared, and new conditions arisen by reason of which it has become the interest of the powerful to embarrass and hinder the dependent and weak from obtaining speedy justice in the courts. Nor would it be judicious to extend arbitrarily those rules which say that a given contract is against public policy, for men of full age and competent understanding ought to have the utmost liberty of contracting. Their contracts when entered into fully and voluntarily, should be held sacred and should be enforced by the courts, for it is a paramount public policy that courts should not lightly interfere with the freedom of contract. Sir G. Jessel, in Printing & N. Reg. Co. v. Sampson, L. R. 19 Eq. 462. It is much more easy to denounce, in general and sweeping terms, contracts said to involve champerty as "odious," and "worthy only of the severest condemnation," than it is to point out wherein it is wrong to make an effort, under the circumstances disclosed in the case at bar, to enforce a claim solemnly adjudicated by a court to be just and legal, by one who has an interest in the judgment because of services rendered in obtaining it. It is difficult, also, to perceive how such a proceeding would contravene any established interest of society, or tend to corrupt the fountains of justice, or bring the legal profession into disrepute.

16 L. R. A.

Decisions by courts of other states have been cited. We have examined them. Many are based upon statutes, and have but little bearing in this state. Others are in conflict, and cannot be reconciled.

The holding in the recent case of Pennsylvania Co. v. Lombardo (Ohio) 14 L. R. A. 795, recognizes the doctrine that a champertous agreement is against public policy, and void. As it is not stated what will constitute champerty in an agreement, it is to be inferred that the doctrine is governed by previous holdings; and the point determined is, that, whether the contract between Lombardo and his attorney was shown to be champertous or not, his claim against the railroad company was not affected by it. It is not necessary, in order to dispose of the present case, to unsettle the Lombardo Case, nor any of the previous decisions of this court, and there is no purpose to do so. Nor is it necessary to formulate any new rule on the subject. Each case as it presents itself may be safely left for disposition on its own peculiar facts. We are not, however, disposed to go farther in enforcing the ancient rules, than the decisions by this court have heretofore gone. In the present case, if the contract rests upon a consideration which the law will sanction—and, for reasons heretofore stated, we think it does—there would seem to be an end of the inquiry. The promise to advance costs in the first instance is neither illegal nor improper, and the agreement to pay one half the costs by Reece was no more than, being owner of one half the judgment, he was in fairness and equity, bound to do. We conclude that the contract has not been shown to be wanting in consideration, or otherwise invalid.

Other questions were raised by plaintiff in error, but we do not regard them of sufficient importance to warrant discussion.

It follows that the judgment of the circuit court should be reversed, and the petition dismissed.

ALABAMA SUPREME COURT.

William E. BOYD, Appl.,

v.

City of SELMA et al.

(... Ala.)

1. Negotiable promissory notes for money loaned are "personal property," within the meaning of a charter authorizing taxation of such property.
2. The domicile of the creditor is the situs for the purpose of taxation of negotiable promissory notes given for money loaned.
3. A full, complete, and adequate remedy at law for illegality of a tax furnished by notice and opportunity to defend in the tax proceeding will prevent an injunction against collection of the tax.

(June 22, 1902.)

A PPEAL by complainant from a decree of the Chancery Court for Dallas County sustaining a demurrer to the bill in a suit instituted to restrain the collection of a tax. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Satterfield & Young for appellant.

Mr. J. W. Mabry for appellees.

Thorington, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Appellant filed his bill of complaint in the chancery court of Dallas county, averring the following state of facts: Appellee Selma is a municipality incorporated under the laws of this state by that name, and among other powers conferred on it by its charter is the following: "That the mayor and councilmen of said Selma shall have the power to levy taxes on real and personal property, capital employed in any business carried on in said city," etc. Since 1884 the said city has had an ordinance in operation and effect authorizing and providing for the taxation of "all moneys loaned, and their value, after deducting the indebtedness of the taxpayer." On the 1st day of May, 1890, which was the beginning of the city tax year for 1890-91, appellant, who resides in said city, duly returned his list of property taxable by said city to the city assessor, showing real property to the amount of $3,000 in value, and personal property to the value of $583, of which personal property $200 was exempt by law from taxation, and which exemption was so claimed on said list. After said list was so returned the assessor, without appellant's knowledge, added thereto, under the head of "all moneys loaned and solvent credits, or credits of value, and their value after deducting the indebtedness of the tax-

NOTE.—Situs for purpose of taxation of debts evidenced by notes and mortgages.

In general.

In Worthington v. Sebastian, 25 Ohio St. 10, it is said: "Intangible property has no actual situs. If, for purposes of taxation, we assign it a legal situs, surely that situs should be the place where it is owned, and not the place where it is owed. It is incapable of a separate situs, and must follow the situs either of the creditor or the debtor. To make it follow the residence of the latter, is to tax the debtor and not the creditor, to tax poverty instead of wealth." This was a case of bonds of a foreign corporation owned in Ohio where they were held taxable.

In Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179, Field, J., in discussing railroad bonds, says: "Debts owing by corporations, like debts owing by individuals, are not property of the debtors in any sense; they are obligations of the debtors, and only possess value in the hands of the creditors. With them they are property and in their hands they may be taxed. To call debts property of the debtors, is simply to misuse terms."

Debts and other incorporeal rights, when treated as property for the purpose of taxation, should be assessed at the domicile or place of residence of the creditor, without regard to the domicile of the debtor. Barber Asphalt Pav. Co. v. New Orleans, 41 La. Ann. 1015; Com. v. Hays, 8 B. Mon. 1; Babcock v. Cass Twp. Board of Equalization, 65 Iowa, 110; Hayne v. Dellesellinc, 8 McCord, L. 374.

In Foreman v. Byrns, 68 Ind. 247, the following propositions are laid down as "fully supported both by reason and authority:—"

"1. That all debts of every kind and nature, due to persons having a domicile in the state of Indiana, are taxable to the creditor where such creditor has his domicile.

"2. That all debts of every kind and nature, due 16 L. R. A.

from persons having a domicile in the state of Indiana to persons not having a domicile in the state of Indiana, on the day named in the statute, unless in the hands of an agent doing business in the state of Indiana, from which such debts have sprung, have no situs in the state of Indiana, but have a situs where the creditor has his domicile and are not taxable in the state of Indiana. Culbertson v. Floyd County Comrs., 52 Ind. 361; Herron v. Keeran, 59 Ind. 472, 26 Am. Rep. 87; Cleveland, P. & A. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 300, 21 L. ed. 179."

In People v. New York Tax Comrs., 58 N. Y. 242, it was held that money advanced by a resident of New York for the building of certain ships in Delaware secured by a contract for a lien on and ownership in the vessels as the building thereof progressed was taxable in New York. The court held the arrangement to give no absolute ownership in the vessels and said: "Only in the case of absolute ownership would there be such a conversion of taxable money into steamships having a situs in Delaware as not to make them taxable in New York."

It is held in Thomas v. Mason County Ct., 4 Bush, 135, that the debt due a person in Kentucky for money loaned to one in a foreign state is taxable against the creditor in Kentucky notwithstanding the fund is taxed as the property of the borrower in the other state.

Capital of a bank invested in foreign countries will be presumed to be in the usual form of investments by banks and is subject to the tax imposed on the capital of state banks by § 3406, U. S. Rev. Stat. Nevada Bank of San Francisco v. Sedgwick, 104 U. S. 111, 26 L. ed. 703.

In the absence of constitutional restriction it is competent for a state to subject to taxation loans made by its citizens to persons residing out of the state. Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 49 Conn. 423, 19 Am. Rep. 546; Boyer v. Jones, 14 Ind. 354.

payer," an item of $25,262, which is stated by the assessor in writing on said list to have been "added from information from county assessor's book" which item had been assessed to appellant for state taxation in Dallas county for the pending year. Said sum represented negotiable promissory notes for so much money loaned by appellant, payable to him or his order in Birmingham, Ala., and are secured by mortgages on real property in said last named city. The makers of said notes all reside in Birmingham, and the notes themselves, since March, 1890, have been and now are in said city, in the hands of appellant's agent there, for collection of interest and the reinvestment thereof, with the exception of one note for $100, which is in appellant's possession in Selma. Appellant, before his bill was filed, applied to the mayor and councilmen of Selma to cancel the said item of $25,262, so added to his tax list by the assessor, but, after hearing on his petition, they refused so to do. It is also alleged that no appeal is provided by law from their decision in the matter, and that the remedy by certiorari would not afford relief, for the reason that the facts outside the record could not be shown in that proceeding, and that appellant is therefore without remedy, except in a court of equity; that said mayor and councilmen levied a tax of 1½ per centum on the property assessed to appellant, making the aggregate amount of the tax claimed by said city of Selma from appellant $428.93. The bill shows a proper tender of the amount legally due according to appellant's theory of the case, including the $100 note in Selma, and contains an offer to do equity and abide the decree of the court. The charter of Selma gives to tax assessments made by the mayor and councilmen the force and effect of a judgment at law against the taxpayer, and makes the same a preferred lien from its date over all other incumbrances on all his property, real and personal, within the city, or that may be brought to the city. Appellant is seized and possessed of real property in said city to the value of $8,000, and appellee, Goodwin, as tax collector for said city, is about to proceed to sell appellant's said real property for the payment of said municipal tax, including that assessed on said item of $25,262. It is averred that said levy and assessment cast a cloud on the title of appellant to said real property, and that the collector is about to cast a further cloud thereon by proceeding to sell as aforesaid, and that relief should also be granted to avoid a multiplicity of suits. The bill prays for an injunction to restrain the collection of the alleged illegal portion of the tax, and that the assessment made by the assessor on said solvent credits may be canceled as a cloud on appellant's title. To this bill appellees demurred; the demurrer was sustained by the chancery court, and, appellant failing to amend his bill, it was dismissed. We have been particular in thus setting out the facts averred by the bill for the reason that the case involves, among others, an important principle of municipal as well as general taxation.

The two controlling questions are whether the bill makes out a case coming within some ground of equitable jurisdiction connected Mortgages.

Money at interest secured by mortgage is a chose in action whose situs for the purposes of taxation is the domicile of its owner. State v. Earl, 1 Nev. 304; Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 553.

Under a statute authorizing a tax on all property within the state, mortgages held by nonresidents on land in the state are not taxable. Davenport v. Mississippi & M. R. Co. 12 Iowa, 539; Arapahoe County Comra. v. Cutter, 3 Colo. 349; Territory v. Delinquent Tax List (Arix), April 18, 1890; Grant v. Jones, 39 Ohio St. 503.

Where the statutes provide for taxation of property in the district in which the owner resides and for the taxation of certain property of nonresidents, in which money loaned on mortgages is not embraced, the latter is not taxable, if belonging to a nonresident of the state. St. Paul v. Merritt, 7 Minn. 258.

Under a statute requiring "credits" to be listed for taxation by the owner, if a resident of the state, or by his agent controlling them, mortgages on land in the state held by a nonresident and not controlled by a resident agent are not taxable. Goldgart v. People, 106 Ill. 25.

Where the statute requires property to be taxed in the county "where the same may be found" a mortgage is not taxable in the county where it is recorded unless the mortgage itself be found therein. Gallatin County v. Beattie, 3 Mont. 173.

In People v. Eastman, 25 Cal. 601, it is said of money loaned on mortgage: "The property to be assessed in such cases is money at interest or debt. The money at interest, debt, or obligation is the principal thing, and the mortgage is only security—a mere incident to the debt or obligation. The mortgage has no existence independent of the thing secured by it, a payment of the debt discharges the mortgage. The thing secured is in- 16 L. R. A. tangible, and has no situs distinct and apart from the residence of the holder. It pertains to and follows the person." And it was held to make no difference that the mortgage had been foreclosed and the lien carried into a judgment, and that it was taxable in the county of the creditor's residence and not of the location of the land mortgaged. Last point also held in People v. Wharthenby, 38 Cal. 461.

A judgment and decree of foreclosure is taxable in the county of the residence of the owner thereof not in the county where it is docketed. Barber v. Farr, 54 Iowa, 57.

A debt, though evidenced by a judgment at the domicile of the debtor, is not assessable or taxable elsewhere than at the domicile of the creditor. Meyer v. Pleasant, 41 La. Ann. 645.

Notes.

Notes taken in payment for an iron-ore furnace and its equipment are not taxable in the town where the furnace is located and where the notes are kept but at the residence of the owner of the notes. Lanesborough v. Berkshire County Comra, 131 Mass. 424.

The situs of notes belonging to an intestate for purposes of taxation is at the place of his domicile when alive, not at the domicile of his personal representative living in the same state. Stephens v. Booneville, 34 Mo. 323.

But if bonds held by the decedent in another state come into the hands of an administrator in Missouri they are taxable in the latter state. They are on the same footing as other personal property. State v. St. Louis County Ct. 47 Mo. 594.

The situs of the credits of a decedent's estate within the state for the purposes of taxation is at the domicile of the administrator although the eviwith the alleged illegality of the tax, and whether solvent credits or negotiable promissory notes are taxable at the domicile of the owner, or whether the situs of such property, and not the domicile of the owner, determines the liability to taxation; and these questions we will consider in the inverse order to that in which they are above stated. Preliminary to these two questions, however, we will notice the proposition argued by appellant's counsel, that negotiable promissory notes are not embraced in the term "personal property," found in section 27 of the charter of Selma, above quoted. Acts 1882-83, p. 414, § 27: "It is a principle universally declared and admitted that municipal corporations can levy no taxes, general or special, upon the inhabitants or their property, unless the power be plainly and unmistakably conferred." Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 766. Or, as sometimes more tersely stated, "municipal corporations have no implied powers of taxation; they have only such as are granted." It is also a clearly settled proposition that, in the absence of constitutional restraint, "the General Assembly may delegate to municipal corporations the power of taxation of persons or property in such manner and to such extent as it may deem expedient, but it cannot confer power which it does not itself possess." Ex parte City Council of Montgomery, 64 Ala. 463. The state has power to tax, and does tax, solvent credits, including negotiable promissory notes. It appears from an inspection of the charter of Selma (Acts 1882-83, p. 396, that the power is not conferred on said city to tax such property eo nomine, but the power is given in express terms to tax real and personal property; and, if the term "personal property" can be said to embrace choses in action, then it is undeniable that the charter confers upon the city express power to tax that species of property. This is as truly axiomatic as that the whole includes all its parts. In its general or ordinary significance, the term "personal property" embraces all objects and rights which are capable of ownership except freehold estates in land, and incorporeal hereditaments issuing thereout, or exercisable within the same. 18 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 408. And, when used in statutes authorizing the imposition of taxes, the word "property," without the qualifying term "personal," will be held without further signification to include solvent credits. 1 Deasy, Taxn. pp. 818, 819; Cooley, Taxn. p. 372; Savings & Loan Soc. v. Austin, 46 Cal. 415; People v. Park, 23 Cal. 188; Louisville v. Henning, 1 Bush, 381; Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 153. So in this state the words "personal property," employed in exemption statutes, have been construed to include money, choses in action, and even a claim for damages resulting from negligence. Borden v. Bradshaw, 63 Ala. 363; Darden v. Reese, 62 Ala. 311; Williamson v. Harris, 57 Ala. 40.

In the definition of terms given in the Code, § 2, subd. 3, the words "personal property" include "money, goods, chattels, things in action, and evidences of debt," etc.; but that definition only applies to the words "personal property," as used in the Code, and is not a general, authoritative definition, attaching to dences thereof may be in a different county. Sommers v. Boyd, 48 Ohio St. 648.

Under a statute authorizing a city to tax all personal property "in the city" promissory notes deposited in the city by one living without the city limits are not taxable. Ferris v. Kimble, 75 Tex. 476; Connor v. Waxahachie (Tex.) Dec. 9, 1889.

Under a statute authorizing a tax on "money, property, or labor due from solvent debtors on contract," debts evidenced by notes belonging to a citizen which are deposited for safe keeping without the state and never have been within it, are subject to taxation. Hunter v. Board of Suprs. 33 Iowa, 376.

Under a statute taxing personal property "actually within" the limits of a city, loans made by a resident therein on notes and mortgages are taxable, notwithstanding the notes and mortgages are deposited without the city limits. Johnson v. Oregon City, 2 Or. 327, affirming 8 Or. 12. To the same effect is Poppleton v. Yamhill County, 7 L. R. A. 449, 18 Or. 377.

If bonds are sent out of the state, except for the purpose of evading taxation, they are not taxable in the state. State v. Howard County Ct. 60 Mo. 454.

A city empowered to tax property "within the limits of the city" cannot tax notes held by a resident against parties residing without the city. Bridges v. Griffin, 33 Ga. 118.

The court said: "Unless the persons who owe the debts reside in Griffin, they are not property within the city. The fact that the owner of these debts resides in the city, and has the notes there, does not alter the fact. The notes are but the evidences of the debt, while the debt itself is out of the city, as a man's title deeds or bill of sale are the evidence of the owner's right of property in his land and negroes, and it would never be thought the land and negroes out of the city would be liable to the city taxes because the owner resided in the city and kept his title deeds there."

A directly opposite view seems to be taken in Collins v. Miller, 43 Ga. 336, where it was held that a debt evidenced by a note made by a resident of Georgia and held by a nonresident was not situated in the state for the purpose of taxation.

This change of view as to the location of choses in action is accounted for in Augusta v. Dunbar, 50 Ga. 387, by the act taxing bonds, notes, etc., due from persons in other states, from which it is inferred that it was intended to declare that the situs of such choses in action is with their owner.

In Wilcox v. Ellis, 14 Kan. 588, 19 Am. Rep. 107, premising that it was not the intention of the laws of Kansas to tax property not within the jurisdiction of the state, it was held that notes given in pursuance of a contract for the sale of land in Illinois, and left there for payment, are not taxable in Kansas because of the owner's domicile there. To the same effect is Fisher v. Rush County Comrs. 19 Kan. 414.

An obiter remark in Blain v. Irby, 25 Kan. 501, is to the effect that promissory notes, unlike other choses in action, have a personal and independent situs of their own and may be taxed where they are situated.

When held by agent residing in different state from principal.

Where the investment of funds of a nonresident is controlled by his agent and loaned and reloaned to citizens of a state, the notes and securities taken and held in the possession and under the control of the agent have a situs within the state that makes it competent for the state to subject them to taxation. Catlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 152.

This is called a "business situs" and is an excepsaid terms, as found in all legislative enactments of this state, general and special. Whatever effect this section may have upon general enactments since the Code in which these words occur, when found in special statutes enacted either before or since the Code, they have the usual and ordinary meaning attaching thereto, unless otherwise limited or qualified by the context. In the section of the charter of Selma herein quoted we do not find in the context any associated words which give to the term "personal property" a narrower or different meaning from that found in the authorities we have cited above. True, some of the items of personal property specifically mentioned in the section would, according to the general definition given in the citations, fall within the generic term, and some would not; but the former appear to have been particularized ex industria, or by way of precaution, and not with the intent to limit the preceding general words. We think it clear that the term "personal property," as used in section 27 of the charter of said city, includes solvent credits and choses in action, and consequently that such property is liable to taxation by said city in the manner and to the extent provided by its charter. Practically the same question was settled by this court in the case of St. John v. Mobile, 21 Ala. 224, where it was held that the charter of that city, which authorized it to tax "real and personal estate within the city," included the power to tax bills of exchange, notes, etc. To the same effect is the case of Paris v. Farmers' Bank of Missouri, 80 Mo. 575.

Passing to the question whether negotiable promissory notes are taxable at the domicile of the owner, or whether the situs of such property, and not the domicile of the owner, determines the liability to taxation, we find ir-relation to the rule that the situs of credits is at the domicile of the owner. Re Jefferson, 85 Minn. 215.

Before a nonresident can be taxed for credits it must be shown that they are actually at the place where they are assessed under the actual control of his agent, and it is not enough to show that an indebtedness to him, evidenced by a promissory note, was negotiated through an agent at the place. People v. Davis, 112 Ill. 272.

Securities taken by a nonresident agent for loans made by him in foreign states and held by such agent, are not taxable in the state of the owner's domicile. People v. Gardner, 51 Barb. 862; People v. Smith, 88 N. Y. 576. This rule is changed by statute in New York.

Under the statute it is held that securities in the actual possession and control of a nonresident trustee, the beneficiaries also being nonresidents, are not "due or owing to persons residing within the state," so as to be subject to taxation within the state, although two of the three trustees are residents thereof. People v. Coleman, 7 L. R. A. 407, 119 N. Y. 187, reversing 58 Hun. 482.

Notes secured by mortgages on land in a foreign state in the hands of an agent there to be collected and reloaned are property of the owner within the state of his residence for the purpose of taxation under a statute subjecting "all debts due from solvent debtors," unless such notes are expressly exempted. State v. Gaylord, 73 Wis. 316.

The court said: "When, as here, there is an absence of any statute prescribing a different rule, and an absence of any evidence of injustice by reason of double taxation, we must hold, under our statutes cited, that for the purposes of taxation, a debt has its situs at the residence of the creditor and may be taxed there."

Under Vt. Rev. Laws, § 270, exempting personal property situated in another state, a debt evidenced by a promissory note owned by an inhabitant of Vermont is taxable there, although secured by a mortgage on lands in another state, and the note and mortgage are in an agent's possession, living where the land is situated. Bullock v. Guilford, 4 New Eng. Rep. 352, 59 Vt. 516.

Debts due for money sent out of the state and loaned by nonresident agents on notes and mortgages retained by them and which had never been in the state, are not subject to taxation, under Hill's (Or.) Ann. Code, § 2781, providing that personal property shall include money, notes, or mortgages, "either within or without this state; . . . all debts due or to become due from solvent debtors." The "debts" mentioned include only domestic debts, since the latter clause does not contain any words similar to those of the previous clause relating to property or interests out of the state. Poppleton v. Yamhill County, 7 L. R. A. 449, 18 Or. 377.

Contracts for the sale of land which are in the possession of the agent of a nonresident vendor are taxable at the agent's domicile. People v. Trustees of Ogdensburg, 48 N. Y. 360.

Contracts for the sale of land which are in the possession of an agent are not taxable at the agent's residence where his principal has a residence within the same state. Lord v. Arnold, 18 Barb. 104.

While no stress is laid in this case on the fact that the principal resided within the same state, and in fact the language used indicates that the same rule would apply were he a nonresident, it is only with this limitation that the decision harmonizes with the others of New York state.

Under a statute taxing credits and investments within the state, in the possession or under the control of an agent of the owner, notes for the purchase price of land secured by the land, which are actually within the state, are taxable there though the owner be a nonresident. Redmond v. Rutherford Comrs. 87 N. C. 122.

In this case it is said: "The theory of taxation is that the right to tax is derived from the protection afforded to the subject upon which it is imposed. The debts due to the plaintiff upon their land contracts are personal estate, the same as if they were due upon notes or bonds; and so far as they have any substantial existence they are in this state, and not elsewhere. Their validity and protection, and the remedies for their enforcement, all depend upon the laws of this state, and in neither respect (or in any other that we can now think of) do they take any benefit from the laws of the plaintiff's domicile. It is but just, therefore, that they should contribute toward the support of the only government which affords them protection, and help to defray the expenses incurred in so doing."

Notes and accounts in the hands of attorneys for collection, and bonds deposited for safe keeping, belonging to a nonresident, are not "within the state" as contemplated by the tax laws. Herron v. Keeran, 50 Ind. 472, 26 Am. Rep. 87.

A statute requiring every person to list for taxation "all moneys invested, loaned, or otherwise controlled by him as agent or attorney, or on account of any other person," does not warrant taxing mortgages of a nonresident held by a resident agent for the purpose of collection and transmission to his principal. Myers v. Seaberger, 10 West. Rep. 474, 45 Ohio St. 232; Williams v. Wayne County Supra. 78 N. Y. 551.

J. G. G.

reconcilable confusion in the adjudicated cases, as well as differences in the statement of the doctrine in the text-books. Much of this confusion results from a failure to observe the varying phraseology of the different statutes giving rise to the decisions, but in some instances the authorities differ in the statement of the general principle involved. In 1 Desty on Taxation, p. 322, § 67, the general rule is stated thus: "The situs of personal property, whether tangible or intangible, for the purposes of taxation, unless otherwise provided by statute, is at the place of residence of the owner; the only exception being where the property is employed in business or is in the hands of an agent of the owner having an actual situs different from the domicile of the owner. It is not necessary, therefore, that the owner should reside within the state, to render his personal property situated within the state liable to taxation." In Cooley on Taxation, p. 371, it is said: "Where one is taxed for his personality at the place of domicile, it is in general immaterial that some, or even the whole, of it is at the time out of the state." Mr. Burroughs, in his work on Taxation, after an elaborate review of the conflicting authorities, states his own conclusions as follows in section 50, at page 59: "We conclude that the situs of personal property for the purposes of taxation depends in a great measure upon the nature of the property: (a) If it be chattels, which have a tangible existence, they are taxed in the locality in which they are situated. (b) Evidences of debt, such as state stocks and bonds of municipal corporations, transferable by delivery, and indeed all negotiable instruments which are of a chattel nature, are taxable where the evidence of the debt is actually situated. . . . (d) Debts not negotiable are taxable where the owner resides; they follow his person. . . . (f) Stocks of corporations follow the person of the owner, and are taxed at the place of his residence. . . . (h) The rule as to debts not negotiable being taxed at the residence of the owner is modified to the extent that where a person residing in one state has an agent in another, who loans or invests money for him, holds the evidences of debts, and so invests the proceeds of the loans when collected in the same state, it is held then to be taxable at the residence of the agent." The omitted paragraphs indicated above by the stars have no bearing upon the question as to the place of taxation of choses in action or evidences of debt, and it therefore appears that Mr. Burroughs either includes negotiable promissory notes in the words "all negotiable instruments of a chattel nature," as used in paragraph b, and makes them taxable where they are "actually situated," or he has failed to provide in the rules he has so carefully laid down for that class of negotiable notes which do not pass by delivery, but require an indorsement to pass the title thereto.

Applying the maxim nositur a sociis and giving the words "of a chattel nature" their usual and ordinary meaning, it would seem that the negotiable instruments to which he refers are such as are sold in the market like municipal bonds, and pass by delivery; and that this is his meaning finds support in what he says in section 45 of the same work viz.:

"The state bonds, and bonds of municipal bodies, and circulating notes of banks, which are treated as property where they are, and pass by delivery, are the subjects of taxation wherever they are found, in the same manner as chattels." And further in the same section he says: "The idea upon which the decisions are based is that, when the evidence of the debt is such that it passes by delivery, then the situs of the evidence of the debt is the situs of the debt, and it is taxable there. But, where it is necessary that the evidence of the debt should be in the state of the debtor in order to transfer the title to it, it is taxable in the state of the debtor." But, while the notes on which this case is based are negotiable promissory notes, we prefer to rest our decision on other principles and authorities, whose clearness and soundness we do not think can be questioned.

Referring again to the assessment made by the city tax collector, it is to be observed that it is for "all moneys loaned, and solvent credits, or credits of value, and their value after deducting the indebtedness of the taxpayer." The thing taxed is the debt, a species of intangible property incapable of an actual situs independent of the owner. The notes and mortgages representing the debts due to appellant may render the value of the debts more definite and stable, but they do not constitute the debts themselves, but are the mere evidence of such debts. They might be lost, stolen, or destroyed, but the debts, the credits, would remain. In the case of Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558, it is said in the opinion of the court: "The creditor, it is conceded, is a permanent resident within the jurisdiction of the state imposing the tax. The debt is property in his hands, constituting a portion of his wealth, from which he is under the highest obligation, in common with his fellow citizens of the same state, to contribute for the support of the government whose protection he enjoys. That debt, although a species of intangible property, may, for purposes of taxation, if not for all others, be regarded as situated at the domicile of the creditor. It is none the less property because its amount and maturity are set forth in a bond. That bond, wherever actually held or deposited, is only evidence of the debt, and, if destroyed, the debt—the right to demand payment of the money loaned, with the stipulated interest—remains. Nor is the debt, for the purposes of taxation, affected by the fact that it is secured by mortgage upon real estate situated in Illinois. The mortgage is but a security for the debt, and, as held in State Tax on Foreign Held Bonds, 83 U. S. 15 Wall. 800, 21 L. ed. 179, the right of the creditor to proceed against the property mortgaged, upon a given contingency to enforce by its sale the payment of his demand, . . . has no locality independent of the party in whom it resides. It may undoubtedly be taxed by the state when held by a resident therein. The debt, then, having its situs at the creditor's residence, both he and it are, for the purposes of taxation, within the jurisdiction of the state." In the case of Hunter v. Board of Suprs., 38 Iowa, 376, Judge Miller, in a case where a resident of Iowa deposited for safe keeping in Illinois promissory notes for $7,000, that were never brought into Iowa, says: "It is not the notes, as such, that are taxed; it is the debt. Notes are mere evidences of the debt. The right to money due being in the resident in Iowa, the property must of necessity be at the place where he resides, irrespective of the situs of the evidence." In California the statute required all property to be taxed in the county where it is situated. A., residing in San Francisco, held a mortgage on property in Mariposa county. It was recorded and foreclosed in that county. It was held by the supreme court of that state not liable to taxation in the latter county, the court saying: "The mortgage has no existence independent of the thing secured by it; a payment of the debt discharges the mortgage. The thing secured is intangible, and has no situs distinct and apart from the "residence of the holder. It pertains to and follows the person." See also People v. Park, 23 Cal. 188. In State v. Earl, 1 Nev. 394, it is said: "A tax on money at interest, secured by mortgage on land, is a tax neither on the coin, the land on which the security is taken, nor upon the paper on which the promise to pay is written, but on the choses in action or right to collect the debt." In an elaborate note to the case of New Albany v. Meekin, 56 Am. Dec. 522, many authorities, Federal and state, are cited in support of the doctrine that debts, negotiable instruments, and choses in action follow the domicile of the owner or creditor and are taxable there. And among other propositions set forth in the note is the following: "Mortgages and mortgage debts are, according to the overwhelming weight of authority, taxable at the mortgagee's domicile. Like any other debt, they have no other situs, and the fact that the debt is secured upon land does not affect this principle." The authorities collated in support of the proposition are numerous, and many of them entitled to the greatest weight. See also 1 Desty, Taxn. p. 830.

We forbear a review of the decisions of the state courts which assert a contrary doctrine to that laid down in the foregoing authorities, but must notice some of the decisions cited by appellant's counsel, and the decisions of this court which touch upon this subject, and one of the latter of which is apparently somewhat opposed to the view we have adopted. Not, however, in its enunciation of the principle applicable to the facts of that particular case, but in the generality of its statement of the law. The first decision of this court, so far as we have been able to discover, which bears upon the question is the case of St. John v. Mobile, 21 Ala. 224, where the question for decision was whether the capital of a commercial firm in the city of Mobile, employed by them at that place in purchasing cotton upon commission, and in buying and selling bills of exchange, comes under the description of "personal estate in the city of Mobile," liable to taxation for city purposes, under the charter of 1844. The court held that the cash and securities employed by the appellant firm were personal estate, within the meaning of the statute; and although part of such securities, consisting of bills of exchange and promissory notes, were, at distant points, New York or Liverpool, for instance, running to maturity or payable there, by the regular course of the firm's business, they were, nevertheless, personal estate of the firm in the city of Mobile, within the meaning of the charter, and properly taxable there as personal property. The other two cases to which we will refer did not involve the question of taxing solvent credits or choses in action, but of visible, tangible personal property, capable of having an actual situs separate and distinct from the domicile of the owner. In the case of Mobile v. Baldwin, 57 Ala. 61, the question was whether a steamer was liable to taxation in Mobile. It was owned by one Baldwin, who was not a citizen of that city, and was employed as a ferryboat, crossing from the eastern shore of the bay in Baldwin county to Mobile, leaving Baldwin county in the morning, and returning from Mobile in the evening. The boat was not kept or used in the city except to visit it in the daytime on its regular trips, returning at night to Baldwin county. The boat was licensed and enrolled under the laws of the United States at the port of Mobile, and was run on tide water only, in such ferryage business, and the owner paid taxes thereon in Baldwin county. The court held that the situs of the property, for taxation, was in Baldwin county, the domicile of the owner, and that its transient presence at Mobile on its daily trips did not separate its situs from the domicile of the owner. We quote from the opinion as follows: "The situs of the property, not the domicile or residence of the owner, is the test to which the liability to taxation must be submitted. . . . If it be visible, tangible property, or if it be property not having a visible, tangible existence, yet a legal existence, capable of an actual situs, it is the actual situs, not the domicile of the owner, most material to be considered. . . . If the owner of personal property separate it from his domicile,—commits it to another jurisdiction, so that it is not distinguishable from other property of a like kind within that jurisdiction or from similar property casually, in the usual course of its use and enjoyment, coming within that jurisdiction,—he takes it away from the jurisdiction of his domicile, and commits it, not to the county, but to the power of the place to which he transfers it." There can be no doubt of the correctness of the decision above quoted from, so far as the result reached is concerned. But so much of the opinion as declares that "the situs of the property, not the domicile or residence of the owner, is the test to which the liability to taxation must be submitted," can only be applied, so far as concerns personal property, to visible, tangible property, which has been separated by the owner from his domicile, by applying it to use or employment elsewhere, or by placing it elsewhere under circumstances indicating permanency of location in the sense specified in Trammell v. Connor, hereinafter cited. And so much of the opinion as applies the principle on which the case rests to property "not having a visible, tangible existence, yet a legal existence, capable of an actual situs," may be regarded as dictum. It would seem that this description could only embrace property that is purely jus incorporale, and, aside from the difficulty in conceiving of property which is neither visible nor tangible having an actual situs separate from that of the domicile of the owner, we prefer to observe the general rules, and exceptions thereto, laid down by the text-writers and recognized in the authorities, both in respect of visible, tangible property, and such as is not visible or tangible. The latest decision of this court on that question clearly recognizes one of such exceptions, and is in harmony with the general rule sustained by the weight of authority. The decision referred to is Trammell v. Connor, 91 Ala. 898, where it is said: "As regards the place at which tangible personal property is assessable for taxes, the courts have generally discarded the legal fiction that such property follows the domicile of the owner, and hold that it may have an actual situs independent of the owner's residence, constituting the condition which subjects it to taxation. . . . In order, however, to render the property liable to taxation, its situs must be permanent in its nature, though not so permanent as real estate; it must have no actual location elsewhere. Property in transitu, or temporarily in the county, is not subject to assessment merely because it happened to be in the county on the day the assessment commences."

Mr. Desty, in his work on Taxation, (vol. 1, p. 326), states the general rule to be that the domicile of the owner is the place where, by a legal fiction, his personal property is regarded as having its situs, and where it is to be taxed, and then declares the rule as to intangible property as follows: "The situs of invisible and intangible property, not growing out of real estate, is with the owner. . . . Intangible property has no situs. If, for purposes of taxation, it be assigned a situs, it should be the place where it is owned, not the place where it is owed. . . . The debt, then, having its situs at the creditor's domicile, both he and it are, for the purposes of taxation, within the jurisdiction of the taxing power." He recognizes, however, exceptions both as to visible, tangible property, and as to invisible, intangible property; the exceptions as to the former being such as in the case of Trammell v. Connor, supra, and the exception to both the former and the latter being the case of property debts and credits belonging to a nonresident, but held by his agent in the state where they are assessed; but, he adds, "if in the hands of an agent living in another county, and subject to the order and control of the owner, it is taxable to him at his residence, and not to the agent." Desty, Taxn. p. 828. And this last proposition is fully sustained by the case of Boardman v. Tompkins County Supra, 85 N. Y. 359, which is as follows: "Appellant had, as agent for his sisters, bonds and mortgages belonging to them, which he procured as an investment with their money, and at their request. He held them subject to their order and control. He resided in Ithaca, Tompkins county; they, in Rochester, Monroe county. The assessor for Ithaca assessed the property on information, against the agent's protest. The court of appeals held the assessment erroneous, and that the property was taxable in Monroe county, where the owners resided. The court, among other things, said: "Any other construction would defeat this object. A person living in a city where taxation was onerous would escape the burden by placing his personal assets in the hands of an agent in an outlying town, while the countryman, whose property might at the time of the assessment be in the hands of his factor, broker, or commission agent for sale or investment, would find it enlarged by city valuations, only to be diminished by taxes from which he would derive no benefit. Produce, money, and securities, for purposes of sale, investment, or collection, are constantly moved from the owner to his factor, broker, or attorney. At all times he can be easily reached at his residence; but, if taxation is to depend upon locality, the rate will be uncertain, and the work of discovery attended with increased difficulty. Such a result is not called for by the terms of the statute, nor can it be justified on principle." So far as we have been able to discover, the only exception to the rule that, for the purposes of taxation, the situs of visible, tangible personal property is the domicile of the owner, is where such property has been separated from his domicile by the owner, and placed elsewhere, under circumstances indicating permanency of location, as in Trammell v. Connor; and the only exception as to invisible, intangible property seems to be where nonresidents have committed such property, or evidence thereof, to their agents living in the state where its liability to taxation is claimed.

We have examined the authorities cited by appellant to the effect that the words "personal property" do not include solvent credits or choses in action, and also that the power given to a municipal corporation to tax property within the city applies only to visible, tangible property within the corporate limits; but they are either predicated on statutes, the particular phraseology of which is materially variant from the charter of Selma, or they are in conflict with the weight of authority. For instance, in the case of Pullen v. Raleigh Board of Comrs., 68 N. C. 451, the court held that the city of Raleigh had no power to tax debts and securities. But it was so held on the ground that the charter enumerates, nominatim, each subject of taxation, and that no one subject so specified, "by the utmost stretch of construction, can be made to embrace debts and securities for money." Also that the words "real and personal property" are used in the state Constitution in a sense to exclude "credits and investments." And in the case of Bank of United States v. Huth, 4 B. Mon. 428, no question of taxation was involved. It was simply a question whether the words "real or personal estate," as employed in a statute requiring mortgages to be recorded, embraced choses in action or claims for debts; and it was held they did not, because the statute designated the place for recording as the county "in which the estate or greater part thereof lies;" that only such property was embraced in the words "personal estate," or was capable of having an actual situs, and therefore "may be or lie in a certain place or county;" and that choses in action were not capable of a situs or local position. In the case of Johnson v. Lexington, 14 B. Mon. 648, it was held that the terms "personal property" and "personal estate," as used in the Lexington city charter, do not embrace debts and other choses in action, but embrace only visible property, and that the city had no power to tax personal property without the city, but that such power is confined to property within the city. But the decision was put on the ground that the language of the charter "renders it reasonably certain that the power conferred was only intended to embrace such personal estate as is within the city," and it was held that the words "personal property" and "personal estate" did not include debts and other choses in action, because at that time the state "had not adopted the principle of taxation by which the money and choses in action of the citizen are not made liable to taxation;" and that it could not, therefore, be presumed that the state then intended to confer on the city authorities a power of taxation which it did not itself exercise. The case of Gallatin County v. Beattie, 8 Mont. 173, decides that a mortgage can only be taxed in the county where it is found, but the statute the court was considering in terms required all property to be assessed in the county "where the same may be found." In the opinion of the court it is said: "Taking this section in connection with section fourteen of the same Act, and, I may add, the whole scope of the statute upon revenue, where it relates to assessment of property, and it is evident that it was not intended to give the assessor of any county power to assess property not in his county." And in the case of Bridges v. Griffin, 38 Ga. 113, while the court holds that the words "personal property" in the tax law embraced solvent notes and other choses in action, they were not taxable in the city of Griffin, because the persons owing the debts did not reside in Griffin, and therefore the notes were not property within the city. This is directly opposed to the principle laid down in the text-books, and is in conflict with the cases of Kirtland v. Hotchkiss and Hunter v. Board of Suprs. here in cited, as well as the almost uniform current of authorities. Mr. Cooley, in his work on Taxation, 2d ed. p. 22, in speaking of debts, says: "They are not the property of the debtors, in any sense; they are the obligations of the debtors, and only possess value in the hands of the creditors. With them they are property, but to call them property in the hands of debtors is a misuse of terms." The conclusion we reach from the principles herein discussed and the authorities cited is that the money loaned, or solvent credits, or choses in action, referred to in the bill of complaint, are properly taxable in and by the city of Selma, where appellant resides. The city charter authorizes the assessor to assess property for escaped taxes, on information, and no question is raised by appellant as to the regularity of the assessment.

16 L. R. A.

What has been said renders it unnecessary to consider at length the question relating to the jurisdiction of the chancery court to enjoin the collection of a municipal tax on the ground of its illegality, but, in order that we may not be understood as sanctioning that remedy in this case, we notice it briefly. The rule on that subject, as declared in this state, is that, "in addition to illegality, hardship, or irregularity, the case must be brought within some of the recognized foundations of equitable jurisdiction, and that mere errors of excess in valuation, or hardships, or injustice of the law, or any grievance which can be redressed by a suit at law, either before or after payment of the taxes, will not justify a court of equity to interfere by injunction to stay collection of the tax." Here the right is claimed on the ground that the assessment, by the terms of the statute, has the force and effect of a judgment at law on all of appellant's property in said city, including his real estate, which judgment is made a preferred lien, and that it therefore creates a cloud on his title, which he has the right to come into equity to remove. Whether this statement of the bill would bring the case within the rule as above declared, it is unnecessary now to decide, for the reason that it is clear the charter itself provides a complete and adequate remedy at law. Section 83 of the charter requires the collector, before selling real estate for city taxes, to file a list of the delinquent taxes in the office of the judge of probate of Dallas county, and a decree of sale can only be rendered by the probate court after notice to the taxpayer, and a hearing, if he chooses to defend; and the defense is expressly authorized to be made that the property is not liable for the taxes, and that the taxes are not authorized by law. An appeal is provided from the decree of the probate court to the circuit court of said county, or the city court of Selma, where the trial is de novo; and from any judgment that might there be rendered, an appeal would lie to this court, under the general statutes providing for appeals from the judgments of courts of law in this state. From this it is plain that appellant had a full, complete, and adequate remedy at law, and that the tax, if illegal, could not have been properly enjoined in this suit.

There was no error in the decree of the chancery court sustaining appellees' demurrer, and dismissing the bill. Its decree is accordingly affirmed.

OREGON SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Oregon, ex rel. D. F. SHERMAN,
Appt.,
v.M. C. GEORGE et al., Repts.

(.....Or.....)

1. A statute providing for the appointment by the judges of a court of the members of a bridge committee to have charge of the city's bridges does not violate a constitutional provision that persons charged with official duties under one of the three departments of government shall not exercise powers confided to either of the other departments on the ground that the appointment belongs to the executive department even if this were true as to the appointment of officers generally since such committeemen are mere agents of the city and not officers within the meaning of the Constitution.
2. The rule of law against delegation of power by the Legislature refers to the law-making power and does not prohibit the Legislature from delegating the selection of mere municipal agents.
3. The position of bridge committeeman is not an office within the meaning of a constitutional provision that no senator or representative shall during the time for which he may have been elected be eligible to an office, the election to which is vested in the legislative assembly.

(March 22, 1902.)

APPPEAL by relator from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Multnomah County in favor of defendants in a suit brought to test the rights of defendants to hold the positions of bridge committeemen of the city of Portland and to prevent them from issuing bonds for expenses connected with such bridges.

Affirmed.

Statement by Lord, J.:

This was a proceeding in the nature of a quo warranto, brought by the state upon the relation of D. F. Sherman, a citizen and taxpayer, to try the title of the respondents to hold the office of bridge committeemen under the Act of the legislative assembly commonly known as the "Meusdorffer Act." By section 2 of said Act it is provided that "the power and authority given to the cities named in section 1 hereof, since consolidated as the city of Portland, to construct, purchase, and hire and keep up and maintain bridges across the Willamette river, and to issue and dispose of bonds therefor, shall be exercised, as hereinafter provided, by eight tax-payers of Multnomah county, to be appointed by the two judges of the circuit court for said county, who shall be styled the 'Bridge Committee.'" The Act then directs that within thirty days after the time it takes effect it shall be the duty of said judges to appoint the committee referred to in section 2, and to cause notice of such appointment to be served on each person appointed. Within twenty days after notice of their appointment the members of the committee are directed to meet, and organize by the election of a presiding officer from their number, who shall be styled the "Chairman of the Committee;" by the selection of a clerk, who shall be styled the "Clerk of the Committee;" and the NOTE.—Constitutional power of courts or judges to appoint officers.

The general proposition has been sometimes made by the courts that appointments to office are intrinsically executive acts. State v. Barbour, 58 Conn. 76, 55 Am. Rep. 65; Taylor v. Com. 3 J. J. Marsh. 401; Evansville v. State, 4 L. R. A. 98, 118 Ind. 426.

But these cases do not actually decide that all appointments to office must be made by the executive department.

The proposition is modified in other cases to the effect that, while appointments are essentially executive acts, the power may be exercised by the Legislature or the courts as an incident to a principal power, that is where it is necessary to the exercise of legislative or judicial power. State v. Noble, 4 L. R. A. 101, 118 Ind. 850; State v. Denny, 4 L. R. A. 79, 118 Ind. 388; Hovey v. State, 119 Ind. 305; State v. Hyde, 121 Ind. 20.

Other cases say that appointments are not necessarily executive acts unless made so by the organic law or legislative enactment. People v. Morgan, 90 Ill. 558; People v. Hoffman, 3 West. Rep. 522, 118 Ill. 587.

The proposition that the act is executive is denied in a Maryland case, which holds that appointments may be made by the Legislature. Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 576, 74 Am. Dec. 572. The question as to legislative appointments, however, is not to be treated in this note.

In Taylor v. Com., 3 J. J. Marsh. 401, the constitution's power of a court to make an appointment was not involved as the Constitution itself gave the power; but the declaration that an appointment was intrinsically an executive act was made as the ground of dismissing a writ of error to review the action of a court in removing its clerk and appointing another.

So in Re Siebold, 100 U. S. 871, 25 L. ed. 717, the power of a circuit court to appoint supervisors of election under an Act of Congress was upheld by virtue of the constitutional provision that "Congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers as they think proper in the president alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments."

In Heinlen v. Sullivan, 64 Cal. 576, it was merely decided that the power to appoint police commissioners, vested in the judges of certain courts, was not a judicial power and therefore by the new Constitution was not devolved upon the judges of the superior court of San Francisco.

In People v. Rumsey, 64 Ill. 44, an Act for the appointment by the judges of Cook county of an official stenographer was held to be abrogated on the ground that it was special legislation, but no question was raised as to the nature of the power.

So in People v. Williams, 51 Ill. 63, no such question was raised although the power of the judge of a circuit court to appoint assessors in proceedings to condemn land for a park was upheld.

Numerous cases in the same state have upheld the appointment of drainage commissioners by the courts without any attack on this ground. Moore v. People, 106 Ill. 376; Blake v. People, 109 Ill. 504 appointment of a treasurer. The committee thus constituted is authorized to fill any vacancy that may occur in that body by death, resignation, removal from the city of which he is a resident, or otherwise, by appointment of a person to be a member thereof who is a bona fide resident of the city in which resided the member he is appointed to succeed. Whenever, and, in the judgment of the committee, as soon as the several bridges are procured as contemplated, or the limit of the sum of money authorized to be expended has been reached, the Act commands the selection of four persons, whose duty it shall be to maintain, manage, and keep the bridges in repair. These shall be styled individually "Bridge Commissioners," and collectively the "Bridge Commission;" and thereafter the power conferred upon the city by the enactment named shall be exercised by said commission in the manner explicitly provided. These commissioners are to be selected in the first instance by the committee from their own number, one each from the members who reside, respectively, in the cities of East Portland and Albina, and two from members who reside in the city of Portland, for the several terms of two, four, six, and eight years. In case a sufficient number do not consent to serve as such commissioners, the remainder may be selected from the resident tax-payers of the respective cities, and thereafter the commissioners shall be appointed by the said judges from such tax-payers in the following manner: If a vacancy arises otherwise than by the expiration of a term, for the remainder of the term; and in case of the expiration of a term, for the full term of eight years thereafter. The commission is required to meet at a time and place to be appointed by the committee, and organized by the election of a chairman, treasurer, and clerk, as provided in the case of the committee. When the commission is elected and organized in accordance with the intention of the law, the committee is directed to turn over to it the bridges and all property pertaining thereto and remaining under the control of the committee. It is then made the duty of the commission to take entire possession and charge of all the property and affairs of the committee, and thenceforward manage and conduct the same. The two judges of the circuit court of the state of Oregon for Multnomah county, acting in pursuance of the authority conferred by the terms of said Act, and within the time therein limited, duly appointed the respondents to the position of bridge committeemen, making the selection of the different individuals with reference to their places of residence and other qualifications prescribed. The committeemen met within the proper time, qualified, and organized in all respects in conformity with the law. On the 18th day of November, 1891, John M. Pittinger resigned. The remaining seven members of the committee, at a meeting duly called, appointed T. W. Pittinger, who possessed the requisite qualifications, as his successor. After reciting these and other facts, the petition then alleges "that the defendants to this action, and all and each of them, ever since their said appointment as aforesaid, and under said appointment, have acted as and claimed to be, and are now acting as and claiming to be, the bridge committee of said three cities," etc., "as the same existed prior to said consolidation, and as the same now exists, and has existed since said consolidation; and that said defendants, claiming to be said bridge committee, are about to issue, sell, and dispose of a large amount of the negotiable bonds," etc., "as provided for in said free Kilgour v. Drainage Comrs., 111 Ill. 842; Huston v. Clark, 113 Ill. 344; Owners of Lands v. People, 113 Ill. 296.

So in New York the appointment by judges of commissioners in proceedings to open streets is held to be judicial. Re Canal & W. Streets, 12 N. Y. 406; Striker v. Kelly, 2 Denio, 333; Re Canal Street, 11 Wend. 154, overruling Re Beekman St. 20 Johns. 268.

And an Act for the appointment by a judge of a circuit court of commissioners to construct a court-house was upheld in Kentucky without any question as to the power of appointment, but it was held that they were agents for the districts and not officers. McArthur v. Nelson, 81 Ky. 67.

In State v. Manlove, 33 Tex. 798, the pro tem. appointment of a district attorney by a district judge under authority of a statute was upheld without any question as to the constitutional power.

In Re Janitor of Supreme Ct. 35 Wis. 410, it was directly decided that there was power inherent in a court of record, especially one of last resort, to appoint its necessary assistants, such as janitors.

But in State v. Smith, 82 Mo. 51, reversing 15 Mo. App. 412, it was decided that this power did not exist in a criminal court where an ordinance provided for the appointment of its janitor by a commissioner of public buildings, even if he appointed a person whom the court did not approve.

In State v.oble, 4 L. R. A. 101, 118 Ind. 360, a statute providing for the appointment by the Legislature of supreme court commissioners to aid the 16 L. R. A.

court in its duties was held unconstitutional on the ground that the power to choose its assistants resides in the court.

In People v. Morgan, 90 Ill. 558, it was decided in an elaborate opinion that the provision of the Illinois Constitution that the governor by and with the consent of the Senate shall appoint all officers, whose appointment or election is not otherwise provided for, does not apply to municipal officers.

This case reviews the practice of the court in many cases to officers such as clerks, or state's attorneys to fill vacancies, as well as to appoint masters in chancery, reporters, supreme court librarians, janitors, etc.

This is followed in People v. Hoffman, 3 West. Rep. 522, 116 Ill. 587, upholding the power of county courts to appoint election commissioners.

In Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio St. 14, 8 Am. Rep. 24, it is decided that the Legislature may provide for the appointment by a court of the trustees of a contemplated railroad, because they are not public officers.

In Re Cooper, 23 N. Y. 67, the admission of an attorney by a court is held to be a judicial act and therefore subject to appeal.

It will be seen that the exact limit of the power of courts as to appointments is not entirely settled, but that a long continued and rarely challenged practice has in fact confided to courts the appointment of many officers of inferior grades especially those who are more or less under the control of the court making the appointment. B. A. R.

bridge Act, which said bonds will be a burden upon the property of the above-named relator, and the other citizens and tax-payers of the present city of Portland, and subject them to expensive litigation, in order to prevent the assessment and collection of taxes upon their property for the payment of the principal and interest of such bonds," etc.; concluding with a prayer for a judgment of ouster. The defendants demurred to the petition upon the ground of the insufficiency of the facts to constitute a cause of action. The demurrer was sustained by the court below, and judgment rendered dismissing the action, from which judgment this appeal is taken.

Messrs. Thomas A. Stephens, Dist. Atty., and Paxton & Paddock, for appellants:

Commissioners appointed by Act of the Legislature to lay out and build a road for the use of the public are public officers. An office is a public charge or employment, and every office is considered public, the duties of which concern the public.

People v. Hayes, 7 How. Pr. 248; United States v. Hartwell, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 385, 18 L. ed. 890; State v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 547; State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29.

The judges of the circuit court, no matter whether they are referred to as individuals or as judicial officers, are "persons charged with official duties under" the judicial department of the government, and by the terms of the Constitution are prohibited from exercising any of the functions of either of the other departments.

State v. Denny, 4 L. R. A. 65, 118 Ind. 449; State v. Denny, 4 L. R. A. 79, 118 Ind. 832; State v. Simons, 32 Minn. 540; Houston, T. & B. R. Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 817; People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 55.

The act of appointing to office is not a judicial duty, nor is it a function pertaining to the judicial department of the government.

Mechem, Pub. Off. §§ 104-106; Heinlen v. Sullivan, 64 Cal. 878; State v. Barbour, 53 Conn. 76, 55 Am. Rep. 65; Taylor v. Com. 3 J. J. Marsh. 401; State v. Kennon, supra; People v. McKee, 68 N. C. 429; State v. Tate, Id. 546; State v. Denny, 4 L. R. A. 65, 118 Ind. 449; Smith v. Strother, 68 Cal. 194.

This court in Biggs v. McBride, 17 Or. 640, decided that the Legislature in appointing railroad commissioners had not encroached upon the executive department or attempted to exercise powers belonging to the governor.

The railroad commissioners, however, are state officers of general authority throughout the state, charged with official duties to be exercised for the benefit of the state at large, and appointed for a fixed and limited term.

Even though the Legislature may exercise the power of appointment of such state officers of general authority, it has not power to make permanent appointments to fill purely local municipal offices, nor to invest such appointees with authority to tax or impose indebtedness upon the district for which they are appointed.

State v. Denny, 4 L. R. A. 65, 118 Ind. 449; Evansville v. State, 4 L. R. A. 93, 118 Ind. 16 L. R. A.

426; People v. Hurlbut, 24 Mich. 44, 9 Am. Rep. 108; People v. Detroit, 23 Mich. 228, 15 Am. Rep. 202; People v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17, 3 Am. Rep. 278; People v. Lynch, 51 Cal. 15, 21 Am. Rep. 677; People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 55; People v. Porter, 90 N. Y. 68; Mechem, Pub. Off. § 106.

The Legislature cannot delegate the powers conferred upon it.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 187; Thorne v. Cramer, 15 Barb. 112; Bradley v. Baxter, Id. 123; Barto v. Himrod, 8 N. Y. 483, 59 Am. Dec. 506; Willis v. Owen, 43 Tex. 41; Brewer Brick Co. v. Brewer, 62 Me. 62; State v. Hudson County Ass. Comrs. 37 N. J. L. 12; Auditor v. Holland, 14 Bush, 147; State v. Simmons, 32 Minn. 540; Oakland v. Carpenter, 13 Cal. 540; State v. Paterson, 84 N. J. L. 163; Ruggles v. Collier, 43 Mo. 353; St. Louis v. Clemens, 43 Mo. 395; Thomson v. Boonville, 61 Mo. 282; Whyte v. Nashville, 2 Swan, 364; Maxwell v. Bay City Bridge Co. 41 Mich. 453.

The respondent, C. H. Meusdorffer, was a member of the Legislature which passed the Meusdorffer Act, being a representative from Multnomah County. He was not eligible to be appointed a member of the bridge committee.

State v. Boyd, 21 Wis. 210; State v. Valle, 41 Mo. 29.

Mr. William T. Muir, City Atty., for respondents:

The entire law-making power of this state is committed to the Legislature, except so far as it is expressly or by necessary implication limited by the Constitution.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. 106, 107; David v. Portland Water Com. 14 Or. 98.

The Constitution broadly separates the powers of government into three branches. It does not undertake to declare what shall be considered a legislative, executive, or judicial Act. The authority to appoint municipal and other officers is not given to either department. In the absence of any express declaration to the contrary the power is merely ministerial and the Legislature may confer it in particular instances upon persons holding judicial office.

Or. Const. art. 3; 1 Hill's Code, § 86; People v. Morgan, 90 Ill. 558; Ill. Const. art. 3; Starr & C. Stat. 109; McArthur v. Nelson, 81 Ky. 67; Ky. Const. art. 1, §§ 1, 2; Gen. Stat. 91; People v. Salomon, 51 Ill. 89; Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 876; Police Comrs. v. Louisville, 3 Bush, 597; People v. Pinckney, 32 N. Y. 377; People v. Batchelor, 22 N. Y. 129; People v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 43; Cal. Const. art. 3; 1 Deering, Stat. bottom p. 36; David v. Portland Water Committee, 14 Or. 98.

The Legislature of the state has repeatedly exercised the appointing power in a manner similar to the method adopted in this case.

Laws Sp. Sess. 1885, p. 97; Sess. Laws 1887, p. 80; Sess. Laws 1891, p. 791.

Great weight should be given to contemporaneous construction.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. 81, 82; Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 876; Biggs v. McBride, 5 L. R. A. 115, 17 Or. 640.

This interpretation of the Constitution by the Legislature has been upheld by this court. David v. Portland Water Committee, and Biggs v. McBride, supra; Cook v. Port of Portland, 20 Or. 580.

The correct interpretation of article 8 of the Constitution of this state is that no person employed in one department of the government shall at the same time be employed in either of the other two.

People v. Provinces, 84 Cal. 520.

The position of bridge committeeman is not an "office" within the meaning of the Constitution. He is a mere agent of the city.

David v. Portland Water Committee, supra; Barton v. Kalloch, 56 Cal. 95.

The phrase "elected or appointed" does not refer to municipal officers.

Barton v. Kalloch and People v. Provinces, supra; People v. Henry, 62 Cal. 557.

Lord, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The question presented for our determination arises upon the sufficiency of the facts to show the defendants are entitled to hold the office of bridge committee, and to exercise the functions thereof. The aim of the proceeding is to test the constitutionality of the method provided by the Act (Sess. Laws 1891, p. 633) commonly known as the "Meusdorffer Act," for the appointment of the bridge committee. It is insisted that the facts alleged show that the defendants are holding the offices of bridge committee, and exercising the functions thereof, without title or legal right, because the two judges of the circuit court for Multnomah county, referred to in the Act, are prohibited by article 8 of the Constitution from exercising the appointing power, or any function other than judicial. This proceeds upon the assumption that the act of the two judges of the circuit court in appointing the bridge committee was not a judicial duty, nor a function pertaining to the judicial department of the government. By article 8 of the Constitution the powers of the government are divided into three separate departments,—the legislative; the executive, including the administrative; and the judicial,—and any person charged with official duties under one of these departments is prohibited from exercising the functions or powers confided to either of the other departments, except as in the Constitution expressly provided. It is claimed that the two judges of the circuit court, no matter whether they are referred to in the Meusdorffer Act as individuals or judicial officers, are persons charged with official duties under the judicial department of the government, as the members of the Legislature are under the legislative department; and that by force of this constitutional provision the Legislature is prohibited from conferring upon such judges, and such judges from exercising, the power of appointment conferred by the Act; and hence such Act and all the appointments under it are void. There can be no doubt that there are authorities to the effect that the exercise of the power of appointment to office is an executive Act, and that, being such, the power cannot be exercised by the Legislature or judiciary under a constitutional provision distributing the powers of government into three separate departments, 16 L. R. A.

like our own. But this question, although not directly passed upon by the court in Biggs v. McBride, 17 Or. 640, 5 L. R. A. 115, nevertheless received a good deal of its attention. The point was there made that so much of the Act creating the offices of railroad commissioners as permitted them to be filled in joint convention of both Houses of the Legislature was in conflict with the Constitution, and void. After referring to article 8 and section 1, art. 5, of the Constitution, Strahan, J., said: "Now, if it could be shown that the power to appoint all officers which are not expressly made elective by the people is a part of the chief executive power of the state, the appellant's contention would be sustained. But no authority whatever has been cited to sustain this view, nor is it believed that any exists. On the contrary, the provisions of the fifth article of the Constitution, which relates to the executive department, all seem at variance with this view. The framers of this instrument evidently designed that no prerogative powers should be left lurking in any of its provisions. No doubt they remembered something of the history of the conflicts with prerogatives in that country from which we inherited the common law. They therefore defined the powers of the chief executive of the state so clearly and distinctly that there ought to be no controversy concerning the method of filling the same, or, in some cases, of changing the method of filling an existing office." After proceeding to enumerate several instances in which the power had been exercised by the Legislature in making these appointments to office, which were in no way connected with the discharge of legislative duties, he concluded his opinion upon this point by saying: "The power exercised by the Legislature in the appointment of some of these officers is almost coeval with the Constitution. The power thus exercised has never been called in question, but has ever been acquiesced in by every department of the government, and is in itself a contemporaneous construction of the Constitution, which, if the question were doubtful, might be sufficient to turn the scale in its favor. Under any view, such construction is entitled to great weight, and could not be lightly regarded."

Except as limited by constitutional restrictions, it is agreed that the Legislature may exercise all governmental powers. It is the law-making power of the estate. "Plenary power in the Legislature," said Denio, Ch. J., "for all purposes of civil government, is the rule. A prohibition to exercise a particular power is an exception." People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 548. While our Constitution separates the powers of government into three distinct departments, and prohibits any of them from exercising any powers confided to the other, it does not undertake to declare what shall be considered legislative, executive, or judicial acts. As Walker, J., said: "That provision declares, only in general terms, that each department of government shall be confined to the exercise of the functions of its own department. It does not undertake to define in any specific manner what are legislative, executive, or judicial powers or acts. Like most other provisions of that instrument, the terms employed are of the most general and comprehensive character. We find no provision that declares that the appointment of a municipal officer, however extensive his powers, is the exercise of a legislative or executive power." People v. Morgan, 90 Ill. 562.

But it is argued that, if it be conceded that Biggs v. McBride, supra, established the principle that the Legislature, in the appointment of the railroad commissioners, had not encroached upon the executive department of the government, they were state officers, charged with official duties to be exercised for the benefit of the state at large, and appointed for a fixed term, while the members of the bridge committee, provided for by the Meusdorffer Act, are municipal officers, or a municipal board of local authority, in which the state generally has no interest, and appointed for an indefinite term. Hence it is claimed, even though the Legislature may exercise the power to appoint such state officers of general authority, that it has not the power to make appointments to fill municipal officers for an indefinite term. But it seems to us the force of this contention is broken by the case of David v. Portland Water Committee, 14 Or. 98. The duties of that board or committee, in principle, were like the duties of the defendant bridge committee. If the members of the water committee were not officers in the sense of the Constitution, but "no more than agents of the city," as held in that case, the members of the bridge committee must likewise be agents for the city, and not officers within the meaning of the Constitution. It would be difficult to show upon principle by a comparison of the acts wherein they differ so as to make the members of the water committee agents, and the members of the bridge committee officers. That the persons named by the Act as the bridge committee were, as Thayer, J., said of the individuals designated as the water committee, "officers, in the broad sense of that term, there can be no question; but whether they were such officers as were intended by said section 3, art. 15, of the Constitution, is very doubtful. In order to be such officers, they must have been elected or appointed to an office under the Constitution, which I understand to be an office provided for by that instrument." The same would be true of the bridge committee, so far as this section of the Constitution applies. But the court, in David v. Portland Water Committee, supra, based its decision upon the principle decided in McArthur v. Nelson, 81 Ky. 67. In that case the Act authorized the judge of the circuit court to appoint three commissioners of the district, who should hold their office at the will and pleasure of the judge. It was made the duty of the commissioners to have constructed a court-house at a cost not to exceed a sum specified, and to enable them to raise the money they were authorized to issue bonds, to redeem them, and to levy an annual tax upon the real and personal property of the district. In determining the question as to whether such commissioners were officers or not, under the Constitution, Pryor, J., said: "Nor do we think it was necessary for the Legislature to prescribe the term of office for the commissioners, although they are made a body corporate and politic, with power to sue and be sued, contract and be contracted with, under the style of 'Commissioners of the Court-House District.' They are not district officers, within the meaning of section 10 of article 6 of the Constitution, but are mere agents of the district, required by the Act to discharge certain duties with reference to the building of a court-house; and when those duties and their employment terminates.

To hold that such commissioners are to be selected, and, when selected, to be removed as officers within the meaning of the Constitution, would be determining by judicial precedent every one charged with the execution of a ministerial duty under legislative sanction an officer, whose term must be designated, or the appointment will be held invalid." In commenting upon that case, Thayer, J., said: "The question involved in that case is very similar to the one here, and the language of the court expresses the view we entertain regarding it,—that the members of the water committee are no more than agents of the city, required by the act to carry out its provisions, as was said in that case regarding the commissioners to build the court-house."

Within the principle here decided, the vice of the argument for appellant lies in assuming that the members of the bridge committee are officers. Counsel proceed upon this hypothesis, but contend that, being municipal officers of local or limited authority, their appointment by the Legislature cannot be sustained, for their duties are not such as to affect the state at large, and cannot, therefore, be upheld, as in the case of the appointment of state officers to discharge duties in which the general public are interested. But if the members of the bridge committee are not officers, but agents, appointed to carry out the provisions of the Act, the argument can have no application. In the absence of constitutional restrictions, the power of the Legislature over municipal corporations is unlimited, except so far as they are endowed with rights incident to a private corporation. Dill. Mun. Corp. 8d ed. § 66. But counsel for appellant, recognizing the effect of these decisions upon the pending question, and the practice of our Legislature, coeval with the formation of the state government to create and fill a certain class of offices, further argue that, if it be admitted that the Legislature had power, under these decisions,—Biggs v. McBride, supra, and David v. Portland Water Committee,—not only to create the bridge committee, but to appoint the persons constituting the same, this power cannot be delegated by the Legislature to the judges of the circuit court to be exercised by them in the appointment of the members of the committee. It is no doubt true that the Legislature cannot delegate the powers conferred upon it. The general rule of law to this effect is unquestioned. But this refers to the delegation of the law-making power. It prohibits the delegation of authority to legislate, or to devolve upon others duties which must be performed by it as a legislative body. Every law must be executed, if at all, by some one charged with that particular duty. Laws special in their nature, and of the kind in question, and as in David v. Portland Water Committee, supra, may be carried into effect by agents appointed for that purpose. Within that decision, nothing more nor less has been done in this case. The Legislature exercised its function in enacting the law and directing the manner of its execution. Nor is the authority given by the Act to the two judges of the circuit court to appoint the members of the bridge committee, even considered as officers, without judicial precedent to sustain it, as not in conflict with section 1 of article 3 of our Constitution. In Illinois there is a like provision substantially. Ill. Const. art. 3 (Starr & C. Stat. 109.) In People v. Morgan, 90 Ill. 558, the power of the judiciary to appoint certain officials, whose duties are not strictly judicial, or even connected with the business of the courts, was fully recognized and sustained. A statute of that state, which authorized the judge of the circuit court of Cook county to appoint assessors and commissioners for the South park, located in that county, was held to be constitutional. The point was expressly made that the circuit judge could not appoint a park commissioner, on the ground that he was thereby exercising an executive or political function, forbidden by the clause of the Constitution referred to. The point was, however, overruled, and the power of the judge or judges to make the appointment was sustained. After giving numerous examples of official appointments made by the judges or courts, Walker, J., said: "The executive power in a state is understood to be that power, wherever lodged, which compels the laws to be enforced and obeyed. And the instrumentalities employed for that purpose are officers, elected or appointed, who are charged with the enforcement of the laws. But the power to appoint is by no means an executive function, unless made so by the organic law or legislative enactment. And in this case it is not so unless the power is thus conferred. If it were conceded that these appointments were the exercise of political power, would it necessarily be violative of any provision of the Constitution? The division and allotment of powers are not into political, executive, and judicial, but into legislative, executive, and judicial. It was no doubt the exercise of political power, as that embraces all governmental powers and functions, whether exercised by one department or another, or the officers of one or the other. Political power is the policy of government or its administration, and may be exercised either in the formation or administration of government, or both. Hence it follows that, if it be a political power, that, of itself, in no wise militates against its exercise by a person belonging to the judicial department of the government. All three departments aid in the administration of government, but perform different functions. The elector who votes for an officer or measure exercises political power, yet no one would claim that, because a judge was a person belonging to the judicial department, he was prohibited from thus voting. We therefore conclude that, if the power to appoint to office is a political function, this article of the Constitution does not prohibit its exercise because the power is political; and, if prohibited, it must be for some other reason, or by some other provision, which, in terms or by necessary implication, prohibits such an exercise of the appointing power." And again he says: "But this is not a question as to what department these officers belong to or the functions they perform, but the question is, What department, in the absence of an election, can constitutionally confer the power on them to perform public duties? It is not whether the General Assembly, the executive, or the judiciary are the best qualified to select or appoint such officers, but Where is the power to do so lodged? The original power to fill all offices rests with the people, but our Constitution has vested the power in the governor to fill all constitutional offices not provided for by election or otherwise." In People v. Hoffman, 116 Ill. 589, 8 West. Rep. 522, it was held that section 1, article 2, of the Election Law of 1885, for cities, etc., which provides for the creation of a board of election commissioners consisting of three members, and directs that they be appointed by the county court, is not violative of that provision of the Constitution dividing the powers of government into three departments, and prohibiting any one of such departments from exercising powers properly belonging to either of the others. It was there urged that the appointment of the commissioners could not be conferred upon the county court, because such appointment involves an exercise of political power, while the functions of the county court are exclusively judicial. But Magruder, J., said: "The reasoning in People v. Morgan shows that it was never intended to vest in the governor the selection of such local and municipal officers as these commissioners. The power to appoint officers of this class is not specifically designated in the Constitution as either a legislative, judicial, or executive power. It is not therein specifically conferred on either department. Nor is there anything therein expressed which, either directly or impliedly, prohibits the Legislature from authorizing the county court to appoint the commissioners. Therefore the authority conferred on that court to do so does not make the Act invalid. The law-making powers of the states can do any legislative Acts not prohibited by the state Constitutions."

A statute of the United States authorizes the circuit courts of the United States to appoint supervisors of election in certain cases and under certain conditions therein specified. In Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 371, 25 L. ed. 717, the point was made that the United States circuit courts had not the power to appoint supervisors of election, on the ground that the duties of such courts were judicial, while the supervisors of election were officers whose duties were executive in their character. But the court held otherwise, Mr. Justice Bradley saying: "It is no doubt usual and proper to vest the appointment of inferior officers in that department of the government, executive or judicial, or in that particular executive department, to which the duties of such office appertain. But there is no absolute requirement to this effect in the Constitution, and, if there were it would be difficult in many cases to determine to which department an office properly belonged. Take that of marshal, for instance. He is an executive officer, whose appointment is, in ordinary cases, left to the president and the Senate. But if Congress should, as it might, vest the appointment elsewhere, it would be questionable whether it would be in the president alone, in the department of justice, or in the courts. The marshal is pre-eminently the officer of the courts; and in case of a vacancy Congress has in fact passed a law bestowing the temporary appointment of the marshal upon the justice of the circuit in which the district where the vacancy occurs is situated." But, independent of these considerations, the power to appoint the bridge committee may be upheld on the ground that the two judges of the circuit court for Multnomah county in performing this duty act as individuals, and not as judges. This conclusion the court thought in People v. Morgan, supra, might be drawn from the Act authorizing the circuit judges of Cook county to appoint park commissioners; Walker, J., in speaking for the court, saying: "The power might, no doubt, be sustained on the ground that its exercise is the act of the individual, and not the performance of an official function; that the act referring to the judge was only intended to apply to the person who filled the office at the time when the appointment was required to be made, whether it should be the same or a different person; thus being the individual act of the incumbent. . . . So that, whether the appointment of these park commissioners be the exercise of a judicial, ministerial, or other function, whether it be the act of the officer as such or as an individual, we are of the opinion that the power was well conferred, and might be properly exercised by the circuit judge."

In view of these considerations, our decisions, and those of other courts, and the power exercised by the Legislature in making a certain class of appointments, almost coeval with the Constitution, it is immaterial whether the appointment by the judges of the members of the bridge committee be considered the exercise of a judicial, ministerial, or other function, or it be the act of the judges as such or as individuals, or whether the members of the committee be considered as agents of the city, and not officers; the result is the same, and affirms the validity of the Act granting the power.

The second question presented for our determination is whether the appointment of the defendant C. H. Meusdorffer as a member of the bridge committee is valid, he being a member of the Legislature which passed the Act. The contention of the appellant is that he was not eligible to be appointed a member of the bridge committee, because such appointment is in conflict with section 30 of article 4 of the Constitution. That provision is as follows: "No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he may have been elected, be eligible to an office, the election to which is vested in the legislative assembly," etc. Within the meaning of the Constitution, as held in David v. Portland Water Committee, under a statute of similar import, the position of bridge committeeman is not an office. He is a mere agent of the city. So that, turn over this case as we may, keeping in view the well-recognized rule that doubt must be solved in favor of the validity of the law, and that a law, to be invalid, must clearly conflict with the Constitution, we must affirm the judgment.

SOUTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

Martha J. WOODARD, Admx., etc., of Addison S. Woodard, Deceased, Rept.,
v.

J. Frierson WOODARD in His Own Right and as Admr., etc., of Stephen D. Woodard, Deceased, Impleaded, etc., Appt.

(..... S. C.)

The vindication of the honor of his intestate is not a purpose for which an administrator can use funds of the estate by employing counsel to aid in prosecuting for murder one who killed the intestate and attacks his honor by matters which he alleges in justification of the crime.

(April 19, 1892.)

A PPEAL by defendant J. Frierson Woodard from a judgment of the Common Pleas Circuit Court for Sumter County in favor of plaintiff in a proceeding instituted to set aside NOTE.—Expenditure of administrator for the protection of decedent's character.

It was held in Luak v. Anderson, 1 Met. (Ky.) 423, that an administrator cannot bind the estate for the fee of counsel employed by him to prosecute the supposed murderer of his decedent.

An executor is not entitled to credit in his general account for a payment made to save a legatee 16 L. R. A.

from disgrace and to preserve the elevated standing and character of the family of his testator. Jones v. Ward, 10 Yerg. 160.

We have been unable to find any other adjudications upon the propriety of charges against an estate, incurred for services, or prompted by motives, similar to those involved in the principal case. J. G. G.

appellant's discharge as administrator of Stephen D. Woodard, deceased, and to require him to account for assets which came into his hands as such administrator and remained unaccounted for. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Haynsworth & Cooper, for appellant:

The law recognizes a right to vindicate the dead in its punishment for libel, where, although the person libeled be dead at the time of the publication of the libel, yet it is punishable if its tendency is to stir up others of the same family or society to break the peace in vindication of the memory of the deceased.

2 Addison, Torts, § 1171.

The administrator is to be guided in his expenditures by the directions of the statute. But our own courts have always treated those directions as flexible and expansive.

Garrett v. Garrett, 2 Strobb. Eq. 373; Van Emon v. Tulare County Super. Ct. 76 Cal. 589; Sullivan v. Horner, 41 N. J. Eq. 299.

Messrs. Earle & Purdy for respondent.

McGowan, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The complaint alleges that Stephen B. Woodard, late of the county of Sumter, departed this life intestate, seised and possessed of a considerable estate, leaving as his heirs-at-law the plaintiff, his brother, and the defendants, Nancy Woodard, his mother, Henry Woodard and J. Frierson Woodard, his brothers, and Winnie S. Stuckey and Mary E. Stuckey, his sisters; that J. Frierson Woodard was appointed administrator of the estate. And plaintiff is informed and believes that said administrator has not accounted for certain specified personal property belonging to the estate, and had paid out without warrant or authority of law various sums of money, amounting in the aggregate to $1,250, for some services rendered by certain gentlemen of the bar for and in behalf of the said J. Frierson Woodard in his own right, and not for the benefit of the said estate, and that upon an ex parte application, of which the plaintiff had no notice, the said J. Frierson Woodard was improperly and illegally discharged as administrator as aforesaid by the probate court for said county; that Nancy Woodard, Henry Woodard, Winnie S. Stuckey, and Mary E. Stuckey were made defendants because they refused to join as plaintiffs in the action. Wherefore the plaintiff prayed that the pretended discharge of the said J. Frierson Woodard as administrator should be set aside, and the said administrator aforesaid be required to account for his actings and doings, etc. J. F. Woodard answered, denying that he was illegally discharged as administrator, or that he had failed to account for any property of the estate in his hands to be administered. He admitted, however, that as administrator he paid out the sums of money referred to in the complaint, aggregating $1,250, as stated, but denied that he paid such sums without warrant or authority of law, or in his own behalf; and he denied that said payments were not for the benefit of the estate. "He alleges that the intestate, the brother of the plaintiff as well as of this defendant, was intentionally shot down and killed suddenly, in the main street of the town of

16 L. R. A.

Bishopville, being engaged in no conflict, or even altercation, with his slayer; that it was alleged on the part of the slayer and by his friends that he was justified in so slaughtering the deceased, who, it was alleged, had been guilty of such ungentlemanly and insulting and dishonoring conduct towards, and remarks to or about, an unmarried daughter of the slayer that he (the deceased) deserved to be shot down as he had been, and merited the ignominious death which befell him; that rumor was busy in besmirching the fair reputation of the deceased, who had occupied a respectable station in society, had demeaned himself as a high-toned and honorable gentleman, and had meritoriously achieved for himself a good name and reputation; that it was known that the slayer, in his approaching trial for the said homicide, would seek an opportunity to justify himself, or diminish the criminality of his act, by endeavoring to establish the truth of the allegations above referred to, of ungentlemanly and insulting and dishonoring conduct and remarks of the deceased towards and of or about the said young lady; and the nearest relatives and heirs of the deceased (except, perhaps, the plaintiff) felt that it was due to the memory of the deceased, and that it was an obligation of the highest nature upon them, that at least a portion of deceased's estate should be used in the vindication of his name and character from charges which menaced his name and character with obloquy; that for such vindication it was necessary to employ counsel to assist the state's attorney in the preparation for and the conduct of the said trial, and that the lawyers' fees, the payment of which is objected to in the complaint, were paid to the attorneys for their services in the preparation for and conduct of said trial; that the deceased left an estate of the value of more than $10,000 over and above all his indebtedness; that the payment of said fees by the legal representative of the deceased out of his estate was a proper expenditure, and for the benefit of the estate," etc. The plaintiff died pending the suit, and Judge Witherspoon, on October 26, 1889, passed an order by which the action was continued in the name of Martha J. Woodard, his administratrix. The cause came on for trial before Judge Fraser, who, stating that for the purposes of the hearing, and for this purpose only, the allegations in the complaint and answer were admitted to be true, with the additional fact that upon the trial of the case therein referred to William A. James was acquitted by the jury, held that he was not able to find any authority which would justify him in holding that the administrator of Stephen D. Woodard had a right to use a portion of his estate to pay fees to counsel employed by him to assist the solicitor in prosecuting the case against William A. James, charged with the murder of the deceased; and he therefore decreed that Martha J. Woodard, as administratrix of Addison S. Woodard, do recover against J. Frierson Woodard, administrator of Stephen D. Woodard, one sixth of $1,250 of the estate of the intestate so improperly paid out, with proper interest thereon, and referred it to the master to inquire and report what amount of principal and interest was due, etc. From this decree the defendant appeals to this court upon several grounds. Inasmuch, however, as we think the real and only question in the case now is whether the administrator of the estate of the intestate, Stephen D. Woodard, was authorized by law to make the expenditure of $1,250 for the professional services referred to, we need not set out in detail the grounds of appeal, which are all in the brief.

There can be no question as to the great importance of moral obligations, but the court has no power to enforce them as such. They lie beyond the scope of human tribunals for the administration of justice. As we understand it, our duty is simply to administer the law of the land as we conceive it, and we think it would be not only a grave but futile and dangerous error to attempt to reach beyond that. The universal law of civilized nations makes it the first duty of his legal representative to bury the body of the deceased in a decent manner, suitable to the estate he has left behind him. When that is done the law declares that his assets, after proper allowances for the expenses of administration, shall be applied to the payment of his debts in a particular order: (1) Funeral and other expenses of the last sickness; (2) debts due to the public, etc. It is true that in the case of Percival v. McVoy, Dudley, L. 839, the majority of the court held that the aforesaid Act, in reference to "funeral and other expenses of the last sickness," should be construed liberally, as it was in accordance with the principles of Christian civilization to let it inure to its proper end,—the full relief of the sick and infirm. But the expenses here in question were never debts of the intestate. They were incurred after his death, and we can find no authority for placing them in the class, either of funeral and other "expenses of the last sickness," or of the "expenses of administration." While we may well understand and appreciate the natural feeling which induced the expenditures, we cannot say that they were for the benefit of the estate, in the sense of the act, or allowed by law. We think there is nothing substantial in the circumstance that Judge Fraser put at the head of his decree the title of the case as it was originally instituted, and as the defendants' attorneys did in their printed argument for this court; but the decree recites the fact that "Addison S. Woodard had died since the commencement of the action, and the case had been continued in the name of his representative, Martha J. Woodard, administratrix," and the judgment was "that Martha J. Woodard, as administratrix of Addison S. Woodard, do recover against J. Frierson Woodard, administrator of Stephen D. Woodard, one sixth," etc. It was a mere clerical mistake, and a very natural one, and did not involve any substantial right. See Henlein v. Graham, 32 S. C. 307. We do not think this is an ordinary accounting by the administrator for a portion of the estate of his intestate unaccounted for, in which he would certainly be entitled to commissions; but we suppose the administrator received his commissions for paying out the fund when the settlement of the estate took place in the probate office. We are constrained to concur with the circuit judge.

The judgment of this court is that the judgment of the Circuit Court be affirmed.

McIver, Ch. J., and Pope, J., concur.

CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT.

Frank E. BATES, Appt.,

v.

E. S. BABCOCK, Jr., et al., Respts.

(.....Cal.....)

1. Only the entire absence of a material fact in a complaint will make it insufficient on appeal to sustain a judgment on the merits.

2. An oral agreement of partnership in the profits of buying and selling real property is not within the Statute of Frauds.

(Beatty, Ch. J., dissent.)

(August 4, 1892.)

NOTE.—Validity of parol partnership for dealing in lands.

There is very little real conflict in the decisions upon this question. There are two lines of authorities each fairly consistent with itself and radically opposed to the other, which fact is caused, not by any conflict in principle, but by the different ends sought by the litigants. As a rule parol contracts for such partnerships are held valid and all suits recognizing the existence of the partnership and seeking relief which may be legitimately sought by a partner are upheld, while on the other hand parol contracts for an interest in land are ignored and suits brought to enforce them dismissed, although they may constitute a part of a partnership agreement.

Parol agreement to procure land on joint account.

A contract by one to buy lands on joint account of himself and another is within the statute. Parsons v. Phelan, 124 Mass. 109; Bailey v. Hemenway, 16 L. R. A.

6 New Eng. Rep. 612, 147 Mass. 326; Brosnan v. McKee, 6 West. Rep. 163, 63 Mich. 454; Hollida v. Shoop, 4 Md. 465, 59 Am. Dec. 68; Green v. Drummond, 31 Md. 71, 1 Am. Rep. 14; Wallace v. Stevens, 64 Me. 225.

So an agreement to purchase land and transfer a portion to another is within the statute. Harrison v. Bailey, 14 S. C. 234; Erben v. Lorillard, 19 N. Y. 299; Levy v. Brush, 45 N. Y. 599; Lamas v. Bayly, 2 Vern. 627.

So an agreement by one to acquire title to land and then to convey a share thereof to another, upon the latter's paying his proportionate share of the purchase money, is within the statute. Dunphy v. Ryan, 116 U. S. 491, 29 L. ed. 703.

Under an agreement that land shall be purchased for the joint benefit of two, if one procures the title to be transferred to himself the other cannot compel a division of the land. Robbins v. Kimball, 55 Ark. 416.

No action will lie to recover a portion of the APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Superior Court for San Diego County in favor of defendants, and from an order denying a motion for new trial, in an action brought to obtain a settlement of certain alleged partnership transactions which had taken place between the parties. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Sprigg & Barber, for appellant:

The contract was not obnoxious to the Statute of Frauds, for it was not an "agreement for the sale of real property, or of an interest therein."

Cal. Civ. Code, § 1741.

It was formerly held in Massachusetts, and imitated in California, that a copartnership agreement to deal in lands must be in writing.

1 Devlin, Deeds, § 80; Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 639.

This rule, however, "is not in accord with the modern decisions."

1 Devlin, Deeds, §§ 80, 50, 51; Coward v. Clanton, 79 Cal. 23.

An oral agreement by which one is to negotiate the purchase of lands, and the other is to pay the price and take title, and when the latter shall sell the profits shall be divided between them, is not within the Statute of Frauds.

Snyder v. Wolford, 88 Minn. 175, 53 Am. Rep. 22.

The subject-matter of the contract was the profits to be realized from sales made, and the controversy here is as to such profits, and the adjustment of accounts as between the partners. This is a matter over which a court of equity has complete jurisdiction, and the defendant cannot, after the contract has been executed, and the profits have gone into his hands, be heard to say that the contract under which the profits were realized was void under the Statute of Frauds.

Coward v. Clanton, supra.

The contract does not differ from those partnerships formed for the purpose of buying and selling real estate. Bates held the naked legal title in trust for the Millers, who had paid the consideration to the Beach Company, his grantors, and had made the improvements.

Cal. Civ. Code, § 853; Hidden v. Jordan, 21 Cal. 98.

The trust fastened not to the person of the trustee, but to the property.

2 Pom. Eq. §§ 298, 299.

The Statute of Frauds has no application to an executed agreement.

Remington v. Palmer, 62 N. Y. 34; Green v. Wells, 2 Cal. 586; Beach v. Oovillard, 4 Cal. 817; Whiting v. Heslep, 4 Cal. 830; McDonald v. Mountain Lake Water Co. 4 Cal. 836.

If the defendants intended to perform, their intentions should be enforced, for otherwise plaintiff will greatly suffer on account of his full or part performance.

Arguello v. Edinger, 10 Cal. 159; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1293; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 838, 873, 874, 921; Owen v. Frink, 24 Cal. 176; Willink v. Vandever, 1 Barb. 607; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 103, 368; Swain v. Burnette, 89 Cal. 569; Caldwell v. Carrington, 84 U. S. 9 Pet. 86, 9 L. ed. 60; Hidden v. Jordan, 21 Cal. 101; Grant v. Burr, 54 Cal. 300.

lands bought under an agreement for a joint purchase. Henderson v. Hudson, 1 Munf. 510.

And in such case if one party refuses to pay his share of the purchase money and the advance payment is forfeited no action will lie against him to recover his share of the loss sustained. Walker v. Herring, 21 Gratt. 680, 8 Am. Rep. 618.

On the other side, under the Texas statute, which merely requires contracts for the "sale of lands" to be in writing, an agreement to bid off property at a sheriff's sale on joint account is not within the statute. James v. Fulcoord, 5 Tex. 518, 55 Am. Dec. 742.

So an agreement to locate land certificates and procure patents in consideration of part of the lands is not within the statute. Watkins v. Gilkerson, 10 Tex. 340; Evans v. Hardeman, 15 Tex. 490; Smock v. Tandy, 28 Tex. 120; Gibbons v. Bell, 45 Tex. 417.

So a contract that if A will move B to a certain place B will give A a portion of all the lands he acquires by reason of his location in such place, is not within the statute. Miller v. Roberts, 18 Tex. 16, 67 Am. Dec. 688.

So in Mississippi a contract to procure a conveyance of land and convey a portion to another upon payment of a share of the purchase money is not within the statute. Evans v. Green, 23 Miss. 295.

Incorporation of such contract in partnership agreement.

Where a law firm agreed to purchase real estate the title to be taken by one for the benefit of both, and he, after acquiring title, repudiated the agreement, the contract was held not to be enforceable. Clarke v. McAuliffe (Wis.) Jan. 12, 1892.

An agreement to form a partnership for the purchase of lands containing timber, by the terms of which one party is to negotiate the purchase, 16 L. R. A.

take the title in his own name, and pay the purchase money, and the other party is to render services in manufacturing the timber into lumber, in consideration of which he is to receive a portion of the land, which is to be conveyed to him, and an interest in the profits made,—is a contract which must be in writing. Raub v. Smith, 61 Mich. 543.

The fact that such contract is part of a partnership agreement is immaterial so far as recovering a portion of the land is concerned.

A bill to compel conveyance of a share of the property cannot be maintained. Parker v. Bodley, 4 Ky. 102; Cowell v. Watts, 3 Hall & T. 224; Young v. Wheeler, 34 Fed. Rep. 93.

Validity of parol partnership generally.

There seems to be no claim that a partnership agreement cannot in general be formed by parol. When the concern is once established it seems that it may purchase lands although it exists only in parol. And it is immaterial that the title is in one of the partners. Allison v. Perry, 130 Ill. 9, affirming 28 Ill. App. 400.

And it seems that real estate owned by it will have all the characteristics of other partnership real estate. Bopp v. Fox, 63 Ill. 540.

A parol partnership is valid and real estate held by it for partnership purposes will constitute partnership property and be subject to the same disposition as other partnership property. Knott v. Knott, 6 Or. 142.

The partnership is not invalid because one of its objects is to purchase real estate for use by the firm. Smith v. Tarlton, 2 Barb. Ch. 333, 5 L. ed. 665.

It is immaterial that the purchase of specific lands is contemplated. Pennybacker v. Leary, 65 Iowa, 222.

That lands are partnership property may be

Messrs. Works & Works, for respondents:

The basis upon which the appellant proposed to compel an accounting was shown by his demand made upon the defendants before bringing this suit, in which he says: "I hereby offer to transfer to you said property and its proceeds and to fully account with you." It shows also that the title to the property was then in the appellant.

There can be no kind of question that this was a contract for the purchase of an interest in real estate. If so it is directly within the letter, as well as the spirit, of our statute.

Chester v. Dickerson, 54 N. Y. 1.

A contract for any interest in lands, legal or equitable, no matter how small, is within the statute.

1 Warvelle, Vend. & P. 172; Fuller v. Read, 38 Cal. 99; Whiting v. Butler, 29 Mich. 121; Grover v. Buck, 34 Mich. 519; Daniels v. Bailey, 43 Wis. 566; 8 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, 694 et seq.

The attempt is to show an express trust in Hubbell, for the benefit of the parties to this action, which must itself have been expressed in the deed to have been valid.

Civ. Code, § 852; Re Hinckley, 58 Cal. 488.

There is nothing whatever in the deed which shows what the terms of the contract, alleged in the complaint, were. It would still have to be established wholly by parol testimony, which is the very thing the statute is intended to guard against.

Swain v. Burnette, 89 Cal. 564.

Harrison, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff brought this action against the defendants for an accounting upon a partnership agreement between them for the purchase and disposition of certain real estate in San Diego. At the trial of the action the plaintiff offered himself as a witness, and, under the objection of the defendants that it was incompetent and immaterial, gave testimony tending to show that an oral agreement had been made between himself and the defendant Babcock, acting on behalf of the defendant the Coronado Beach Company, of which he was president, by which they were to pay off the incumbrances upon certain real estate, sell and dispose of the same, and share the profits and loss in dealing therein; that for that purpose he gave to the defendants $15,000 with which to pay certain claims and incumbrances thereon, and that the same was so applied; and that at the request of the defendant Babcock a conveyance of the property was executed to one Hubbell, who was the secretary of the defendant corporation. After this testimony had been given the defendants moved to strike out all portions thereof "relating to an agreement for an alleged partnership between the plaintiff and the defendants, or either of them, in the land described in the complaint, or any partnership between the parties, upon the ground that the same is incompetent and immaterial; that a partnership of the character alleged in the complaint must be proved by an instrument in writing, signed proved by parol. Fairchild v. Fairchild, 64 N. Y. 471.

Although the title is in one of the members. York v. Clemens, 41 Iowa, 95.

In Pennsylvania it was originally held that real estate cannot be shown to be partnership property by parol. Hale v. Henrie, 2 Watts, 143, 27 Am. Dec. 299; Ridgway's App. 15 Pa. 177, 53 Am. Dec. 588.

Under that rule a parol agreement made before a partnership exists to put land into the firm or to consider it as firm property passed no title either in law or equity. McCormick's App. 67 Pa. 54, 98 Am. Dec. 191.

But if the land is bought with partnership funds for partnership purposes, and title is taken in the name of one of the partners, it may be shown to be partnership property. Erwin's App. 39 Pa. 536, 80 Am. Dec. 542.

And as between the partners themselves it will be firm property although conveyed to them as tenants in common. Abbott's App. 50 Pa. 234.

So that the present rule seems to be that as between the partners themselves parol evidence is admissible to show that real estate is firm property, but as to third persons, an agreement of parties to make real estate part of the common stock must be in writing. Le Fevre's App. 69 Pa. 122; Ebbert's App. 70 Pa. 79; Harding v. Devitt, 10 Phila. 95.

In Louisiana, on the other hand, a partnership, which has for its object the acquisition of real estate must be in writing. Pecot v. Armellian, 21 La. Ann. 667.

Or where any of the partnership stock is to consist of real estate the agreement must be in writing. Dunbar v. Bullard, 2 La. Ann. 810; Benton v. Roberts, 4 La. Ann. 216.

Parol partnership for dealing in lands.

If an ordinary partnership may be formed by parol, and if it may purchase and hold real estate 16 L. R. A.

as partnership property which will be regarded in all respects as other partnership property, as indicated by the above decisions, is there any reason why a parol partnership formed for the express purpose of dealing in lands should be invalid?

In Smith v. Burnham, 8 Sumn. 485, in which such a partnership had been formed, the bill prayed for an account and that if any lands remained unsold defendant might be decreed to convey to plaintiff his just and equitable share. The question was very fully considered by Mr. Justice Story. Although he reached the conclusion that there was no sufficient evidence of a partnership as alleged in the bill, he proceeded to decide that a parol agreement for dealing in lands is within the statute. The judge said it was a case of the declaration or creation of a trust or confidence in lands not arising or resulting by implication or operation of law. He repudiated the argument that the several interests attached only to the proceeds by saying that the agreement, if good at all, attached also to the lands at time of the purchase and it is then an agreement for an interest by way of trust in land, and it is in virtue of this trust estate, and this only, that a right can attach to a moiety of the proceeds. The conclusion was that the whole title of plaintiff "resolves itself into a parol trust created by an express agreement of the parties in the purchase and sale of the lands on joint account which is within the Statute of Frauds."

The principle of that decision was followed in Rowland v. Booser, 10 Ala. 685, and Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 639, which latter case was practically overruled by Coward v. Clanton, 79 Cal. 27. Such agreement must also be in writing in Louisiana. Pecot v. Armellian, 21 La. Ann. 667.

It was subsequently held that the rule of Smith v. Burnham, supra, does not apply in favor of third persons. As to them a partnership may be proved by parol. Re Warren, 2 Ware, 380.

by them, or one of them." The court granted the motion, saying that "the contract, as alleged in the complaint and supported by the evidence, is one clearly for an interest in lands, and as such is void under the Statute of Frauds." Upon the submission of the cause the court in its decision found that there had been no agreement for a partnership in the land, and rendered judgment in favor of the defendants. From this judgment, and an order denying his motion for a new trial, the plaintiff has appealed.

We cannot upon this appeal consider the objections to the complaint that were made by the demurrer thereto, except the one specifying that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The demurrer was overruled for "want of presentation," and the defendants, having come to trial upon their answer, obtained a judgment in their favor upon the merits. Upon an appeal by the plaintiff from that judgment we can consider only such errors of the court as are shown to have contributed to its rendition, and not such as might have defeated a contrary judgment. If a judgment in favor of the defendant is the result of errors in excluding evidence that should have been received, he, as respondent upon an appeal, cannot for the purpose of sustaining that judgment have a consideration of errors against him which were entirely disconnected with the trial, or the judgment rendered. Objections to a complaint which should be pointed out by special demurrer, such as uncertainty or ambiguity, are insufficient, unless so specified, to defeat a verdict against the defendant, nor can they, if overruled after having been so specified, be considered for the purpose of sustaining a judgment in his favor that was erroneously rendered after a trial upon the merits. It is only when there is in the complaint an entire absence of averment of a fact essential to a recovery, so that no evidence of that fact could be received at the trial, that a judgment in favor of the plaintiff cannot be sustained; but, if the objection be merely that such fact is defectively alleged, evidence received under such averment, if sufficient, will sustain the judgment. While the complaint in the present case is not entirely free from criticism, and might have been made more certain and precise in some of its averments, yet we think that it contains a sufficient statement of facts to justify the court in receiving evidence thereof, and, if sufficient to sustain the averments, to render a judgment as asked by the plaintiff.

The character and effect of an averment that may be uncertain in one of its clauses is not limited to a construction of that clause merely, but the averment is to be considered as a whole, and in connection with the entire complaint. The averment that the defendants agreed with the plaintiff that if he would pay certain claims against the property "they would become equal partners with him in the said property," does not necessarily imply an agreement for a conveyance from him to them, and taken in connection with the averment immediately following, viz., "and would share equally with him, in the proportion of one

In Bird v. Morrison, 12 Wis. 133, in which the court says that an agreement of partnership for dealing in real estate is within the statute, the action was not to recover a share of the profits but a share of the land the title to which was held by one of the members.

In opposition to the above decisions is the entire weight of authority English and American. Dale v. Hamilton, 5 Hare, 383, in which the validity of the partnership was recognized, is usually regarded as the leading case in favor of the prevailing doctrine. In that case the distinction taken in argument and apparently acted upon by the court was this: If the allegation is of an agreement to transfer an interest in the land the statute applies; if the allegation is that the land is to be improved and resold at the joint risk for profit or loss, the statute does not apply.

A verbal agreement to share any profits arising from the purchase and sale of real estate may be made independent of any contract for an interest in the land itself. Such agreement may become the foundation for a money judgment, but not for a decree affecting the title. VonTrotha v. Samberger, 15 Colo. 1.

An interest in lands cannot be established by parol, but that rule does not apply to an agreement for division of profits. Everhart's App. 106 Pa. 349.

In Chester v. Dickerson, 54 N. Y. 9, 13 Am. Rep. 550, in which the question was as to the liability of the members of the alleged firm for the fraud of one of the members, the court ruled that the fact that the partnership was by parol and the business was dealing in lands presented no obstacle to holding the members to partnership liability while they pretended to be acting as such.

In Williams v. Gillies, 78 N. Y. 197, the validity of the contract was assumed for the purpose of 16 L. R. A.

considering the liability of one partner upon a bond for purchase money signed by the other.

A parol agreement of partnership for dealing in lands is not within the Statute of Frauds. Holmes v. McCray, 51 Ind. 353, 19 Am. Rep. 735; Richards v. Grinnell, 33 Iowa, 44, 50 Am. Rep. 737; Kilbourn v. Latta, 5 Cent. Rep. 425, 5 Mackey, 304, 60 Am. Rep. 373.

An agreement to divide the profits resulting from the purchase and sale of a farm is not within the Statute of Frauds. Bruce v. Hastings, 41 Vt. 380, 93 Am. Dec. 592.

A partnership for dealing in options in coal lands is not within the statute so as to prevent the recovery by one party from the other of his share of the profits. Howell v. Kelly (Pa.) May 23, 1892.

It is immaterial that the title to the land was taken in the name of one of the parties. Newell v. Coohran, 41 Minn. 374.

In application of the above doctrines it is held that the statute has no application where the action is for a division of the profits. Bunnell v. Taintor, 4 Conn. 572.

Therefore an action will lie to recover profits. Davis v. Gerber, 13 West. Rep. 304, 60 Mich. 243; Snyder v. Wolford, 33 Minn. 175, 53 Am. Rep. 22.

An accounting of profits may be enforced. Petrie v. Torrent, 33 Mich. 43; Benjamin v. Zell, 100 Pa. 33.

So a suit for accounting and division of profits is sustainable. McElroy v. Swope, 47 Fed. Rep. 330.

The fact that different rules are required for transferring lands than personality can make no difference in the result as to profit and loss. Dudley v. Littlefield, 21 Me. 423.

After the fulfillment of the contract it is too late to deny its execution or complain of the manner in which it was entered into. Hunter v. Whitehead, 43 Mo. 524.

half to plaintiff and one half to defendants, all sums received for said property, and all profits and losses accruing on account thereof," which is evidently inserted by way of explanation, shows that the agreement was for a partnership in the profits that might result from dealing in the land, and had no necessary relation to the ownership of the land. It appears from the complaint that at the time of this agreement the property in question was owned by one Miller and his wife, and that the defendant corporation held certain mortgages thereon, which were subordinate to certain other liens, and that the title to the property stood in the name of the plaintiff, and was held by him "as trustee for the benefit of said Miller and wife." It does not appear that the plaintiff had any beneficiary interest in the land, and the averment that $5,000 of the money advanced by him under the agreement was paid to the Millers, "for a release from the said trust in their favor," confirms the inference that it was merely a dry, naked trust. The subsequent averment that, "in pursuance of said agreement" then made, the plaintiff paid to the defendants $15,000 with which to remove certain charges and incumbrances, and that "all of said property was duly transferred by plaintiff to O. S. Hubbell, Esq., secretary of said Coronado Beach Company, as trustee for the parties hereto, to facilitate a sale," and that with the concurrence of the defendants the plaintiff paid liens and debts on account of said property amounting to $42,000, removes all possibility of construction that the agreement was for a sale of the property to the defendants, or for the creation of an interest or estate therein, and shows that the parties dealt with the property as assets of their said partnership.

A partnership may be formed for the purpose of dealing in lands, as well as for dealing in personal estate, or for engaging in professional or commercial or manufacturing occupations. Like any other contract of partnership, it is an agreement to share in the profit and loss of certain business transactions. Such a partnership may be formed for the purpose of buying and selling land generally, or it may be limited to a speculation upon a single venture. Dudley v. Littlefield, 21 Me. 422; Chester v. Dickerson, 54 N. Y. 1; Williams v. Gillies, 75 N. Y. 201.

Whether such a partnership can be formed, except by an agreement in writing, has been the subject of conflicting decisions. There is a dictum in Gray v. Palmer, 2 Cal. 689, to the effect that it must be in writing, for which Story, Partn. § 83, is cited as authority; and in Smith v. Burnham, 3 Sumn. 458, it was so held by that distinguished jurist. The great weight of modern authority, however, is in support of the rule that such a partnership may be formed in the same mode as any other, and that its existence may be established by the same character of evidence. It was so stated in Coward v. Clanton, 79 Cal. 23, where it was held that an agreement for the purchase of a tract of land, and its subdivision and sale in parcels and for a division of the profits resulting therefrom, in which one party was to furnish the capital and take a conveyance of

Where the contract is to purchase and sell lands and share the profits, one who has taken the title, made the sale, and realized a profit, cannot set up the Statute of Frauds to avoid accounting. Coward v. Clanton, 79 Cal. 27.

He is estopped from claiming that the agreement is void under the Statute of Frauds. Flower v. Barnekoff, 11 L. R. A. 149, 20 Or. 132.

Conversely the statute is no defense to a suit to compel contribution toward a loss. Babcock v. Read, 99 N. Y. 606; Wormser v. Meyer, 54 How. Pr. 189.

Where the contract has been executed and the suit is brought to compel one of the parties to contribute towards advances and share liabilities, the statute does not apply. King v. Barnes, 13 Cent. Rep. 204, 109 N. Y. 286.

The promise of one partner to reimburse the other for money advanced by him in the common undertaking is not within the statute. Wetherbee v. Potter, 99 Mass. 364.

A parol agreement to purchase lands and share the profits is so far valid as to support an action against one of the parties to compel him to contribute his share of the purchase money. Meason v. Kaine, 63 Pa. 339.

Methods of enforcing rights.

In Morrill v. Colehour, 83 Ill. 618, the court said, had the one who took the title failed to make the sales as contemplated by the parties he could, no doubt, have been compelled to do so or another would have been appointed for the purpose by the court.

Where real estate is held for the purpose of a partnership, there is a trust by operation of law for the partners as tenants in common though it has not been declared in writing. Hanff v. Howard, 56 N. C. 440.

16 L. R. A.

Upon the dissolution of the partnership and a full payment of the partnership debts the partners become tenants in common with regard to any and all real estate still belonging to the partnership, and the court will decree a division. Tenney v. Simpson, 37 Kan. 353.

If the one taking the title disposes of the lands at a profit a resulting trust will arise in favor of the other. Wallace v. Carpenter, 85 Ill. 590.

The rights of one member may be made effectual to him by decreeing the execution and delivery to him of a conveyance of his undivided share or by directing a sale of the property and a division of the proceeds. Bissell v. Harrington, 18 Hun, 86.

But a trust in land cannot be predicated upon proof of an agreement to create a partnership for the purpose of purchasing and handling or improving the same, the partnership relation not having existed prior to acquisition of title and no partnership funds having been invested in the property. Kayser v. Maugham, 8 Colo. 232.

Where an agreement had been made for purchasing and selling farms under which two farms had been purchased jointly, and then one of the members took the title to a third in his own name, and it was always treated as firm property, the court held there were elements of fraud in the case which would cause equity to compel a conveyance of plaintiff's share of the property. Traphagen v. Burt, 67 N. Y. 80.

In Larkins v. Rhodes, 5 Port. (Ala.) 195, in which the bill alleged a copartnership for entering public lands and dividing the profits and prayed a division of the lands which had been purchased, the court refused to consider the question of partnership on the ground that it was within the Statute of Frauds, but considered the case as one of resulting trust.

the land, and the other to furnish the skill and labor in making the sales, could not be avoided after the transaction had been completed, merely because it was not in writing. More than a hundred years ago it was held by Lord Thurlow in Elliot v. Brown, reported in 3 Swanst. 489, Jeffereys v. Small, 1 Vern. 217, that the right of survivorship in a joint demise of a farm was destroyed by reason of the tenants having farmed the land upon joint account, and thus by their acts made it partnership assets. The question was very fully considered by Vice Chancellor Wigram in Dale v. Hamilton, 5 Hare, 369, wherein previous decisions involving similar principles were reviewed, and it was held that under the principles of those decisions the existence of such a partnership could be shown by general evidence, without the necessity of a written agreement. In that case a parol agreement had been entered into under which a tract of land was to be purchased in the name of one McAdam, and laid out in lots and resold, he furnishing the capital, and the plaintiff the skill and labor, necessary therefor, and the profits resulting from the venture were to be divided between them. The purchase was accordingly effected in the name of McAdam, but the defendants, who had succeeded to McAdam, with notice of the agreement, afterwards refused to carry it out. Thereupon the plaintiff filed his bill for an accounting and a sale of the land under the direction of the court, with a division of the proceeds, in accordance with the terms of the agreement. The defendants resisted the suit upon the ground that the agreement was within the Statute of Frauds, and could be established only by an instrument in writing, but the vice-chancellor overruled their objections and upheld the bill. In his opinion (page 888) he uses the following illustration in support of his conclusion, which is peculiarly appropriate to the present case: "In order to try this question in the most simple manner, I will suppose the case to be the converse of what it is. I will suppose that the land purchased, instead of rising, had fallen in value; that a loss had been sustained, and that Hamilton and McAdam were the plaintiffs, seeking to compel Dale to contribute his proportion of the loss. If in this case the authorities would have enabled Hamilton and McAdam, by proving the partnership with Dale, and that the land was part of the partnership stock and effects, to have compelled contribution from Dale, the same authorities will upon like proof support the present suit upon the principle—that of mutuality in remedies—which enables a vendor to recover the purchase money in this court though the remedy at law may be equally adequate, and more

Partnership in securing products from land.

A parol agreement of partnership for working land is not within the statute. Personette v. Pryme, 84 N. J. Eq. 26.

An agreement that one shall procure the transfer of land to another who shall pay for it and that both shall open and work a quarry thereon and share the profits, is not within the Statute of Frauds. Treat v. Hiles, 68 Wis. 344, 40 Am. Rep. 558.

An agreement to form a partnership for the purpose of acquiring a lease in a certain mining property and extracting the ores therefrom is not within the Statute of Frauds, but it may be proved by parol in a suit between the partners for a settlement of the partnership affairs. Reed v. Meagher, 9 L. R. A. 455, 14 Colo. 335.

A partnership in carrying on a colliery is not within the statute, and an interest in the lease will pass by operation of law as incident to the trade. Forster v. Hale, 5 Ves. Jr. 308.

In Godfrey v. White, 43 Mich. 171, an agreement to procure lands and work gypsum mines on them, which was executed by the procurement of the lands and having a portion of the title conveyed to each of the parties and the lands worked for some time, was treated as a partnership venture and settled as such.

But the line of distinction is strongly brought out by a decision that an agreement between a lessee of a mine and another person to become partners in the lease, pay the rent, and collect royalties, is within the statute. Caddick v. Skidmore, 3 DeG. & J. 52.

Under the Louisiana rule as indicated above a partnership in crops cannot be proved by parol. Gantt v. Gantt, 6 La. Ann. 677.

Other contracts relating to lands.

A contract by the owners of land to give another a certain portion of the proceeds for selling it, is not within the statute. Heyn v. Phillips, 37 Cal. 581; Carr v. Leavitt, 54 Mich. 540.

A parol contract that one shall buy lands for another, who shall sell them and pay the former a portion of the proceeds, is not within the statute. Harben v. Congdon, 1 Coldw. 221.

A parol promise to pay another a portion of the profits made by the promisor, in the purchase and sale of real estate, is not within the Statute of Frauds. Trowbridge v. Wetherbee, 11 Allen, 351.

When the land has been sold an action will lie to recover the promised share. Ibid.

An agreement by which one was to look up and locate lands, and another was to pay for and take title to them, and then sell them and pay the former a portion of the proceeds, is not within the statute. Watters v. McGuigan, 72 Wis. 155.

An agreement whereby one person is to improve and sell lands of another and after paying an agreed sum to the owner of the lands to share in the proceeds of the sale, is not a contract for the sale of land within the Statute of Frauds. Leeley v. Rosson, 20 Miss. 368, 77 Am. Dec. 679.

An agreement to jointly locate, develop, and mine quartz lodes is not within the statute. Hirbour v. Reeding, 8 Mont. 15.

An agreement to explore the public domain and discover and locate lodes for the joint benefit of the contractors is not within the Statute of Frauds. Murley v. Ennis, 2 Colo. 300.

Transfer of partnership interest.

An interest in an agreement to share profits of dealings in lands may be released by parol. Morrill v. Colehour, 82 Ill. 618.

A member may be admitted by parol into a firm owning real estate. Marsh v. Davis, 33 Kan. 325.

But where one member of a partnership dealing in lands sold a part of his share to a third person it is held to be within the Statute of Frauds. Black v. Black, 15 Ga. 450.

Availability of statute as a defense.

The statute must be pleaded as a defense to the accounting in order to be available. Patterson v. Ware, 10 Ala. 447.

H. P. F.

appropriate," and cites several authorities to the effect that in such a case the defendant would have been liable for contribution. The rule laid down in Dale v. Hamilton has since been generally followed, and, although there are some decisions to the contrary, may now be said to be the prevailing rule upon that subject. Irrespective of any decision, however, an agreement of this character cannot be said to contravene the provisions of the Statute of Frauds. It does not contemplate any transfer of land from one party to the other, or the creation of any interest or estate in lands. In one sense the parties to such an agreement may be said to have an interest in the lands that are to be purchased under the agreement,—that sense in which the beneficiary under a trust for the sale of real estate, and payment to him of the proceeds of the sale, has an interest in the land, but it is only a pecuniary interest resulting from the sale, and a right to have the land sold, rather than an interest in the land itself. The Statute of Frauds does not prevent parol proof for the purpose of showing an interest in lands, but declares that an agreement by which an estate or interest in lands is to be created must be in writing. No interest or estate in the land is created by such an agreement, but by the subsequent acts of the parties under the agreement rights are acquired in reference to the land that may be purchased in pursuance of the agreement, which a court of equity will protect against any attempt to make the Statute of Frauds an instrument of fraud. A bill for the conveyance of the lands could not be maintained under such an agreement, but, by reason of the acts of the parties thereunder, an equity would be raised in their behalf which would be superior to the legal title held by him to whom the land was conveyed, and would control that title in subordination to this superior equity. It is a familiar rule in equity that lands acquired by a partnership for partnership uses are partnership assets, and are treated in equity as personality, whether the partnership was formed by oral or written agreement. The same principle should apply when the object of the partnership is to deal in lands, and the assets of the partnership with which the lands are to be purchased are made up of the skill and money which are respectively contributed by the partners as its capital. Upon proof of the existence of such a partnership, the rights and obligations of the respective partners should be determined upon the same principles and with the same results as in other partnerships.

The settlement of partnership accounts, and the conversion into money of the assets of the partnership, whether real or personal, and their division among the partners, has always been one of the functions of a court of equity, and that court never stops to inquire into the source of the title of such assets, or in whose name they are held. The question has frequently arisen in actions for the division of the proceeds after a sale under such an agreement, and it has been invariably held that the Statute of Frauds is no defense thereto. Bruce v. Hastings, 41 Vt. 380, 98 Am. Dec. 592; Benjamin v. Zell, 100 Pa. 38; Trowbridge v. Wetherbee, 11 Allen, 361; Babcock v. Read, 99 N. Y. 609; 16 L. R. A.

Coward v. Clanton, 79 Cal. 23; Reed, Stat. Fr. § 727. See also Hyers v. Locke, 98 Cal. 493. Under such an agreement it is invariably held that an action for the division of the profits can be maintained after they have been received, whereas, if the agreement was invalid at the outset, it could not form the basis of such an action. If, however, the agreement was valid at its inception, it is not rendered invalid by the subsequent act of one of the parties, and, although it cannot be changed into a different agreement, such as an agreement for the conveyance of the land, yet either party has the right to its enforcement for the purpose of carrying out its original purpose, the division of the profits resulting from the speculation. The same principles are applicable in an action to subject land which has become a portion of the assets of such a partnership to a sale under the directions of a court of equity, with a distribution of the proceeds thereof according to the rights of the individual partners. This was the case presented and maintained in Dale v. Hamilton. The same procedure was upheld in Richards v. Grinnell, 63 Iowa, 44, 50 Am. Rep. 727; Bunuel v. Taintor, 4 Conn. 568; Hunter v. Whitehead, 42 Mo. 524; Bissell v. Harrington, 18 Hun, 81; Holmes v. McGray, 51 Ind. 353, 19 Am. Rep. 785; Coward v. Clanton, 79 Cal. 23. After the agreement for the purchase and sale has been executed by making the conveyance in accordance with such agreement, it cannot be objected that such conveyance could not have been compelled on account of the Statute of Frauds. Pico v. Ouyas, 47 Cal. 174. The Statute of Frauds has no application to an executed agreement.

That the agreement between the parties which is averred in the complaint, and the evidence given in support thereof, did not contemplate any transfer of the land or of any interest therein to the defendants, or either of them, but had for its object only a division of the profits and loss that would remain after its sale, is shown by a consideration of the averments of the complaint hereinbefore presented, and also by the direction of Babcock to the plaintiff, while negotiating the agreement, to "sell it off as soon as you can, pay up the debts, and divide the profits." It was not necessary for the plaintiff, in support of these averments, to produce written evidence of the agreement, but the agreement could have been established by his oral testimony; and the court erred in striking out the testimony that he gave in support of the agreement. The first question to be determined by the court was whether there was a partnership, and that fact could be shown by general evidence. In Forster v. Hale, 5 Ves. Jr. 309, where the right to an interest in the leasehold of a colliery, claimed by virtue of a partnership with one of the lessees, was involved, and it was objected that, by permitting parol evidence to establish such interest, an interest in real estate or a declaration of trust would be gained without any writing, in violation of the Statute of Frauds, Lord Loughborough said: "That is not the question; it is whether there was a partnership. The subject being an agreement for land, the question is whether there was a resulting trust for that partnership by operation of law. The question of partnership must be tried as a fact, and as if there was an issue upon it. If by facts and circumstances it is established as a fact that these persons were partners in the colliery, in which land was necessary to carry on the trade, the lease goes as an incident. The partnership being established by evidence upon which a partnership may be found, the premises necessary for the purposes of that partnership are by operation of law held for the purposes of that partnership."

Under the same principles, if in the present case the court should find upon sufficient evidence that a partnership existed between the parties, the fact that they would have an interest in the land which forms a portion of the assets of the partnership would result by operation of law as an incident to such partnership, but this result would not constitute a reason for excluding parol testimony to establish the existence of the partnership.

For the error of the court in striking out the evidence of the plaintiff, the order and judgment are reversed, and the court is directed to grant a new trial.

We concur: Paterson, J.; Sharpstein, J.; De Haven, J.; Garoutte, J.; McFarland, J.

Beatty, Ch. J.:

I dissent. The complaint, in my opinion, shows no cause of action, and the evidence offered and stricken out by the court was of a parol contract, invalid under the Statute of Frauds.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT.

PEOPLE OF the State of MICHIGAN, ex rel. Henry C. KUNZE et al., Appls.,

v.

FT. WAYNE & ELMWOOD R. CO.

(.....Mich.....)

1. A street railway in a street does not create an additional servitude.
2. The grant of the right to lay a street railway in a street where the driveway is so narrow that but 8 feet 7½ inches will be left on each side of a street-car for the passage of teams is not beyond the power of a city council.
3. Quo warranto will not lie to exclude a street railway company from the right of laying its tracks in a city street, which has been granted to it by the municipality acting within the scope of its authority.

(Morse, Ch. J., and McGrath, J., dissent.)

(July 28, 1892.)

APPEAL by relator from a decree of the Circuit Court for Wayne County in favor of defendant in a proceeding in the nature of quo warranto instituted to exclude defendant from exercising the right of laying tracks upon a public street in the city of Detroit. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinions. Messrs. Henry M. Cheever and Jasper C. Gates, with Messrs. A. A. Ellis, Atty-Gen., and Samuel W. Burroughs, for appellants.

Messrs. Edwin F. Conely and Orla B. Taylor, for defendant.

The clear and well-defined policy of this state, in the matter of roads, streets, and the like, has been to confide jurisdiction of all subjects falling under that head to the management and supervision of local authorities.

NOTE.—For a collection of authorities upon the question how far a street railway is regarded as an additional burden on the rights of the abutting owner, see note to Iron Mountain R. Co. v. Bingham (Tenn.) 4 L. R. A. 624.

16 L. R. A.

Mich. Const. art. 4, § 23; art. 10, §§ 9, 11; art. 14, § 9; art. 18, § 4.

In furtherance of this policy the various charters of the city of Detroit have conferred upon that municipality full control over its streets, avenues, squares, and other public places.

Detroit Charter, ed. 1886, pp. 69–71, §§ 121, 122.

If the local authorities are satisfied in any of these matters, it is of little or no concern to the state whether represented by the attorney-general or the prosecuting attorney.

The state is not concerned in every municipal irregularity, and it would be a very curious condition of affairs if, upon every divergence from the strict letter of the law not amounting to usurpation or abuse, the solemn intervention of the state can be demanded or invoked.

Atty-Gen. v. Detroit, 26 Mich. 263; Atty-Gen. v. Moliter, 26 Mich. 444; Atty-Gen. v. Kwart Boom, Co. 84 Mich. 462; Atty-Gen. v. Detroit, 55 Mich. 181; Grand Rapids v. Grand Rapids Hydraulic Co. 10 West. Rep. 631, 66 Mich. 606.

The exercise of the power of using streets for street railway purposes is rather an easement than a franchise.

Maybury v. Mutual Gas Light Co. of Detroit, 38 Mich. 154.

Montgomery, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action in the nature of a quo warranto filed to exclude the defendant corporation from laying its tracks upon and occupying for the purposes of a street railway Champlain street, in the city of Detroit, from Randolph street to Elmwood avenue. It is claimed that the defendant has no right to the franchise or privilege in question, because (1) the street is too narrow to admit of defendant's cars and other vehicles at the same time, and that the contemplated use by the defendant will interfere with the right of the general public in the street; (2) that the amended ordinances of the city of Detroit under which the defendant claims are invalid, for the reason that the original ordinance was not re-enacted and published, but it was attempted to amend it by reference to its title merely; and for the further reason that the council by this ordinance attempts to grant to the defendant the exclusive use of the street for street railway purposes.

1. The case shows that the width of Champlain street is 50 feet, and the paved portion 25 feet. The ordinance gives the defendant the right to construct a single track railway in the middle of the street. The gauge of the track is 4 feet 8½ inches, and the width of a close car 7 feet and 9 inches, leaving a space of nearly 9 feet for the passage of vehicles. This is sufficient width to admit of the passage of ordinary vehicles, and the ordinance is not, in my opinion, so unreasonable as to require the interference of the court, if it be held that an ordinary street railway is not in and of itself an additional servitude. I think such a use of the street does not create an additional servitude. Opinion of Justice Grant, Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 643, and cases cited; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Heisel, 38 Mich. 62, 31 Am. Rep. 306; Grand Rapids St. R. Co. v. West Side St. R. Co. 48 Mich. 433.

2. The right being such a one as the common council had a right to grant, and the common council having assumed to grant the right, the case presented is not such a one as calls for the exercise of the jurisdiction of this court in a public proceeding instituted by quo warranto. The question presented is similar to that involved in Maybury v. Mutual Gas-Light Co. 38 Mich. 154. In that case it was sought by quo warranto to deprive the respondent of its franchises, on the ground that the company had violated the terms of the agreement upon which the assent of the city to the use of its privileges was granted. Chief Justice Campbell, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "In the present case the state has shown by the incorporating Act that public policy is not opposed to and is in favor of allowing gas companies to exist, as they only can exist by having power to lay their pipes. The consent of the municipal corporation is required because the terms on which streets may be safely allowed to be occupied for the purposes of laying gas pipes can best be determined by leaving the regulation to be harmonized with all other exigencies by the authorities controlling their use. . . . The exercise of the power of using streets for laying gas pipes is rather an easement than a franchise. . . . It is a matter peculiarly local in its character, and which should always be to a reasonable extent under municipal supervision to prevent clashing among the many convenient uses to which ways must necessarily be subjected, for water, drainage, and other urban needs. But the permission to lay these pipes does not differ in any respect from that required for laying railways over land, or ditches through it. It is not a state franchise, but a mere grant of authority, which, whether coming from private owners or public agents, rests in contract or license, and in nothing else. A violation of the contract, or an unauthorized intrusion, must be redressed, as all ordinary wrongs are redressed, by the usual legal remedies. It in no way concerns the state whether the power is granted or withheld, nor whether the corporation has or has not fulfilled its agreements. . . . This court has heretofore refused to recognize the encroachment of a corporation on a highway as subject to be reached by quo warranto, and we discover no better reason for interfering in the present case." Relator's counsel rely upon People v. Plymouth Plank Road Co. 31 Mich. 176, and Detroit v. Park Comrs. 44 Mich. 603. The case of People v. Plymouth Plank Road Co. was a case involving a forfeiture of a franchise, and not a case for private redress. Detroit v. Park Comrs. was a proceeding against public officers to inquire into the exercise of a franchise in the matter of controlling and supervising a public park, and is not analogous. What was said upon this subject in Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 647, 648, was unnecessary to the determination of the case, and should be limited at least in its application to a case where the right attempted to be exercised is one which the local authorities have not power to confer, which is not the case here.

3. It is unnecessary to determine whether there was any irregularity in the enactment of the ordinance conferring the right to use Champlain street. If so, it was an irregularity, and is a matter in which the state is in no way concerned.

4. It is unnecessary to determine whether the council has the power to grant an exclusive use of the street for street railway purposes to one corporation. It does not appear that any attempt has been made by others to acquire a similar privilege. Certainly the grant is good to the extent of the power which the council has under the statute, and, if it has exceeded its power in this regard, the question can properly be raised when other interests require it.

Long and Grant, JJ., concurred with Montgomery, J.

McGrath, J., dissenting:

I think that this case comes clearly within the exceptions mentioned in Detroit City R. Co. v. Mills, 85 Mich. 643. Justice Grant in that case discussed the questions involved upon the expressed "assumption that sufficient room was left to permit the free passage of teams and vehicles when the cars were upon the track." There the street had recently been brought within the city limits, it had not been graded or paved, and the width of the roadbed had not been established, and it is said that "the distance from the rail to the pole is about nineteen feet. This space is ample for the passage of teams and vehicles, if the street were properly graded." It was held that a street railway could not be lawfully constructed and operated in a street too narrow to admit the passage of its cars and other vehicles at the same time, nor so as to interfere with the rights of the general public in the street, nor in a street, though of sufficient width, if its condition be such that the operation of the railway will result in the practical exclusion of others from the use of the street,—citing Grand Rapids St. R. Co., 48 Mich. 433.

Champlain street is a residence street, and has been graded and paved. It is 50 feet wide, with a roadbed 25 feet wide, leaving a space of 12½ feet each side of the roadbed for sidewalks and shade trees. A car upon the track leaves a space of 8 feet 7½ inches between the car and the curb. A lumber wagon is 5 feet 9 inches wide, a heavy truck is 7 feet 8 inches, and the space within which an ordinary load of hay can pass is 10 feet 7 inches. Shade trees line each side of the roadway in the spaces between the curbs and the sidewalks. Under such circumstances, a physician's buggy, a milk wagon, a grocer's cart, or a family carriage standing at the curb is an obstruction to the street. Imagine a fire engine, a street-car, and a family carriage, or a funeral procession, upon that street at the same time. Champlain street leads to Elmwood and Mount Elliott cemeteries, to the Boulevard and to Belle Isle park. Upon certain portions of it a double track is authorized to be laid by the ordinance in question. Who, with any experience in such matters, will attempt to say that the general driving public will not be practically excluded from that street? In such case, under the rule laid down in the Mills Case, the proposed use of the street is one of which the general public has the right to complain. In the Grand Rapids Street Railway Case, Justice Campbell says: "That body [the council] certainly cannot properly so multiply tracks as to interfere with the rights of the general public in the street." The number of tracks is not the test of the council's power; it is the fact of exclusion. Nor is the exercise of the discretion given to the council final or conclusive, for, if so, it is equally conclusive when exercised respecting a multiplicity of tracks. The common council cannot create a nuisance, nor can a use of a street which practically excludes others from it, and injuriously affects the rights of the public, be regarded as authorized by law. The grant of the privileges or consent to such use must be treated as an abuse of discretion, and is no defense. Maybury v. Mutual Gas-Light Co. 38 Mich. 154, has no application. The complaint there was that the company had violated the terms of an agreement with the city,—one of the conditions upon which the city had granted certain privileges. The court held that public policy was in favor of allowing gas companies to exist, and was not concerned in the enforcement of a purely local condition. This is, however, a proceeding not to punish but to enjoin a use of a highway which will exclude the public, and the state is concerned in the preservation and integrity of its public highways. It follows that the exercise of the privilege attempted to be granted should be enjoined.

Morse, Ch. J., concurred with McGrath, J.

MISSOURI SUPREME COURT (In Banc.)

Joseph A. BOWERS, Appt.,

Ellis R. SMITH, Respt.;

(.....Mo.....)

*1. The "Australian Ballot" Laws of England, Missouri, and other states compared and discussed.

*Head notes by BARCLAY, J.

NOTE.—Constitutionality of "Australian Ballot" statutes.

That question discussed and such laws held constitutional. State v. McMillan (Mo.) Oct. Term, 1891; State v. Black (N. J.) 46 Alb. L. J. 129; De Walt v. Bartley, 15 L. R. A. 771, 146 Pa. 529.

Defects in nomination papers.

A candidate whose full name was "Robert Vickers Mather" appeared on the roll of burgesses as "Robert V. Mather," and signed his nomination-paper in the latter style. It was held that such paper did not comply with the law requiring a statement of "the surname and other names of the person nominated." Mather v. Brown (1876) L. R. 1 C. P. Div. 596.

A similar ruling was made where the nomination bore the signature of "Charles Arthur Burman," but his name appeared as "Charles Burman" on the voters' roll. Moorhouse v. Linney (1885) L. R. 15 Q. B. Div. 272.

But some of the same judges have also held that "Wm." was a sufficient equivalent for "William," on such papers. Henry v. Armitage (1883) L. R. 12 Q. B. Div. 257.

16 L. R. A.

2. Under the Missouri Ballot Act of 1889, (Rev. Stat. 1889, §§4756-4794), an error of the county clerk, in printing names of additional candidates on the official ballots, will not nullify the election at which those ballots are used, where no objection to them is made (as provided by that Act) before the election.

3. Where the votes in a certain election district were received at two polling places instead of at one, that irregularity will not vitiate the returns, where no prejudice or disadvantage to the defeated candidate resulted.

And in New South Wales it has been ruled, from an early day, that such a paper is not invalidated by reason of the use of ordinary abbreviations in the signatures of voters thereon. Ex parte Fallick (1889) 10 N. S. Wales, L. R. 59, citing several earlier decisions.

Irregularities in taking the ballot.

The general rule in England is thus stated by Coleridge, Ch. J.: "The nonobservance of the rules or forms which is to render the election invalid must be so great as to amount to a conducting of the election in a manner contrary to the principle of an election by ballot, and must be so great as to satisfy the tribunal that it did affect or might have affected the majority of the voters, or, in other words, the result of the election." Woodward v. Sarsons (1875) L. R. 10 C. P. 751.

Failure of the election officer to place his initials on the back of the ballots, as required by the law, does not invalidate such votes. Jenkins v. Brecken (1883) 7 S. C. Cand. (Duvall) 247.

Even where the law declared that "the ballot paper shall be marked on both sides with an official mark," ballots not so marked on one side were

4. Mandatory and directory provisions of election laws discussed.
5. Where the Legislature declares a certain irregularity in election procedure as fatal to the validity of the returns, the courts will effectuate that command; otherwise they will ignore such innocent irregularities of election officers as are free of fraud, and have not interfered with a fair expression of the voters' will.
6. An allegation in a statutory election contest that a list of names of party candidates was "illegally certified," without alleging how it was certified, or in what respect it was defective, is merely the statement of a legal conclusion, and not of a fact.
7. Such a construction of an election law as would permit the disfranchisement of large bodies of voters because of an error of a single official should not be adopted where the language in question is fairly susceptible of any other.
8. Where a statute is adopted from another state its construction there is not likewise adopted, if inconsistent with the Constitution of the state in which it is transplanted.
9. Under the Missouri Ballot Law of 1889, electors may vote for candidates whose names do not appear upon the official printed ballots, by adding their names upon the ballots in the proper places.

10. It is proper to consider the effect and consequences of a proposed interpretation of a law to ascertain what is probably its true intent.

(June 20, 1892.)

A PPEAL by contestant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Pettis County in favor of contestee in a proceeding instituted to determine the validity of contestee's alleged election to the office of sheriff of the county. Affirmed.

Statement by Barclay, J.:

The official ballot mentioned in the opinion (omitting immaterial parts) is as follows, viz.:

STATE, COUNTY AND TOWNSHIP TICKET, PETTIS COUNTY, MISSOURI.

DEMOCRATIC. REPUBLICAN. UNION LABOR.

* * *	* * *	* * *
* * *	* * *	* * *
* * *	* * *	* * *

For Sheriff,	For Sheriff,	For Sheriff,
J. A. BOWERS.	ELIAS R. SMITH.	G. D. SAPPINGTON.
* * *	* * *	* * *
* * *	* * *	* * *
* * *	* * *	* * *

counted, after elaborate consideration. Ackers v. Howard (1886) L. R. 16 Q. B. Div. 739.

Where the receiving officers placed their initials in the lower right-hand corner of the ballots instead of the lower left-hand corner, as the Indiana ballot law prescribed, the irregularity was considered harmless. Parvin v. Wimberg, Ind. Sup. 1892.

An election was held at two polling places in a township, one of which was not lawfully established, and the court (per Brewer, J.) sustained the result, saying: "It was the apparent creation of a voting precinct; and having been accepted by the people, the only ones interested in the matter, and acted upon by them as though it were in all respects legal and binding, the defects in the order cannot now be made the means of disfranchising a body of legal voters, innocent of wrong, seeking to exercise their rights of franchise and only misled by the officers of the law." Wildman v. Anderson (1876) 17 Kan. 847.

But closing the poll a quarter of an hour before the time fixed by law was held in New South Wales to vitiate the return. Ex parte Russell (1881) 2 N. S. Wales, L. R. 82.

What distinguishing marks or devices upon ballots will vitiate them, is discussed in Rutledge v. Crawford, 13 L. R. A. 761, 91 Cal. 526; People v. Onondaga County Board of Canvassers, 14 L. R. A. 624, 129 N. Y. 295, and the notes to those cases.

Harmless irregularities.

Where two voting places were appointed in a precinct entitled by law to but one, the irregularity was held immaterial. Bell v. Faulkner (Tex.) March 28, 1892.

Where the ballots were received, by the proper officers, at a poll, near the house appointed as the voting place but whose owner refused to permit its use, the election was upheld. Preston v. Culbertson (1881) 58 Cal. 193.

And so where some ballots were deposited by mistake in the wrong ballot-box, in use for another election conducted at the same time on the same premises. People v. Bates (1893) 11 Mich. 363, 88 Am. Dec. 745.
16 L. R. A.

Acquiescence in irregularities.

In Reg. v. Bradburn (1876) 6 Ont. Pr. Rep. 809, it was said by Harrison, Ch. J., in an election contest, that, "even if the grounds alleged were sustained by the evidence, I should have some hesitation in setting the election aside at the instance of the relator who, instead of remonstrating against the supposed irregularities, took his chance of things as they were, and, having been himself defeated, is now endeavoring to defeat the choice of the electors."

Where the candidates and electors have fully participated in an election, the omission to properly proclaim the same, or to give complete notice thereof, has been held, in some circumstances, not to invalidate the result; as in Nebraska, where the governor failed to issue proclamation for the election of a district judge (State v. Thayer (1891) 81 Neb. 82); in Rhode Island, where less than the statutory notice for a city election was given (State v. Carroll (R. I.) July 23, 1892); in California where a clerk of the county board omitted to affix his official seal, required by law, to an election proclamation (San Luis Obispo County v. White (1891) 91 Cal. 432); and in Michigan (by a divided court), where the secretary of state and sheriff refused to issue statutory notices of an election for circuit judge. Adair v. Osmon (1891) 11 L. R. A. 584, 84 Mich. 420.

In these recent cases a number of earlier ones are cited to the same effect.

In an election of a local board of health, the voting papers exhibited a blank in place of a statement required of the number of votes to which the voter was lawfully entitled as owner or ratepayer. A defeated candidate contested the election but had voted one of such papers, and the court held that by his acquiescence in the irregularity he was disqualified to complain. Reg. v. Lofthouse (1896) L. R. 1 Q. B. 483.

The same view of contestant's acquiescence, taken in the principal case, was adopted under a similar law, in Allen v. Glynn (Colo. 1892) 15 L. R. A. 743.

(The blanks in the ballot, indicated above by asterisks, were filled in the original with the names of the several party nominees for the various state, county and township offices.)

The other material facts appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Jackson & Montgomery and Charles E. Yeater, for appellant:

The violation of a statutory provision for the conduct of elections, which is mandatory in its nature, will avoid the election to the extent of the violation, without regard to the motive of the persons guilty of the violation, and without any inquiry into the effect or the result of the election.

6 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, 825; Gumm v. Hubbard, 97 Mo. 311; Keller v. Toulme (Miss.) May 26, 1890; Ledbetter v. Hall, 62 Mo. 422; West v. Ross, 53 Mo. 350; State v. Cook, 41 Mo. 598; McCrary, Elections, 8d ed. § 190.

Rev. Stat. 1889, § 4678, provides that only one polling-place shall be had and one set of judges and clerks appointed for each precinct, and the holding of two polling-places in a precinct with two sets of judges and clerks renders the vote of the precinct invalid and illegal.

McCrary, Elections, 2d ed. 108, 8d ed. § 249; Sloan v. Rawles, 48d Congress.

The judges and clerks of the two polling-places in the Sedalia city precinct were not de facto officers for the reason that a de facto officer necessarily presupposes the existence of a legal office which might be filled by a de jure officer, and creation of the two polling-places in violation of the mandatory provisions of Rev. Stat. 1889, § 4678, could not constitute legal officers for the maintenance of such illegal polling places.

Jester v. Spurgeon, 27 Mo. App. 477; Ex parte Snyder, 64 Mo. 58.

The ballots cast in the Sedalia city precinct did not conform to the provisions of Rev. Stat. 1889, art. 3, chap. 60, on elections, because they contained the names of the candidates of the alleged Union Labor party, which party had not cast 8 per cent of the vote at the last general election, nor had the nomination of the candidates of such party been certified to the county clerk in the manner prescribed by such article, and such ballots cannot be counted under the mandatory clause of section 4671 of such chapter, which recites that, "any ballot not conforming to the provisions of this chapter shall be considered fraudulent, and the same shall not be counted."

Gumm v. Hubbard, 97 Mo. 311; Ledbetter v. Hall, 62 Mo. 422; West v. Ross, 53 Mo. 350; Price v. Lush, 10 Mont. 61; Reg. v. Parkinson, L. R. 8 Q. B. 11; Mather v. Brown, 1 C. P. Div. 596; Hewes v. Turner, 1 C. P. Div. 670; Monks v. Jackson, 1 C. P. Div. 683; Burgoyne v. Collins, L. R. 8 Q. B. Div. 453; Wigmore, Australian Ballot System, 2d ed. 186, 187.

The certification of the nomination of the candidates of the alleged Union Labor party was in violation of Rev. Stat. 1889, art. 3, chap. 60, and such ballots cannot be counted under the mandatory clause of section 4773 of such article, which recites that, "every ballot printed under the provisions of this article shall contain the name of every candidate whose nomination for any office specified in the ballot has been certified or filed according to the provisions of this article, and no other names."

Nor under section 4773 of such article, which recites that, "ballots other than those printed by the respective clerks of the county courts according to the provisions of this article shall not be cast or counted in any election."

Rev. Stat. 1889, art. 3, chap. 60, is not in conflict with those provisions of the Constitution which prescribe the qualifications of electors and declare that all elections shall be free and open, and that no power shall interfere to prevent the free exercise of the right of suffrage.

Blair v. Ridgely, 41 Mo. 167, 97 Am. Dec. 248; Detroit v. Rush, 10 L. R. A. 171, 82 Mich. 532.

Messrs. W. S. Shirk, Bothwell & Jaynes and Sangree & Lamm, for respondent Smith:

The provisions of a law may be most positive in their declarations as to the duties of officers charged with executing the law,—may command or prohibit in the plainest terms as to the conduct of certain officers, even making its violation by the officers a criminal offense,—and yet the same provisions of the law be construed to be only directory in so far as they affect the electors; and the disregard of the terms of such a statute by an officer will not render the election void, or justify the throwing out of the ballots, where it is not alleged that there was any fraud practiced, or that the result was affected or made doubtful by such official disregard of the law.

McCrary, Elections, 8d ed. §§ 190-193; 6 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, Elections, pp. 325, 334.

While the violation of some mandatory provisions of the Constitution and statutes will be good reason for holding an election to be void, or for excluding certain ballots from the count, yet in the case of directory provisions, the election will not be set aside or the votes thrown out, unless it is alleged and proved that the disregard of the law has been such as to show fraud, or that the result has been changed or made doubtful thereby. The best authorities now do not hold these statutory provisions mandatory, unless they are plainly of such a character that their strict enforcement is necessary to a correct determination of the result of the election, or unless in the statute itself it is expressly declared that its violation will render the election void.

6 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, Elections, "X," pp. 325, 334; McCrary, Elections, 3d ed. §§ 180, 137, 141, 187, 188, 190-193; Cooley, Const. Lim. 778-780, *618, 619, and authorities cited; Davis v. State, 75 Tex. 420; Fowler v. State, 68 Tex. 80; Todd v. Stewart, 14 Colo. 286; Russell v. McDonnell, 83 Cal. 70; Whinley v. McKune, 12 Cal. 361; Dr. Berry v. Nielson, 102 N. C. 465, 11 Am. St. Rep. 767, and note; People v. Cook, 8 N. Y. 67, 59 Am. Dec. 451, and note, 471, 472; State v. Burbridge, 24 Fla. 112; Vurney v. Justice, 86 Ky. 596; Stemper v. Higgins, 38 Minn. 222.

The laws as to the qualifications of the voters, and as to the time of holding the elections, are held to be mandatory.

McCrary, Elections, 8d ed. §§ 126, 193; 6 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, Elections, "IX."

The statutory provisions as to the place of holding the elections are not so strictly construed, so long as no uncertainty existed and no injury resulted.

McCrary, Elections, 3d ed. §§ 123-125; 6 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, Elections, "IX," pp. 323, 324, notes; Dale v. Irwin, 78 Ill. 170; Davis v. State, 75 Tex. 420; Stemper v. Higgins, 38 Minn. 222.

Nothing can be found in the statute which warrants the assertion that the election in the Sedalia city precinct was void, or that all the ballots must be thrown out, for the reason that two sets of election judges were appointed and served, to facilitate the receiving and counting of the ballots cast in the precinct. It would be improper to hold that provision of the statute to be mandatory, and the election void. Certainly some of the judges acted legally, and how can it be decided as to which lot of ballots shall be thrown out, and which body of electors shall be deprived of their constitutional rights.

McCrary, Elections, 3d ed. §§ 214, 216; 6 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, Elections, "IX," "X," 323, 324, 327, and notes; Cooley, Const. Lim. 778-780, *618, 619, and authorities cited; Stemper v. Higgins, 38 Minn. 222; Davis v. State, 75 Tex. 420; People v. Cook, 8 N. Y. 67, 59 Am. Dec. 451, and note, 471, 472.

Under the Act of 1889 (Rev. Stat. 1889, art. 3, chap. 60) the clerk of the county court is given certain powers of a judicial nature, in connection with certain ministerial duties imposed on him. When he has acted and decided officially under the law, his actions and decisions can only be attacked by direct proceedings, in the nature of mandamus, injunction, or appeal under Rev. Stat. 1889, § 4778. Having made no timely complaints or efforts to correct the alleged mistakes of the clerk, it is now too late for a disappointed candidate to ask the courts to throw out the official ballots lawfully cast—depriving 3,160 electors of their constitutional right to vote for their sheriff, merely because a majority of those electors did not vote for the contestant.

McCrary, Elections, 3d ed. §§ 258, 259.

(a) As to judicial decisions:

Wellshear v. Kelley, 69 Mo. 343; Yates v. Johnson, 2 West. Rep. 132, 87 Mo. 213; Yeoman v. Younger, 83 Mo. 424.

(b) As to ministerial acts:

Evans v. Robberson, 10 West. Rep. 893, 92 Mo. 192; Hallowell v. Page, 24 Mo. 590; Philips v. Evans, 64 Mo. 17.

It is not within the legislative power to deprive the elector of his franchise, or to enable any officer to do so, under pretext of regulating elections.

Mo. Const. art. 2, § 9, art. 8, art. 9, § 10; 6 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, Elections, "II," "III," "IV," 287-289, and notes; McCrary, Elections, 8d ed. §§ 91, 98; Cooley, Const. Lim. 776, 778, *616-618, and authorities cited; note to Blair v. Ridgely (Mo.) 97 Am. Dec. 248, and cases cited.

If it were necessary to give to the Act of 1889 the construction contended for by appellant, it would be the duty of the courts to declare that Act to be unconstitutional and void, as an invasion of the rights of the electors.

It is the duty of the courts to give to this statute a construction most favorable to its life and purpose, and not to give to it a forced construction which would render the statute unreasonable and unconstitutional.

Mo. Const. art. 2, § 9; McCrary, Elections, 8d ed. §§ 190-192; Cooley, Const. Lim. 773, *617, 618; Sutherland, Stat. Const. §§ 322, 323, 331, 332, 447, 452, 454.

Barclay, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This appeal was first heard in division I, and a conclusion announced, November 9, 1891, as reported in 17 S. W. Rep. 761.

After a motion for rehearing was denied, plaintiff moved to transfer the cause to the court in banc. The motion was ultimately sustained, upon the entry of a dissent by one of the judges to the decision of the first division.

The case was then fully re-argued before the whole court.

It is a statutory contest to determine the respective rights of the parties to the office of sheriff of Pettis county.

The election in question took place November 4, 1890. Mr. Bowers is the contestant. For convenience, he will be called the plaintiff, and his opponent, Mr. Smith, who is the contestee, the defendant. Plaintiff's notice of contest assigned several distinct grounds, in as many paragraphs, in the nature of counts or causes of action. After it was served, defendant gave plaintiff a counter notice, which (besides denying the plaintiff's charges) alleged a number of objections to the original count of the ballots, and claimed that corrections, to defendant's advantage, should be made therein in a number of particulars.

The circuit court of Pettis county sustained motions to strike out some parts of plaintiff's notice. Exceptions were saved to that ruling.

The case then came to trial. As will appear, the real issues were finally resolved into questions of law, and upon them the trial court found for the defendant.

Plaintiff then appealed, after the usual motions.

After the formal contest began, plaintiff applied for, and obtained a recount, by the county clerk, of the original ballots cast at all the precincts in the county. The recount was conducted as provided by the statute on that subject (Rev. Stat. 1889, §§ 4721-4726). It resulted in an exhibit that defendant had a plurality over the plaintiff of 33 votes in the county, and that no less than 3,000 voters had cast their ballots in the city of Sedalia at that election.

Both parties rely on the recent statute concerning elections (§§ 4756-4794, Rev. Stat. 1889), commonly known as the "Australian Ballot" Law as first enacted in this state. It is thus conceded to apply to Sedalia as a city of over 5,000 population. The points of difference to be determined relate to features of the election in that city, held under that law.

We need not pause to state the particulars of the rulings in the trial court, raising the material questions involved, but shall proceed at once to the merits of the dispute.

Plaintiff's contention is that the entire returns from Sedalia should be thrown out of the final count, for several reasons.

1. He claims that the official ballots, printed by the county clerk for use at the voting places in that city, contained (among others) the names of the nominees of the Union Labor party, and that that political party had not polled 8 per cent of the entire vote at the last previous general election, as required by section 4760, Rev. Stat. 1889.

Conceding (without investigating) the fact on which that claim rests, does it follow that the vote of the precinct should be discarded?

In interpreting the statute in question, it must be remembered that its adoption here brings it into subordination to the fundamental law of Missouri, and that prior decisions elsewhere, construing enactments on the same general topic, cannot properly be followed if inconsistent with that fundamental law.

By our Constitution general elections are held at certain fixed dates, and the right of suffrage is expressly secured to every citizen possessing the requisite qualifications. The new ballot law cannot properly be construed to abridge the right of voters to name their public servants at such elections, or to limit the range of choice (for constitutional offices) to persons nominated in the modes prescribed by it. Nominations under it entitle the nominees to places upon the official ballots, printed at public expense; but the Missouri voter is still at liberty to write on his ballot other names than those which may be printed there.

The statute recognizes this right by requiring sufficient blank space for such writing, next to the printed names of candidates for each office. Rev. Stat. 1889, § 4773.

In this respect our law differs materially from the English Act of 1872, under which no actual poll of voters is held, unless more candidates are formally nominated than there are vacancies to be filled.

These observations seem necessary to guard against the supposed effect of adjudications in other states or countries, construing features of such laws differing from those in force in this state.

The living question which this case presents is, What construction shall be given to the Missouri statute on this subject, and to what extent the constitutional rights of voters depend upon the correctness of action of the county clerk in preparing and printing the official ballots?

The act of the clerk which is called in question consisted of admitting names to the ballot, not of excluding any.

There is a substantial difference, in principle and in effect, between admitting and excluding such names.

The practical consequence of erroneously adding a name to the ticket is merely to enlarge the voter's range of choice among candidates on the official list. In Missouri any voter may add such a name for himself in the blank provided on the ballot for that purpose.

How, then, are errors of this sort to be treated?

Plaintiff insists that they vitiate the whole return; that every such error of judgment is a sufficient ground to disfranchise the voters of the locality where such ballots are used.

The law in question presents a number of points at which errors may be expected of the most faithful and conscientious officers. It will often require nice judgment to determine (among other things) whether party candidates have been regularly nominated; how declinations should be treated; whether certificates of independent nominations have the necessary signatures; whether the signers are "resident electors"; whether nomination certificates are formally sufficient under the law; or whether acknowledgments thereof have been "executed with the formalities prescribed for the execution of an instrument affecting real estate." Rev. Stat. 1889, §§ 4756-4763.

It is declared to be the duty of the county clerk to provide the ballots, and that all others than those printed by him according to the provisions of this law "shall not be cast or counted in any election." The plain meaning and purpose of this expression can be seen from the context in the section in which it occurs and that which next follows (§§ 4772-73 of 1889). The design is to preclude the voter and his party friends from supplying his own ballot (as was the former practice), and to compel him to use only that furnished by the state through the county clerk. The latter is directed to print no other names on the voting papers than those of the candidates nominated according to the provisions of that law. The title of the original Act (Sess. Acts 1889, p. 105) and its opening lines plainly show that uniformity in the printing and appearance of the ballots is one of the main objects aimed at. The prohibitions above noted are inserted to further that object; but they give no countenance to the notion, advanced by the plaintiff, that their purpose or effect is to nullify the result of every election at which the county clerk may make some error in publishing or printing the names on the only ballots that can be used.

Legislative language should be clear and unequivocal to justify an inference that such consequences were intended to flow from it. Rutherford, Insts. 2d Am. ed. p. 418.

The printing of the ballots "according to the provisions of this" law, and the antecedent making up of a ticket to be printed (by acting on the nominations submitted) are two distinct official duties. The county clerk prints all the ballots. But he does not act originally on all the nomination papers.

Some of the latter are submitted to the secretary of state, and he certifies certain nominees to the county clerk. Rev. Stat. 1889, § 4767.

Errors in omitting or adding names to the list of candidates, by rulings on the nominating documents, are distinguished from errors made in the mere printing of ballots, by the terms of the law itself. Section 4773 provides a summary remedy to correct any "error or omission in the publication of the names or description of candidates nominated for office, or in the printing of the ballots." So that the language of section 4772, forbidding other ballots, than "those printed by the respective clerks of the county courts according to the provisions of this article," to be cast or counted, obviously carries no such meaning as to nullify ballots, printed by county clerks as directed by the law, and cast by voters in conformity thereto, but incorrectly made up beforehand by the secretary of state or the county clerk by erroneously admitting some candidate's name to a place on the ballot.

The suffrage is regarded with jealous solicitude by a free people, and should be so viewed by those entrusted with the mighty power of guarding and vindicating their sovereign rights. Such a construction of a law as would permit the disfranchisement of large bodies of voters, because of an error of a single official, should never be adopted where the language in question is fairly susceptible of any other.

Wells v. Stanforth (1886), L. R. 16 Q. B. Div. 245.

Or, as a very able judge once tersely said: "All statutes tending to limit the citizen in his exercise of this right" (of suffrage) "should be liberally construed in his favor." Owens v. State (1885), 64 Tex. 509.

It is proper, and often necessary, to consider the effect and consequences of a proposed interpretation of a law to ascertain what is probably its true intent. State v. Hops (1889), 100 Mo. 361, 8 L. R. A. 608. The consequences which would inevitably follow the acceptance of the reading proposed by the plaintiff are so far reaching and disastrous that they constitute a vigorous argument against adopting it.

More than that, section 4778 clearly discloses a legislative design to provide for the correction of just such errors as we are considering, at the instance of any elector (including every one interested), before the election. The process is so summary that the inference is irresistible that the errors it is designed to reach should be rectified by prompt action then, so as not to subject voters to the risk of losing their votes by reason of those errors.

"Sec. 4778. Whenever it shall appear by affidavit that an error or omission has occurred in the publication of the names or description of candidates nominated for office, or in the printing of the ballots, the circuit court of any county, or the judge thereof in vacation, or if the circuit judge is then absent from the county, a judge of the county court, may, upon application by any elector, by order, require the clerk of the county court to correct such error, or to show cause why such error should not be corrected."

In connection with this section it should be remembered that "at least seven days before an election," the county clerk is required to cause the list of nominations, "arranged in the order and form in which they will be printed upon the ballot," to be published in the newspapers, as provided in sections 4768-69. Thus every one in interest is apprised of the names of all candidates, as determined by the clerk, at least one week before election day, to the end that steps may be taken, if desired (as indicated by the language quoted), to supply any omissions or to correct other errors in that list as published. If full effect be given to that section, the injustice and unfairness which otherwise would result in the practical working of the statute will be avoided.

This "Ballot Reform Law" was intended to 16 L. R. A.

improve the methods for giving expression to the popular will in the choice of public officers. It should be construed so as to promote, not destroy, the great objects in view in its passage. It resembles, and, in the main, follows statutes elsewhere on the same subject, but is not identical with its models at all points. A glance at these models, however, will show how foreign to the reason and spirit of such legislation is the idea that the unwary voter is to be subjected, in the name of "reform," to the risk of losing the right of suffrage every time an error in admitting a name to the official ballot is made by an officer passing upon the regularity of nominating papers, when no objection to his ruling is made before the election. Section 4778 was evidently framed with the view to avert such risk. It coincides with part of section 19 of the New York Law of 1890. It is not found in the English statute, but there we read that "the returning officer shall decide on the validity of every objection made to a nomination paper, and his decision, if disallowing the objection, shall be final; but if allowing the same, shall be subject to reversal on petition questioning the election or return" (85 & 86 Vict. (1872), p. 213, chap. 88, 1st sched. sec. 18). This provision applied at first to parliamentary elections only; but, after the decision in Northcote v. Pulford (May 8, 1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 476, it was extended to municipal elections (the kind considered in that case) by the amendment of July 19, 1875 (88 & 89 Vict. chap. 40, § 1, p. 283).

So that, in England and New York to day, the erroneous addition of a name to the official list of nominees, though not corrected before the election, is harmless in its effect upon the voters' right to use the official ballot without fear of possible disfranchisement. This, we consider, is also the proper meaning to be placed upon the law of Missouri. Any other would metamorphose the supposed "reform" into a gigantic trap where the inoffensive citizen might readily be deprived of his most valuable right as a freeman by political manoeuvres in the form of "errors," the force of which he could not foresee until too late to avoid their consequences.

A single case appears to antagonize the conclusion we have reached on this point, namely, Price v. Lush (1890), 10 Mont. 61. With all respect due to the court that decided it, we think it embodies a misapplication of the English precedents which it cites. It entirely omits to mention or consider the effect of section 19 of the Montana Statute (Gen. Laws Mont. 1889, p. 140, substantially the same as our section 4778), which should be given some significance to prevent such unjust consequences to voters as have been explained, and which are impossible under the English Ballot Act, which that case purports to follow and expound.

Some other decisions, however, are supposed to cast light on the present discussion, and will therefore be touched upon.

In Talcott v. Philbrick (1890), 59 Conn. 472, 10 L. R. A. 150, the Supreme Court of Connecticut had to deal with a statute so unlike the Missouri Law that it does not even provide for printing the list of candidates at public expense; but it requires the secretary of state to furnish at cost (to all persons applying for them) blank slips of paper, of uniform size, color, etc., indorsed (in print) "official ballot;" and upon these papers the respective political parties may cause the names of their own nominees to be printed, under provisions declaring that, "in addition to the official indorsement, the ballots shall contain only the names of the candidates, the office voted for, and the name of the political party issuing the same" (Pub. Laws Conn. 1889, p. 155, § 1); and, further, that "all ballots cast in violation of the foregoing provisions, or which do not conform to the foregoing requirements, shall be void and not counted." (Id. § 12).

The case showed that some ballots, in a local election, had been issued by the Republican party but were headed "Citizens"; yet so loth was the court to disfranchise a few persons, who had voted for an alderman in Hartford, that the ruling, pronouncing the "Citizens" ballots illegal, was made by three judges only, the other two dissenting.

The exact value of such a decision in enlightening the case at bar we need not pause to measure. The reader can probably as well determine that for himself.

In People v. Oneida County Canvassers (1891), 129 N. Y. 895, 14 L. R. A. 624, the statute required a certain uniform official indorsement on all ballots, cast at any one polling place, to preclude identification of any particular vote or class of votes, and declared that "no ballot that has not the printed official indorsement shall be counted." The facts were that certain ballots, having an indorsement different from others properly used at the precinct in question, were voted by 1,252 electors; and the court rejected the ballots mentioned, but only by the concurrence of four judges; three others dissenting.

We mention these cases neither to approve nor to disapprove them; but to indicate how inapplicable they are to the case in hand, and to show that, even with language as positive as that they construe, how reluctant are the courts to adopt an interpretation the effect of which is to deprive a large number of their fellow citizens of the electoral franchise.

Having regard to the spirit and purpose of the Missouri statute, and to the general principles governing the treatment of popular elections by the courts in this country, we think it should be held that, where a candidate for public office causes no timely objection to be made before the election (as permitted by section 4778), he should be regarded as having waived all objections that may exist to the presence on the official ballot of any names of nominees not properly entitled to be there. [Compare Reg. v. Bradburn (1876), 6 Ont. Pr. 808, and Allen v. Glynn (1892) (Colo.), 15 L. R. A. 743.]

2. It is next charged that the "Union Labor" list of names of candidates was not legally certified to the county clerk.

How it was certified is not stated. That it was not certified at all is not alleged. From what appears it is evident that the pleader is giving merely his views of the certificate, of which neither the language, substance nor legal import is mentioned, so that the court cannot judge whether it was "legally certified" or not.

In addition, therefore, to the reasons already assigned for declining to review, in this proceeding, the alleged errors of the county clerk in preparing and printing the ballot, the application of a familiar rule of code pleading makes it unnecessary to discuss as a fact such a legal conclusion as alludes to the certification of the "Union Labor" ticket.

3. It is next asserted that the votes from Sedalia should be excluded because they were received at two polling places instead of at one.

It appears that the county court had designated Sedalia city as one election district, but had further provided two voting places therein for holding this election, with one set of judges at each, as hereafter more particularly described. This was done by orders to that effect before the election. Both of the voting precincts were at the court-house in that city.

At one, the voters whose surnames began with the letters "A" to "K" voted; at the other, those with the letters "L" to "Z." Each poll was reached by way of a window, and the two were only seventy-five feet apart. The windows fronted on one portico of the court building. Through them, pass-ways led to the polling booths in the rooms within, where the election judges were stationed and received the ballots.

Assuming that these arrangements involved the irregularity of receiving the vote at two places instead of at one, does it nullify the will of the people so expressed, the election having been regular in other respects?

Undoubtedly some irregularities are of so grave a nature as to invalidate the whole return of the precinct at which they occur; as, for example, the omission of registration. (Zeiler v. Chapman (1874), 54 Mo. 502). In determining which are of that kind, the courts aim merely to give effect to the intent of the law-makers in that regard, aided by established rules of interpretation.

If the law itself declares a specified irregularity to be fatal, the courts will follow that command, irrespective of their views of the importance of the requirement. (Leibetter v. Hall (1876), 62 Mo. 442). In the absence of such declaration, the judiciary endeavor, as best they may, to discern whether the deviation from the prescribed forms of law had, or had not, so vital an influence on the proceedings as probably prevented a free and full expression of the popular will. If it had, the irregularity is held to vitiate the entire return; otherwise it is considered immaterial.

It has been sometimes said, in this connection, that certain provisions of election laws are mandatory, and others directory. These terms may, perhaps, be convenient to distinguish one class of irregularities from the other. But, strictly speaking, all provisions of such laws are mandatory, in the sense that they impose the duty of obedience on those who come within their purview. But it does not therefore follow that every slight departure therefrom should taint the whole proceedings with a fatal blemish.

Courts justly consider the chief purpose of such laws, namely, the obtaining of a fair election and an honest return, as paramount in importance to the minor requirements which prescribe the formal steps to reach that end; and, in order not to defeat the main design, are frequently led to ignore such innocent irregularities of election officers as are free of fraud, and have not interfered with a full and fair expression of the voters' choice.

Thus, in Davis v. State (1889), 75 Tex. 420, the law required that each ward in a town should "constitute an election precinct," yet in San Marcos, a town incorporated with four wards, the county commissioners established two precincts only (without reference to ward lines), and each included parts of the adjacent country; but the court, after full discussion of the general subject, held that the election at those precincts was not avoided by the irregularity.

In Stemper v. Higgins (1888), 88 Minn. 222, a general election was conducted in the village of Madelia, by its officers, as though it constituted a district separate from the township in which it was situated, where also a precinct was open; whereas the law declared that "every organized township, and every ward of an incorporated city, is an election district;" yet the court held the returns from the village valid, despite the irregularity indicated.

These cases find support in others, illustrating the same principle: Gass v. State (1870), 84 Ind. 425; Dale v. Irwin (1875), 78 Ill. 180; Wheelock's Case (1876), 83 Pa. 297; Preston v. Culbertson (1881), 58 Cal. 209; Farrington v. Turner (1884), 58 Mich. 27, 51 Am. Rep. 88; and Peard v. State (Neb.), 51 N. W. Rep. 828, a case under a ballot reform statute.

Such rulings are not peculiar to election proceedings, but result, logically, from the application to them of a time-tested rule of interpretation which requires that the general design and object of a law be kept in view and effectuated, even if it be necessary, in so doing, to restrict somewhat the force of subsidiary provisions that otherwise would conflict with the paramount intent. Cortis v. Kent Water-works Co. (1827) 7 Barn. & C. 830.

Elections under the "Australian Ballot" statutes fall within reach of the principle above stated.

In the English Law of 1872 it is enacted that "no election shall be declared invalid by reason of a non-compliance with the rules contained in the first schedule to this Act, or any mistake in the use of the forms in the second schedule to this Act, if it appears to the tribunal having cognizance of the question that the election was conducted in accordance with the principles laid down in the body of this Act, and that such non-compliance or mistake did not affect the result of the election." Ballot Act 1872, 85 & 86 Vict. chap. 83, § 13, p. 200.

(The rules and schedules prescribe the forms of nomination papers, and procedure for conducting the election.)

It has been judicially determined in that country that the language just quoted is merely declaratory of the common law of England. Woodward v. Barsons, (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 751.

It certainly goes no further, as a curative power, than the accepted general principles of the law of elections in this country, as expounded by the courts. We consider that they have a just and proper application to the facts now in judgment. It is not asserted, on this appeal, that the supposed irregularity, of having two voting booths instead of one, had any bearing upon the result of the election to the prejudice of plaintiff, and we are unable to conjecture how it could, in any wise, have redounded to his disadvantage. We believe it furnishes no sufficient reason for excluding the vote of the two precincts in the circumstances.

4. We conclude that a reasonable and natural construction of the law forbids us to repudiate, for any such reasons as have been presented, the 8,000 votes cast in Sedalia in 1890.

If for every error of a county clerk, or harmless irregularity in election procedure, citizens, having no control over either, are to lose their right of choosing public officers, the "Reform Ballot Act," instead of being found an improvement of the machinery of popular government, will justly be denounced as a "snare to entrap the unsuspecting voter." Gumm v. Hubbard, (1888), 97 Mo. 819. Such a result, however, was never contemplated in its enactment, and should not be brought about by a narrow and technical reading of it.

"Where any particular construction which is given to an Act leads to gross injustice or absurdity, it may generally be said that there is fault in the construction, and that such an end was never intended or suspected by the framers of the Act." Peckham, J., in People v. Onondaga County Canvassers (1891), 129 N. Y. 895, 14 L. R. A. 624.

While it is well enough to insist on a proper and strict performance of duty by officers conducting elections, we are not of the number of those who imagine that such performance will be promoted by disfranchising the whole body of electors in any locality where errors, such as are here charged, occur. The Legislature has not plainly declared such a purpose, and we think it should never be imported into a statute by construction.

It seems to us, after full reconsideration of the case, that the decision of Judge Field on the circuit, in favor of defendant, was right, and should be affirmed.

Black, Brace and Macfarlane, JJ., concur. Sherwood, Ch. J., and Gantt, J., dissent; Thomas, J., will express his views in a separate opinion.

Gantt, J., dissenting:

Statement.

At the general election held on the first Tuesday in November, 1890, Ellis R. Smith was the Republican candidate for sheriff, and Josiah A. Bowers was the Democratic candidate. This is a proceeding under the statute by which the appellant is contesting the election of the respondent. The contestor gave notice of the contest as required by statute, as did also the contestee. After the contest was begun, under a provision of the statute, a recount was had, which gave the contestee, Smith, a majority, on the face of the county clerk's count, of 33.

The abstract showed the vote as follows for the whole county:

For Bowers	3,299
For Smith	3,832
For Sappington	65
For No vote	197
Total	8,393

The abstract of the vote of the city of Sedalia was as follows:

	Bowers.	Smith.	Sap'gton.	NoVote.
Sedalia City, A to K—618	862	19	98
Sedalia City, L to Z—654	840	13	71
Total	3,160

Various grounds were assigned in contestor's notice, but, after the recount, the parties virtually stipulated to withdraw all charges of lack of qualification of the various voters, and all charges relative to illegal voting.

The remaining objections are contained in the fifth and seventh grounds of notice, which are as follows: "(5) That said general election, on November 4, 1890, was illegally conducted in the city of Sedalia, in said Pettis county, in this: That notwithstanding the said city of Sedalia on said day constituted but a single voting precinct, with fixed boundaries, yet during the whole of said day, and during the whole time of election on said day, two separate and distinct polling places were maintained, by different sets of judges and clerks of election, within the limits of said voting precinct in said city, and votes were received during said day and said election at both of said polling places by the respective sets of judges in charge thereof; and the votes so received at both of said polling places were afterwards certified by the respective sets of judges and clerks of election of said two polling places to the county clerk of said Pettis county, and which votes so certified were afterwards included by said county clerk and the two justices of the peace, called in by said clerk, in the official count of the votes cast at said general election in said Pettis county,—all of which was and is contrary to the law of this state, and by reason whereof the said votes so certified from said city of Sedalia should have been and should be wholly excluded from the official count of the votes cast in said county at said general election." "(7) That in said city of Sedalia, in said Pettis county, the said general election was required to be conducted under the provisions of article 3, chap. 60, of the Revised Statutes of Missouri of 1889, and that on November 4, 1890, said general election was not conducted in the manner required, and as provided in said article of said chapter, in this: That the only tickets furnished to the voters and electors at said election in said city of Sedalia, and required to be used by them in voting at said election, were illegal, and did not conform to the provisions of said article of said chapter, but, on the contrary, were prepared, printed, and furnished in violation of said statute; and, among other reasons, said tickets were illegal because the said tickets so furnished and required to be used and voted at said election contained a list of candidates for various offices under the heading of 'Union Labor,' of and among which said list was the following: 'For sheriff, G. D. Sappington;' and which said list of candidates under the said heading was printed upon and made a part of 16 L. R. A.

said tickets without any authority therefor, and contrary to the provisions of said statute, for the reasons: First. That there was not at the time of said election, nor on or within sixty days prior thereto any political party within said Pettis county having or being known by the name of 'Union Labor,' or any other similar name, or any name of similar import, which had, at the last general election in said county before said general election in 1890, polled as a party at least three per cent of the entire vote cast in said Pettis county at such prior election, and said list of names of candidates was not legally certified from any convention of a political party having the right in law to certify the nomination of candidates to be inserted in the tickets to be used and voted in said city of Sedalia at said general election in 1890. Second. That said list of candidates was not nominated as provided by law, and their alleged nomination was not certified by a certificate of nomination signed by electors resident within the said city of Sedalia, nor by electors resident within the said county of Pettis, to a number equal to one per cent of the entire vote cast at the last preceding general election in said Pettis county prior to said general election in November, 1890. Third. That the alleged nomination of said list of candidates, and one of each of them, so printed on said tickets under said heading of 'Union Labor,' was not made or certified to the clerk of the county court of said Pettis county, by filing a certificate of nomination executed with the formalities prescribed for the execution of an instrument affecting real estate; and no certificate of nomination of said candidates, or of any of them, executed with the formalities prescribed for the execution of an instrument affecting real estate, was filed with the clerk of the county court of Pettis county, Mo. For which reasons the votes cast in said precinct in and for the city of Sedalia were and are illegal, and should have been, and should be, wholly excluded from the official count of the votes cast at said general election, in November, 1890, in said Pettis county."

The contestee filed a motion to strike out of the contestor's notice the 4th, 5th, and 7th paragraphs, which alleged, respectively, that the ballots in the Sedalia precinct were counted contrary to law, and that two polling places were maintained in said precinct, and that the official ballot illegally contained the names of the candidates of the Union Labor party. This motion was sustained, to which action appellant duly excepted at the time. On the trial of the case the contestor offered in evidence one of the official ballots which were cast at the election in question, and also read in evidence the county clerk's abstract of the votes cast for the parties at such election as ascertained by the recount. The court refused, against the objections and exceptions of the contestor, to admit evidence showing that the city of Sedalia at the time was a city with over 5,000 inhabitants. The court then admitted evidence showing that the 164 votes in the Sedalia city precinct referred to in the county clerk's return of his official recount as "no votes" were so returned because the majority of said ballots were not counted for either of the three candidates for sheriff, by reason of the fact that the name of only one of the same was crossed out, leaving the names of two candidates voted thereon for such office. The court next refused evidence offered by the contestor to show that two polling places were held in the Sedalia city precinct, with two sets of judges, clerks, poll books, and ballot boxes. And contestor offered evidence in connection therewith to show that in one of said polling places all voters the initial letter of whose last name fell between A to K, inclusive, were required to vote at one polling place, while in a like manner all between L to Z voted at the other polling place; but that the poll books showed about fifty exceptions to the rule, voters to that number having voted at the wrong place under such arrangement. That at each of said polling places there were six judges, two of whom had charge of the ballots, and issued them to the electors. At each place the judges numbered the ballots on the back to correspond with the number of the voter casting the same at the poll. That these polling places were 75 feet apart,—all of which evidence was, on motion of contestee, excluded by the court, to which appellant duly excepted. At the close of contestor's case the contestee offered in evidence his certificate of election; and his commission, and rested, and the court thereupon rendered judgment for the contestee. In due time, the contestor (Bowers) filed his motion for new trial, assigning as error the sustaining of contestee's (Smith's) motion to strike out parts of contestant's notice, and striking out said paragraphs, (4th, 5th, and 7th,) and excluding legal and competent evidence. This being overruled, the cause was appealed to this court.

Opinion.

The trial court excluded evidence tending to prove that the city of Sedalia was a city having over 5,000 inhabitants on the date of the general election in 1890. If the trial court refused to hear this evidence on the ground that it would take ex officio notice of the population of Sedalia, its ruling might be sustained; otherwise it was error to decline to hear it. Section 4794, art. 3, chap. 60, only applied to cities of 5,000 inhabitants. It was most material to know whether that article applied to the contest. It is, however, conceded by both sides here that said city has a population largely in excess of 5,000. Under these circumstances, article 3, chap. 60, Rev. Stat. 1889, was applicable to the method of holding and conducting said election in said city.

1. The contestor insists that the vote of the city of Sedalia should be rejected altogether, because the official ballot prepared by the county clerk, and used at that precinct, contained, in addition to the names of the Democratic and Republican nominees, duly certified to the county clerk, the names of certain parties as candidates of the Union Labor party,—among others, that of George D. Sappington, for sheriff,—when, in fact, no such party at the last previous general election had cast 3 per cent of all the votes of Pettis county, and no nominations of such a party had been certified to or filed with the county clerk, as required by said article 3, chap. 60. This, it will be readily seen, presents a question of great moment. The right of suffrage is justly esteemed the corner stone of our free institutions. Our election laws are framed with the special purpose of preserving this right, and of enabling every citizen, whatever his position in society, to express his choice, untrammelled and unintimidated. It is earnestly contended by counsel that, if the statute is to be construed so that ballots cannot be counted which contain names of candidates prohibited by the statutes, then it is unconstitutional. The argument of counsel for contestee is based upon the wrong that would be done the voter to deprive him of his franchise on account of the illegal act of a public officer, and that the statute is merely directory, and not mandatory. The right to make laws to preserve the purity of elections is expressly conferred on the Legislature in some of the states by their constitutions, but in Missouri the power to regulate elections by law has never been doubted or denied. In the administration of these laws, individual instances doubtless will occur when the voter loses his ballot, but this is no greater hardship than befalls the individual in the administration of other general laws.
16 L. R. A.

In State v. Cook, 41 Mo. 598, where the whole vote of an election district was thrown out by the court of appeals because the officer making the registration was disqualified to act, this did not give a party who was a qualified voter, and who was registered as such, the right to demand that he should be entered as a qualified voter, in preparing the list of voters for a special election. The court held that it was a case of great hardship and deprivation. A citizen who had fought in the armies of his country, who was a qualified voter according to law, and had complied with all the forms of registration, was denied the privilege of voting because the board of revision pronounced the book in which he was registered a nullity, and the law had failed to provide for a new registration. Judge Wagner, speaking for the whole court, said: "But it is better that he should be deprived of a right temporarily than that this court should overstep the boundaries of established precedent and sound construction, and annihilate the line which separates judicial from legislative functions." "A court of law," says Lord Abinger, "ought not to be influenced or governed by any notions of hardship. Cases may require legislative interference, but judges cannot modify the rules of law." Rhodes v. Smethurst, 4 Mees. & W. 68. "It is not for courts of justice proprio Marte to provide for all the defects or mischiefs of imperfect legislation." Per Story, J., in Smith v. Rines, 2 Sumn. 854. In West v. Ross, 58 Mo. 350, in a statutory contest for the office of clerk of the circuit court of Gentry county, the statute required that all ballots cast should be numbered, and that ballots not numbered should not be counted. It appeared that none of the votes cast in Miller township were numbered by the judges of the election; that Ross received in said township 179 votes, and West 72 votes. It was further shown that the majority for Ross in the whole county, over West was 8; that, if the votes in Miller township which were not numbered had not been counted; West would have had a majority of 99 votes over Ross. It was also admitted that no fraud was intended by the judges in failing to number the ballots. If that case it was contended that the statute requiring the ballots to be numbered was merely directory. Judge Vories says: "After the Legislature by the statute directs that the ballots shall be numbered, it proceeds to declare the consequences of a noncompliance with the direction, which is that 'no ballot not numbered shall be counted.' Can we say this negative clause is only directory, and in that indirect way nullify, or repeal by a judicial decision, the whole provision of the statute requiring ballots to be numbered? If we deny the consequence affixed by the Legislature to the nonperformance of a regulation provided by the law, it, in effect, nullifies the law itself. This case may be a hard case, and doubtless is, but the legislative enactment is clear; and, although it may deprive a portion of the citizens of the county of their right to be heard in the election of a clerk at one election, it is better that they should suffer this temporary privation than that the courts should habituate themselves to disregard or ignore the plain law of the land in order to provide for hard cases." The same statute received the same construction again in Ledbetter v. Hall, 62 Mo. 422. In State v. Frazier, 98 Mo. 426, the special act of the Legislature, incorporating the city of Rolla, required that the voters at city elections "shall register their names at least two weeks next preceding the election." A city election was held, and certain citizens elected councilmen. The election was held in every respect in compliance with law, save the voters were not registered. Barclay, J., said: "There was in this case a total failure to comply with a law making the registration of voters an essential preliminary to an election to the fullest extent; that it is peculiarly the province of the Legislature to prescribe the rules and regulations for conducting elections in this state; and that when the law prescribes certain requisites in the ballot, and follows it with the denunciation that, unless the ballot complies with the law, 'it shall not be counted,' then the statute is mandatory, and a noncompliance therewith will avoid the election."

Now section 4772 provides: "Except as in this article otherwise provided, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the county court of each county to provide printed ballots for every election for public officers in which the electors, or any of the electors, within his county, participate, and to cause to be printed, in the appropriate ballot, the name of every candidate whose name has been certified to or filed with him, in the manner provided for in this article." "Ballots, others than those printed by the respective clerks of the county courts, according to the provisions of this article, shall not be cast or counted in any election." Section 4778 provides that "every ballot printed under the provisions of this article shall contain the name of every candidate whose nomination for any office specified in the ballot has been certified or filed according to the provisions of this article, and no other names." For the purposes of this discussion, it must be taken that the motion to strike out the allegations in the notice as to the names of the Labor Union candidates confesses the truth of that averment, which I hold is a clear and concise statement, and its sufficiency as a pleading was not questioned by opposing counsel in the circuit or this court. It was reserved for this court to make the point, and its stands admitted that the ballot contained names not certified or filed in accordance with said article 3 of chapter 60. The statute provided said ballot should contain "no other names" than those certified. Here, then, is a positive violation of a plain law. What penalty follows in such a case? The statute answers: "Ballots other than those printed . . . according to the provisions of this article (3) shall not be cast or counted at any election." The words "shall not be counted" were construed as mandatory in West v. Ross, 53 Mo. 850, and the whole vote of a township excluded. Again in Ledbetter v. Hall, 62 Mo. 422, the whole vote of a township was excluded under the same provision. In Gumm v. Hubbard, 97 Mo. 311, it is true, the words "shall be considered fraudulent" were in the statute, but the words "and shall not be counted" affixed the punishment that should be visited upon the ballot declared by the statute to be fraudulent. The alternative is plain. We must either follow a statute which the Legislature has enacted, and had a perfect right to enact, or hold that it is optional with the county clerks to obey the electoral law or not, as their judgment may dictate. By holding that a violation of this provision does not affect an election, we in effect nullify the statute, and say to election officers it is not necessary to follow its commands. But it is argued by contestees that no fraud on the part of the clerk or of respondent is charged. In West v. Ross it was expressly admitted the judges were guilty of no fraud in failing to number the ballots, yet that did not prevent this court from declaring the election void. In Gumm v. Hubbard, Judge Black says the statute furnishes an absolute rule of evidence. It makes the ballot fraudulent "without regard to intent." So it would seem that neither averment nor evidence of fraud is necessary in such cases, but proof simply of a failure to comply with a mandatory provision of the statute will avoid the election. In 6 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 348, § 8, it is said: "In many of the states there are statutes prescribing the form of the ballot, the kind of paper, etc., and prohibiting any marks, figures, or devices by which one can be distinguished from another. These statutes, being designed to preserve the secrecy of the ballot, and to prevent fraud, intimidation, and bribery, will generally be considered mandatory, and this will be so in all cases where the statute provides that a ballot varying from the requirements of the law shall not be counted." And at page 825 of the same volume it is said: "A violation of mandatory provisions will avoid the election, without regard to the motive of the persons guilty of the violation, and without any inquiry into the effect of the result of the election." Again it is said: "No harm was shown to have resulted to contestor." It appeared from the evidence in the trial court that upon the recount contestee, Smith, had a majority of 83 votes only. It further appeared there were 164 votes cast in Sedalia that were returned as "no votes." "In about three fourths of said ballots, the state of the case was that the same were not counted because one of the three candidates for sheriff was scratched, leaving the other two upon the ballot, and in a very large majority of such three fourths of said ballots the aforesaid result arose from the fact that the voter struck out one column of candidates, or the candidates of one political party, and left the candidates of the other two parties or columns intact." Now according to the statutes of this state, as only the nominees of two political parties had been certified to the county clerk, no other names could lawfully be placed on the ballots at said election; and, had there been only the two names of the contestor and contestee on the official ballot, the striking off of either of their names would have left the other a vote; but, when a third name illegally appeared on this ballot, the striking off of the name left a vote for two candidates, which rendered it void, or "no vote." There were 164 votes of this character in Sedalia alone, and the majority is only 83. Who will say that the placing of the third name illegally on these ballots did not render this election uncertain? It has often been said that if the irregularities in an election are so great as to render the choice doubtful, they will avoid the election. Scranton Borough Case, Brightly, Elect. Cas. 455; 6 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 328, note 3.

16 L. R. A.

But it is argued that our Constitution secures to every voter the right to cast his ballot for whom he pleases. Certainly this is not denied, and, in order that he may not be restricted simply to those candidates whose names are printed on the official ballot, it is expressly provided in section 4778 that "at the end of the list of candidates for each office shall be left a blank space large enough to contain as many printed names of candidates as there are offices to be filled." We agree with counsel for appellee that if this new Election Law of May 16, 1889, should restrict the election to the names printed on the official ballot, and make no provision for his substituting any name he chose for any office to be chosen, it would be unconstitutional. On the contrary, it has expressly guarded against that in section 4773, by leaving space for him to write the names of as many candidates as there are offices to be filled.

But we are not certain that we fully comprehend the objection that this Act is unconstitutional, if it is construed that a ballot shall not be counted if it contains written matter not authorized by the statute. The term, "elections shall be free and open," is very general. If, by it, we are to understand that the citizen may defy all regulations prescribed by law, call and hold elections whenever he sees fit, and vote in any manner that may suit his fancy, then all elections laws are unconstitutional. But we hold that "the electoral franchise is not an unrestrained license. In a government of law, the law must regulate the manner in which it is to be exercised. The time, occasion, and mode of voting are to be prescribed by the Legislature in subordination to the provisions of the Constitution." Paine, Elections, § 5 (1888). A careful scrutiny of this Act has not revealed anything in the provisions requiring the county clerk to print the ballots, and prescribing what names shall be printed thereon, that, in our opinion, conflicts with a free and open election. If an aspirant for office does not belong to any of the great parties in this country, and is not fortunate enough to have the nomination of a party that cast 3 per cent of the votes at the last election, he is still not debarred. He can procure the certificate of electors within his district or political division to the number equal to 1 per cent of the vote cast at the last general election. This system contains many features that are new, and they have not yet received construction by the courts of the several states.

In Price v. Lush, 10 Mont. 61, the Supreme Court of Montana held that as this was an English statute, and had been often construed by the courts of that country, the territory of Montana must be presumed, in adopting it, to take it with the construction it had received in England, and consequently held an election void where the successful candidate at the polls had not been nominated as required by law, but had succeeded in getting his name on the official ballot. That court reached that conclusion after a thorough examination of the English and Australian cases. In adopting that construction, it followed eminent authority. Pennock v. Dialogue, 27 U. S. 2 Pet. 1, 7 L. ed. 327; McDonald v. Hovey, 110 U. S. 628, 28 L. ed. 271; Allen v. St. Louis Nat. Bank, 120 U. S. 34, 30 L. ed. 576; Pratt v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 141 Mass. 225, 1 New Eng. Rep. 760; Skouten v. Wood, 57 Mo. 880. But the power of the Legislature to regulate elections has been elaborately reviewed by the Court of Appeals of New York very recently in the case of People v. Onondaga County Canvassers, 129 N. Y. 395, 14 L. R. A. 624. The Australian ballot system, with some modifications, was adopted by the Legislature of that state in 1891. The title of the Act was "An Act to Promote the Independence of Voters at Public Elections, Enforce the Secrecy of the Ballots, and Provide for the Printing and Distribution of Ballots at Public Expense." Laws N. Y. 1891, chap. 296. Section 31 of the Act provides that "no inspector of election shall deposit in a ballot box, or permit any other person to deposit in a ballot box, on election day, any ballot which is not properly indorsed and numbered, except in the cases provided for in section 21 of this Act." Section 17 of the Act required this indorsement, "Official ballot for ——" and it was provided that, after the word "for," in the blank, should follow the description of the polling place for which the ballot is prepared, the date of the election, and a fac simile of the signature of the county clerk, "and the ballot shall contain no caption or other indorsement." The town of Camillus, in Onondaga county, was divided into two election precincts. In some way it turned out that all the Republican ballots in district No. 1, in said town, were indorsed, "Official ballot for second district poll, town of Camillus," November 3, 1891; and in district No. 2 all the Republican ballots were indorsed "for first district." There were 1,252 of these ballots. The inspectors counted these ballots for Rufus T. Peck, Republican candidate for senator. A proceeding by mandamus was begun in the supreme court to require the canvassers to reject these ballots as illegal, and the writ was made peremptory in that court. On appeal to the court of appeals that order was affirmed. Opinions were written by Chief Justice Ruger and Judges Gray and O'Brien, in which the decisions of this court in West v. Ross, 58 Mo. 350, and Ledbetter v. Hall, 62 Mo. 422, were quoted and approved. These opinions with one accord all hold that as "the Act provides that no ballots not properly indorsed shall be received, or, if received, shall be counted," it is imperatively the duty of the canvassing officers to reject them. Says Chief Justice Ruger: "But it is urged that a strict construction of the law must result in disfranchisement. This is true, but the law plainly contemplates such a result, and who can complain, except those who are opposed to any restrictions whatsoever upon the action of the election? No advocate of the Reform Ballot Law can justly criticize a result which was in the minds of its authors when the law was drafted and enacted. They clearly contemplated this effect, and determined that the injustice which a few might suffer through ignorance, willful blindness, or inattention to the requirements of law should not be permitted to defeat the great good to be secured to the whole people by the adoption of an effectual scheme for the purification of elections." Let it be conceded that the arguments of the judges in sustaining the law proceed principally upon the necessity of a secret ballot, and to permit the irregularity to go unpunished would destroy that secrecy, still the great underlying consideration was that "elections are a contrivance of government, which prescribes who are electors and how they may express their will, and it is a legitimate exercise of power to prescribe the description of ballots which shall be used."

This case fully meets the argument of respondent, that the ballots in this case at bar were official ballots prepared by the county clerk, and his illegal act cannot disfranchise a voter. In the New York case the ballot was indorsed "Official Ballot," but, by the willful or negligent act of the clerk, the wrong precinct was indorsed, and they were rejected. The point is identical in principle. It was the act of an official, and that court, as we have already said, but followed our own decisions, supra, wherein the act of the election judges disfranchised a whole township. The Supreme Court of Connecticut in Talcott v. Philbrick, 59 Conn. 472, 10 L. R. A. 150, had a question identical in principle with this. There, as in Missouri, this Australian Ballot System was adopted in 1889. By the first section of chapter 247, p. 155, Acts Conn. 1889, it is provided, among other things: "In addition to the official indorsement, ballots shall contain only the names of the candidates, the office voted for, and the name of the political party issuing the same." And section 12 provided that "all ballots cast in violation of the foregoing provisions, or which do not conform to the foregoing requirements, shall be void, and not counted." Certain ballots (286 in number), bearing the names of all the Republican candidates, and in every respect complying with the law, save and except they bore the name "Citizens," were cast at that election. These ballots were issued by the Republican party. The court held these ballots were void, and should not be counted. Says the court: "We are relieved of any obligation to inquire as to the necessity or reason of this or that requirement, and we are not at liberty to dispense with anything that is required, whatever the reason for it may be, or even if without any apparent reason at all. The Legislature has spoken, and obedience is our first and only duty. It is at liberty to throw around the ballot box such safe-guards and regulations as it may deem proper, and it is the duty of the citizen to conform thereto. Some inconvenience is not too great a price to pay for an honest, pure ballot." And, as applicable to the notice of contest in this case, the court says: "The ballot does not speak the truth. It purports to have been issued by a Citizens' party, but it was in fact issued by the Republican party. It implies there was a Citizens' party, but there was not. In this case, the ballot implies there was a Union Labor Party, but the motion to strike out confesses there was not; and yet the names of candidates of such a party were placed on this so-called official ballot, to mislead and confuse the voter, and actually had that result. In Fields v. Osborne, 60 Conn. 544, 12 L. R. A. 551, this same Connecticut statute again came under review. This was an annual election for the town of Branford. Among other offices to be filled was that of town clerk. By the statutes this office is ex officio the registrar of births, marriages, and deaths in their respective towns. No vacancy existed, and by law no election for probate judge was authorized at this election. There were two tickets in the field. The Democratic ticket and a Citizens' ticket. On the Citizens' ticket were the words, 'For judge of probate, Henry H. Steadman.' On the Democratic ticket were the words 'For town clerk and ex officio registrar of births, marriages, and deaths.' The court held that the Citizens' ticket containing the words 'judge of probate' were illegal, and should not be counted, and also rejected the Democratic tickets with the words 'ex officio registrar,' etc. Judge Seymour, delivering the opinion says: "A plain provision of the law is violated in a point concerning which the Act does not authorize us to inquire into the intent or the consequences of the violation. In short, the Legislature has seen fit to say, if a ballot contains the addition to the specified contents which these do, it shall be void. Unless we are prepared to hold the Act unconstitutional, we cannot disregard its requirements. If it is harsh and unreasonable, the remedy is with the Legislature that enacted it, and not with the courts, which are bound to respect it." See also Re Vota Marks, 17 R. I. —.

16 L. R. A.

The Act of 1889 was confined to cities of 5,000 inhabitants. It was an experiment. The Legislature apparently hesitated to adopt it for the state at large, lest its requirements might confuse the officers and voters; but the city elections demonstrated that it was not difficult to comply with it, and it rapidly won the public favor, so that the present Legislature has applied its provisions to every precinct in the state. Except for the gravest reasons, we ought not to set aside the plain mandate of the Legislature; but, if we permit the plain violation of that law that was committed in this case, we nullify the statute. But it is objected that, notwithstanding the county clerk placed upon the ballots at this election the names of candidates in positive violation of the statute, the contestor cannot complain, because section 4778 provides: "Whenever it shall appear by affidavit that an error or omission has occurred in the publication of the names or description of candidates nominated for office, or in the printing of the ballots, the circuit court of any county, or the judge thereof in vacation, or, if the circuit judge is then absent from the county, a judge of the circuit court, may, upon application by any elector by order, require the county clerk of the county court to correct such error, or to show cause why such error should not be corrected." This section was intended to correct mistakes in the names of the candidates nominated, or the designation of the offices for which they were candidates, upon the application of any elector. It does not purport nor do we think it was intended as furnishing a mode of procedure to a candidate who was wrongfully denied a place on the ticket, nor a remedy for those lawfully on the ticket to purge it of names which had illegally been placed thereon. But, in any event, this case is here on the pleadings alone. There is nothing in the record that tends to show that contestor had any knowledge of the facts which would now estop him of complaining. In the absence of proof or allegation to the contrary, it will be presumed that he acted on the presumption that the county clerk, a public officer, would not put on the official ballot the name of any candidate whose nomination had not been certified or filed as required by law. In the absence of knowledge, no one will contend he is estopped.

2. Again, it is contended by the contestor, Bowers, that the vote of the Sedalia precinct should be excluded, for the reason that the county court ignored section 4678 in the appointment of judges of the Sedalia precinct. The statute (section 4777, in connection with 4678) provides that the court shall appoint six judges for each precinct, and in this instance the court appointed twelve judges. Instead of one polling place in the precinct, there were two, 75 feet apart. Different judges received and numbered the ballots. At one of these voting places 1,582 votes were cast, and at the other 1,578. By the statute (section 4777, in connection with 4678) the county courts are empowered to appoint six judges only for each election precinct. Three of the judges shall be selected from the party having the largest vote at the last election, and three from the party having the next largest. These judges shall select the two judges, one from each party, to have charge of the ballots, and furnish them to the voters. And minute direction is given in the statute for the conduct of the election. There is no warrant for the appointment of double this number and opening a new poll. After the court had appointed six, the power of attorney was exhausted, and those appointed after that derived no authority. If the county court of Pettis county may disregard the election law by appointing six additional judges and a second polling place, they may establish a dozen in the same precinct, and, if that court may do this, all other county courts may do likewise. The precedent would be dangerous and pernicious. It would open wide the door for fraudulent practices, and practically nullify the statute.

Counsel for contestee says: "Certainly some of the judges acted legally, and how can it be decided as to which lot of ballots shall be thrown out, and which body of electors deprived of their votes?" We answer that, where the conduct of the election is so grossly irregular that the courts cannot determine which are legal and which illegal, the whole should be disregarded. In no other way can the laws be upheld, and the purity of the ballot preserved.

As to the provision of the statute, we think there is little trouble in ascertaining the reason upon which it rests. Observation and experience have taught that one of the greatest evils attending our popular elections has been the crowding of the polls. In this way the not over scrupulous partisan manages to delay voters, deter the timid and diffident voter, annoy the judges with frequent and unfounded challenges and other interruptions, and block the way for all but his own party. To avoid this, the statute is ampler in its authority to the county court to make the precinct or election districts small enough that six judges only will be required to receive and count the vote. The county court of Pettis county when it appointed twelve judges for one precinct by its very record disclosed the absolute necessity for dividing this precinct. It is a virtual finding that six judges could not receive and count the votes. Instead, in that city, of their following the plain provisions of the statute, and dividing the precinct, they made this unauthorized appointment of six additional judges, and in this way preserved all the objectionable features of a popular election, and secured to the people of that city none of the benefits that the statute was designed to secure. The statute wisely provides that "each voter shall vote only in the township in which he resides, or, if in a town or city, then in the election district therein in which he resides." This provision was made so that the judges and voters could more readily know who is entitled to vote, and the more easily detect any attempt to vote illegally, either from want of residence or non-age, or other disability. McCrary, Elections, § 651. Moreover, by having precincts small enough for two judges to receive and two to count, the judges may more deliberately hear challenges and decide them, without denying others the right to vote. Judge McCrary, in his work on Elections, expresses the opinion that no precinct should contain over 800 voters; indeed, he lays it down as a cardinal principle that multiplication of voting precincts will prove an effectual remedy for all the evils that flow from overcrowding the polls. And there are other considerations that doubtless controlled the Legislature. It was intended that the boundaries of each precinct should be defined, and every elector therein should know the voting place. It was never intended, as was done here, that the initial let ter of a voter's name should subject him to the annoyance of going from one voting place to another, according to the initial letter of his name. It was the clear intention of the law that every voter in each precinct should vote at one and the same place, and that these precincts should be small enough to permit each voter to cast his ballot on the day of election without annoyance. The suggestion that this had been previously done is not in the case, and, if it was, is no justification. There was no evidence heard on this branch of the case that would tend to estop the contester. As the judges in excess of six were not even de facto judges, it resulted that at least six persons unauthorized by statute were permitted to pry into the ballots of the voters, and thus destroy that secrecy which the Constitution secures against every one but a sworn and lawful election officer. The position taken by my learned brother that the two polling places within one precinct is not an abuse of the statute is not sustained by those judges of this court who hold that this violation of a positive enactment does not vitiate the election. The case from the supreme court of Texas (Davis v. State, 12 S. W. Rep. 957, 75 Tex. 420) is cited as authority. But the facts in that case show that the county court made the mistake of putting two wards in one precinct, and only appointing one set of officers for each precinct. I presume I may be permitted also to cite the dissenting opinion of Judge Henry, 12 S. W. Rep. 962, as furnishing to my mind the most satisfactory reasons why the election in that case should have been held void. I quote from his opinion: "The doctrine of de facto election precincts finds no place in the law. What it is unlawful for the commissioners' court and the voter to do in the first instance cannot become right or lawful by being repeated. The law, much less the Constitution, cannot be repealed or superseded by such methods. . . . The law does not, however, authorize two separate elections to be held in one ward or any one precinct. It directs and authorizes one only. For the purpose of preventing fraudulent voting, the policy of the law is that there shall be only one poll at which one person can cast his vote." I am glad that the judgment of this court does not, at least, approve the clear violation of the law in appointing two sets of election judges in one precinct, and that in the future the county court will avoid this clear violation of the spirit and letter of the law. This appeal will accomplish this much good, if no more. I cannot give my assent to the opinion of the majority. I understand that the Legislature has a right to enact laws regulating elections, and that it is the duty of the courts and the citizens alike to obey them, so long as they do not infringe the Constitution. When the Legislature adopted what is popularly known as the "Australian Ballot Law," its purpose was most clearly to throw around the voter and his ballot additional safe guards, and render him less liable to be deprived of his suffrage. All good citizens appreciate the importance of preserving the ballot in all its purity; the only difference that can arise is as to the method of so doing. We hold that the most effectual way of accomplishing this is to require these election officers to obey the statute. It follows from these views that I hold the ballots containing the names of the Union Labor candidates void, and that the dividing of the city into two polling places was illegal and unauthorized, and resulted in placing the ballots in the hands of parties who had no authority to see them, and was a clear violation of the statute. In so doing, I follow the command of the law in a matter of the highest public concern. The judgment of the circuit court should be reversed, and the cause remanded for trial in accordance herewith. I am authorized by Sherwood, Ch. J., to say he concurs fully in all I have said, and Thomas, J., concurs in the result I would reach.

16 L. R. A.

Thomas, J.:

I concur in the result reached by my Brother Gantt on the second point discussed in his opinion, but I fear he has stated the principles upon which he bases that result too broadly. I am not prepared to say that a county clerk's action in preparing a ticket under our election laws can be reviewed by the courts after the election in all cases, nor am I willing to say that it cannot be reviewed in any case. That would, in my judgment, depend on circumstances. Under the specifications in the notice of contest in this case which were stricken out on motion of the contestee, the contester would have had the right to introduce evidence to show that the Union Labor party had no existence in Pettis county; that Sappington had not been nominated by any party, or by any number of electors; that his nomination had not been certified to the clerk at all; and that the clerk arbitrarily put his name on the official ballot without deciding, or attempting to decide, anything, simply because he was requested to put it there, and in that case the ballot would have been void. I fully concur in what was said by Sherwood, P. J., in division No. 1, in State v. Lesueur, 108 Mo. 253, that the secretary of state does not occupy "the attitude of a mere figurehead or automaton, moved about at the whim or touch of every eager applicant who desires the performance of duties which pertain to his office. When applied to for the discharge of such duties, although his discretion may not reach the height known as 'judicial,' . . . yet it cannot be doubted that some portion of the qualities and attributes of discretion inhere in the discharge of his official duties, requiring him to consider before acting, and to search and inquire before reaching and announcing a conclusion." These remarks are as applicable to the county clerk under our election statutes as to the secretary of state, but I do not believe the power of the secretary of state or clerk in preparing the official ballot is unlimited. It would be a pernicious doctrine for the courts to assert that the county clerk can arbitrarily and ad libitum put names on the official ballot that ought not to be put on it, and that the candidates who have a legal right to have their names on it must resort to the courts before the election or lose their remedy. On the other hand, if the clerk should receive the certificate of nomination, should examine into the facts in regard to it, should decide that the names of the parties mentioned therein ought to go on the official ballot, and should print and publish it as required by law, and no objection to it should be made prior to the election, the courts, in a contest arising in regard to it after the election, might very well refuse to interfere with the clerk's decision, and hold the ballot good, though it should turn out that certain names were improperly printed on it. But the courts should hold the ballot void if it appear that names were illegally printed on it, unless it should be proved that the clerk did consider before acting, and that he did search and inquire before reaching a conclusion; that he did exercise his judgment and discretion; and that he did not arbitrarily, and without a pretense of authority or right, print the unauthorized names on the ballot. I take the position that the clerk has not a carte blanche to put the name of every eager applicant, who may so request, on the official ballot; nor should a ballot be declared void in every case in which a name is on it which ought not to be on it, where the clerk exercised a sound discretion in preparing it. This leaves the courts to review the action of the clerk, and to adjudicate the issue as the very right of each case may demand. The court below ought to have refused to strike out the portions of the notice of contest it did strike out; ought to have heard the evidence in regard to how and why the names of the Union Labor candidates were printed on the ballot; and to have disposed of the issue on the evidence. I fully agree with my Brother Barclay in what he has said in his opinion in regard to the election precincts in Sedalla. For the reasons given above, I think the judgment of the lower court ought to be reversed, and the cause remanded for new trial on the merits.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, Stephen B. RANSOM, Prosecutor,

²
Daniel BLACK.

(.....N. J.....)

- *1. The right to vote secured by the Constitution can only become operative by legislation; and any reasonable legislative regulation for the purpose of securing an enforced secrecy of the ballot is not a deprivation of a right to vote.
2. The clause in section 63 of the Election Act of 1890, prohibiting any electioneering on an election day within 100 feet of any polling place, is a reasonable police regulation to secure good order about the polls.
3. An objection that the clause in section 30, which provides that, if any ballot shall have thereon a mark, sign, signature, or device other than permitted by the Act, it shall be void, is unconstitutional, because the voter may lose his vote by the fraud or neglect of those preparing the ballots, is not sound. The most stringent directions are given respecting the preparation of the official ballots, and the law presumes that they will be obeyed.
4. The clauses which provide that only those parties casting a certain percentage of the vote at the last election, and those parties presenting petitions signed by a certain number of voters, shall be entitled to official ballots, is a valid regulation to restrain the number of ballots to be printed and distributed within reasonable limits.
5. The fact that a voter may be compelled, in exercising his right to vote, to deposit a ballot having upon it the name or style of a party of whose principles he disapproves is not an illegal deprivation of a right to vote; for if a voter exercises his right to erase the names of all the candidates on the ticket, and inserts the names of persons who stand for an entirely different principle, the heading of the ticket becomes meaningless as an expression of the voter's sentiments.

(June 9, 1892.)

CERTIORARI to the Court of Common Pleas for Hudson County to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the Second District Court of Jersey City imposing a fine upon defendant as a penalty for the alleged violation of the election laws. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Argued before Dixon, Garrison, and Reed, JJ.

Mr. Stephen B. Ransom, in propria persona.

Mr. Thomas J. Kennedy for defendant.

Reed, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Section 63 of the new Election Act reads as follows: "No voter shall knowingly vote, or offer to vote, any ballot except an official ballot inclosed and sealed in an official envelope, as by this Act required. Any person violating this provision shall incur a penalty of $25 for each and every offense, to be recovered by an action of tort, before any court of competent jurisdiction, by any person who bona fide shall first bring suit." The defendant below voted a ballot printed at his own expense, with no indorsement upon the back, as is required upon official ballots, and therefore admittedly contravened the section just mentioned. This is admitted by the prosecutor, but he attacks the judgment by challenging the validity of the statute prescribing the penalty. The indictment against the Act sets out a number of particulars in which it is charged that the statute is in conflict with the state Constitution. The parts of the statute which are thus attacked are the following: First, the clause in section 63 which prohibits electioneering, on election respect to printing official ballots, see DeWalt v. Bartley (Pa.) 15 L. R. A. 771.

NOTE.—As to the power of the Legislature to regulate the right to vote, see Bloomer v. Todd, 1 L. R. A. 111, and note, 3 Wash. Terr. 599.

As to discrimination between political parties in 10 L. R. A.

As to the Australian Ballot System generally, see note to Bowers v. Smith, ante, 754.

day, within 100 feet of any polling place; second, the last clause of section 63, which provides that any marked ballot or official envelope shall not be counted; third, the provisions of section 28, which entails upon those voters who do not belong to a party who has nominated candidates, but who wish to vote a party ticket of their own, the trouble of procuring a petition signed by a certain per cent of the entire vote cast at the preceding election, as a condition precedent to adopting a party name, and having tickets printed officially; fourth, the provisions of section 83, limiting the number of votes officially printed for petitioners to one half of the total number of votes cast at the preceding election; fifth, the provision of section 82, which provides that the official ballot shall have upon it the name or title of the party or principles of the party or petitioner making the nomination. The clauses of the Constitution which are chiefly relied upon by the prosecutor are the first clause of the first article of the Bill of Rights, which guarantees the right to enjoy and defend life and liberty, to acquire, possess, and defend property, and to pursue and to obtain safety and happiness; and the second article of the Constitution, which provides that every male citizen of the United States, of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a resident of this state one year, and of the county in which he claims his vote five months, next before the election, shall be entitled to vote for all officers that now are or hereafter may be elected by the people.

It will be observed that all the points, except the first, made against the statute, have reference to a right to vote. In respect to these grounds of complaint, it may be remarked that the clause in the Bill of Rights seems to have no pertinency. The clause in the Bill of Rights is a general recognition of those absolute rights of the citizen which were a part of the common law. Whether any advantage accrues to the citizen from these declaratory clauses in the Constitution, has been questioned. 1 Kent, Com. 614. But whether or not some or all of these rights were inherent in the citizen without constitutional recognition is unimportant in the present discussion. It is unimportant because it will be observed that the material phases of the prosecutor's complaint is that he has been illegally limited in, or obstructed in, the exercise of his right to vote. If, therefore, the first-mentioned clause of the Constitution is to be invoked, it is essential that the right of suffrage shall be classed among those absolute rights therein recognized. Nothing, however, is established more unquestionably than that the right of suffrage is not an absolute right. No such right exists, unless specifically conferred by a constitution or a statute. It is a political right, and does not flow from the declaratory clauses of the Bill of Rights. 1 Story, Const. 580; Cooley, Const. Lim. 599. The question, then, is whether any of the features of the statute illegally obstructs the voter in exercising the right which is expressly conferred upon him. The right conferred is the right to vote for all elective offices. As to when, where, and how the voting is to take place is left to the Legislature. Without the intervention of the Legislature, the privilege conferred by the Constitution would be fruitless. A wide field, therefore, is left open for the exercise of legislative discretion. The days upon which elections are to be held, the hours of the day or night during which, or between which, votes shall be received, must be determined by the Legislature. So, too, the places where each election is to be held, and the size of the voting precinct, and whether the size shall be measured by territory or population, must also be settled by direct or delegated legislative authority. The widest field for the exercise of legislative wisdom and discussion is in adjusting the method by which the sentiments of the voter shall be obtained and canvassed. The Constitution does not even prescribe that the voting shall be done by ballot, and, in fact, long after the adoption of the present Constitution township elections were conducted otherwise. In adopting a scheme for these purposes, it will require little thought to perceive that many considerations besides that of the voters' convenience must be regarded. The problem has been, and still is, how to gather the prevailing sentiment of the voting body so as to best conserve the purposes of popular government. The objects which have seemed the most important have been to exclude unqualified persons, and to shield the legal voter from the influences of coercion or corruption. The discovery of a scheme of voting which would the best secure these objects had long been in the thoughts of statesmen and reformers. The ballot itself became the method of registering the will of the voter in Great Britain only after a long period of agitation. The advantage of a system of secret voting was stirred by the Benthamites as early as 1817. Encyclopedia Britannica, title, Ballot. In 1885 the judges of the court of kings' bench doubted whether by ballot was a legal mode of holding an election in a parish to fill a vacant curacy, under a custom that the parishioners should elect a successor to a deceased curate. Hailekner v. Elger, 4 Barn. & C. 449. The objection of the judges to the ballot was mainly that, if a person voted who was afterwards ascertained to have been disqualified, there was no way of telling how he had voted. After years of discussion, the ballot was adopted in local elections in Manchester and Stafford, in 1869, and was, in 1872, by the passage of Mr. Foster's Ballot Act (55 & 56 Vict. chap. 83), introduced in all parliamentary and municipal elections, except parliamentary elections for universities. But the mere use of the ballot has been shown by experience to be ineffectual to prevent coercion and corruption. The factor of supreme importance calculated to bring about this result is an enforced secrecy respecting the choice of the voter. So long as the ballot can be marked for identification, or the vote of the citizen can be disclosed in any way, the voter is liable to be called to an account for his conduct. The coercionist will treat his refusal to vote a marked ballot as an adverse vote. The corruptionist will have the means of assuring himself that the vote he has purchased will be delivered. The thoughts of those interested in pure elections were turned by these considerations to the device of some scheme for voting which would secure compulsory secrecy, and at the same time provide for an orderly, equal, and convenient exercise of the right of suffrage. The honor of first devising such a plan belongs to the government of the province of South Australia. In 1856 a constitution was adopted by that colony, granting popular representation and manhood suffrage. In 1857-58 the election Acts were passed, which typify the system which has spread to two other continents under the name of the "Australian ballot system." The practical results of the introduction of this system is shown by the testimony of Sir Robert Richard Totten, who, as a member of the government of South Australia, had opposed the introduction of the secret ballot. His testimony, however, is that rioting and disorder had disappeared. Intimidation by landlords and trades unions alike had disappeared entirely, and the very notion of coercion or improper influences had died out. Wignmore's Australian Ballot. The good results of the Australian system induced the passage of the Act of 1873 in England, already mentioned, which is based substantially on the South Australian method. Whenever similar election acts have been put in operation the sentiment of the community has been generally favorable. While they do not accomplish all that is desirable in the way of extirpating corrupt practices, their effect has undoubtedly been to secure quieter elections, to greatly reduce corruption, and almost entirely destroy coercive influences. Now, I think this recapitulation of the purposes and results of the class of acts of which our own is a specimen has a pertinency to the questions mooted in this case; for I think that any provision in such Act which is likely to bring about a result which conduces to the purity of popular elections should receive a favorable consideration. It is of course true that, if the effect of any provision is to shut off a voter from the ballot box, such provision must fall before the constitutional guaranty of the right to vote. But in measuring cases of mere inconvenience, expense, or sentiment, the existence of a salutary purpose and the likelihood of the provision tending to accomplish that purpose must weigh greatly in determining the reasonableness of the statutory regulation. With these general remarks, let us look at the several points made against the constitutionality of the present Act.

16 L. R. A.

The first ground of complaint is that no electioneering is permitted on election day within 100 feet of any polling place. Section 63. This clause is criticised as an infringement upon the constitutional right of every citizen to express his sentiments upon public men and measures, and his right to persuade his fellow citizens to vote for the advancement of his opinions. I find no substance in this criticism. The regulation is a proper one, to avoid disturbance and disorder immediately about the polls. While a man has a right to express his opinions, the exercise of this right, like all other general rights, is the subject of reasonable police regulation. A man cannot rise in church during service and deliver a political harangue, or shout his convictions about public measures, at midnight, in the streets of a city, without liability of being arrested as a disorderly person. The restriction is entirely proper, and also quite trivial; for all the electioneering citizen has to do is to invite the voter to whom he wishes to express his sentiments to come outside of the hundred feet limits. It is further observable that this clause has nothing to do with the voting of an unofficial ballot. If it should be regarded as unconstitutional, it is nevertheless a separable part of the Act, which does not, in any way, affect the present discussion.

The second point of attack is the part of section 63 which prohibits any person from putting a mark upon the face or back of a ballot or envelope, by which the ballot or envelope may afterwards be identified by any other person as the one voted by him; and section 89, which provides that if any ballot shall have thereon any mark, sign, designation, or device other than permitted by the Act, whereby the said ballot may be identified, or distinguished from other ballots cast at such election, such ballot shall be absolutely void. The point made against these provisions of the Act is that the voter has no hand in the preparation of the ballot; but that a mark or irregularity may get upon the ballot in its preparation, which may prevent its being counted. It is therefore argued that a voter, through no fault of his own, may be deprived of his vote. This criticism is grounded upon a presumed fraud or neglect of duty by the persons upon whom the duty of preparing the ballots is imposed. It is, of course, entirely true that it is possible for a vote to be rejected because of the fraud or carelessness of such person or persons; but the same remark is true under any scheme which may be devised. Votes have been suppressed, and are constantly miscounted, in making up the results of elections. An admission of the soundness of the present criticism would destroy the entire scheme of securing a secret ballot. Secrecy is impossible without uniformity in the appearance of the tickets and envelopes. That uniformity cannot be obtained unless the preparation of the ballots is put in the hands of some specified person or persons. The guards and restrictions placed around the preparation of the ballots are of the most explicit and stringent kind. The county clerks or municipal clerks, by section 82, are directed to cause the ballots to be printed on plain, white paper, etc., without any mark, word, device, or figure thereon, except as in the Act provided. By direction of section 40 the ballots are to be in the possession of the clerks five days before the election, subject to inspection by candidates and their agents. If any mistake is discoverable, the clerks are directed to correct the same without delay, by causing new ballots to be printed. By the terms of section 64 any printer is liable to conviction for printing a ballot otherwise than as directed by the clerk. The law presumes that these prescriptions of duty will be performed. It never presumes a neglect of official duty. I can perceive no substance in the objection raised against this feature of the Act.

The third and fourth grounds of attack upon the Act may be considered together. They are directed against the provisions of section 28, providing for the nomination of candidates by petition, and of section 38, regulating the printing of official ballots. The first of the complaints against this legislation is that the voter who is not a member of a party which cast 5 per cent of the entire vote cast at the preceding election is subjected to hardships from which other voters are free. To apprehend the force of this complaint, it is necessary to observe that by the terms of section 28, any political party which, at the preceding election polled not less than 5 per cent of the votes cast in the election district, may nominate and certify the names of candidates to the secretary of state, in case they are state officers, or to the county clerk, if they are county officers, or to municipal clerks, if the officers are municipal. These names are printed, without further party action or expense, upon an official ballot; but voters who are members of a party which cast less than this 5 per cent of votes, or voters who desire to organize a new party, can only obtain an official ballot by a petition. This petition must be signed, in case of a state officer, by qualified voters in number not less than 1 per cent of the vote cast at the preceding election for members of Assembly; and in case of a district, county, city, or township office, by not less than 5 per cent of such vote; the number of such signers, however, need not exceed 200 altogether. It is insisted that the labor of gathering signatures and putting this petition into legal shape thus entailed upon a class of voters, is an unconstitutional discrimination against it, in favor of the members of the older and larger parties. The second complaint is that there is further discrimination in printing tickets. By directions contained in section 33, the county or municipal clerk is to provide, for each election district, 250 ballots for every 50 or fraction thereof of votes cast therein by such party at the last preceding election for members of the General Assembly, except in case of nominations by petition by any party that cast no votes for any candidate or candidates at the last preceding election for members of the General Assembly. In such case the ballots furnished at public expense shall be equal in numbers to one half of the total number of votes cast in the election district at such last preceding election. It may be observed, in passing, that this provision places no obstacle in the way of any party obtaining all the ballots it may wish. It only prescribes what number of said ballots shall be printed at public expense. The number of ballots printed for each party at the public expense bears relation to the number of voters of that party so far as that number can be approximated by the result of the preceding election. When an entirely new party puts candidates in nomination, this method of calculation is of course impracticable, and the rule adopted seems reasonable. It may give to the new party more or less ballots than to some of the parties entitled to make nominations by convention. Now, in passing upon the validity of both of these provisions, it is to be noted that they in no way impede the voter in exercising his right to vote for any particular person or persons for any office. He is at liberty to vote for any person by simply erasing a name from, and writing the name of the favored person upon, any official ballot. It is therefore apparent that the right in the exercise of which it is claimed the voter is embarrassed is not the right to vote, but the right to form a party and vote as one of that party. By the very frame of the complaint the existence of parties is recognized as a part of the practical machinery for conducting elections. Now, the plan of providing official ballots, which plan is the keystone of the secret ballot system, involves necessarily some limitation upon the number of party tickets, and the number of party candidates. Of all the Acts which have been passed to bring about this system of voting, I am sure none can be found which does not in some way circumscribe the privilege of demanding a place upon the official ballot as a party, or as a candidate of a party. If it was left in the power of each voter, or each coterie of three voters, to adopt a party name, and demand that an official ballot should be printed at public expense, and distributed to each voter at the polls, the polls would probably be littered with ballots "thick as autumnal leaves that strew the brooks in Vallambrosa." Great expense, labor and inconvenience would result, without any appreciable benefit to the voter or to society. These regulations may not be the wisest that could have been adopted, still they are regulations which do not seriously impair the right of any citizen to vote. They are intended to restrict the number of party tickets within reasonable limits, while at the same time permitting any body of citizens whose number is sufficient to give importance to a concerted political movement to organize as a party.

The last ground of complaint which I shall consider is the following: That a voter whose sentiments are not in accord with the principles of any party having an official ticket is practically deprived of his vote, because he cannot vote unless he votes a ticket having upon it the name of a party of whose principles he disapproves. This point is based upon the provisions contained in section 33, which directs that the nominees of each party or group of petitioners shall be printed on separate tickets, underneath the title or name of the party or petitioners making such nominations, as designated by them in their certificate or petition except when there is no designation of name or title, then under the title of "Independent Nominations." It is obvious, therefore, that every official ballot distributed at any polling place may have upon it the name of a party. It is therefore insisted that while a voter has a right to replace any name upon one of such ballots with the name of a candidate of his choice, yet he cannot deposit his ballot without signifying his approval of the principles of the party whose name heads and remains upon the ticket. This, it is urged, couples with the privilege of voting a condition which may practically deprive a conscientious voter of his suffrage. The point of this complaint, of course, rests upon the assumption that if the voter deposits his ballot, he must do so with the name or style of the party still upon it. It is suggested that the voter has the privilege, under the statute, to erase the name of the party from the ballot. The language of section 40 is as follows: "Nothing in this Act contained shall prevent any voter from erasing from his ballot any name or names thereon printed, or from writing or pasting thereon the name or names of any person or persons for whom he desires to vote for any office." Now, it is suggested that this language leaves the voter free to erase the name of a party. This construction is put upon the literal words of the Act, which, while leaving power to add only names of persons, has no express limitation upon the license to erase names. The name of a party, it is thought, is therefore included in the latter class of names. If I was driven to say that either the Legislature intended to leave this power in the hands of the voter, or else they stripped him of a constitutional right, I would yield my assent to this view; but I do not think that it can be said that if the voter is denied this privilege he is deprived of his constitutional right. Viewing the clause of the Act without being hampered by any question of constitutionality, I think that the Legislature did not intend to leave the voter free to mark off the heading of a ballot. In my judgment, the names he is privileged to erase are of the same kind as the names he is permitted to add. The references to this heading of the ticket are in section 28, where it is directed that "the certificate of the officers of the nominating convention shall designate, in not more than three words, the title or name of the party or principles" which such nominating body represented. In section 23 it is provided "that the petition may also designate, in not more than three words, the title of the party or principles which the candidates therein represent." It is this title or name of the party or petitioners, as designated by them in their certificate or petition, under which the nominations are to be printed. I think it will appear that throughout the statute, whenever the heading is alluded to, the word "name," when used, is accompanied by the word "title." Now, a title may be, and often is, a name. But I think it has a signification different from "name," as it is used in the Act. A "title of principles" may mean something which is not properly styled a name. A ballot headed "For ballot reform," or "For free coinage," would be, I think, entirely legal; and yet the caption of the ticket could not be properly called a name. The use of the word "title" in section 32 gives color to this notion. Speaking of printing the ballots for petitioners, the language of the section is, "if there be no designation of name or title, [in the petition,] then under the title of 'Independent Nominations.'" This heading is not a name, and so is styled a title, using the word "title" in the sense in which it is used as indicating the contents of a chapter in book. Now, I think if it had been intended to leave the voter free to erase all such headings, the word "title" would have been used in section 40, coupled with the word "name," as it was employed elsewhere in the Act. Then, again, it is to be kept in mind that every possible prohibition is enacted against marking a ballot. The power to erase the names of candidates was absolutely necessary under the system adopted. For this reason alone was it permitted. But, aside from the constitutional difficulty now suggested, and which probably never occurred to the Legislature, there was no reason for leaving the voter free to score the ballot by marking out, in any way he pleased, the caption of the ticket. It is not probable that it was intended to put in the hands of the voter this additional opportunity to mark his ballot for identification. For these reasons I conclude that such license does not exist. But this conclusion does not lead me to think that the voter is deprived of a constitutional right. Although I regard this as the only serious question raised by the prosecutor, I have, upon reflection, concluded that the obstruction put in the way of the voter is sentimental rather than substantial. We must view the question in a practical aspect. The object to be obtained is one of great importance. As already remarked, the plan is necessarily one of considerable intricacy. In planning it, conflicting requirements had to be adjusted and accommodated. The practical operation of the scheme has shown defects, and will display further deficiencies, which the Legislature will have the opportunity to amend. While the courts should see to it that no real or unnecessary bar is put in the way of the voter, yet such bar should clearly appear to exist before an inseparable feature of the Act is branded as unconstitutional, and the statute annulled. Many features of the Act may offend a voter of sensitive feelings and peculiar views. Some voters have sulked and refused to vote because of the compelled seclusion in preparing the ballot, and like requirements. But these exceptional instances cannot create a standard of what should be regarded as an unconstitutional deprivation of the right to vote. Now, assuming that occasions may arise when a voter is compelled to use a ballot with a heading indicating a party or principle of which he disapproves, what significance has it? If he leaves the printed name of a single candidate on the ticket, he of course has no right to complain of the title. The candidate stands for the principle indicated by the title. If, on the other hand, he erases each printed name, and adds the names of persons who stand for a different principle, what meaning is left in the title? The title is lost when the ballot is deposited. It is not displayed. It is not counted. The only purpose of the title, in respect to the voter, is to aid him to distinguish readily and speedily the different groups of candidates. The whole force and meaning of the vote is in the character of the principles of the candidates for whom the vote is counted. In any sensible view, how can it be said that the deposit of such a ballot carries with it an approval of the principles indicated by the title, when the name of every person upon it is an indication to the contrary? I am of the opinion that no illegal impediment is put in the way of the voter by this requirement.

16 L. R. A.

As to the other matters discussed at the argument, it is enough to say that we find no material criticism of the provisions of the statute.

The judgment below must be affirmed.

MAINE SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

George H. M. BARRETT
v.
ROCKPORT ICE CO.

(.....Me.....)

An appropriation of ice on a great pond belonging to the public is not made by one who has made no preparations to cut the ice except to dig a ditch the preceding fall for the purpose of floating in the ice and who merely stakes out a portion of the pond in the night-time and serves notice the next morning of his claim thereto as against another whose workmen are engaged in cutting it when the notice is served and who had not only kept it free from snow and surface water, but had cut the lily pads in the pond before the ice began to form and who continued to cut the ice without regard to the notice and without any further action by the former.

(December 22, 1891.)

REPORT by the Supreme Judicial Court for Knox County for the opinion of the full court of an action brought to recover damages for the alleged wrongful cutting and carrying away of a quantity of ice to which plaintiff claimed title. Judgment of nonsuit.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. W. S. Fogler for plaintiff.

Messrs. C. E. Littlefield and A. S. Littlefield for defendant.

Virgin, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for cutting and carrying away more or less of fifteen acres of ice from Lily pond. The case comes up on report with the stipulation that, if the action is maintainable, it is to stand for trial; otherwise a nonsuit to be entered.

The owner of the bed of a mill-pond raised by a dam across an unnavigable stream has, as an incident to such ownership, the right to cut the ice therefrom whenever the exercise of such right does not appreciably diminish the head of water to the detriment of the millowner. Stevens v. Kelley, 78 Me. 445, 57 Am. Rep. 813; Paine v. Woods, 108 Mass. 160, 173; Higgins v. Kusterer, 41 Mich. 818, 82 Am. Rep. 160.

But the law governing ponds of more than ten acres in extent, denominated "great ponds" by the Colonial Ordinance of 1641-1647, is different. Of such no individual owns the subjacent soil. That and the ponds themselves are held by the state for the public. The right to take fish or ice therefrom is common and free to all, unless abridged by the Legislature. Barrows v. McDermott, 73 Me. 441; West Roxbury v. Stoddard, 7 Allen, 158. Neither the shore proprietor, nor any corporation with simple charter authority to cut ice thereon, has any greater or different right, in respect to that, than every other inhabitant who can gain legal access to the pond. Brastow v. Rockport Ice Co. 77 Me. 100; Hittinger v. Eames, 121 Mass. 589; Gage v. Steinkrauss, 131 Mass. 223; Roswell v. Doyle, 181 Mass. 474.

As the state holds such ponds and their contents and products for the people, the Legislature may regulate the essential acts of possession which shall constitute a legal appropriation of a given quantity of the ice. Barrows v. McDermott, supra. Although the ice business has developed so enormously within the last eight or ten years, the Legislature has not yet taken the subject in hand, and hence all rights pertaining thereto necessarily rest upon judicial interpretation. Woodman v. Pitman, 79 Me. 458, 460, 4 New Eng. Rep. 699.

Neither have the courts fully settled the definitive rules which shall govern the rights of the public, though they have with more or less harmony laid down a few general rules pertaining thereto. Thus this court, in an action in which this defendant was a party, has declared that the rights of individuals are equal, to be exercised in a reasonable manner, with a due regard to the rights of all who may wish to take ice from this pond. Brastow v. Rockport Ice Co., supra. So the court in Massachusetts has made a like decision, that every inhabitant, who can obtain access to a great pond without trespass, may cut ice thereon for use or sale, so long as he does not interfere with the reasonable exercise by others of like rights. Roswell v. Doyle, 181 Mass. 474. And the court in Kansas has said that he who first appropriates and secures the ice owns it. Wood v. Fowler, 26 Kan. 682, 40 Am. Rep. 830.

What is essential to constitute such an appropriation is not fully settled.

Where the plaintiff inclosed with marked stakes, and with a snowplow plowed around, a certain field of ice upon the Mississippi river; had a flatboat on the spot to remove the ice; held constant possession by a body of employes, who kept it swept; and, after expending more than $200 in preserving it, and it was fit to cut, the defendant, with a crew armed with clubs, drove the plaintiff and his employes away, and cut and carried off the ice,—the defendant was held liable for the ice. Hickey v. Hazard, 8 Mo. App. 480.

So, on the Detroit river, where the channel was 1800 feet in width, an ice company extended a boom parallel with and fifteen feet from the shore on which its ice houses stood, the defendant was held liable for unnecessarily running its ferryboat up and down the river so near to the boom as to break up and destroy the ice which had formed inside of it. People's Ice Co. v. Steamer Excelsior, 44 Mich. 229.

In the case already cited, lessees of a tract of land on the bank of Kansas river were denied an injunction against the defendant's taking ice opposite and next the lessee's land. The court concluded their opinion by saying: "The one who first appropriates and secures the ice which is formed is entitled to it, and on the same principle that he who catches a fish in one of these rivers owns it." Wood v. Fowler, supra.

NOTE.—As to the right to cut and appropriate ice, see Brown v. Cunningham (Iowa) 12 L. R. A. 583, and note.
12 L. R. A.

Again, where lessees of ice houses on the shore of a great pond scraped the snow from a portion of it, and then left it for a day and two nights in order that it might increase in thickness, it was held that they thereby acquired no such title thereto as would enable them to maintain an action of tort against one who cut holes through the ice for the purposes of fishing, and knew the purposes for which it was cleared and the usual manner of harvesting ice. Gray, Ch. J., said: "At the time of the acts of which the plaintiffs complain, they had not cut any ice, nor were they engaged in cutting, or otherwise in the actual possession of any." Rosell v. Doyle, 181 Mass. 474, 476. So, in the very late case of People's Ice Co. v. Davenport, 149 Mass. 322, it was held that scraping the snow from about one half of the ice of a great pond, and marking it off with stakes, and then suspending further active operations, give no such title as will enable the party to maintain trover against another who five days later cut and gathered the ice. Morton Ch. J., after reaffirming the previous cases decided by that court, said: "The case is not like one of capturing animals feræ naturæ, or of taking possession of derelict property. It is more analogous to the case of a tenant in common attempting to take possession of a part of the common estate, by staking it off and thus excluding his cotenants."

The latest decision which has come under our observation is Brown v. Cunningham, (Iowa) 12 L. R. A. 588. The government had meandered the shores of the unnavigable Wapsipinicon river, retaining title to the bed thereof when disposing of the adjacent lands. The plaintiff, not a riparian owner, obtained lawful access to the river, harvested a large quantity of ice, and cut and made preparations for moving more, when he was enjoined at the suit of the defendant. In an action upon the injunction bond, the court, after a learned discussion of the case both on principle and authority, rendered judgment against the defendant. Beck, Ch. J., said: "Any citizen who may lawfully go upon the stream may gather ice from it under the regulations prescribed by law. He is entitled to the ice he prepares by his labor to be removed. It is plain that if he cuts ice for transportation to his ice house, another cannot rob him of his labors by carrying away his ice; and it is plain that when he makes preparations to use the ice upon a certain part of the stream, prepares its surface for cutting, erects machinery to handle the ice, makes walks or ways for workmen, or in any other proper manner indicates the part of the stream which he occupies in his operations, which must be reasonable in extent and in all other respects, he has a property right to the occupation of such locality during the ice season and to the ice formed there;" and added that analogous rules were adopted by settlers and miners in every territory in the Union.

In this state, in an action on the case for 16 L. R. A.

the value of a two-horse team of a traveler upon the Penobscot river, drowned by breaking through the thin ice formed in a place from which the thick ice had been removed by the defendant, Peters, Ch. J., by way of illustration, said: "The ice fields, after they have been staked and fenced, and scraped, . . . have so far become the property of the appropriator that an action would lie against one who disturbs his possession." Woodman v. Pitman, 79 Me. 456, 4 New Eng. Rep. 699.

The pond in question contains about thirty-two acres, and is therefore a "great pond." The plaintiff was in possession of seventeen rods of the shore owned by his mother. In the fall of 1889 he dug a ditch extending several rods back from the pond, through which ice could be floated to the upland. On the night of January 27, 1890, commencing at 10 o'clock and finishing at 6 the next morning, the plaintiff run a line of stakes marked "B. Ice Co." from his land diagonally across the pond, then covered by four inches of snow, and thence near to the shore, around one end of the pond, to his land, thereby inclosing some fifteen acres, — or nearly one half its surface. He owned a set of ice tools which he had not used since 1884, when he last cut ice, and his ice houses were in a dilapidated condition.

The defendant had annually, for fifteen years, cut large quantities of ice, employing a large number of men and teams therefor, had and claimed possession of nearly all the accessible shore property except the seventeen rods in possession of the plaintiff, and had cut the ice on the same territory the season before, and had commodious ice houses. Late in the fall of 1889, but before the ice began to form, the defendant cut out and removed the lily pads which covered much of the surface, and unless removed rendered the ice worthless; subsequently, as the rains fell, bored holes through the ice to let off the surface water, which otherwise injures the ice; scraped off the snow that had thus far fallen during the season, employing several men therefor on January 18, 1890, several days before the erection of the plaintiff's stakes, in that business; and after the plaintiff left the ice, on the morning of January 28, 1890, the defendant's employes went upon the pond, and commenced opposite the plaintiff's ditch to scrape, fit, and haul the ice. They were delayed by a storm several days, and finished the fore part of February.

After the defendant's employes had been at work a few hours, the plaintiff served a notice in writing on the defendant of his staking out the territory described, therein forbidding meddling with his stakes, scraping the snow or cutting the ice inclosed, and declaring the plaintiff's intention to cut the same, which the defendant ignored, but continued to cut and take away the ice, without any further action by the plaintiff.

Now, assuming that this court intended by the few clauses quoted in Woodman v. Pitman, supra, to define the acts essential to an appropriation of a field of ice, the plaintiff's acts, as above recited, fall far short of constituting him an appropriator. The only acts looking in that direction were his digging the ditch, his nocturnal erection of stakes, and serving the written notice. He scraped no snow; he removed no lily pads; he ignored the surface water; made no preparations whatever to cut the ice, though twelve to fourteen inches thick. No one prevented him or forbade him.

We are of the opinion, therefore, that the action is not maintainable against the defendant who did proceed to cut without any molestation from any source.

Plaintiff nonsuit.

Peters, Ch. J., and Walton, Emery, Foster, and Haskell, JJ., concurred.

SOUTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

Elizabeth HOLLEY, Reapt.,

v.

Stella A. GLOVER, Appt.,

And Fifteen Other Cases.

(.....S. C.)

1. The inchoate right of dower of the wife of a tenant in common is defeated by a sale in partition of the common property, although she is not a party to the proceedings.
2. The wife of a tenant in common is not a necessary party in the suit for partition.
3. A prior sale by a tenant in common of his undivided interest does not prevent the bar of his wife's inchoate right of dower by a subsequent sale in partition.

(July 14, 1892.)

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the Common Pleas Circuit Court for Aiken County in favor of plaintiff in sixteen actions brought to recover dower rights in a tract of land of which plaintiff's husband had been tenant in common, and which was sold for purposes of partition and afterwards came into the hands of the defendants. Reversed.

The following is the agreed statement of facts upon which the case was tried:

"It is agreed by counsel representing the parties in the sixteen actions above stated that said actions be tried by the court in place of a jury, upon the following statement of facts and the pleadings: (1) That, previous to the year 1839, William H. Carey and Alfred Holley (who was the husband of the defendant in said actions) were the owners as tenants in common of all that tract of land now situate in the county of Aiken, but then in the districts of Edgefield and Barnwell, containing five thousand acres, more or less, known as the 'Hollow Creek Tract,' and including the various tracts described in the respective complaints in the foregoing actions. (2) That, said Wm. H. Carey having died, his son John L. Carey, by his next friend D. J. Walker, instituted a suit in the court of equity for the district of Edgefield against the other heirs-at-law of said Wm. H. Carey, deceased, and Alfred Holley and Wise Holley, for the partition of the said Hollow Creek land; that in said suit a writ in partition was duly issued to commissioners pursuant to an order of the court and the statute in such case made and provided, who returned that it was best for the interest of all parties concerned that the land should be sold, and the proceeds divided, as justice could not be done by a division in kind; that upon said return one of the chancellors of the court, in term-time, by regular decree in said action for partition, ordered and directed that said tract of land should be sold by the commissioner of the court, and the proceeds divided between the parties according to their respective rights, which was stated in said decree; that pursuant to said decree the commissioner of the court, S. S. Tompkins, Esq., after due advertisement, at public outcry on sales day in January, 1849, sold said tract of land to John Holley for $4,175, and executed a deed of conveyance to him for the same; that said commissioner, after receiving said purchase money, divided and paid out the same among the parties to said suit pursuant to the provisions of said decree, and that said sale to said John Holley was duly confirmed by the NOTE.—Effect of partition sale upon dower rights of one not a party.

Little of value can be added to the exhaustive discussion of this subject contained in the above case.

The New York statute provides that those having dower rights in property sought to be partitioned may be made parties to the suit, and the court in Knapp v. Hungerford, 7 Hun, 590, states that before it will order a sale of land in partition cases it will require that all those having an interest in them should be made parties to the action to the end that the purchaser may get a perfect title. Hence, the wives of those entitled to a share of the land must be made parties.

The Missouri case of Lee v. Lindell, 22 Mo. 202, 64 Am. Dec. 263, which is cited in the principal case, was followed in that state in Sire v. St. Louis, 22 Mo. 206, and also in Hinds v. Stevens, 45 Mo. 200, 16 L. R. A.

In Rowland v. Prather, 53 Md. 232, in which the wife was held to be bound, the decree of sale had passed before the marriage took place although the sale was not made until afterwards, and in Mitchell v. Farrish, 12 Cent. Rep. 393, 69 Md. 235, it was decided that a partition sale under the Maryland statute bars the inchoate right of dower of the wife of one of the tenants in common of the land; but the question whether or not she was a necessary party to the partition proceedings was left undecided although the court states that upon the reasons given in Weaver v. Gregg, 6 Ohio St. 547, 67 Am. Dec. 355, why her right was barred, they saw no necessity for making her a party.

In Greiner v. Klein, 23 Mich. 12, it was held that a sale in partition proceedings to which the wife of one of the tenants was not made a party would not bar her dower.

H. P. F.

court. (3) That the defendants in the aforesaid actions for dower now hold the various tracts of land described in the complaints in said actions from parties who trace their titles back to John Holley, who purchased from the commissioner as aforesaid. (4) That on the 5th day of March, 1841, Alfred Holley, by his deed of conveyance, conveyed to Wise Holley his undivided one-half interest in the Hollow Creek tract of land aforesaid, which said deed was duly executed and recorded at Barnwell court-house. (5) That on the 6th of March, 1843, the sheriff of Barnwell district, in the case of Elisha Carson against Alfred Holley, sold the said Hollow Creek tract of land under judgments obtained prior to the 5th day of March, 1841, and the same was bid off by Wise Holley for $30, but no deed to the same from the sheriff appears on the record. (6) That the defendant, Elizabeth Holley, was not a party to the proceedings in the partition heretofore mentioned, and received no proportion or share of the proceeds of sale of said premises, nor was any provision whatever made by the court in said proceedings for the assessment of the value or protection of the inchoate right of dower of said Elizabeth Holley. (7) The said proceedings in partition mentioned in paragraph two (2) hereof were instituted subsequently to the execution of the conveyance from Alfred Holley to Wise Holley, heretofore mentioned, and subsequently to the sale of said Hollow Creek tract of land by the sheriff of Barnwell district under the execution aforesaid in favor of Elisha Carson against Alfred Holley.

"Jno. Gary Evans, E. S. Hammond, Plaintiff's Attorneys.

"Henderson Bros., O. C. Jordan, Defendants' Attorneys.

"(8) It is further agreed and admitted that Alfred Holley, the husband of the defendant herein, died on the fourteenth (14th) day of February, A. D. (1881,) eighteen hundred and eighty-one.

"O. C. Jordan, Henderson Bros., Defendants' Attorneys.

"Jno. Gary Evans, E. S. Hammond, Plaintiff's Attorneys."

The following decree was filed by Judge Izlar, and judgments duly entered:

"These several actions (sixteen in number) are brought by the plaintiff to recover her dower in the land described in the respective complaints. The facts in each of the said actions are the same, and all involve the same questions of law. The facts agreed on are, briefly, as follows: Previous to the year 1839, William H. Carey and Alfred Holley (who was the husband of the plaintiff) owned as tenants in common a tract of land containing five thousand acres, known as the 'Hollow Creek Tract.' The Hollow Creek tract included all the lands in which the plaintiff now claims dower. Carey and Holley purchased the said tract jointly, and the same was conveyed to them as tenants in common. Alfred Holley, during his coverture with the plaintiff, sold and conveyed by deed, dated March 5, 1841, his undivided moiety in the Hollow Creek tract to Wise Holley, his wife not joining in said conveyance. Afterwards

William H. Carey died testate, and John L. Carey, his son, instituted proceedings in the court of equity by his next friend, D. J. Walker, against the other heirs-at-law of the testator, and Wise Holley and Alfred Holley, for partition of said lands. To this suit the plaintiff herein was not a party. The commissioners named in the writ in partition returned that said lands could not be fairly and equally divided without injury to one or more of the parties in interest. Thereupon a decree for the sale of said lands was made, and in pursuance of this decree said lands were sold in January, 1849, by the commissioner in equity, and were at said sale purchased by John Holley, who complied with the terms of sale, and received from the commissioner a conveyance of said lands. The proceeds arising from said sale were distributed among the parties in interest, and the sale confirmed. In said proceedings for partition no provision was made for the protection of the plaintiff's contingent right of dower. On the 6th day of March, 1843, the sheriff sold all the right, title, and interest which Alfred Holley then had in said lands, under an execution issued upon a judgment obtained against him prior to the 5th day of March, 1841. At the sheriff's sale the interest of Alfred Holley in said lands was bid in by Wise Holley, to whom Alfred had previously conveyed. No deed from the sheriff to Wise Holley appears of record. Alfred Holley, the husband of the plaintiff, died on the 14th day of February, 1881. The defendants in the aforesaid actions are in possession of the various portions of the Hollow Creek tract described in the respective complaints.

"Mr. Scribner, in his work on Dower, (volume 1, p. 828,) says: 'The statutes of most, if not all, the states provide for the sale of lands held in common, where, upon proceedings for partition, it is ascertained that a division cannot be made without serious detriment to the estate. In such cases the money arising from the sale is brought into court, and distributed to the several tenants in common in proportion to their respective interests in the common property. From these statute regulations has sprung a question of great interest and importance, namely, whether a sale made in conformity thereto operates to divest the contingent right of dower of the wife of a cotenant, and to pass the entire estate absolutely to the purchaser, and, if so, whether for that reason it is proper that the court under whose direction the sale is made should require a portion of the husband's share of the proceeds of the sale to be invested for her benefit in case she should survive him, and her right thus becomes absolute.' This question of 'great interest and importance' is the one presented in these cases, and upon which we are now required to pass.

"It is contended that there was no statute authorizing the sale of lands, under the circumstances of this case, for partition; that the Act of 1791 is only applicable to the settlement of intestate estates; and that the long-established practice of the court of equity, derived from an assumed jurisdiction in such cases, should not be allowed to override and defeat the rights of the parties. As was said by Chancellor Harper in Pell v. Ball, 1 Rich. Eq. 387: 'It is not questioned that by the rules and practice of the English court of chancery it has no power to direct the sale of lands for the purpose of partition.' Neither can it be questioned that the court of equity exercised the jurisdiction to make such sales long before the Act of 1791. This learned chancellor adds: 'That the words of the Act of 1791 are not necessarily confined to the case of intestate estates. These words are that "it shall and may be lawful for any person who may be entitled to a distributive share of any estate, real or personal, to have the writ of partition." Now the words "distributive share" are commonly understood to relate to intestate estates, and, in an act providing for the distribution of intestate estates, this meaning might seem still more appropriate, yet they are very capable of a different construction. Every tenant in common may very well be said to be entitled to a distributive share of the common property; and, if courts heretofore have made this construction, I should not be prepared to pronounce it an erroneous one.' This case is authority for the doctrine that the jurisdiction of the court of equity to sell lands for the purpose of partition, against the consent of a party, is not confined to the case of intestate estates. The reason given by Chancellor Harper in support of this doctrine seems to us sufficient to sustain the conclusion reached. It does not seem to us to be an unwarranted extension of the provisions of the Act of 1791, so as to include other than intestate estates held in common. At any rate, we consider the question settled.

Again, it is contended that, even if the court of equity has power to direct a sale for the purpose of partition, only those persons who are parties to the proceedings are bound thereby. To support this proposition, section 2, Act 32 Hen. VIII. chap. 32, is relied on by the plaintiff herein. It is argued that the court of equity, in the exercise of its jurisdiction in directing sales of real estate for the purpose of partition among joint tenants and tenants in common, cannot prejudice the rights of those not parties to the proceedings; that it derives its authority to make compulsory partition alone from the statutes of 31 Hen. VIII. chap. 1, and 32 Hen. VIII. chap. 32; and that section 2, Act 32 Hen. VIII. chap. 32, is applicable to all cases of partition among joint tenants and tenants in common, whether made in kind, or by sale under the extended jurisdiction of the court of equity by reason of the Act of 1791. This section reads: 'Provided, always, that no partition or severance hereinafter to be made by force of this Act be prejudicial or hurtful to any person or persons, their heirs or successors, other than such which be parties unto said partition, their executors or assigns.' Admitting the view contended for to be correct, we do not think this proviso applicable to the present case. The Statute of 31 Hen. VIII. chap. 1, relates to joint tenancies and tenants in common. 2 Stat. p. 471. This statute was extended by 16 L. R. A.

33 Hen. VIII. chap. 32, to joint tenants for term of life or years. 2 Stat. p. 474. By reference to these statutes it will be seen that the statute of 31 Hen. VIII. chap. 1, did not contain the above proviso. It is annexed only to the Act of 32 Hen. VIII. chap. 32. Let us notice the language of this proviso. It is 'that no partition or severance hereinafter to be made by force of this Act.' What Act? Certainly the Act of 32 Hen. VIII. chap. 32; which, as we have seen, applies only to 'joint tenants for terms of life or years.' It will hardly be questioned that this is a wise provision in regard to tenancies of this nature.

"This brings us to the main question in the case. In the outset it is necessary to ascertain, if we can, what is the nature and quality of this right denominated 'the wife's inchoate right of dower.' 'It is difficult,' says Mr. Scribner, (2 Scribner, Dower, 5,) 'to state with precision the nature and quality of inchoate dower interest when considered as a right of property.' It is 'a right attaching by implication of law, which, although it may possibly never be called into effect, (as when the wife dies in the lifetime of the husband,) yet, from the moment that the fact of marriage and of seisin have occurred, is so fixed on the land as to become a title paramount to that of any other person claiming under the husband by a subsequent Act.' Park, Dower, 237; Cunningham v. Shannon, 4 Rich. Eq. 140. It is a substantial right, possessing, in contemplation of law, attributes of property, and to be estimated and valued as such. 2 Scribner, Dower, 5. It is not a lien. Shell v. Duncan, 31 S. C. 565. 'After this right has once attached, it is held by the wife entirely independent of the husband, and it cannot be affected by any act or omission on his part.' Shell v. Duncan, supra, and cases there cited.

"Now, while Carey and Alfred Holley held these lands as tenants in common, what was the situation of the parties? Mrs. Alfred Holley had a contingent right of dower in the one undivided moiety thereof, subject to the paramount right of Carey to compel partition between her husband and himself. Had a voluntary or an involuntary partition of said lands in kind been made, then it is clear that the inchoate right of dower of Mrs. Alfred Holley would have been transferred immediately to the portion allotted to her husband; and had he conveyed after partition his share to another, without the renunciation by his wife of her dower according to the statute, his grantee would have taken the land subject to, and burdened with, the contingent right of dower of Mrs. Holley; and, when this right became consummate by the death of her husband, she could have recovered her dower interest therein. So, when Alfred Holley conveyed his undivided interest therein to Wise Holley, he took it subject to and incumbered with the inchoate right of dower of Mrs. Alfred Holley, she not having renounced this right according to the statutory mode provided. The seisin of Alfred Holley in these lands was broken and ceased when he conveyed his undivided interest therein to Wise Holley.

This transfer created no priority of estate between Wise Holley and Elizabeth Holley, the wife of his grantor, respecting her right of dower in the lands conveyed; for, as we understand the rule, the wife is in privity of estate with her husband only until the right of dower attaches. Her interest is not only independent of him, but against him. In all transactions subsequent to the occurrence of marriage and seisin there is no privity of the wife with her husband respecting her dower. If this be so, how can it be said that there is privity respecting her dower between the wife and the husband's grantee,—a mere stranger. Wise Holley's seisin, however, while burdened with the contingent right of dower of Mrs. Elizabeth Holley, was also burdened with Carey's paramount right of compulsory partition. The question is therefore presented, Was the inchoate right of dower of Elizabeth Holley in these lands divested and defeated by the compulsory sale for partition and division ordered by the court of equity in an action to which she was not a party, but in all other respects regular? This question has never been directly decided in this state, so far as we are informed or advised. Now, what is the nature and force of this paramount right to compel partition? Does it involve anything more than that this right shall not be abridged or taken away by the contingent right of dower in the wife of a tenant in common? or is it so potent as to destroy altogether the wife's contingent right of dower in case of its exercise? There is no doubt that if actual partition is made the wife's right of dower will attach to the share allotted in severalty to her husband. This result follows as a matter of course, without any decree or order of the court, and without the wife's being a party to the proceeding in partition. Hence, when actual partition is made, the paramount right to compel it does not defeat the subordinate right of dower, and the paramount right in such case, it would seem, involves nothing more than that its exercise should not be abridged or taken away by the subordinate right. Is the result different when the property is sold by order of the court of equity for partition and division of the proceeds? Here we enter upon debatable ground. It therefore becomes necessary to review at some length the cases bearing upon this difficult and important question, and to deduce therefrom a conclusion in consonance with the principles of law applicable to this highly favored right.

"Vice Chancellor McCoun, of New York, 'twice expressed the opinion that a sale so made does not divest the inchoate right of dower; and one ground upon which he bases this conclusion is that courts possess no power to compel the wife to accept a provision in money in lieu of her interest in, and consequent right to the enjoyment of, the land itself.' Jackson v. Edwards, 7 Paige, 386, 8 L. ed. 310; Matthews v. Matthews, 1 Edw. Ch. 565, 6 L. ed. 248. On appeal Chancellor Walworth was of a different opinion. He concluded as follows: 'I am therefore compelled to declare that the opinion of the vice-chancellor in this cause, [Jackson v. Edwards,] and in the case of Matthews v. Matthews, [supra,] as to the effect of a sale in partition upon the inchoate right of dower of the wife of a tenant in common, who has been made a party to the suit in conjunction with her husband, is erroneous, and that a purchaser under the judgment or decree will be protected against any further claim on her part, both in equity and at law.' In Matthews v. Matthews, supra, the vice-chancellor held that it was immaterial whether the wife was made a party to the suit or not, 'because a decree of sale and conveyance by a master will not bar her dower in her husband's share of the lands in the event of her surviving him.' He justified this decision on the ground that as nothing in the statute of that state expressly declared, 'a divestment of the dower initiate of a wife of a joint tenant or tenant in common upon a sale . . . nothing so materially affecting her legal rights ought to be taken by implication.' The case of Jackson v. Edwards was carried to the court of errors and was finally decided upon other grounds, the members of the court differing on the question as to whether the inchoate right of dower was divested by the sale. Mr. Freeman, after reviewing the New York cases, says: 'So the question of the effect of a sale in partition upon the dower interest of wives of cotenants in the absence of provisions in the statutes directly controlling the subject, may be considered as still unsettled in New York.'

"In Missouri and Ohio the courts have taken the opposite view, and have been disposed to treat sales made in partition as conveying title paramount to the wife's inchoate right of dower. The case of Lee v. Lindell, 22 Mo. 282, 64 Am. Dec. 262, holds that a partition sale during coverture of lands held by a woman's husband in common divests her right of dower therein, although she was not made a party to the proceeding. The reasoning in this case commends itself to our judgment, and is so pertinent to the present inquiry that we feel warranted in quoting from it at length. The court says: 'When it is established that a proceeding in partition is binding on the wife, and confines her right to dower in the lot assigned to her husband, it would seem to follow as a consequence that she would be bound, however the proceedings might eventuate, whether in a portion of land being allotted to her husband or any other result. The wife must be bound or not at the time the suit is instituted, and she being bound by it when the Legislature took up the subject, and directed that instead of a partition in kind it be most advantageous to the parties interested that the land should be sold, and its proceeds divided among the cotenants, and the land is accordingly sold, and a purchaser pays his money for it, on no principle can the ground on which the suit was instituted be raised, and the wife be exempted from the binding influence of the judgment, and be favored with a right to dower in the land sold, when, by the proceedings as originally begun, they were binding on her. If this was a controversy between the husband and the wife for the proceeds of sale, there would be some justice in her claim; but as between her and the purchaser, who has intervened in a proceeding which was binding on her, her claim has no foundation in equity. It may be that, as between the husband and wife, the law should have provided some security for her dower out of the proceeds of sale; but that such failure should be visited on the purchaser would be a great hardship. The omission to make it could, on no principle, vary the nature of the proceeding, and make that of no force which was before binding.' The court then proceeds to show, by way of illustration, the innumerable difficulties which would attend this matter, if it is held that proceedings in partition are not binding on the wives of the cotenants.

"Mr. Freeman, in his work on Cotenancy and Partition, says the case in which this question is best discussed is that of Weaver v. Gregg, 6 Ohio St. 547, 87 Am. Dec. 355. The statute of Ohio providing for partition of real estate (as we understand from this case) is very similar in its terms and conditions to our Act of 1791. The court, after considering the statute, says: 'We are of opinion, therefore, that it was the intention of the Legislature by a sale in partition to divest the wife of her inchoate right of dower;' and then add: 'On the whole, our view of the question is this: The right of dower in the wife subsists in virtue of the seisin of the husband, and this right is always subject to any incumbrance, infirmity, or incident which the law attaches to that seisin, either at the time of the marriage, or at the time the husband became seised. The liability to be divested by a sale in partition is an incident which the law affixes to the seisin of all joint estates, and the inchoate right of the wife is subject to this incident. And when the law steps in and divests the husband of his seisin, and turns the realty into personalty, she is by the act and policy of the law, remitted, in lieu of her inchoate right, to a distributive share of the personalty into which it has been transmitted.' Mr. Scribner, in his work on Dower, (vol. 1, pp. 828-841,) reviews the foregoing cases from New York, Missouri, and Ohio. He says: 'The statutes regulating the partition of lands in Ohio, in force at the time the sale was made, differed materially from the New York statute before referred to; the latter Act, as has been seen, requiring all persons having any contingent interest in the premises to be made parties to the proceedings. . . . The [Ohio] statute did not require, nor in the case referred to [Weaver v. Gregg,] had the wife been made a party to the proceedings in which the sale was made. The court, nevertheless, held that the inchoate right of dower was extinguished by the sale.' Mr. Scribner, while he questions the reasoning of the court in certain particulars in Weaver v. Gregg, says: 'The reasoning addresses itself to the understanding with great force and cogency, and tends strongly to support the conclusion to which the court arrived.' And again: 'It is manifest, however, that in proceedings in partition the interest of all parties would be promoted by a sale free from the incumbrance of dower. An uncertain and contingent interest of this character would undoubtedly affect the market price of the property to an extent greatly disproportioned to the actual value of that interest.' Mr. Freeman also reviews these cases in his work on Cotenancy and Partition (sec. 474.) As we understand Mr. Freeman, he favors the views expressed by the courts of Missouri and Ohio.

"The cases of Lee v. Lindell, and Weaver v. Gregg, rest upon a principle clearly recognized in this state, namely, that the contingent right of dower of a wife of a tenant in common is not paramount to the right of the cotenant of the husband to compel partition; and upon the further principle that dower, being the creature of positive law, founded upon reasons of public policy, is subject to such incidents as are affixed to it by laws existing and operative at the time of the marriage, and, when the sale for partition is the act of the law, the proceedings are as binding upon the wife as though actual partition had been made. The result of this is to give to the paramount right of partition such force as to divest and extinguish in case of its lawful exercise the inchoate right of dower, and this result follows whether the wife be made a party or not to the proceedings in partition; and here we would remark that while a wife of a tenant in common may be made a party, and may be a proper party to proceedings in partition, (in the absence of any statute on the subject), we do not see that she is a necessary party to such proceedings. Her inchoate right of dower is no estate or interest in the land. It is a valuable right, it is true, and has some of the incidents of property, yet it cannot be bargained and sold. It is no lien, in the legal sense of that term. The wife of a cotenant is not a tenant in common with her husband and his cotenants, neither is she an incumbrancer having a lien upon the property held in common, in the strict sense of the term. Upon what principle, then, can it be contended that she is a necessary party? We confess that we fail to see. Our own case of Keckley v. Moore, 3 Strobb. Eq. 21, bears strongly upon the question now under consideration; and the reasoning of Chancellor Dunkin, who delivered the opinion of the court, is clear, forcible, and convincing. In this case, which was brought for the purpose of making partition of the estate of one James Moore among his heirs, the land had been sold in pursuance of a decree made in the cause, and the purchaser at such sale, refusing to comply with the terms of sale, had been ruled to show cause. The purchaser showed for cause that before the filing of the bill a judgment had been recovered against two of the heirs, and that their shares in the land were bound by the lien of said judgment, and that these heirs were married, and that their wives were living and entitled to dower out of their shares in said lands. The learned chancellor says: 'The only question is whether the title of a purchaser at such sale can be affected by prior judgment against one of the children. It is quite manifest that until partition is made it is impossible to determine whether the child will be entitled to any or what portion of the estate. The right, whatever it be, is the creature of the Act of 1791, and must be held in subordination to the provisions of law. If a sale for partition be ordered, the title of the purchaser is just as complete as if the land had been sold to satisfy a debt of the intestate. To require the judgment or other lien creditors of all the distributees to be made parties to a suit for partition of the estate of an intestate would introduce a novelty in the practice of the court, and would incur the proceedings with delay and expense not calculated to promote the final settlement and adjustment of estates between the parties in interest, which is the leading object of the Act of 1791.' The court does not seem to have attached any weight to the objection raised by the purchaser that certain of the heirs were married, and that their wives were living, and entitled to dowers out of their shares in the lands; but, notwithstanding this alleged defect in the title to the premises, the court held the cause shown insufficient, and the purchaser bound by his bid, and the title such as he must accept. Upon what principle? Our courts have held 'that, even during the lifetime of her husband, a wife's dower, unrelinquished, may be shown by a purchaser as an excuse for his refusal to comply with a contract for sale.' Polk v. Sumter, 2 Strobb. L. 81; Jeter v. Glenn, 9 Rich. L. 380.

"It has also been held that the doctrine of caveat emptor does not apply in sales by the master or sheriff under a decree for partition. Commissioner in Equity v. Smith, 9 Rich. L. 515; Bolivar v. Zeigler, 9 S. C. 287. And in Rorer on Judicial Sales, § 150, we find the following: 'But such purchaser at a judicial sale may not be thus compelled to complete the sale if the title be defective, nor pay the consideration money until the defect, if there be one, is obviated; for although the rule caveat emptor applies after the sale is closed by payment of the purchase money and delivery of the deed, if there be no fraud, yet the buyer, if he discovers the defect beforehand, will not be compelled to complete the sale.' This objection, had there been no other principle applicable to the case by which the objection was silenced, must, under the foregoing authorities, have offered to the purchaser a sufficient excuse for his refusal to comply. We find this principle by applying the rules laid down in the case of Keckley v. Moore, as to judgment creditors of cotenants, to the wives of the cotenants. The purchaser, under the principle laid down in said case, takes a good title, free and discharged from all liens by judgments against the tenants in common. When lands are sold by order of the court of equity, for the purpose of partition, whether such lien creditors be parties to the proceedings or not, the same principle applied to the wives of the cotenants would give to the purchaser a complete title, divested of the inchoate right of dower of the wives of the cotenants, and we confess that we do not see any good reason why the same principle should not apply as well in the latter as in the former case. It certainly will not be contended that the rule should be different on the ground that this contingent right of dower of the wife is a more favored right. This ground would be without reason to sustain it, and based upon no sound principle of either equity or justice. As was well said in Weaver v. Gregg, supra: 'The sale is the act of the law, designed to do justice to joint owners and render estates available, and put forth only when, from the fact that the estate is incapable of actual partition, the necessities of the case require it. The Legislature has deemed it more important to the public interest to render estates available to their owners without sacrifice of their value by a sale in case of necessity, than to preserve in all cases whatsoever the wife's remote and contingent interest at the expense of parties on whom she can have no proper claim.' The case of Keckley v. Moore is, as we understand it, authority for the rule that, when lands are sold in this state under a decree of the court of equity for partition, the purchaser at such sale takes a complete title, not only freed from the lien of all prior judgments against the cotenants, but divested of the inchoate rights of dower of the wives of the cotenants, and that neither the judgment creditors of the cotenants nor their wives are necessary parties to such proceedings. It therefore seems to us that not only reason and public policy, but the clear weight of authority, is on the side and in favor of the rule that, where lands are sold under a decree of the court of equity for partition, the realty is converted into personalty, and thereby the dower interests of the wives of the cotenants are extinguished and destroyed, and the purchaser at such sale takes a title free from any defect or incumbrance as to such dower rights. But in the present case it appears that Alfred Holley conveyed his undivided interest in said premises to Wise Holley before the sale for partition of said land was made, and that his wife, Elizabeth, the present plaintiff, did not then, nor did she during the lifetime of her husband, renounce her right of dower in the premises so sold to Wise Holley, as required by the statute in such case provided. This state of facts presents another question of equal importance and difficulty. The authorities above referred to arise out of cases in which the husband was still a cotenant when the sale for partition was ordered. In these cases the husband, it may be claimed, represented his wife's inchoate right of dower; for in such cases the practice has always been in the distributing the proceeds of sale to pay to the husband, he being the sole representative of the estate. But in the present case, although Alfred Holley was a party, he did not represent the estate. He had no share in the proceeds of sale. When the proceedings for partition were instituted he was not the owner in fee of one undivided moiety of these lands, with a wife having a contingent right of dower, for he had voluntarily parted with his interest to another prior to such proceeding. In the cases above discussed the seisin of the husband had been devested by the act of the law; in the present case the husband's seisin had been devested solely by his own act.

16 L. R. A.

"Mr. Freeman, in his work on Cotenancy and Partition, (sec. 475,) in discussing this question, says: 'As it was clear that the act of the husband could not defeat the wife's right of dower, it was thought that the subsequent partition, to which she was not a party, and in which her estate had no representative, must be equally powerless to prejudice her interests.' In support of the text, Mr. Freeman cites the case of Verry v. Robinson, 25 Ind. 19, 87 Am. Dec. 846. By the sale of Alfred to Wise, the title of Alfred, which, to use the language of Mr. Justice Elliott in Verry v. Robinson, supra, 'was directly united with the contingent right of the wife growing out of the marriage relations under the law, became severed from it. The title was no longer a unit. The estate of the husband, out of which sprung the claim of the wife, became devested, and passed into the hands of a stranger, not an absolute and unincumbered fee, but subject to the contingent claim of the wife, depending, however, upon the then uncertain contingency that she should survive her husband.' Alfred was seised of an unconditional and unincumbered fee in one undivided moiety of the Hollow Creek tract of land. The contingent right of his wife was a mere incident under the law of that seisin, and, though the entire fee was in the husband, he could not sell the interest of the wife, unless she voluntarily joined in the conveyance. The wife of Alfred did not join in the conveyance of Alfred to Wise; therefore Wise's purchase was subject to the contingent right of Mrs. Elizabeth Holley, the wife of Alfred. By this purchase Wise did not acquire a title to that right. Alfred did not own it; consequently could not sell and convey it; therefore Wise's title was subject to it. As was said by Mr. Justice McIver in Shell v. Duncan, supra, in answering the question, 'What is the right, title, and interest which a married man has in land of which he is seised during coverture?'—'It certainly is not such an absolute, unqualified interest as would enable him to alienate it, free from the claim of dower, either by deed or devise, but his alienation is always subject to the wife's right of dower, which can only be released or extinguished by her own act. Nothing that the husband may do can in any way affect it. From this it follows that when the right, title, and interest of the husband is sold, either directly by himself, or through the medium of an officer of the law, the purchaser takes no more than what was sold, the right, title, and interest of the husband, which does not include the dower interest, and hence the purchaser must take his title subject to the wife's right of dower.' In the suit for partition instituted by John L. Carey, Wise Holley only represented the interest purchased by him, and no more and no other; and the sale of the premises, so far as his interest was concerned, could not invest John Holley, the purchaser at said sale with any better title or greater interest than was held by Wise, and which he represented in that suit; and, as we have already seen, Alfred, although a party, had no interest in the premises, and could not, under the circumstances, represent his wife in said suit.

"It is apparent that there is a very material difference between the case at the bar and the cases of Weaver v. Gregg and Lee v. Lindell. In the cases of Weaver v. Gregg and Lee v. Lindell the seisin of the husband was devested by the act of the law, at the time of the sale under the decree for partition, and the husband was a party to the proceeding, and represented his own title, which was then directly united with the contingent right of the wife. In the present case the seisin of the husband was devested by his own voluntary act at a period long before the suit for partition was instituted, and the husband, although a party to the proceeding, had no title then directly united with the contingent right of the wife; the title and the contingent right having been previously severed by the voluntary sale of the husband. We therefore conclude that Wise Holley's purchase of said premises was subject to the inchoate right of dower of Elizabeth Holley; was not extinguished or destroyed by the sale for partition made under the decree of the court of equity in the suit instituted therein by John L. Carey, she not being a party to said proceedings; that John Holley, the purchaser at said sale, also took his title to said premises subject to the inchoate right of dower of Elizabeth Holley; and that said inchoate right having become consummate by the death of her husband, Alfred Holley, she is entitled to her dower in said premises. It is therefore ordered and adjudged that Elizabeth Holley, plaintiff, recover against the several defendants, in each of the above entitled actions, her dower in the several tracts or parcels of land mentioned and described in the respective complaints, and that a writ in dower in each of the said actions do issue out of and under the seal of this court in the usual form of words, and according to the rules and practice of this court, directed to fit and proper persons as commissioners, commanding them, or a majority of them, to admeasure and mete out to the plaintiff her dower in the lands described in the several and respective complaints, and that the costs of said actions and expenses of said admeasurement be paid by the defendants, respectively."

Messrs. Henderson Bros. and O. C. Jordan, for appellants:

The wife's interest or claim was derivative from the husband and cannot rise higher than its source.

Pergues v. Warley, 14 S. C. 190; 2 Scribner, Dower, p. 80.

A cotenant's title is "qualified and limited by the right of his codistributees to have partition made of the property."

Burris v. Gooch, 5 Rich. L. 6; Pendergrass v. Pendergrass, 26 S. C. 29.

The wife must take her dower as she takes her husband, cum onere.

Crafts v. Crafts, 2 McCord, L. 54; Shiell v. Sloan, 22 S. C. 152; Hay v. Hay, 4 Rich. Eq. 378; Jones v. Miller, 17 S. C. 380.

The right of the wife to dower is subject to the right of the cotenants of her husband to compel partition.

Freeman, Coten. & Partition, § 107; 1 Hill. Real Prop. 171; 1 Washb. Real Prop. 158.

Purchase-money mortgages will defeat dower when enforced.

Crafts v. Crafts, supra; Stoppelbein v. Shulte, 1 Hill, L. 208; Wilson v. McConnell, 9 Rich. Eq. 512; Tibbette v. Langley Mfg. Co. 12 S. C. 474.

In the partition suit between the Careys and the Holleys, both Alfred, the husband, and Wise Holley, his grantee, and then owner of the land, were made parties.

The two together certainly represented all the interest and title that Alfred acquired when he purchased his individual interest in the land.

Pitts v. Wicker, 8 Hill, L. 199; Hood v. Archer, 2 Nott & McC. 151.

Wise Holley, the grantee of Alfred, represented in this suit whatever interest Alfred did not represent.

Freeman, Coten. & Partition, § 451; Charles-ton, C. & C. R. Co. v. Leech, 33 S. C. 175.

As matter of representation she was clearly represented as fully as the court of equity with all its power could require. To have made her a party would not have bound her ipso facto, as she could elect after death of husband.

Labatut v. Schmidt, Speers, Eq. 426; Davis v. Townsend, 32 S. C. 116.

This was a proceeding in rem, acting directly on the title it takes hold—the title that came to Holley and Carey.

As to effect of in rem proceedings, see,—

Rabb v. Aiken, 2 McCord, Eq. 125; Lee v. Lindell, 22 Mo. 203, 64 Am. Dec. 262; Freeman, Coten. & Partition, §§ 411, 474; Weaver v. Gregg, 6 Ohio St. 547, 67 Am. Dec. 355.

A fixed and vested claim like a judgment lien against a cotenant is subject to being devested by decree and sale in partition.

Riley v. Gaines, 14 S. C. 457.

And this is the effect whether the judgment creditor is a party or not.

Ketchin v. Patrick, 32 S. C. 452.

The court of equity always had power to sell any lands for partition, and including this court in the Act of 1791 was only cumulative and did not restrict it to the partition of intestate estates; the Act only gave new powers to the court of common pleas and did not take away any power previously exercised by the court of equity.

Pell v. Ball, 1 Rich. Eq. 387; Steedman v. Weeks, 2 Strobb. Eq. 147, 49 Am. Dec. 660; Freeman, Coten. & Partition, § 424.

When power to sell in partition was given the Legislature intended a good title and this could only be given by divesting contingent dower rights, and it had the power to divest it.

Cooley, Const. Lim. *p. 361; Randall v. Krieger, 90 U. S. 23 Wall. 148, 23 L. ed. 126; Shiell v. Duncan, 31 S. C. 568; Moore v. New York, 8 N. Y. 110, 59 Am. Dec. 473.

Messrs. John Gary Evans and E. S. Hammond, for respondent:

16 L. R. A.

A wife is entitled to her dower in lands held by her husband in common with another.

Reed v. Kennedy, 2 Strobb. L. 67; Shiell v. Sloan, 22 S. C. 157; 4 Bl. Com. 131, note; S. C. Gen. Stat. 1796 et seq.; Horde v. Landrum, 5 S. C. 213.

Mrs. Holley's inchoate right of dower attached to the land from the date of marriage and seisin of her husband. What, then, are the nature and extent of her husband's title, and what could he convey? As was said by Mr. Justice McIver in Shiell v. Duncan, 31 S. C. 566: "It certainly is not such an absolute, unqualified interest as would enable him to alienate it free from the claim of dower, either by deed or devise, but his alienation is always subject to the wife's right of dower which can only be released or extinguished by her own act; nothing that her husband may do can in any way affect it."

Bondley v. Caldwell, 28 S. C. 580; Tibbette v. Langley Mfg. Co. 12 S. C. 465; Park, Dower, *41; Scribner, Dower, chap. 29, § 1.

In order to bind her in any proceeding it was necessary that she be a party to such proceeding. This was not done in the partition proceedings, but appellants contend that she was a privy in estate with her husband and his grantee, and is therefore bound. Since she holds under "a title distinct, separate and paramount, to that of her husband," there can be no privity, and the grantee of the husband certainly could occupy no higher position than that of his grantor.

A privy is one whose interests have been legally represented at the trial.

McMullin v. Brown, 2 Hill, Eq. 457; Tibbette v. Langley Mfg. Co. supra; Mongin v. Baker, 1 Bay, 78.

When dower once attaches, all privity between husband and wife ceases.

Shiell v. Duncan, supra.

The purchaser at said sale could take only the title of the parties to the suit, and that title was incumbered with the dower right of Mrs. Elizabeth Holley.

Ibid.; Freeman, Coten. & Partition, § 475; Very v. Robinson, 25 Ind. 14, 37 Am. Dec. 346.

Prior to the Act of 1832 there was no statute in this state authorizing sales of land in partition cases except in cases of partition of intestates' estates.

At common law there was no such thing as compulsory partition of lands held in joint tenancy and in common.

This remained so until the Statute of 31 Hen. VIII, chap. 1, was passed, giving one cotenant the right to compel partition in like manner as parceners by the common law of the realm were compelled to do. This statute was made of force in South Carolina in 1791.

See Acts 1791, 5 Stat. p. 162.

A subsequent statute, 32 Hen. VIII, chap. 32, was passed allowing joint tenants for term of life or years the same rights. These statutes, however, confer no rights upon the courts to sell the lands in partition and divide the proceeds; they relate only to partitions in kind and such a thing as a sale by the court was unknown to the common law of England and of this state. The only case where a sale was authorized was in the distribution of intestates' estates, and the Act of 1791 only authorizes a sale in such cases.

Freeman, Coten. & Partition, chap. 19, § 421; Orompton v. Ulmer, 2 Nott & McC. 429; Spann v. Blocker, Id. 598; Gibson v. Marshall, 5 Rich. Eq. 260; Rabb v. Aiken, 2 McCord, Eq. 119; Witherspoon v. Dunlap, 1 McCord, L. 546; Barns v. Branch, 8 McCord, L. 21; Pell v. Ball, 1 Rich. Eq. 884.

Not until 1868, when the Statutes of 84 & 35 Vict. were passed authorizing such sales, did the courts of law or chancery in England presume to sell lands in partition without the consent of all parties.

Pell v. Ball, supra; Story, Eq. Jur. § 654, note a; Bispham, Eq. § 498, and notes; Gibson v. Marshall, supra.

The inchoate right of dower of a wife in lands held by her husband in common with another is not divested or defeated by a sale of said lands for partition in any proceeding to which she was not a party.

In our state partition is the same as that written of by Mr. Allnatt, viz.: "A right of division of lands or tenements by coparceners, joint tenants, or tenants in common, so as to put an end to the cotenancy, and to vest in each person a sole estate in a specific purparty or allotment of the lands or tenements."

Allnatt, Partition, 1; Freeman, Coten. & Partition, § 398.

The law never contemplated anything but a partition in kind; courts of equity alone sold lands for partition.

The partition did not divest or defeat the title of one cotenant; it simply determined and made definite what before was indeterminate and indefinite.

A lien is the power to levy and sell.

Pergues v. Warley, 14 S. C. 190.

A wife is entitled to dower in lands held by her husband in joint tenancy and tenancy in common, and in cases of partition in kind to dower in the purparty allotted to her husband, it is not defeated or divested but simply limited to her husband's share.

Horde v. Landrum, 5 S. C. 218; Freeman, Coten. & Partition, § 107.

Neither the husband nor the courts nor any human power can compel the wife to relinquish her right of dower, inchoate though it may be, when she is not asking the aid of the court. Should she become a suitor seeking the aid of the court the case would be different.

Royston v. Royston, 21 Ga. 172; Allnatt, Partition, *188.

Where the wife joins in a bill for partition and the property is sold under a decree, her potential right of dower is barred; the court has full power to provide therefor.

1 Hill. Real Prop. 212.

All persons interested in the real property sought to be partitioned should be made parties, or they are not bound, and the wife of a tenant in common may be made a party defendant in an action by him for partition.

Lawson, Rights, Rem. & Pr. § 2786.

Nor will a sale in partition cut off the dower of a married woman not made a party although her husband be made such.

Rorer, Judicial Sales, 168, § 402.

A wife, whose husband has an interest in lands, should be made a party to a bill for partition in order to bar her right of dower or claim to homestead.

Hawes, Parties to Action, § 28; 5 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, 921, and cases cited; 4 Kent, Com. 365, note; Jackson v. Edwards, 7 Paige, 386, 4 L. ed. 300; Wilkinson v. Parish, 8 Paige, 638, 8 L. ed. 810; Jordan v. Van Epps, 85 N. Y. 427; Matthews v. Matthews, 1 Edw. Ch. 565, 6 L. ed. 248.

A person whose title is distinct, paramount, and independent is not bound in an action for partition unless such person is a party to the suit.

Pearson v. Carlton, 18 S. C. 53; Rabb v. Aiken, 2 McCord, Eq. 118; Dorn v. Beasley, 7 Rich. Eq. 84.

Under Shell v. Duncan, 81 S. C. 566, the inchoate right of dower is such a substantial right of property as to claim for it the protection of the Constitution.

Wilson v. Kelley, 19 S. C. 166.

The inchoate right of dower is as much entitled to protection as the vested rights of the widow. She may, during the lifetime of the husband, maintain an action to protect it.

Boone, Real Prop. § 58; Shell v. Duncan, supra; 5 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, 905.

The right of dower is certainly entitled to as much protection and consideration as contingent remaindermen, yet under our decisions a contingent remainderman not before the court is unprejudiced in his rights; and may go upon the lands.

Moseley v. Hankinson, 23 S. C. 328; Farr v. Gilreath, 23 S. C. 512; LeRoy v. Charleston, 20 S. C. 71.

McIver, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

All the cases named in the title were actions for dower, and as they all grew out of the same state of facts, and rest upon the same principles of law, they were heard together both on the circuit and in this court, and will therefore be considered together. By agreement, the cases were heard upon the pleadings and an agreed statement of facts, set out in the "case," by the court without a jury. The plaintiff as the widow of Alfred Holley, claims dower out of the several parcels of land in the possession of the several defendants in the above stated cases, which several parcels originally constituted a single tract of land known as the "Hollow Creek Land." From the "agreed statement of facts," which should be incorporated in the report of this case, it appears that some time prior to the year 1839 the said Alfred Holley and one William H. Carey purchased jointly the Hollow Creek land, and the same was conveyed to them as tenants in common; and on the 5th of March, 1841, Alfred Holley conveyed his undivided one-half interest to Wise Holley. Subsequently, W. H. Carey having died, his son John L. Carey instituted proceedings in the court of equity against the other heirs-at-law of W. H. Carey, together with Alfred Holley and Wise Holley, for the partition of said land, which resulted in a sale of said land under the orders of said court. At such sale one John Holley became the purchaser, and, having paid the purchase money, received titles from the commissioner in equity, and the defendants in the several cases above stated claim under the said John Holley. The purchase money was divided among the several parties to the proceeding in pursuance of the provisions of the decree of the court under which the sale was made, but the plaintiff herein was not a party to the proceedings, and neither received any portion of the proceeds of the sale, nor was there any provision made for the protection of her inchoate right of dower. Alfred Holley, the husband of plaintiff, having died in February, 1881, these actions were commenced (when is not stated) by the plaintiff to recover her dower in the several tracts held by the several defendants. The circuit judge held that, while a sale for partition would bar the contingent or inchoate right of dower of the wife of one of several tenants in common under proceedings to which he was a party, though the wife was not a party, yet in this case, inasmuch as Alfred Holley had sold and conveyed to Wise Holley his undivided interest in said land, before the proceedings for partition were instituted, the plaintiff was not barred of such right, because, although Alfred Holley as well as Wise Holley was a party to the partition proceedings, yet neither, nor both of them together, represented the rights and interests of the plaintiff in such proceedings. He therefore rendered judgment in favor of the plaintiff in each of said cases. From these judgments the several defendants appeal upon the several grounds set out in the record; and the plaintiff, according to the proper practice, gives notice that if the supreme court should find itself unable to sustain the judgment appealed from, upon the ground taken by the circuit judge, the plaintiff will ask this court to sustain said judgments upon other grounds, likewise set out in the record. These various grounds raise substantially the following questions: (1) Whether the wife of one tenant in common can be barred of her inchoate right of dower by a sale for partition under proceedings instituted by another tenant in common against her husband and the other cotenants, but to which the wife was not a party. (2) If so, whether the same rule would apply where the husband, though made a party to the proceedings for partition, had previously conveyed his undivided interest to a third person, who was also made a party. (3) Whether the circuit judge erred in finding as matter of fact that William H. Carey died testate. (4) If not, whether the former court of equity had the power to sell lands of a testator for partition among those entitled thereto; and, if so, whether the inchoate right of dower of the wife of one of the tenants in common would be barred by such sale, under proceeding to which she was not a party.

As to the first question, we are of opinion that, while the wife of one of several tenants in common has an inchoate right of dower in her husband's portion of the real estate held in common, yet such right is subordinate to the paramount right of the other tenants in common to have partition of the common property in any of the modes by which such partition may be lawfully made. Hence, if a sale for partition becomes necessary, the wife's inchoate right of dower in the land is barred, even though she is not a party to the proceedings for partition, and the purchaser at such sale takes his title disincumbered of such subordinate right of dower. As is said in 1 Washb. Real Prop. 8d ed. bk. 1, chap. 7, § 2, par. 10, p. 185: "The wife of a tenant in common holds her inchoate right of dower so completely subject to the incidents of such an estate that she not only takes her dower out of such part only of the common estate as shall have been set [off] to her husband in partition, but if, by law, the entire estate should be sold in order to effect a partition, she loses, by such sale, all claim to the land, although no party to such proceedings." Whether, in such a case, some provision should be made for the protection of the wife's inchoate right of dower, in the event it should afterwards become absolute, out of the husband's share of the proceeds of the sale, is not a matter now before us, and will not, therefore, be considered. So far as our experience extends, this rule has always been recognized in this state, and we are not informed that it was ever before questioned. The reason of this rule is this: The right of the other cotenants to demand partition being paramount to the inchoate right of dower in the wife of any one of the cotenants, whenever the paramount right is exercised the subordinate right cannot properly be allowed to interfere with or abridge the full enjoyment of the paramount right. Inasmuch as the inchoate right of dower springs out of and is necessarily dependent upon the concurrence of marriage and seisin of the husband during coverture, it must necessarily depend upon and be qualified by the nature of such seisin. If, therefore, the nature of the husband's seisin be such as will not support the claim of dower,—as, for example, the husband be seised as trustee,—it is competent for the defendant in dower to show such defect in the seisin as a defense to the claim of dower. See what is said in Whitmore v. Wright, 22 S. C. 451, 53 Am. Rep. 725, commenting on the case of Gayle v. Price, 5 Rich. L. 525. So, also, the husband's seisin may be shown to be subject to the lien of a purchase-money mortgage, and therefore not of such a character as will be sufficient to support the claim of dower, as against such paramount right, (Crafts v. Crafts, 2 McCord, L. 54;) and the same doctrine applies where the inchoate right of dower is subordinate to the lien of a judgment recovered before the marriage, (Jones v. Miller, 17 S. C. 380.) Again, the rule is well settled that while a judgment against one of several tenants in common is a lien upon the undivided interest of such tenant in common, under which such undivided interest may be levied on and sold, yet such incumbrance is subordinate to the paramount right of the other tenants in common to demand partition; and, if a sale of the undivided property is made for that purpose, the purchaser takes his title freed and discharged from such subordinate incumbrance on the share of the judgment debtor, and the creditor is remitted to his debtor's share of the proceeds of the sale, even though the judgment creditor is not a party to the proceedings for partition. Keckley v. Moore, 2 Strobb. Eq. 21; Biley v. Gaines, 14 S. C. 454; Ketchin v. Patrick, 83 S. C. 443. See also Shiell v. Sloan, 23 S. C. 157. Now, while these are cases of liens or charges upon the common property, or rather upon the interests of one or more of the tenants in common, and while the inchoate right of dower may not, properly speaking, be a lien, yet the principle upon which they rest is applicable here, to wit, that the enforcement of a paramount right must not be interfered with or abridged by persons holding subordinate rights, whatever be their character. Hence, as the inchoate right of dower arises out of and is dependent upon the nature of the husband's seisin, such inchoate right must necessarily be affected with any infirmities of such seisin, and be qualified by any paramount right subject to which it has been acquired; and where, as in this case, the husband's seisin was qualified by and subject to the paramount right of the other cotenants to demand partition, the plaintiff's inchoate right of dower, growing out of and dependent upon such seisin, was subject to the same qualification. When, therefore, the seisin of the husband was divested by the exercise of the paramount right of the other cotenants to demand partition, the inchoate right of dower was likewise destroyed, so far, at least, as the land was concerned, and the plaintiff was no more a necessary party for that purpose than is a judgment creditor of one of several tenants in common, in case of a sale of the common property for partition. Keckley v. Moore, supra, where, as pointed out in the circuit decree, the point here involved, though not discussed, was practically decided.

The second question involves an inquiry as to the effect of the sale by Alfred Holley to Wise Holley of his undivided one half of the common property prior to the institution of the proceedings for partition, under which the land was sold to John Holley. It seems to us that the conveyance to Wise Holley placed him in the shoes of Alfred Holley, invested him with the same seisin, subject to the same qualifications, with which his grantor, Alfred Holley, had previously been invested, and made him a tenant in common with the other joint owners of the land. When, therefore, such seisin was divested by the sale for partition, the effect, so far as any subordinate right dependent upon such seisin was concerned, was the same as if the title and such seisin had remained in Alfred Holley. When the basis upon which the subordinate right of dower rested was destroyed by the exercise of a right paramount to the inchoate right of dower, such right necessarily fell with it, and could not be asserted against one claiming under a right paramount to it. We are therefore unable to see how the conveyance by Alfred Holley to Wise Holley could affect the question which we are called upon to determine. The view taken by the circuit judge that, by reason of such sale, the plaintiff's inchoate right of dower was not sufficiently represented in the proceedings for partition, does not seem to us to be sound, for we do not think it is a question of representation at all. If Alfred Holley had never sold and conveyed his undivided interest to Wise Holley, we would not be disposed to hold that the plaintiff's inchoate right of dower was barred by the sale for partition, because, though she was not a party to the partition proceedings, yet her interest was represented therein by her husband, who was a party. On the contrary, our view is that such inchoate right of dower was defeated by the exercise of a right paramount to it; practically that such inchoate right of dower in her husband's share of the common property was contingent upon the nonexercise of the paramount right to demand partition by a sale of the common property; but, when such paramount right was exercised, the contingency upon which such subordinate inchoate right of dower rested could never happen, and hence it could never afterwards become absolute. Indeed, it would be anomalous to hold that the purchaser, at a sale made under the exercise of a paramount right, should take his title subject to one claiming under a subordinate right. Under this view, we do not see how it is possible that the transfer by Alfred Holley of his interest to Wise Holley, prior to the proceedings for partition, can affect the question: nor do we see any necessity for making the plaintiff a party to the partition proceedings, for she then had no such interest in the property sought to be partitioned as rendered her a necessary party, in any sense of those terms, and since the sale she never could have any such interest.

The third question, under the view which we shall take of the fourth, becomes wholly unimportant, and, as it is a mere question of fact, will not be considered.

The fourth question has been so fully and satisfactorily discussed by the circuit judge in his decree (which should be incorporated in the report of this case) that we find it very difficult to add anything to what is there so well said. It is there shown that the power of the former court of equity to order a sale of land for partition, owned by several tenants in common, either as distributees of an intestate's estate or otherwise, is not derived from, or dependent upon, the provisions of the Act of 1791, but existed and was exercised long before the passage of that Act, an instance of which will be found in the case of Dinkle v. Timrod, 1 Desaus. Eq. 109, decided in 1784, seven years before the passage of the Act of 1791. This was expressly decided in the case of Pell v. Ball, 1 Rich. Eq. 361, and the doctrine was recognized in the subsequent cases of Steedman v. Weeks, 2 Strobb. Eq. 145, and Gibson v. Marshall, 5 Rich. Eq. 254. While, therefore, it may be true that the court of common pleas, deriving its power, in this respect, only from the Act of 1791, can only order a sale for partition in cases of intestacy, as has been held in the cases of Orompton v. Ulmer, 2 Nott & McC. 423; Spann v. Blocker, Id. 593; and Barns v. Branch, 3 McCord, L. 19,—yet these decisions cannot affect, and do not purport to question the long-established, and, as we may say, the universally recognized, powers of the court of equity, in this respect, under which, as is said by Harper, Ch. J., in Pell v. Ball, supra, "titles have accrued and money has been paid and invested, thus involving, perhaps, the titles of a large portion of the property of the country." We would not feel a liberty, at this late day, to disturb or even question what may be called a rule of property, so long established, even if we entertained much graver doubts than we do of the authority of the rule. We concur, therefore, in the conclusion reached by the circuit judge as to this matter,—that the power of the former court of equity to order a sale for partition is not confined to cases of intestacy, and that the inchoate right of dower of the wife of one of the several tenants in common is defeated by such a sale, even though such wife be not a party to the proceedings for partition. But, as we differ with the circuit judge as to the effect of the transfer of Alfred Holley's interest to Wise Holley, as we have hereinbefore indicated, the judgments below must be reversed.

The judgment of this court is that the judgment of the Circuit Court in each of the cases stated in the title be reversed, and that the complaints therein be dismissed.

McGowan and Pope, JJ., concur.

ARKANSAS SUPREME COURT.

ST. LOUIS & SAN FRANCISCO R. CO.,

Appt.,

v.

A. P. MURRAY.

(.....Ark.....)

1. That those in charge of a railroad train used sufficient precaution to prevent collision with a train standing on the track ahead of it and no collision in fact occurred will not relieve the company from liability for injuries received by a passenger in leaving the forward train to avoid being injured by the collision which appeared to him to be imminent.
2. A reasonable cause of alarm occasioned by the negligence or misconduct of the carrier must have existed to render it liable for injuries received by a passenger while leaving a train in an effort to escape an apprehended danger.
3. The prudence of a passenger's leaving a railway train to escape an apparent danger must be judged by the circumstances as they appeared to him at the time and not by the result.
4. Testimony as to the impressions upon the passenger's mind at the time of leaving the train, and his purpose in so doing, as to the actions of other passengers, and as to the possibility of real danger, are admissible upon the question of the prudence of his act when he sues for injuries received, claiming that he was seeking to avoid imminent peril.
5. Testimony that a short time after the alleged infliction of a personal injury witness assisted the injured person to remove his coat and that he complained of being hurt in the shoulder is admissible in an action to recover for the injury, not as part of the res gestæ, but as tending to show present pain and injury.]

(December 19, 1891.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Washington County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. E. D. Kenna and B. R. Davidson, for appellant:

The admission of the statements of Belleiter, "I got off the train and got off to avoid danger." "From the circumstances I thought it prudent to get off the car,"—was erroneous. It is never admissible for a witness to testify to conclusions. The damaging nature of the testimony is apparent at a glance, and its admission was a violation of the elementary rules of evidence.

Dickerson v. Johnson, 24 Ark. 251.

While there are authorities that say that the statements of a fellow passenger may be received in evidence, we submit that the better rule is to the contrary.

Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Green, 81 Ill. 19; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Weekly, 50 Ark. 397.

Rivercomb was allowed to testify that Murray asked him to pull his coat off, and to help him put it on the next morning, and that "he complained of being hurt in his arm and shoulder." It will hardly be contended that these statements and acts were a part of the res gestæ.

Fordyce v. McCants, 51 Ark. 510; Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Eubanks, 48 Ark. 478; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Weekly, supra; Martin v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 5 Cent. Rep. 793, 108 N. Y. 626; Amil v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 70 Iowa, 130, 28 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 467; Adams v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 74 Mo. 553, 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 414.

Such statements even made to a physician are not admissible, and to allow one to corroborate his testimony by them is reversible error.

Rochs v. Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. 7 Cent. Rep. 702, 105 N. Y. 294; Reed v. New York Cent. R. Co. 45 N. Y. 574; Winter v. Central

NOTE.—That mere error in judgment in case of apparent danger is not contributory negligence, see note to Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Lucas (Ind.) 6 L. R. A. 195.

16 L. R. A.

For a valuable case as to the necessity of real danger to raise a liability for injuries received in an attempt to escape it, see Kleiber v. People's R. Co. 14 L. R. A. 612, 107 Mo. 240.

Iowa R. Co. 74 Iowa, 448; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Stacker, 86 Tenn. 343, 6 Am. St. Rep. 840; Darrigan v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 52 Conn. 285, 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 438; Harber v. Merriam, 11 Allen, 322; Grand Rapids & I. R. Co. v. Huntley, 38 Mich. 587, 31 Am. Rep. 321.

If defendant was not put in peril he could not recover. To willfully or wantonly frighten one, and cause him to injure himself, might form the basis of an action, but if one takes fright at the acts of another pursuing a legitimate calling, where there is no danger whatever—where he is not put in peril—and injures himself, he certainly has no cause of action.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wallen, 65 Tex. 568, 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 219; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Felton, 24 Ill. App. 378, 33 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 533.

One guilty of negligence is only liable for the natural and ordinary results of the same.

Sellers v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 94 N. C. 654, 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 451.

The court instructed the jury that the information of the employes as to the situation of the trains and cars was material for them to consider, and yet denied the railroad company the privilege of showing by conductor Wade that he communicated this very information to the conductor and engineer of the rear train. There was nothing allowed to go to the jury to show that those in charge of the rear train were informed that the advance train was going to stop for cars on the main track, and they, under the instructions of the court, may have construed the failure to communicate this fact to them as an act of negligence.

The ninth instruction assumes that plaintiff was injured, that he did it himself through fear and apprehension of danger. The eighth instruction assumed that defendant ran the rear train in close proximity to the other, and the seventeenth also assumed that he was injured. These assumptions in instructions are contrary to law and reversible error.

St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Rosenberry, 45 Ark. 256; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Robinson, 106 Ill. 142; Folk v. State, 38 Ark. 117; Montgomery v. Erwin, 24 Ark. 540; Atkins v. State, 16 Ark. 568; Floyd v. Ricks, 14 Ark. 286, 58 Am. Dec. 374; State Bank v. McGuire, 14 Ark. 530; Armistead v. Brooke, 18 Ark. 531.

The allegations in the complaint are for negligence in operating the rear train. The special findings are that it was not running at a dangerous rate of speed under the existing circumstances and that the engineer and conductor were keeping a proper lookout. This should have concluded the case, and judgment should have been rendered for defendant under these special findings.

Dun v. Seaboard & R. R. Co. (Va.) 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 333; Hogan v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (Wis.) 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 439; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Felton, 24 Ill. App. 376, 33 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 533. See also Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wallen, 65 Tex. 568, 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 219.

Messrs. L. Gregg and J. D. Walker, for appellee:

When a passenger by the wrongful or careless act of the company is required to choose between leaving the cars while they are moving slowly, or submitting to the inconvenience of being carried beyond the station where he desires to stop, the company is liable for the consequences of the choice, provided it is not exercised wantonly or unreasonably.

Filer v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 47, 10 Am. Rep. 327.

Where one is placed by the negligent acts of another in such a position that he is compelled to choose upon the instant, and in the face of grave and impending peril, between two hazards, and he makes such a choice as a person of ordinary prudence placed in the same situation might make, and injury results therefrom, the fact that if he had chosen the other hazard he would have escaped injury does not prove contributory negligence.

Troimley v. Central Park, N. & E. R. R. Co. 69 N. Y. 180; Jones v. Boyce, 1 Stark. 493; Stokes v. Saltontall, 38 U. S. 13 Pet. 181, 10 L. ed. 115; Buel v. New York Cent. R. Co. 31 N. Y. 814, 38 Am. Dec. 271.

If, through the negligence of the carrier, a passenger is placed in a situation of great peril, the attempt of the passenger to escape the danger, even by doing an act also dangerous, and from which injury results, is not necessarily an act of contributory negligence.

Wilson v. Northern Pac. R. Co. 26 Minn. 278; Filer v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 47, 10 Am. Rep. 327; 1 Suth. Damages, p. 68.

Testimony of declarations of injured party made to other parties was admissible.

Bridge v. Oakkosh, 71 Wis. 363; Kane v. Troy, 16 N. Y. S. R. 241; Atkinson, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Johns, 36 Kan. 769.

Battle, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Murray sued the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway Company for damages which were occasioned by the negligence of the company in operating its trains.

At the trial evidence was adduced tending to prove the following facts: On the 29th of November, 1897, plaintiff was a passenger on the defendant's train from Delaney to St. Paul. One and a half or two miles from St. Paul the train, immediately after it passed a curve in the road, stopped and remained standing for a short while. This was in the night. There were two red lights on the rear of the train. Plaintiff was in a coach, it being the last coach in the train, except one, which was a caboose. While the train was standing still another train was heard approaching from the rear on the same track. The conductor immediately went down the track about 20 feet, and with his lantern signaled to it to stop. About this time a passenger in the coach with plaintiff looked out of the window, and saw the locomotive of the approaching train, and halloed out to the passengers. "Here comes another train running into us," and said to them that they "had better get out." The plaintiff and other passengers, hearing and seeing the approaching locomotive, immediately and in haste left the train. In getting off plaintiff fell into a ditch and hurt one of his shoulders. The second train proved to be a locomotive and a caboose, and was running about 10 miles an hour, and stopped within about 80 feet of the passenger train. Two or three witnesses testified that the distance was 60 or 100 feet. For the damages suffered by plaintiff on account of his fall this action was brought.

Evidence tending to prove other facts was adduced, but sufficient has been stated for the purposes of this opinion.

One witness, who was a passenger on the train at the time the plaintiff was, was allowed to testify, over the objection of the defendant, as follows: "I got off the train, and I got off to avoid danger. . . . I have been working at business that requires me to ride on railroads much of my time for the last ten years, and from the circumstances I thought it prudent to get off the car." Murray was allowed to testify that a passenger on the same train said, as the locomotive and caboose approached, "Here comes another train running into us, and said we had better get out of there." Rivercomb testified that during the night on which plaintiff was hurt he assisted him in pulling off his coat, and on the next morning assisted him in putting it on, and that he complained of being hurt in the shoulder. C. M. Levissee testified that he was a brakeman on the second train, and as follows: "If we had had a train of loaded cars of the usual length, he could not have stopped the train so quick. An engine and caboose can be stopped sooner than a train of cars. The ordinary train of cars could not have been stopped in time to have prevented running into the train." To the foregoing testimony of Murray, Rivercomb, and Levissee, the defendant objected at the time it was introduced, and saved his exceptions.

The following instructions were given to the jury over the objections of the defendant:

"The burden is upon the plaintiff to show by a preponderance of evidence the truth of the allegations in his complaint.

"The main issues for your consideration are—First, did the plaintiff receive an injury? Second, was such injury occasioned or caused by the negligence, carelessness, or improper management of the defendant? Third, did the plaintiff by his own negligence contribute to the injury? Each of these propositions you are to determine from the evidence.

"If you should find that there was an injury received by the plaintiff, and that the same was caused by the negligence, carelessness, or improper management of the defendant, you will find for the plaintiff, unless you find also that the plaintiff by his negligence contributed to such injury. In case you should find that the plaintiff's negligence occasioned or contributed to such injury, (if any), you will find for the defendant.

"The mere fact that the plaintiff, through fear and apprehension of danger, did an act which was the immediate cause of injury to himself, is not of itself sufficient to authorize a finding for him; but to authorize such finding you must also find that the defendant was guilty of some act of negligence, carelessness, or improper management in running his train in close proximity to plaintiff, which was sufficient to create in the mind of a reasonable and prudent person such fear and apprehension.

"Should you find that the defendant was guilty of negligence, carelessness, or improper management, and that an injury to the plaintiff was occasioned thereby, you will consider then whether the plaintiff was himself guilty of contributory negligence.

"If you should find from the evidence that by the negligence of the defendant the plaintiff was put in a position of great peril, and in attempting to escape that peril he did an act also dangerous, from which an injury resulted to him, such act would not necessarily be an act of contributory negligence, such as would prevent him from a recovery for such injury.

"The test of contributory negligence, under such circumstances, is, Was his attempt an unreasonable, precipitate, or rash act, or was it an act which a person of ordinary prudence might do under the like existing circumstances?—and it is not to be determined by the result of the attempt to escape, nor by the result that would have followed had the attempt not been made.

"If you should find from the evidence that the plaintiff was carelessly, negligently, or improperly placed by the defendant in a position of danger while in the car of the defendant, by reason of the defendant running a locomotive and caboose in close proximity to the car in which the plaintiff was, (if he was in such car), then the plaintiff would have the right to judge of the danger in remaining in such car, as also the danger in attempting to escape, from the circumstances as they appeared to him, and not by the result; and if he, in making such an attempt to escape, used such care as a prudent man, under such circumstances, should have used, and in doing so received an injury, he should recover."

A verdict for $1,000 was returned in favor of plaintiff against the defendant; judgment was rendered accordingly; and, a motion for a new trial having been filed and overruled, the defendant appealed.

It is contended on the part of appellant that, if the train on which appellee was a passenger was standing still upon the track, and the engine and caboose approaching it from the rear were under full control of those in charge of them, and the persons in charge were keeping a proper lookout, and could have stopped them, at the rate of speed at which they were running, at any time, without collision, the appellee had no cause of action, notwithstanding he was frightened, and leaped from the train and injured himself. According to this contention, the appellant was not liable for damages to appellee if it was using every precaution to prevent a collision of its trains; and was under no obligations to avoid frightening him, and thereby causing him to do an act which might have resulted in injury; and would not have been liable, if appellee had reasonably believed he was in great danger of being killed by a collision, and in the exercise of ordinary prudence had leaped from the train in order to save his life, and thereby injured himself. In other words, it could have, with impunity, scared him to any extent, and forced him to make dangerous leaps to save his life, and thereby injure himself, provided the precaution it used was sufficient to prevent a collision, and the fact was the appellee would not have been hurt if he had remained on the train. But this is not true. Railroad companies, in the carriage of passengers, are required to use the utmost care and foresight, and are held responsible for the slightest negligence. The first and most important duty incumbent on them is to provide for the safety of their passengers. To this end they are required to provide all things necessary to their security reasonably consistent with their business, and "appropriate to the means of conveyance employed by them," and to exercise the highest degree of practicable care, diligence, and skill in the operation of their trains. Arkansas M. R. Co. v. Canman, 52 Ark. 517. If they recklessly, unskillfully, or negligently operate their trains, and thereby place their passengers in situations apparently so dangerous and hazardous as to create in the minds of the passengers reasonable apprehensions of peril and injury, and thereby excite alarm, and induce them to make efforts to escape, and in the attempt to escape they receive personal injuries, the railroad companies are responsible for damages. Jones v. Boyce, 1 Stark. 493; Stokes v. Saltonstall, 88 U. S. 13 Pet. 181, 10 L. ed. 115; Caswell v. Boston & W. R. Corp. 98 Mass. 194; Twombly v. Central Park, N. & E. R. R. Co. 69 N. Y. 158.

In order to render the railroad company liable for injuries received in an effort to escape an apprehended danger, there must have been a reasonable cause of alarm, occasioned by the negligence or misconduct of the company. If the effort of the passenger to escape resulted from a rash apprehension of danger which did not exist, and the injury which he sustained is to be attributed to rashness and imprudence, he is not entitled to recover. But if, on the other hand, he be placed, through the negligent or unskillful operation of its trains by the railroad company, in a situation apparently so perilous as to render it prudent for him to leap from the train, whereby he is injured, he will be entitled to recover damages, although he would not have been hurt if he had remained on the train.

On occasions where a passenger is suddenly confronted by imminent danger and peril, he cannot reasonably be expected to calculate chances, or to deliberate upon the means of escape, but must of necessity judge hastily of the danger in remaining where he is, as also of the danger in attempting to escape, by the circumstances as they, at the instant, appear to him, and not by the result. He acts upon the probabilities as they appear to him, and if he acts as a man of ordinary prudence, "placed in the same circumstances and under a like necessity of immediate action and decision," would have acted, and in so doing makes an effort to escape and is injured, the railroad company is responsible to him for his damages. See cases above cited and Wilson v. Northern Pac. R. Co. 26 Minn. 278.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Felton, 125 Ill. 458, and Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wallen, 65 Tex. 568, cited by appellant to sustain its contention, do not controvert the rule as we have stated it, but recognize it as correct. In the former case the plaintiff's intestate was a passenger on the defendant's train. He was going from Ottawa to Joliet, in Illinois. From Ottawa to Chicago the defendant used a double track, and trains going in the same direction, generally, used one track, and those going in the opposite direction used the other. At the time plaintiff's intestate was a passenger the tracks were covered with snow. The train on which he was riding ran into a snow-bank and stopped. At a point a short distance from where it stopped, and in the rear of it, the road curves. It was impossible for a person looking from the point where the snow-bank was, in the direction of the curve, to tell whether a car beyond the commencement of the curve was upon the one track or the other. While the train was stopped at the snow-bank, plaintiff's intestate, or looking back, saw an engine, with a snow-plow attached, approaching from the direction of the curve. About this time a fellow passenger remarked that it would run into the passenger train. One witness said, "It looked as if it was coming into the train." About the same time an engine in front of the passenger train gave sharp, quick whistles. Whereupon plaintiff's intestate became alarmed, and leaped from the car in which he was riding to the ground, and was fatally injured. This was about 8 o'clock in the morning. The passenger train was standing on one track, and the engine, with the snow-plow attached, approached running on the other. There was no collision, and the intestate would not have been hurt if he had remained in the car. Justice Scholfield, in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Since the right of recovery is here based upon the negligence of the defendant, it is not sufficient merely that plaintiff's intestate became alarmed by reason of appearances produced wholly or in part by the defendant; it must appear that that which produced the alarm, and through it the injury, was negligence of the defendant." Treating the signals given by the whistles as presenting the only question of negligence, he further said: "The burden is upon the plaintiff to prove this negligence, and that is not done by proof, alone, that a peculiar signal was given by an engine of the defendant, and that it caused or aggravated the alarm of the intestate. If the signal given was, under the circumstances, a proper one, it cannot have been negligence to give it."

In Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wallen, supra, "the plaintiff and his wife were passengers on a train on defendant's road, which stopped between two stations, and remained standing for about an hour. While the train was so standing another passenger called out, "Here comes a train right on us." Other passengers jumped to their feet and scrambled to get out of the car door. Plaintiff looked through the rear door and saw a freight train coming towards the passenger train, and about 800 or 400 yards off. . . . He called to his wife, and both ran to the car platform and jumped to the ground. His wife was seriously injured. The freight train stopped 100 yards in the rear of the passenger train. The court said: "The defendant neither caused nor contributed to the injury of plaintiff's wife, unless it allowed the freight train to come so near to or so rapidly towards the passenger-coach as to frighten the passenger. It does not appear from the testimony that a single one of those who leaped from the train, except the plaintiff, saw the freight train coming. When plaintiff saw it, it was 300 or 400 yards distant, and, as he says, appeared to be moving rapidly. He does not state that he supposed from what he saw there would have been a collision. No one left the train upon his own perception of danger. . . . The statement of facts develops no cause whatever for the panic which seized some of those in the cars, except the remark of some one that 'the freight train is upon us.'

. . . . The plaintiff's wife may have done only what a prudent person would have done under the same circumstances, and the defendant still not be liable. If a ruffian had commenced the discharge of a revolver in the cars, it would be prudent for the people to get out, but the carrier would not be liable unless he had committed some fault. The ruffian could be held, as could a passenger who in brutal sport raises a false alarm and causes damage. . . . We can find, in the statement of facts in the record here, no proof that the defendant was guilty of any act of negligence contributing to the injury of plaintiff's wife."

The instructions which were asked by the plaintiff and given by the court, and are set out in this opinion, were substantially correct. They fairly submitted to the jury the question of fact upon the decision of which the plaintiff's right of recovery depended.

The testimony of the witness, to the effect that he thought it was prudent to get off the train, and that he left it for the purpose of avoiding danger, and the testimony of another, that a fellow passenger said, "Here comes another train running into us, and said we had better get out of there," and of Levises, were admissible for the purpose of showing in some degree how the situation of appellee appeared to him and his fellow passengers at the time he leaped from the train and was hurt, and that in doing so he acted as a man of ordinary prudence would have acted under the same circumstances. The testimony as to Rivercomb assisting appellee in pulling off and putting on his coat, and appellee complaining of being hurt in the shoulder, was not admissible as a part of the res gesta, but was admissible to show the existence of present pain and injury in the shoulder. And whether this action and complaint as to injury in the shoulder were real or feigned was for the jury to determine. Travelers Ins. Co. of Chicago v. Mosley, 75 U. S. 8 Wall. 397, 405, 407, 19 L. ed. 437, 440; Bridge v. Oshkosh, 67 Wis. 195; Bacon v. Charlton, 7 Cush. 586; Barber v. Merriam, 11 Allen, 822, 824; Hatch v. Fuller, 181 Mass. 574; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Johns, 36 Kan. 769, and cases cited; Bridge v. Oshkosh, 71 Wis. 868; 1 Greenl. Ev. 14th ed. § 102.

Appellant contends that the verdict of the jury was against the decided preponderance of evidence, was not sustained by sufficient evidence, and should be set aside. If such was the case, the circuit court had the right and should have set aside and granted a new trial. But the judge, who was present and saw and heard the witnesses testify, and heard the testimony as it was heard by the jury, and ought to be a better judge of the credibility of witnesses and the weight of the testimony than we, considering it as it appears on paper, can be, it seems, did not think as appellant contends. But, be this as it may, it is not necessary for 'us to approve the verdict. There was evidence to sustain it, and according to the rules which govern this court, we cannot disturb the same.

Judgment affirmed.

NEBRASKA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Nebraska, ex rel. George H. HASTINGS, Attorney-General,

v.

Howard B. SMITH.

(.....Neb.....)

*1. The Act approved April 9, 1891, by which section 145, chap. 12, Comp. Stat. 1889, (charter of the city of Omaha,) was so amended as to provide for the appointment as fire and police commissioners of said city of members of the three parties casting the largest vote at the last election, does not take effect until the expiration of the terms of office of the two commissioners who were appointed May, 1890.

*2. The general provision in section 172 of the charter of the city of Omaha for the removal of officers of the city by the district court does not apply to members of the board of fire and police commissioners.

*Head notes by POST, J.

NOTE.—As to the right to remove officers summarily, see Trainer v. Wayne County Auditors, 15 L. R. A. 96, and note, 89 Mich. 162.
16 L. R. A.

3. The provision of section 12, art. 5, of the Constitution, empowering the governor to remove all officers appointed by him, applies only to officers mentioned in the Constitution.

4. Where by law there is no fixed term of office, and the incumbent holds during the pleasure of the appointing power, the power of removal is discretionary, and may be exercised without notice or hearing.

5. Where the incumbent is elected or appointed for a definite term, and is removable only for specified cause, the power of removal cannot be exercised until there have been preferred against him specific charges, of which he shall have notice, and an opportunity afforded him to be heard in his defense.

6. By the charter of the city of Omaha the governor is authorized to remove members of the board of fire and police commissioners only for the cause therein named, viz., official misconduct, and upon charges specifying the particular act or acts to be proved, and an opportunity to be heard in their own defense.

7. The question whether the power to remove is judicial, in the sense that the officers named are entitled to have the question of cause therefor heard by the courts, and, if not, whether the action of the executive can be reviewed by the courts, is not raised in this case, and is not determined.

(June 11, 1892.)

PETITION for a writ of mandamus to compel respondent to surrender the office of Fire and Police Commissioner of the City of Omaha to one who had been appointed by the governor as his successor in office. On demurrer to answer. Demurrer overruled.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. George H. Hastings, Atty-Gen., V. O. Strickler, J. W. Edgerton, and Charles Ogden, for relator:

As to the power of the Legislature to abolish offices, see—

People v. Haskell, 5 Cal. 357; Davis v. State, 7 Md. 151, 61 Am. Dec. 381; People v. Bancard, 27 Cal. 470; Taft v. Adams, 3 Gray, 126; People v. Auditor of Public Accounts, 2 Ill. 537; Conner v. New York, 2 Sandf. 855; Territory v. Pyle, 1 Or. 140; Coffin v. State, 7 Ind. 167; Walker v. Peelle, 18 Ind. 264; Benford v. Gibson, 15 Ala. 521; Bryan v. Cattell, 15 Iowa, 538.

Messrs. Lake, Hamilton & Maxwell, for respondent:

The source of the governor's power to remove is to be found in the section of the statute under which the board was originally created. That section provided as follows: "For official misconduct the governor may remove any of said commissioners," etc. This limits the power of the governor to remove to one cause only, to wit: "Official misconduct."

Section 2475 of the same charter expresses the legislative will not only as to the persons who shall determine the existence of such official misconduct but as to the manner in which and the procedure by which it shall be determined. By that section the inquiry is made one for the courts.

The argument of the relator is in effect this: that the governor is the sole and final judge of whether or not a cause, whatever it may be, exists and that, in reaching a conclusion as to the existence or nonexistence of a cause, he may act without any charges being filed against the officer, may decide without an investigation, or upon an ex parte investigation, and may then defend his decision upon the ground that the judicial department of the state cannot inquire into or question his decision, citing Wilcox v. People, 90 Ill. 186; State v. McGarry, 21 Wis. 499; Eckloff v. District of Columbia, 135 U. S. 240, 34 L. ed. 120; Keenan v. Perry, 24 Tex. 253; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 52; Wright v. Defrees, 8 Ind. 298; State v. Doherty, 25 La. Ann. 119, 18 Am. Rep. 181; Atty-Gen. v. Brown, 1 Wis. 513; People v. Stout, 19 How. Pr. 171; Territory v. Coz, 6 Dak. 501; State v. Oleson, 15 Neb. 247,—none of which it is believed are conclusive of this case.

Neither under section 12 of article 5 of the Constitution, nor under section 2448 of the Act Governing Metropolitan Cities can the governor of the state determine the existence of one of the causes for removal specified in said section 12 or said section 2448, but that such determination is a judicial question and must be determined by the judicial department of the state.

Page v. Hardin, 8 B. Mon. 648; Honey v. Graham, 89 Tex. 1; State v. Pritchard, 36 N. J. L. 101; State v. Harrison, 13 West. Rep. 870, 118 Ind. 434; People v. Stuart, 74 Mich. 411.

The governor of the state cannot remove one of the fire and police commissioners of the city of Omaha until each of these three conditions have been complied with, to wit: (1) Specific charges must be made; (2) notice of such charges must be given to the commissioner; (3) an opportunity must be furnished the commissioner to be heard in his own defense.

Const. art. 1, §§ 8, 13, 24, art. 2, § 1, art. 6, § 1; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 250; Com. v. Stifer, 25 Pa. 23, 64 Am. Dec. 630; State v. Seay, 64 Mo. 89; Hogan v. Carberry, 4 Cin. L. Bull. 118; State v. Hawkins, 3 West. Rep. 125, 44 Ohio St. 98; Dullam v. Willson, 53 Mich. 392; Ham v. Boston, 2 New Eng. Rep. 642, 142 Mass. 90; State v. St. Louis, 6 West. Rep. 464, 90 Mo. 19; Denver Board of Aldermen v. Darrow, 13 Colo. 460; Biggs v. McBride, 17 Or. 640; Hallgren v. Campbell, 9 L. R. A. 408, 82 Mich. 255.

Post, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an original proceeding by the attorney-general against the respondent for the purpose of testing the title of the latter to the office of member of the board of fire and police commissioners of the city of Omaha. The material parts of the petition is as follows: "That on or about the 2d day of May, 1890, Howard B. Smith, respondent herein, was appointed by the Hon. John M. Thayer, who was at that time governor of the state of Nebraska, as a member of the board of fire and police commissioners of the city of Omaha, and thereupon entered into said office, and continued to occupy said office, and to exercise the duties thereof, until the 28d day of February, 1892. On the said 28d of February, 1892, the Hon. James E. Boyd, who was then and is now the governor of the state of Nebraska, by virtue of the authority vested in him by the Constitution and laws of the state of Nebraska, removed the respondent for cause from said office of fire and police commissioner of the city of Omaha. That on the 28d day of February, 1892, D. Clem Deaver was duly appointed and commissioned by the Hon. James E. Boyd, governor as aforesaid, a member of the board of fire and police commissioners of the city of Omaha, to succeed Howard B. Smith, respondent. That he accepted said appointment, and immediately took the oath of office, and filed with the city clerk of the city of Omaha a good and sufficient bond, as required by law, and claims the right to exercise the duties and to enjoy the privileges of said office. Notwithstanding the appointment of said D. Clem Deaver to said office, said Howard B. Smith, respondent, did on the 28d day of February, 1892, and has continuously since that time, without any legal warrant, claim or right, used and exercised, and still does unlawfully use and exercise, the office of fire and police commissioner in the city of Omaha, in place of said Deaver, and claims to be a member of said board of fire and police commissioners in place of Deaver, and to have, use, or employ all the rights, privileges, and franchises of said office, to the damage and prejudice to the rights of said city of Omaha, and also against the peace of the state of Nebraska. That the said Deaver is a member of the Independent party, one of the three political parties casting the highest number of votes at the municipal election held in the city of Omaha in December, 1890. That prior to the appointment of said Deaver on the 28d day of February, 1892, as aforesaid, no member of the Independent party had been appointed as a member of the board of fire and police commissioners of the city of Omaha, as required by law, and that said Deaver is the only member of said board appointed who belongs to said party. Said relator, therefore, prays judgment that the respondent be declared not entitled to said office, and that he be ousted therefrom, and that D. Clem Deaver be declared entitled to said office, and installed therein, to assume the execution of the duties thereof."

The answer, omitting formal and immaterial parts, is as follows: "That in the month of May, 1887, the Hon. John M. Thayer, governor of the state of Nebraska, appointed Christian Hartman, George I. Gilbert, L. M. Bennet, and this respondent fire and police commissioners of the city of Omaha. That said Hartman and Gilbert were reputed to be and were members of one political party, to wit, of the Democratic party, and said Bennet and Smith of a different political party, to wit, of the Republican party. That said Hartman and Bennet were appointed to serve for the term of four years. That said Gilbert and this respondent were appointed to serve for the term of two years. That all of said appointees duly qualified and entered upon the discharge of their duties as such commissioners, and continued in the discharge of their duties until the month of May, 1889. That in said month of May, 1889, George I. Gilbert and this respondent were reappointed and duly commissioned by the Hon. John M. Thayer, governor of the state of Nebraska, to serve for a term of four years thereafter. That said Gilbert and this respondent duly qualified and entered upon the discharge of their duties as fire and police commissioners of the city of Omaha, and have continued in the discharge of said duties down to the present time. That respondent's term of office does not expire until May 16, 1893. That in the month of May, 1891, the Hon. John M. Thayer, governor of the state of Nebraska, reappointed and commissioned Christian Hartman as fire and police commissioner of the city of Omaha for a term of four years, and appointed and commissioned Wm. Coburn, a member of the Republican party, for the term of four years, to succeed L. M. Bennet. That said Hartman and Coburn duly qualified and entered upon the discharge of their duties as fire and police commissioners of the city of Omaha, and have continued in the discharge thereof since said time. That on the 28d day of February, 1892, the Hon. James E. Boyd, governor as aforesaid, without authority of law, and without cause therefor, assumed to remove this respondent from his said office of fire and police commissioner of the city of Omaha. That on and before said day there were no charges of any name or nature, or of any description, against this respondent filed in the office of the governor of the state of Nebraska, or in the office of any other officer of the state of Nebraska, or of the city of Omaha. That notwithstanding the absence of any cause for such action, and notwithstanding the provisions of the Constitution and statutes of Nebraska, said Boyd, on said 28d day of February, 1892, without any notice given his respondent, and without giving this respondent any opportunity to be heard, wrote this respondent the following letter: 'State of Nebraska, Executive Department. Lincoln, February 28, 1892. Howard B. Smith, Esq., Omaha, Nebr.—Dear Sir: In accordance with the Constitution and laws of the state of Nebraska, you are hereby notified that I have this day removed you, for cause, from the office of fire and police commissioner for the city of Omaha, and have declared said office vacant. Yours, truly, James E. Boyd, Governor.'—and then and thereby assumed to remove this respondent arbitrarily from his said office. That letters of like import were also sent to said Gilbert and Hartman and Coburn. That thereupon said Boyd assumed, without authority of law, to reappoint, on the 28d day of February, 1892, said Coburn to succeed himself, and to appoint one George W. Shields to succeed said George I. Gilbert, and to appoint one C. V. Gallagher to succeed Christian Hartman, and to appoint D. Clem Deaver to succeed this respondent."

To this answer a general demurrer has been filed by the state, thus presenting the real question involved, viz., the power of the governor, under the charter of the city of Omaha, to remove members of the board of fire and police commissioners for cause other than official misconduct, or for the cause named, without charges and an opportunity to be heard in their own defense. The office in controversy was created by provision of the Act approved March 30, 1887, entitled "An Act Incorporating Metropolitan Cities, and Defining, Regulating, and Prescribing Their Duties, Powers, and Government," which, for convenience, will be referred to as the charter of the city of Omaha. Section 145 of said charter, as enacted, so far as material to the question under consideration, is as follows: "In each city of the metropolitan class there shall be a board of fire and police, to consist of the mayor (who shall be ex officio chairman of said board) and four electors of said city, to be appointed by the governor. The governor shall appoint, as the commissioners above, four citizens, not more than two of whom shall be of the same political party; two of them, of different political party faith and allegiance, shall be designated in their appointment to serve for two years, and the other two, also of different political party faith, shall be designated to serve for four years. And thereafter, at the expiration of said term, and each period of two years, the governor shall appoint two members of said board. For official misconduct the governor may remove any of said commissioners; and all vacancies in said board, by death, resignation, or removal, shall be filled by the governor for the unexpired term; and all vacancies, from whatever cause, shall be so filled that not more than two of the members of the said board shall be of the same political party, or so reputed. All powers and duties connected with and incident to the appointment, removal, government, and discipline of the officers and members of the fire and police departments of the city, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by ordinance, shall be vested in and exercised by said board."

In 1891 this section was amended so as to provide that at least one of the members of said board shall belong to each of the three political parties casting the largest vote for city officers at the last preceding election. It is provided, however, by the section as amended, that "the terms and powers of the members of said board heretofore appointed by the governor of the state shall not be affected or changed by any amendments hereto." If we understand the position of counsel for the state, they claim that this proviso was intended to have a prospective effect only; that the amendment took effect immediately upon its approval, without exception or reservation in favor of the members of the board as then constituted; that it should be construed, not as exempting the then members of the board from its operation, but as a limitation upon the power of future legislatures. The evident purpose of the provision for commissioners from the different parties is to remove the police department of the greatest city of our state from the influence of partisan politics. This object is one to be commended, certainly, and to which the courts will give effect when possible without violating the recognized rules of construction. The wisdom of a division of the powers and responsibilities of the board between the three parties will not be called in question. For the purpose of this case, we will assume that the Legislature has power to authorize the removal of the respondent or any member of the board in order to give place thereon to a representative of the Independent party. It is plain to us, however, that they have not done so. "Construction," as defined by Dr. Leibner, is the "drawing of conclusions respecting subjects that lie beyond the direct expression of the text,—conclusions that are without the spirit, but not the letter, of the text." Tested by this definition, the language of the amendatory Act leaves no room for construction. Respondent was appointed in May, 1889, for the term of four years. He was in office when the amendment took effect, in 1891, and his term, in the language of the Act, is not "affected or changed" thereby.

The solution of the next question presented is attended with greater difficulty, viz., Are the provisions of the charter relating to the removal of members of the board of fire and police commissioners of the city of Omaha in conflict with the provisions of the Constitution upon the subject? The constitutional provisions upon the subject are found in sections 10, 11, and 12 of article 5, entitled "Executive Department," as follows: "Sec. 10. The governor shall nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the senate (expressed by a majority of all the senators elected voting, by yeas and nays), appoint, all officers whose offices are established by this constitution, or which may be created by law, and whose appointment or election is not otherwise by law or herein provided for; and no such officer shall be appointed or elected by the Legislature. Sec. 11. In case of a vacancy during the recess of the Senate, in any office which is not elective, the governor shall make a temporary appointment until the next meeting of the Senate, when he shall nominate some person to fill such office; and any person so nominated, who is confirmed by the Senate (a majority of all the senators elected concurring by voting yeas and nays), shall hold his office during the remainder of the term, and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified. Sec. 12. The governor shall have power to remove any officer whom he may appoint, in case of incompetency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office; and he may declare his office vacant, and fill the same, as herein provided in other cases of vacancy."

It is claimed, on one hand, that the provision of section 12 is applicable to all officers appointed by the governor regardless of their character, and is therefore a limitation upon the power of the Legislature; while, on the other hand, it is contended that it can have application only to officers named in or contemplated by the Constitution. The case of Wilcox v. People, 90 Ill. 186, relied upon by counsel for the state, is in many respects similar to this, and calls for especial notice in this connection. In 1869 an Act was passed incorporating the West Chicago Park Commissioners. The members thereof were appointed by the governor for the term of seven years. They were given power, among other things, to lay out, govern, and manage parks; to pass ordinances for the government of the same; to levy special assessments upon property to be benefited; and to possess in that regard all the power then possessed by the city of Chicago in respect to public squares; to acquire property for said purpose by condemnation or otherwise, etc. The Act further provides that the members thereof might be removed by the circuit court after trial and conviction, upon sworn charges, etc. In 1870 the present Constitution of that state was adopted, and which includes the provisions for appointment and removal by the governor, from which ours appears to have been copied. In 1877 the governor removed the relator, Wilcox, and other members of said board for incompetency. In determining the question of his power under the Constitution to remove officers, the supreme court held—(1) That the commissioners named were "officers," within the meaning of the Constitution,—not mere municipal officers, but agencies of the state at large,—although their functions were to be performed within the town of West Chicago. (2) The effect of the Constitution was to make the power of removal by the governor coextensive with his power of appointment. (3) The prior Act for removal of the commissioners by the court after trial, etc., was in conflict with the Constitution, and was superseded thereby. (4) Since the Constitution had invested the governor with power to remove officers, but was silent as to the mode of its exercise, he might determine for himself whether any of the statutory causes therefor existed, and that his discretion when exercised is final and binding upon the courts. That case, although decided subsequent to the adoption of our Constitution in 1875, is entitled to a careful consideration in placing a construction upon it. It may be said to be an elementary rule of construction that whenever a legislative Act can be so construed as to avoid a conflict with the Constitution, and give it the force of law, it will be so construed, although such construction may not be the most obvious or natural one. Cooley, Const. Lim. 184; Pleuler v. State, 11 Neb. 547.

Another recognized rule of construction is that constitutional limitations upon the power of the Legislature in respect to offices will be confined to those offices which are specially enumerated in the Constitution, unless the contrary clearly appears therefrom. All others may be abolished, or the terms, functions, and emoluments thereof changed by law. This rule is fully sustained by the authorities cited by relator. Contemporaneous constructions by the Legislature of the constitutional provisions quoted indicate that they were understood from the adoption of the Constitution to apply only to offices named therein. For instance, the first Legislature elected under the Constitution, in 1877, provided for a commission to revise the laws of the state to be appointed by the governor without the consent of the Senate. In 1879 the Legislature created what is known as the "fish commission," the members of which were to be appointed by the governor with the consent of the Senate. In 1883 the Legislature authorized the governor to appoint a superintendent, etc., for the hospital for the insane without the consent of the Senate. In 1885 the governor was authorized to appoint a superintendent of the census, also an inspector of bees and honey in each county, without the consent of the Senate, and a live-stock commission, to be confirmed by the Senate. These and many other acts which might be cited as showing the understanding of the different Legislatures that the constitutional provisions in question were to have no application to offices created by law. We are unable to believe, when viewed in the light of twelve years of legislative and judicial history under the Constitution, that it was ever intended as a restriction upon the power of the Legislature over officers not within the contemplation of the men who framed it, or of the people who adopted it. Police commissioners of Omaha are in one sense state officers, since they are charged with a duty in the interest of the public at large. But so far as their appointment, government, and removal were concerned, at the time of the adoption of the Constitution they were essentially municipal agents, and not state officers. To our minds, therefore, to hold that such officers are within the constitutional prohibition is neither a necessary nor reasonable construction thereof.

There is still a more cogent objection to the decision in Wilcox v. People, viz., it is in conflict with the course of decisions in this state. In State v. Searey, 22 Neb. 454, it was, in effect, held that the constitutional provisions in question did not apply to these particular officers; hence it was not essential to a valid appointment that it should be with the consent of the Senate. The case of Douglas County v. Tim- me (Neb.), 49 N. W. Rep. 266, we regard as decisive of the question. The provision under consideration in that case was section 16, art. 8, of the Constitution, which in terms provides that the compensation of no public officer shall be increased or diminished during his term of office. It was held that the above provision applies only to offices created by the Constitution. The foregoing conclusion is in harmony with State v. Kalb, 50 Wis. 176, cited in the opinion of the present chief justice. The reason of the courts in the cases named must control in this.

We come now to an examination of some of the provisions of the charter of the city bearing upon the question at issue. In addition to the provision for removal of fire and police commissioners in section 145, it is provided by section 172 as follows: "Sec. 172. Removal from Office. The power to remove from his office the mayor, or any councilman or other officer mentioned in this Act, in any city of the metropolitan class, for good and sufficient cause, is hereby conferred upon the district court for the county in which such city is situated; and whenever any two of the city councilmen shall make and file with the clerk of said court the proper charges and specifications against the mayor, alleging and showing that he is guilty of malfeasance or misfeasance as such officer, or that he is incompetent, or neglects any of his duties as mayor, or that for any other good and sufficient cause stated he should be removed from his office as mayor; or whenever the mayor shall make and file with the clerk of said court the proper charges and specifications against any councilman or other officer mentioned in this Act, alleging and showing that he is guilty of malfeasance or misfeasance in such office, or that he is incompetent, or neglects any of his duties, or that for any other good and sufficient cause stated he should be removed from his office,—the judge of such court may issue the proper writ, requiring such officer to appear before him, on a day therein named, not more than ten days after the service of such writ, together with a copy of such charges and specifications upon such officer, to show cause why he should not be removed from his office. The proceedings in such case shall take precedence of all civil cases, and be conducted according to the rules of such court in such causes made and provided, and such officer may be suspended from the duties of his office during the pendency of such proceedings by order of said court."

It is urged by counsel for respondent that the above provision should be construed as a limitation upon the powers of the governor, and that he is authorized to remove the officer above named only upon a trial and finding by the district court. To this proposition we cannot assent. The governor is by section 145 empowered to remove these particular officers for a specific cause. This special provision will prevail rather than the general provision for the removal of officers of the city. The question, however, to which most prominence is given by counsel, is that of the power of the governor to remove without giving the officer an opportunity to be heard in his defense. It is claimed by relator that the removal of an officer is a purely executive act, and therefore the governor may remove without charges, serving notice, or hearing of any kind. Before referring to the contention of the respondent, we will examine some of the authorities relied upon by the relator in addition to Wilcox v. People, supra.

State v. McGarry, 21 Wis. 505, is substantially as follows: The county board were, by a special provision, applicable to M county only, authorized to remove the inspector of the house of correction for incompetency, improper conduct, or other cause satisfactory to the board, which cause should be particularly assigned in writing, and entered upon the minutes of the board, with the yeas and nays, upon a vote of removal. It was held that the board might remove ex parte, without notice or a hearing of any kind. Chief Justice Dixon in the opinion of the court says: "The only question of judicial cognizance is whether the board has kept within the jurisdiction, or whether the cause assigned is a cause for removal under the statute."

In Keenan v. Perry, 24 Tex. 253, the plaintiff was removed by the governor as superintendent of the asylum for the insane. The law provided for his removal for incompetency, misconduct, and refusal to discharge the duties of his office. It was held that the law invested the governor with exclusive power to remove, and that his action was final and conclusive. This case, however, appears to be inconsistent with a later case in the same court, which will be noticed hereafter.

In Bright v. Defrees, 8 Ind. 298, it was held that the power of the executive to remove an officer for a given cause implies power to judge of the existence of such cause, and the power, being vested exclusively in the executive, cannot be controlled in its exercise by any other branch of the government.

In State v. Doherty, 25 La. Ann. 119, 18 Am. Rep. 181, the same reasoning is used as in the last case, with the same conclusion.

In Atty-Gen. v. Brown, 1 Wis. 442, it is held that where the law authorizes the removal of an officer for cause or upon notice, in the absence of express authority for an appeal or review, the courts have no authority to inquire into the grounds for removal. But in that case the governor was expressly authorized to remove the commissioner when he should believe that the best interest of the state demanded such removal.

In People v. Stout, 19 How. Pr. 171, the term of office was not fixed by law, and the mayor was authorized to remove with the consent of the board of aldermen.

In Territory v. Cox, 6 Dak. 501, there is an able and exhaustive discussion of the character of the power of the executive to remove officers, concluding with the opinion that it is purely executive, and in no sense judicial. The judgment of the court is, however, placed upon the statute which provides for an examination of the accounts of all public officers charged with the disbursement of public money. The examiner is required to report to the governor any failure of duty by financial officers when he (the governor) is authorized in his discretion to take such action for the public security as the exigencies of the case demanded. It was held that the executive had authority, in his discretion, to remove the trustees of an asylum for the insane upon the report of an examination of their accounts by the public examiner.

In Eckloff v. District of Columbia, 135 U. S. 240, 34 L. ed. 120, the commissioners by statute had power to abolish any office, reduce the number of employes, remove from office, etc. The only contention in that case was that the unrestricted right above was subject to the limitation of a prior Act of Congress, but the court held that the prior Act had been superseded by the law first above mentioned. It is contended, on the other hand, that the governor has no power, under the charter of the city, to remove the respondent without—first, specific charges; second, notice of such charges; third, an opportunity to be heard in his own defense. Sustaining this proposition are two classes of authorities, as will be hereafter noticed,—one class holding that the determination of the existence of cause for removal is a function of the judiciary, and that, as a condition to removal by the executive, the incumbent is entitled to have the question determined by the courts. The others hold that the executive is possessed of limited judicial functions, and that he has power to determine upon a hearing the question of cause for removal.

In Paye v. Hardin, 8 B. Mon. 648, the Constitution of Kentucky provided that the secretary of state should hold office during the term of the governor, if he so long behave himself well. The governor, by an instrument in due form, declared that the secretary appointed was guilty of willful neglect, and refusal to live at the seat of government, and perform his duties as secretary, had abandoned the said office, and, in the judgment of the governor, the said office had become vacant for causes aforesaid. The successor appointed was held not entitled to the office. The court says: "The secretary being removable for breach of good behavior only, the ascertainment of the breach must precede the removal. In other words, the officer must be convicted of misbehavior in office. And we shall not argue to prove that, in a government of laws, a conviction whereby an individual may be deprived of valuable rights and interests, and may, moreover, be seriously affected in his good fame and standing, implies a charge and trial and judgment, with the opportunity of defense and proof."

In Honey v. Graham, 39 Tex. 1, the governor, during the absence from the state of the defendant, issued a proclamation declaring his office of treasurer vacant, and in an action to determine his title to the office it was held that the action of the governor was void. The court says: "The power of the governor to fill a vacancy, whenever one exists, is not disputed. The power to create a vacancy is denied by every authority, except where the office is filled by the governor's choice of an incumbent, without concurrence of the Senate or election by the people, and the term of office is undefined by law."

In State v. Pritchard, 86 N. J. L. 101, the police commissioners of Jersey City had been convicted of malfeasance in office, whereupon the governor declared their offices vacant.

This Act was held to be void, on the ground that the right to remove an officer for misbehavior calls for the exercise of judicial functions. Chief Justice Beasley in the opinion, in which he refers with approval to Page v. Hardin, supra, says: "Indeed, among all other cases that I have examined, I find no exemplification of the exercise of such an act of authority. On the contrary, it seems to me quite clear that the removal of an officer, holding for a definite term, by the sovereign mero motu, on the plea of misbehavior, would have been a plain usurpation. I can find nowhere any traces of such a right having been claimed."

In Com. v. Stifer, 25 Pa. 23, 64 Am. Dec. 460, it is said: "We are unwilling to believe that the governor intended, without cause, to remove an officer appointed for a term of years, before the term had expired. That he possessed the power of removal is conceded, but the power is to be exercised upon cause shown. It exists only where 'the officer fails and neglects faithfully to perform the duties of his office.' It is true that the executive is made the judge, and that his opinion or judgment is conclusive, so far as relates to the question of removal. But that judgment is not to be pronounced without notice, without any charge or specification, and without any opportunity given to the officer to make his defense. The reputation and the right of the incumbent to the office for the term specified in his commission are involved, and he has a right to know the accusation, and to be heard in his defense."

The case of Dullam v. Willson, 53 Mich. 392, is strikingly similar to this in all essential respects. By the Constitution of that state the governor is authorized to remove from office any officer for gross neglect of duty, or for corrupt conduct in office, or for any other misfeasance or malfeasance. The notice of removal in that case is as follows: "Executive Office, Lansing, July 2, 1888. To Jas. C. Willson—Sir: I have this day, for your official misconduct and habitual neglect of duty, removed you from the office of trustee of the Michigan Institute for the Deaf and Dumb. . . . Respectfully, J. W. Begole." The court, in passing upon the power to thus remove, held that the authority conferred upon the governor to remove officers can only be exercised upon charges which shall specify the particular act relied upon to make out the cause alleged, of which the incumbent shall have notice, and a reasonable opportunity for a hearing thereon, at which he may produce proofs. Judges Champlin and Campbell filed carefully prepared opinions, in which they cite the authorities bearing upon the subject in this country and England, the former of whom concludes as follows: "I have examined carefully the authorities cited upon the brief of the learned counsel for relator in support of the position that no notice is required to be given, and that the action of the executive is final and conclusive. It is sufficient to say, without commenting specially upon them, that the reasoning of those cases does not commend itself to my judgment. They appear to me to be opposed, not only to the decided weight of authority, but also to the fundamental principles of justice."

16 L. R. A.

In Hallgren v. Campbell, 82 Mich. 255, 9 L. R. A. 408, it is said: "We have not found any case where an officer who was appointed for a fixed term (and when the power of removal was not expressly declared by law to be discretionary) has been held to be removable except for cause, and, wherever cause must be assigned for the removal of an officer, he is entitled to notice and a chance to defend."

In Ham v. Boston, 142 Mass. 90, 2 New Eng. Rep. 642, the board of police were authorized to remove for cause. It was held that they had no power to remove until after notice and an opportunity by the official in question to be heard in his own defense.

In State v. St. Louis, 90 Mo. 19, 6 West. Rep. 464, the statute authorized the removal of any elected officer of the city of St. Louis for cause. The court says: "When the removal is not discretionary, but must be for cause, as is the case here, and nothing is said as to the procedure, a specification of the charges, notice, and an opportunity to be heard are essential. This, we think, is the result of the authorities before cited. The proceedings in this case are wanting in all these requisites; for if, indeed, any charges were ever made against the relator at all, they were the product of the minds of the members of this committee, and by them kept from the knowledge of the accused."

In 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp., 4th ed. § 250, the author says that, where the right of removal is confined to specific causes, such power cannot be exercised until there have been formulated charges against the officer, notice thereof, and an opportunity for defense.

The following cases also support the principle of the foregoing: Biggs v. McBride, 17 Or. 640; State v. Hawkins, 44 Ohio St. 98, 8 West. Rep. 125; Hogan v. Carberry, 4 Cin. L. Bull. 118. It seems plain to us that the doctrine of these cases is in accord with the weight of authority, and is supported by the soundest reasons. The tendency of current opinion is strongly in the direction of fixed and definite terms of office, and in favor of making the office holder, so far as practicable without impairing the public service, independent of the appointing power. It is in obedience to a settled public conviction upon the subject that Congress annually appropriates large sums of money to accomplish reforms in the civil service of the general government. It is this sentiment that is expressed in procuring the charter of the city of Omaha under consideration. The purpose of the Legislature in adopting the provision under consideration was twofold: First, as has been said, to provide an efficient police department for a great city by removing it from the influence of local politics; second, to provide against the effects of fluctuation in state politics by fixed terms for the police commissioners to be removed for specific causes only. Without further elaboration, our conclusion is that the charter of the city of Omaha does not authorize the removal of the fire and police commissioners thereof except for official misconduct, nor until they have been notified of the particular act or acts of misconduct with which they are charged, and an opportunity has been afforded them to be heard in their own defense. The questions whether the power of removal is judicial, in the sense that the officers aforesaid are entitled to have the question of cause for removal submitted to the courts for determination, and, if not, whether the courts have jurisdiction to review the action of the governor, are not raised by the record, and are not determined. Since the answer states a complete defense, it follows that the demurrer thereto should be overruled.

The other Judges concur.

RHODE ISLAND SUPREME COURT.

John ALLEN and Wife

v.
Owen KEELY.

(.....R. L.....)

A landlord can forcibly eject a tenant without legal possession after the expiration of the tenancy although he holds possession in good faith under a color and reasonable claim of right.

(June 4, 1892.)

PETITION by defendant for new trial of an action brought to recover damages for alleged assault and battery in forcibly ejecting plaintiffs from certain real estate in which a verdict had been returned in plaintiffs' favor. Granted.

The case is stated in the opinion.

Messrs. George J. West and John Palmer for defendant in support of the petition.

Mr. John M. Brennan for plaintiffs, contra.

NOTE.—Liability of landlord to tenant for forcible expulsion after termination of tenancy.

In England.

It will be seen that the English rule has been unstable.

A landlord is not liable in trespass quare clausum for forcibly breaking into and resuming possession of premises after the tenant's right to possession thereof has terminated. Turner v. Meymott, 1 Bing. 158.

A vis prius ruling in Hillary v. Gay, 6 Car. & P. 284, is to the effect that the landlord has no right to forcibly enter and eject his tenant after the tenancy has terminated, and this is regarded as the doctrine of Newton v. Harland, 1 Man. & G. 644, where it was held that if a landlord after the expiration of the term enter upon the premises with such force as is prohibited by the statute against forcible entry and detainer, an assault committed in ejecting the tenant is not justifiable. Newton v. Harland, supra.

Cresswell, J., in Davis v. Burrell, 10 C. B. 821, says that the doctrine of Newton v. Harland, supra, "has been very much questioned;" and it is said in Blades v. Higgs, 10 C. B. N. S. 718, to have been overruled by Harvey v. Brydges, 14 Mees. & W. 442.

The rule established by Turner v. Meymott, supra, was followed in Pollen v. Brewer, 7 C. B. N. S. 871.

In Beddall v. Maitland, L. R. 17 Ch. Div. 174, 189, Newton v. Harland is said to have established that there is a cause of action, when in the course of a forcible entry an independent wrong has been committed by the person entering which could only be justified if his possession was lawful, which doctrine was approved, and while damages for the entry were denied, yet damages for injury to the occupant's furniture were allowed. Edwick v. Hawkes, L. R. 18 Ch. Div. 190, 210.

16 L. R. A.

Tillinghast, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The only question raised by the exceptions taken to the rulings of the court in this case is whether a landlord can forcibly eject a tenant from his premises, after the expiration of the tenancy, if the tenant holds possession, in good faith, under a color and reasonable claim of right. The defendant requested the court to charge the jury as follows, viz.: First. "If the landlord enter and expel the occupant who wrongly holds a tenement, but uses no more force than is reasonably necessary to accomplish this, he will not be liable to an action of assault and battery, although, in order to effect such expulsion and removal, it becomes necessary to use so much force and violence as to subject him to an indictment at common law for a breach of the peace, or under the statute for making a forcible entry." Second. "If the plaintiff was in possession, but the rent was due more than fifteen days after demand, the plaintiff was a mere trespasser, and could be expelled by the defendant." These requests

The prevalent American rule.

Notwithstanding the statutes of forcible entry and detainer a landlord may enter after the termination of the tenancy and expel the tenant without incurring liability to the tenant as a tortfeasor. Hyatt v. Wood, 4 Johns. 150, 4 Am. Dec. 258; Jackson v. Morse, 16 Johns. 197; Meador v. Stone, 7 Met. 147; Todd v. Jackson, 26 N. J. L. 525; Jackson v. Farmer, 9 Wend. 201.

A landlord incurs no liability to a tenant holding over after the determination of the tenancy by entering and removing the latter's goods doing no unnecessary damage. Weeks v. Sly, 61 N. H. 80; Whitney v. Swett, 22 N. B. 10, 58 Am. Dec. 228; Adams v. Adams, 7 Phila. 180; Curl v. Lowell, 19 Pick. 25; Overdeer v. Lewis, 1 Watts & S. 90, 37 Am. Dec. 440; Souter v. Codman, 14 R. I. 119; Freeman v. Wilson, 16 R. I. 524.

After the tenant's lease is terminated the landlord has full right of entry and is not liable in trespass quare clausum. Curtis v. Galvin, 1 Allen, 215; Moore v. Mason, 1 Allen, 408; Esty v. Baker, 50 Me. 325, 79 Am. Dec. 618; Moore v. Boyd, 24 Me. 242; Wilde v. Cantillon, 1 Johns. Cas. 123; Ives v. Ives, 13 Johns. 235.

A landlord is not liable for assault for the exertion of force upon the person of his tenant necessary to effect his removal after the termination of his tenancy (Low v. Elwell, 121 Mass. 300, 23 Am. Rep. 272; Twombly v. Monroe, 130 Mass. 464; Stone v. Lahey, 133 Mass. 426); nor for an assault in using force necessary to overcome resistance by the tenant (Mugford v. Richardson, 6 Allen, 78); nor for damage to the tenant's goods by rain after their removal from the house and while out of doors. Clark v. Kellher, 107 Mass. 408.

He is not justified in using such force as would tend to a breach of the peace, but may lawfully use such force as would sustain a plea of justification of molitor manus imponit. Fifty Associates were refused by the court, and the following were charged in lieu thereof, viz.: "One in possession under a reasonable claim and color of right, honestly believing it, has a right to maintain his possession, and no personal violence can be used to expel him." "If Mrs. Baldwin was in possession under a claim of right the defendant had no right to use any degree of personal force to expel plaintiff." In explanation of its charge, and refusal to change as requested, the court stated the law applicable to the case on trial to be as follows, viz.: "That an owner has the right to put an undoubted trespasser off his premises. But if one is out of possession of property held by another, under a color and reasonable claim of right, he has no right to use personal violence to regain possession." "Hence, if Mrs. Baldwin was in possession under a fair claim of right to remain as tenant, or under her husband's tenancy, on the ground that the defendant had money belonging to one of them in his possession, more than the amount of rent due, on account of which her occupation had been recognized, he had no right to use personal violence to eject her."

We think this was error. The question at issue, in so far as the tenancy in question was concerned, was whether or not it had been terminated. If it had, the plaintiff was a mere trespasser, and the defendant had the right to use so much force as was reasonably necessary to expel her. If the tenancy had not been terminated, she was not a trespasser, and the defendant had no right to interfere with her. But the question as to whether Mrs. Baldwin was entitled to possession was a mere question of right, depending upon the fact as to whether the tenancy had been legally terminated, and not upon the belief of the tenant as to her right to remain. That is to say, the mere fact that a person honestly believes that he is lawfully in possession of a tenement or messuage does not prevent him from being a trespasser, and liable to be dealt with as such. Possession of real estate is either rightful or wrongful. And the right to the possession thereof, like the right of ownership, is to be determined solely by the evidence submitted, and the law applicable thereto, and is not dependent upon, or in any degree affected by, the belief of the claimant as to such right. If this were not so, it would be in the power of any one in the wrongful possession of real estate, who believes his possession to be rightful, to compel the person who is legally entitled to the possession thereof to resort to an action at law to recover the same; thus practically nullifying the right which the law confers upon the owner to take forcible possession by expelling the trespasser. Nor do we see that the distinction made by the court between "an undoubted trespasser" and one who holds possession "under a color and reasonable claim of right" changes the legal aspect of the case. Mrs. Baldwin was either a trespasser or she was not. If she was, neither her belief that she was not, nor the fact that she held "under a color and reasonable claim of right," was of any importance. The only question of importance concerning this branch of the case was whether she was in fact a trespasser; and this was a question to

v. Howland, 5 Cush. 214; Winter v. Stevens, 9 Allen, 528.

Upon the termination of a lease the lessor may peaceably enter the premises and if the lessee attempt to remove him by force he may resist by so much force as is necessary without incurring liability for an assault upon the lessee. Gillespie v. Beecher, 85 Mich. 347.

Where a landlord has peaceably entered upon the premises and removed the tenant's goods, he is not liable for an assault for forcibly removing the tenant attempting to resume possession. Marsh v. Bristol, 8 West. Rep. 791, 85 Mich. 373.

"Without determining the effect of a forcible entry on the rights of parties, after the due termination of a tenancy, it seems to be fully settled by the weight of judicial authority, when a tenancy has been legally terminated, that the landlord may enter peaceably upon the premises, that thus entering, he may remove the tenant therefrom, using such force as would sustain a plea of molitor manus impositit; and that he may remove his goods, if the tenant after a sufficient opportunity, neglects to do so, using due care and caution in their removal and depositing them in a near and convenient place." Stearns v. Sampson, 59 Me. 563, 8 Am. Rep. 442.

A different view.

In Dustin v. Cowdry, 23 Vt. 681, it is maintained that the effect of the Statute of Forcible Entry and Detainer is to take away the common-law right of entry by the landlord after the expiration of the tenancy, and that for such entry by force and expulsion of the tenant the landlord is liable. Whitaker v. Perry, 38 Vt. 107.

But it is ruled that the landlord may rightfully enter if the tenant at the time of such entry and removal of his goods be absent from the premises although only temporarily, and may maintain trespass against the tenant for a re-entry. Mussey v. Scott, 32 Vt. 82.

The Illinois Statute of Forcible Entry and Detainer has taken away the common-law right of a landlord to forcibly enter and take possession against the will of the tenant after a forfeiture of the lease, and for such entry and an assault committed in effecting it the landlord is liable to the tenant. Westcott v. Arbuckle, 12 Ill. App. 576; Reeder v. Purdy, 41 Ill. 279; Page v. De Puy, 40 Ill. 506; Wilder v. House, 48 Ill. 279; Dearlove v. Herington, 70 Ill. 251; Briggs v. Roth, 25 Ill. App. 512.

But it is otherwise if the lease expressly authorize such entry and taking of possession and only the necessary force be used. Fabri v. Bryan, 80 Ill. 182; Kavanagh v. Gudge, 7 Man. & G. 316.

The Connecticut Statute against forcible entry and detainer expressly gives the party forcibly ejected a right of action for trespass against the person ejecting him though he be the true owner. Bliss v. Bange, 6 Conn. 78.

In that state a landlord is held liable in trespass quare clausum and vi et armis for forcible entry and ejection of his tenant, the court holding that "a possession, commenced under a tenancy, cannot be put an end to in fact, by forcibly removing the tenant, without process." Larkin v. Avery, 23 Conn. 304, 307; Mason v. Hawes, 52 Conn. 12, 52 Am. Rep. 552.

Where a landlord, instead of resorting to the means provided by law for obtaining possession of his premises, takes upon himself, without authority, to remove the property of his tenant and turn him out, he will be liable in damages, though the ejection was effected without personal violence and in the tenant's absence. Boniel v. Block, 44 La. Ann.—.

J. G. G. J

be determined by the jury, upon all the proof bearing upon that point.

The doctrine laid down by this court in Souter v. Codman, 14 R. I. 119, and subsequently followed in Freeman v. Wilson, 16 R. I. 524, is in harmony with the current of both the American and English decisions as to the right of a landlord to use physical force in expelling a tenant whose term had expired, and we see no reason to overrule or modify the opinions therein expressed. See also 2 Taylor, Land. & T. 8th ed. §§ 581, 582, and cases cited.

We are therefore of the opinion that the court erred in refusing the defendant's requests to charge and in charging to the contrary as above set forth.

Petition granted.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS (8th Cir't).

UNION PACIFIC R. CO., Plff. in Err.,

James J. LAPSLEY, Admr., etc., of Eliza J. Lapsley, Deceased.

(51 Fed. Rep. 174.)

The negligence of the owner of a carriage in driving his team is not imputable to one riding with him at his invitation, and who has no authority over him.

(June 12, 1902.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court of Appeals of the United States for the Northern District of Iowa to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries resulting in death and alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

Argued before Brewer, Justice, and Caldwell and Sanborn, Circuit Judges.

Statement by Sanborn, Circuit Judge:

The defendant in error, who was the plaintiff below, was the administrator of the estate of Eliza J. Lapsley, deceased, and brought this action against the Union Pacific Railway Company to recover damages for the negligent killing of the decedent. The evidence disclosed the following facts: On November 27, 1890, the decedent was living on a farm near Dakota City, Neb., which had belonged to her father, and continued to be the homestead of the family after his death. She was forty-eight years of age, and was a capable woman, in good health, and accustomed to manage the affairs of the homestead. The plaintiff was her brother, and lived in the same neighborhood. They had a brother living in Sioux City, Iowa, one of whose family was ill, and decedent proposed to go to Sioux City with a younger sister to visit the sick one and do some shopping. The plaintiff informed her that he was going to that city the next day to do some business of his own, and they could wait and go with him. On the next day the plaintiff and his two sisters went to Sioux City in plaintiff's open two-seated democrat wagon, where they each attended to their respective business matters, and, after taking dinner at their brother's, started to return home. Plaintiff, who was forty-five years old, sat on the front seat with the younger sister and drove his team, while the decedent sat on the back seat of the wagon. Leech street, in Sioux City, crosses the street upon which defendant's railroad is operated; and, owing to the lay of the ground and to the buildings and other obstructions, it was impossible for one approaching the crossing on this street to see a train coming from the south for quite a distance along said street until one was close to the track. Plaintiff drove down towards the crossing on this Leech street at a slow trot, looking for trains in the usual way. No bell, whistle, or other signal was heard, and just as the team was on the track an approaching train was seen, which struck the wagon, and so seriously injured the decedent that she died in a few minutes. Both plaintiff and his sister knew the surroundings of this crossing, and they came down in the wagon without stopping to look or listen. The court below charged the jury that if the defendant was negligent in operating its railway, and that negligence was the proximate cause of the injury, the plaintiff was entitled to recover unless they found that the decedent was herself negligent in approaching the crossing, or controlled the driver as he approached the crossing and he was negligent, and such negligence contributed to the injury; but that if the decedent was herself negligent, or if she controlled the action of her brother, the driver, as he approached the crossing, and he was negligent, and such negligence contributed to the injury, plaintiff could not recover. The defendant company insisted that the negligence of the plaintiff, the driver, must be imputed to the decedent as a matter of law; but the court refused to so hold, and charged the jury upon this question that if they found as a matter of fact that the decedent had and exercised actual control or direction of the driver as he approached the crossing, and he was negligent, then his negligence must be imputed to her and she could not recover; but that, if they found she did not have or exercise such control, the negligence of the driver could not be imputed to her from the mere fact that she was riding in her brother's wagon on his invitation, and he was driving the team. This holding and charge of the court is the only error assigned in this court, and, judgment having been rendered against the defendant, it sued out this writ of error to review this portion of the charge.

Mr. J. M. Thurston for plaintiff in error.
Messrs. A. S. Wilson and S. M. Marsh, for defendant in error:

NOTE.—For a collection of authorities upon the question of imputing the negligence of the driver to his passenger, see notes to Dean v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 6 L. R. A. 143; Becke v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. (Mo.) 9 L. R. A. 157.
16 L. R. A.

See also 23 L. R. A. 693; 30 L. R. A. 684.

In Neabitt v. Garner, 75 Iowa, 814, the court goes over the Iowa cases and says they have never decided that when one rides upon the public highway in the vehicle of another, the driver, as a matter of law, becomes his agent or servant in such sense that his negligence, contributing to an injury occasioned by a defect or obstruction in the highway, will be imputed to him, regardless of the real relations of the parties; that this doctrine finds support in some adjudicated cases; but that many American courts, whose opinions are of the highest authority, have pronounced it unsound, citing,— Bennett v. New Jersey R. & Transp. Co. 36 N. J. L. 225, 13 Am. Rep. 435; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Steimbrenner, 47 N. J. L. 161; Chapman v. New Haven R. Co. 19 N. Y. 341, 75 Am. Dec. 844; Dyer v. Erie R. Co. 71 N. Y. 228; Covington Transfer Co. v. Kelly, 36 Ohio St. 86; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Shacklet, 105 Ill. 864; Little v. Hackett, 116 U. S. 386, 29 L. ed. 652.

Thorogood v. Bryan, 8 C. B. 114, was expressly overruled in the case of The Bernina, 13 Prob. Div. 58.

In Wymore v. Mahaska County, 78 Iowa, 396, the court held that the negligence of the parents could not be imputed to the child, saying that a large number of courts hold that it is so imputable; citing,— Hartfield v. Roper, 21 Wend. 615; Morrison v. Erie R. Co. 56 N. Y. 802; Thurber v. Harlem Bridge, M. & F. R. Co. 60 N. Y. 327; Lynch v. Smith, 104 Mass. 52, 6 Am. Rep. 188; Gibbons v. Williams, 135 Mass. 335; Fitzgerald v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 29 Minn. 336; Brown v. European & N. A. R. Co. 58 Me. 384; Leslie v. Lewiston, 62 Me. 468; Hathaway v. Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. 46 Ind. 28; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Smith, 28 Kau. 542; Meeks v. Southern Pac. R. Co. 52 Cal. 608; Stillson v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 67 Mo. 674.

A list of cases is also cited holding to the doctrine that the negligence of the parent cannot be imputed to the child, as follows:

Bellefontaine & I. R. Co. v. Snyder, 18 Ohio St. 899; Huff v. Ames, 16 Neb. 139; Galveston & H. F. R. Co. v. Moore, 59 Tex. 64; Erie City Pass. R. Co. v. Schuster, 4 Cent. Rep. 919, 113 Pa. 412; Robinson v. Cone, 22 Vt. 214, 54 Am. Dec. 67; Daley v. Norwich & W. R. Co. 26 Conn. 501; Norfolk & P. R. Co. v. Ormsby, 27 Gratt. 476; Boland v. Missouri R. Co. 38 Mo. 489; Whirley v. Whitman, 1 Head, 619; Beach, Contrib. Neg. §§ 41-43. See Battisill v. Humphreys, 14 West. Rep. 563, 64 Mich. 514; 1 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. §§ 70-88, and notes.

The court says: "It seems to us that the authorities last cited announce the better rule."

The following cases hold that the negligence of the driver is not imputable to his guest:

Noyes v. Boscauven, 5 New Eng. Rep. 70, 64 N. H. 361, 10 Am. St. Rep. 410; Robinson v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 66 N. Y. 11, 23 Am. Rep. 1; Carlisle v. Brisbane, 4 Cent. Rep. 503, 113 Pa. 544; Little v. Harkett, 116 U. S. 366, 29 L. ed. 652; Dyer v. Erie R. Co. 71 N. Y. 228; McCuffrey v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 41 N. Y. S. R. 221; Bennett v. New York Cent. & H. E. R. Co. 40 N. Y. S. R. 948; 16 L. R. A.

Louisville, N. A. & O. R. Co. v. Creek (Ind.) 14 L. R. A. 733; Cahill v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. (Ky) Dec. 10, 1891; Randolph v. O'Riorden (Mass.) Jan. 7, 1892; Cartersville v. Cook, 4 L. R. A. 731, 129 Ill. 152, 16 Am. St. Rep. 253, note.

Sanborn, Circuit Judge, delivered the opinion of the court:

Under the instructions of the court the jury, in arriving at their verdict, must have found that the negligence of the defendant company in failing to ring its bell, sound its whistle, or provide a flagman at this crossing was the proximate cause of the injury complained of; that the decedent was not herself guilty of any negligence that contributed to the injury; and that she neither had nor exercised any control over her brother, the driver, as he approached the crossing. The owner and driver of the team exercised entire control over it, and was traveling entirely on business of his own,—business in which the decedent had no part or interest. There is no pretense that the driver was not entirely competent to take charge of the team himself, nor that he did not possess the requisite skill to manage and control the same; so that the case sharply presents the question whether one who, while driving gratuitously in a carriage owned and driven by another, is injured by the concurrent negligence of a third person and the driver, over whom he has no control, is barred from recovering compensation for the injury from the former, by the contributory negligence of the owner and driver of the team. If he who rides in a private carriage on the invitation of the owner and driver of the team cannot recover of a third person whose careless act is the proximate cause of his injury, where the negligence of the driver contributes to that injury, it must be because the negligence of the driver is, under the law, the negligence of the guest; and, if one who rides on the invitation of the owner of a private carriage who drives his own team is so far responsible for the negligence of his host that he cannot recover of a third person for injuries caused by his negligence where the negligence of his host has contributed to the injury, it logically and necessarily follows that, if the host so negligently drives his team as to inflict injury upon a third person, the invited guest will be liable for that injury also, and an action may be maintained against him by the person injured for the damages thus sustained, since if the negligence of the host is to be imputed to the guest when he receives injury it must be imputed to him to the same extent when his host inflicts injury; but it is absurd to think that an invited guest riding in a private carriage could be held liable for the injuries inflicted on a third person by the careless driving of the owner of the carriage and team, and the absurdity of this conclusion argues with almost compelling force that the negligence of such a driver cannot be imputed to the guest so as to bar his recovery when the third person inflicts, instead of receives, the injury. That the negligence of a servant, acting under the direction and eye of the master, may be imputed to the latter, that under some circumstances the negligence of a parent may be imputed to a child, or the negligence of a guardian to his ward, may be conceded. In cases of this class, and indeed in all cases where this doctrine of imputation of negligence may properly be applied, the relation of master and servant or principal and agent exists, and the doctrine rests on the maxim, qui facit per alium facit per se. The servant acts for and by the direction of his master, the parent for the child of tender years, the guardian for his ward. Hence, in the eye of the law, the act and negligence of the servant are the act and negligence of the master; the act and negligence of the parent and guardian the act and negligence of the child or ward. But, where the owner and driver of a team and carriage invites another to ride in his carriage, no relation of principal and agent is created; no relation of master and servant is established; the owner and driver of the team is not controlled by and is not in any sense the agent of the invited guest; and to hold him responsible for the negligence of the former, by whose permission alone he rides, is unauthorized by the law and repugnant to reason. That he who suffers injury from another's negligence may recover compensation of the wrongdoer is a principle founded in natural justice and sustained by every precedent. That where the negligence of the person injured has contributed to the injury he cannot so recover, because it is impracticable in the administration of justice to divide and apportion the compensation in proportion to the varying degrees of concurring negligence, is equally well settled. But that he whose wrongful act or omission has caused the injury and damage, and who upon every consideration of justice and reason ought to make compensation for it, shall be permitted to escape because a third person, over whom the injured person had no control, and whose only relation to him was that of a guest to his host, has been guilty of negligence that contributed to the injury, is neither just nor reasonable. According to the verdict of this jury, a loss of $1,000 was entailed upon the decedent by the negligence of this defendant. The defendant's wrongful omission was the proximate cause of this damage. The decedent in no way caused or contributed, by any act or omission of hers, to this injury. She had no control over her brother, the driver, who may have contributed by his carelessness to the damage. Upon what principle, now, can it be justly said that the decedent must bear all this loss when she neither caused, was responsible for, nor could have prevented because this third person assisted to cause the injury, the proximate cause of which was the wrongful act of the defendant company? If there exists in the realm of jurisprudence any sound principle upon which so unrighteous a punishment of the innocent and the discharge of the guilty may be based, we have been unable to discover it.

16 L. R. A.

It is true that it was held in 1849 in Thorogood v. Bryan, 8 C. B. 115, that a passenger in an omnibus, who was injured by the joint negligence of the driver of another public conveyance and the driver of the omnibus in which he was riding, was barred from recovering in an action against the proprietor of the former conveyance which collided with the omnibus in which he was riding by the contributory negligence of the driver of the omnibus, that the negligence of the driver was the negligence of the passenger, and that by selecting and entering the omnibus he became identified with the driver; and it is equally true that similar decisions founded upon this case had been rendered in England and in some of the states prior to the year 1886. In the year 1886 the reasoning found in the opinions rendered in that case was conclusively refuted, and the decision itself repudiated by the Supreme Court of the United States in an exhaustive opinion delivered by Mr. Justice Field in Little v. Hackett, 116 U. S. 866, 29 L. ed. 652; and the convincing logic of the distinguished jurist who delivered that opinion, and his exhaustive review of the authorities, have settled the law in this country upon this subject, and seem to have convinced the learned judges of the court of appeals in England that the rule in Thorogood v. Bryan was erroneous; for in 1897, in The Bernina, 12 Prob. Div. 58, in exhaustive opinions in which the authorities are again carefully reviewed, they expressly disapproved the reasoning and overruled the decision in that case. With the single exception of the Supreme Court of the state of Wisconsin, which had become committed to the doctrine of Thorogood v. Bryan, prior to 1886, the state courts have uniformly held that one who, while riding in the private carriage of another at his invitation, is injured by the negligence of a third party, may recover against the latter, notwithstanding the negligence of the owner of the carriage in driving his team may have contributed to the injury, where the person injured is without fault and has no authority over the driver. Follman v. Mankato, 35 Minn. 522; Carlisle v. Brisbane, 113 Pa. 544, 4 Cent. Rep. 508; Robinson v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 66 N. Y. 11, 28 Am. Rep. 1; Dyer v. Erie R. Co. 71 N. Y. 228; Masterson v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co. 84 N. Y. 247; Cuddy v. Horn, 46 Mich. 596; Covington Transp. Co. v. Kelly, 86 Ohio St. 87; Street R. Co. v. Eadie, 43 Ohio St. 91, 1 West. Rep. 88; Bennett v. New Jersey R. & Transp. Co. 86 N. J. L. 225; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Steinbrenner, 47 N. J. L. 161; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Shacklet, 105 Ill. 364.

This rule is established by authority, commends itself to the reason, was properly and carefully given to the jury for their guidance by the learned judge below, and the judgment below is affirmed.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS, SECOND CIRCUIT.

MORNING JOURNAL ASSO., Plff. in Err.,
v.
Edward C. RUTHERFORD.

(51 Fed. Rep. 518)

1. Exemplary damages may be allowed for wantonly publishing a libel without inquiry or justifiable motive.
2. The custom of a newspaper to print stories of elopements and similar gossip whenever they have appeared in the columns of another paper without any inquiry as to their truth shows such reckless unconcern as to the mental anguish that may be caused by such publication as will warrant a jury in finding the publisher guilty of wanton negligence which will justify a verdict for punitive or exemplary damages.
3. A decision upon a motion for a new trial is not the subject of review in a Federal appellate court.
4. An excessive verdict cannot be corrected in the Federal courts upon a writ of error.

(July 20, 1892.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for the alleged publication of a libel in which a verdict had been returned in plaintiff's favor for the sum of $4,000. Affirmed.

Statement by Lacombe, Circuit Judge:

The plaintiff, a resident of Toronto, Canada, came to New York city on the 8th of June 1890, accompanied by the wife of a friend of his, who resided in Toronto. When the train arrived, they were met at the station by the husband. All the parties were people of high respectability, and were, apparently, intimate friends who had arranged for a visit to New York together. While they were staying at the Hotel Brunswick, and on the 14th of June, there appeared in the newspaper published by plaintiff in error a communication, under the heading "Eloped to New York; Wife of a Wealthy Toronto Merchant 'Skips Out,'"—which purported to have been sent to it by its special correspondent at Toronto, the day before. The communication stated, in substance, that the defendant in error had eloped with the lady; that for some time the intimacy between the two had excited comment in Toronto, and, when they were found to be missing, "tongues wagged freely;" that a dispatch from New York city had been received by the husband, stating that his wife and defendant in error had been seen there, and that he at once started for New York. No special correspondent in Toronto had sent any such communication to the plaintiff in error. One Cronin, a reporter for a Toronto newspaper, with no more information on the subject than "talk which was going on about it in the office" of his paper, had, without investigating into the facts, sent the communication to a Chicago newspaper, which published it. The article, as published in the Chicago newspaper, was forwarded by a news agency to the plaintiff in error. Just prior to its receipt, a similar article was published in the New York Evening Sun. The telegraph editor of the plaintiff in error cut out the article from the Sun for publication in his own paper, and inserted it therein as an item of news, without making any inquiry as to its authenticity.

Defendant in error brought suit in the United States circuit court for the southern district of New York, laying his damages at $10,000. The action was tried May 12, 1891, before Judge Wallace and a jury and a verdict rendered for $4,000. A motion for a new trial was made and denied, judgment was duly entered, a bill of exceptions settled and filed, and writ of error allowed.

Argued before Lacombe and Shipman, Circuit Judges.

Mr. John R. Dos Passos for plaintiff in error.

Mr. James D. Fessenden for defendant in error.

Lacombe, Circuit Judge, delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error, upon the argument in this court, criticised certain statements in the charge, to which, on the trial, he made no objection and which are covered by no exception. These portions of the charge are not, therefore, before this court for review; they would not be, even under a general exception to the whole charge, (Rule 10, U. S. Cir. Ct. App. 2d Ct.,) nor was any such general exception taken. It is elementary that a party who thinks himself aggrieved by a charge to the jury can be heard in criticism only of so much of it as he objected to at the time. The record discloses three exceptions to the charge, as follows: First. To a refusal to charge, as requested, that, "there being no express or actual malice on defendant's part in publishing the libel, the jury should not award exemplary or punitive damages." Second. To a refusal to charge, as requested, that, "where there is no actual or express malice, and no claim that the plaintiff has suffered any special damages, the jury may award the plaintiff nominal damages." Third. To a charge that the jury might give a verdict for punitive or exemplary damages.

The jury were charged that "they would not be justified in finding, from the evidence in the case, that there was any personal ill will towards the plaintiff which inspired the publication of the articles," and that "there was no evidence authorizing the jury to find that there was any actual or express malice on defendant's part in publishing the article," that the law implies malice from the publication of a false and defamatory article, without probable cause; that, under the circumstances, plaintiff was entitled to such damages as he had sustained in his feelings and his reputation by reason of the publication of the libelous article; that he was entitled to be indemnified for the injury to his feelings. The court further charged that, if the jury were satisfied that the article was wantonly published without inquiry, without justifiable motive or under circumstances of gross negligence, it was within their province to award, besides actual damages, such sum as they might think, upon all the facts, the case deserved for punitive or exemplary damages.

NOTE.—As to the effect of the fact that a libel is copied, see Arnott v. Standard Assn. 3 L. R. A. 66, and note, 57 Conn. 86; and see note to Hayes v. Press Co. (Pa.) 5 L. R. A. 645.
16 L. R. A.

As to effect of imputing want of chastity, see note to Morey v. Morning Journal Assn. (N. Y.) 3 L. R. A. 621.

So far as the subject-matter of the second exception, supra, is concerned, the charge was as favorable as the plaintiff in error was entitled to. The jury was distinctly told that defendant in error was entitled to indemnification for injury to his feelings and reputation, and that, only if they were satisfied that the publication was wanton and grossly negligent, were they to give him anything more. Neither the character of the libel nor the circumstances of its publication were such as to require the court to intimate to the jury that nominal damages were a sufficient indemnity for the assault upon his reputation and the injury to his feelings, and such an intimation is manifestly what the request to charge was devised to secure.

The other two exceptions, supra, are unsound. The charge correctly instructed the jury as to the law of the case. In actions for libel, juries are authorized to give such exemplary damages as the circumstances require, when the evidence shows that the publication was "the result of that reckless indifference to the rights of others which is equivalent to the intentional violation of them," (Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Arms, 91 U. S. 489, 23 L. ed. 874;) or, as it is elsewhere expressed, "when the act complained of was conceived in the spirit of mischief or of criminal indifference to civil obligations." Philadelphia W. & B. R. Co. v. Quigley, 62 U. S. 21 How. 213, 16 L. ed. 78. There was sufficient in the case to warrant the jury in finding that the action of the plaintiff in error exhibited such reckless indifference to the rights of others. For the publication of its defamatory article—a bit of spicy gossip dealing with the domestic infelicities of private persons—there was no excusable motive, and to publish it without making any effort to verify its truth was a piece of reprehensible negligence which may be fairly characterized as wanton. The story which the plaintiff in error spread broadcast throughout the community was one calculated most cruelly to outrage the feelings of any honest woman. The mental anguish which would be experienced by a loyal wife who saw herself paraded in the public press as an adulteress might well be assumed to be sufficiently acute to induce any decent person to verify before repeating such a story.

16 L. R. A.

But this plaintiff in error made no effort so to do. It published the story as if it were of its own special procurement,—the result of investigations made in its own behalf; in reality, reprinting the gossip just as it found it. "On seeing the article in the Sun, or receiving it from the United Press Association," says the editor in his testimony, "we were not supposed to make any inquiry as to the truth of it, and I did not make any." If this does not evidence a "reckless indifference to the rights of others, which is equivalent to an intentional violation of them," it is somewhat difficult to conceive what will.

It is urged, on behalf of the plaintiff in error, that it would be a physical impossibility for a newspaper to send an agent to every place where events are transpiring to ascertain by personal examination the exact facts, and that, if such a rule were insisted upon, "a paper could not give us all which we have a right to hear of the current events of the day." Edwards v. Kansas City Times Co., 82 Fed. Rep. 815. That the public has such a right to be informed as to the private life of every individual, as to the domestic affairs of every family, as to the happiness or infelicity which may characterize every household, as will warrant the proprietors of newspapers who cater to its wants in publishing any falsehood they may think interesting to their readers, without any investigation as to its truth, is a proposition, however, to which this court is not prepared to assent. Proprietors of newspapers, no doubt, know what current events of the day the public wishes to hear, and may find it desirable to repeat such spicy personal gossip as they may find in the columns of their contemporaries, or may hear from others, but they must at least exercise reasonable care that what they publish is the narrative of a current event, and not a libelous falsehood; for it is only as the report of a current event that newspaper or public have any concern with it whatever. What proportion of the columns of a newspaper shall be devoted to reports of illicit relations is a matter between itself and its readers, to be settled by the community in which it circulates, and individuals who offend against morality and violate the laws of society may have no just cause to complain if the sin which was committed in a corner is proclaimed from the house-top; but whosoever is void of offense is entitled to insist upon the protection the law gives him, that no story of his private life, however racy may be its details, shall be published with reckless indifference to his rights. The right to a reputation unsmirched by slanderous tongue or libelous pen is one which courts hold sacred; and when the publisher of a libel urges, as his sole defense, that it is the custom of his paper to print such stories as these, whenever they have appeared in the columns of another paper, without any inquiry as to their truth, he manifests such complete indifference to another's rights—such reckless unconcern as to the mental anguish he may cause—as well warrant a jury in finding him guilty of wanton negligence.

The plaintiff in error excepted to the refusal of the trial judge to set aside the verdict as excessive upon a motion for a new trial, and also contended that this court should do so on the ground that the record showed that the verdict was excessive. A decision upon a motion for a new trial, however, is not the subject of review in a Federal appellate court, (Laber v. Cooper, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 565, 19 L. ed. 151; Pittsburgh, O. & St. L. R. Co. v. Heck, 102 U. S. 120, 26 L. ed. 58, and the cases therein cited;) nor, when the proper rule for the computation of damages has been given to the jury, can an excessive verdict be corrected in the Federal courts upon a writ of error (Erie R. Co. v. Winter, 148 U. S. 60, 36 L. ed. 71; Hogg v. Emerson, 53 U. S. 11 How. 587, 18 L. ed. 824.) This statement of the well-settled rule of practice, however, is not to be taken as an intimation that, in the opinion of this court, there is anything in the record to show that the verdict in this case was excessive.

UTAH SUPREME COURT.

E. R. CHASE, Appt.,

v.

Harry JEMMETT et al., Trustees of School District No. 10 in Box Elder County et al., Respts.

(.....Utah.....)

The value of a public schoolhouse built on land of an unknown owner in the expectation that he will permit such use and with the intention in case he will not to acquire it by eminent domain, is not to be included in his compensation if it becomes necessary to condemn the land.

(August 4, 1892.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the District Court for Weber County denying a portion of the relief asked by him in an action brought to recover the possession of certain real estate, and compensation for its use. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Messrs. Evans & Rogers, for appellant: Appellant as owner of the land was in the condemnation proceedings entitled to compensation for its value, with the improvements thereon, to wit, the stone building.

United States v. Land in Monterey County, 47 Cal. 515; Graham v. Connersville & N. C. J. R. Co. 86 Ind. 463, 10 Am. Rep. 56; Searl v. Lake County School Dist. No. 2, 133 U. S. 558, 33 L. ed. 740; Hendry v. Trinity & S. R. Co. (Tex.) 24 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 286; Harris v. Marblehead, 76 Mass. 40; Crosby v. Dracut, 109 Mass. 206; Meriam v. Brown, 123 Mass. 391; Price v. Weehawken Ferry Co. 81 N. J. Eq. 81; Emerson v. Western Union R. Co. 75

NOTE.—Value of improvements made by one taking property by eminent domain as an element of damages.

When improvement is consented to by owner, mortgagor, etc.

Where entry was by consent of the landowner he is not entitled upon subsequent condemnation of the land to compensation for improvements placed thereon by the railway company. Cohen v. St. Louis, Ft. B. & W. R. Co. 84 Kan. 153, 55 Am. Rep. 242; California S. R. Co. v. Southern Pac. R. Co. 67 Cal. 59; Emerson v. Western Union R. Co. 75 Ill. 178.

The same rule was followed in San Francisco & N. P. R. Co. v. Taylor, 86 Cal. 243, where it did not appear whether the owner consented or objected to the construction of the improvements. So, too, if the entry and construction were with a view to a subsequent condemnation. Lyon v. Green Bay & M. R. Co. 42 Wis. 533.

When a railroad company constructs its road with the knowledge of and without objection from the landowner, and afterwards institutes condemnation proceedings, the landowner is not entitled to compensation for rails and cross-ties laid by the company on the strip of land taken. Indiana, B. & W. R. Co. v. Allen, 100 Ind. 406; North Hudson County R. Co. v. Booraem, 28 N. J. Eq. 450.

A railroad company having constructed its road with the consent of the life tenant, the remaindermen are not entitled to compensation in a condemnation proceeding for the improvements made on the land intermediate the entry and condemnation. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Goodwin, 111 Ill. 273, 53 Am. Rep. 622. The court went further than this in its opinion, saying: "Even if the entry had been without license or permission of anyone authorized to grant the same, so that it was a trespass at the time, the law would not require the 16 L. R. A.

railroad company, in seeking a condemnation of the land so entered upon for a right of way, to pay the owner of the land for structures placed upon it at its own expense, with a view of subsequently acquiring the right of way."

Where a railroad company enters upon land and constructs its road with the consent of the adult tenants in common and of the infants so far as it can be given, the value of the improvements placed on the land by it is not an element of damage to be assessed in a subsequent condemnation proceeding. Re Norwood & M. R. Co. 47 Hun. 420.

Where a railroad company, in pursuance of a contract with one in possession of land under an apparently valid mortgage lien and other claims supposed to amount to its whole value, for a conveyance thereof when he had perfected his title, took possession of a right of way and erected improvements thereon, and it subsequently turned out that another had a superior title, the latter is entitled, in condemnation proceedings, only to what the land itself is worth and not to its value as enhanced by the improvements. Ellis v. Rock Island & M. C. R. Co. 14 West. Rep. 373, 125 Ill. 82.

In condemnation proceedings by a railway company which has constructed its road under an agreement with the mortgagor, the mortgagee who has come into full possession is not entitled to compensation for the improvements placed on the land by the railroad company. St. Johnsbury & L. C. R. Co. v. Willard, 2 L. R. A. 523, 61 Vt. 134.

A railroad, occupying land in pursuance of a contract with the mortgagor, over which its power of eminent domain did not extend, although with the knowledge of the mortgagor, has no equity to have the permanent improvements made by it reserved from sale under the mortgage. Price v. Weehawken Ferry Co. 81 N. J. Eq. 31.

Where a landowner assents to the occupation of Ill. 176; Kimball v. Adams, 53 Wis. 554, and cases there cited.

A compliance upon the trial of this case with the provisions of Laws 1888, § 8852, vol. 2, p. 419, would have entitled appellant to have had the jury pass upon the actual value of the property taken at the date of issuing the summons or the filing and serving of respondents' cross-complaint (some years subsequent to erection of building in and upon appellant's land), and the learned trial judge ruling contra was error.

San José & A. R. Co. v. Mayne, 88 Cal. 566.

Messrs. Kimball & Allison, for respondents:

The use was a public use in behalf of which the right of eminent domain can be exercised—that of a school district.

2 Com. Laws 1888, § 8841, sub. 2, pp. 415, 416; Mills, Em. Dom. § 17, and cases cited.

The question is, Is the appellant the owner of the schoolhouse, and all school apparatus, fixtures, outhouses, and appurtenances placed on the land by the respondents, and is he entitled to have the value thereof included in the compensation to be paid in the condemnation proceeding? The great weight of the authorities answer this question in the negative.

Denver & R. G. W. R. Co. v. Standliff, 4 Utah, 117; Justice v. Nesquehoning Valley R. Co. 87 Pa. 28; Meig's App. 62 Pa. 28, 1 Am. Rep. 873; Daniels v. Chicago, I. & N. R. Co. 41 Iowa, 52; Morgan's App. 39 Mich. 875; Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456; his land by a railroad company, the ties and rails affixed thereto do not become his property although the company never acquires title. Dietrich v. Murdock, 42 Mo. 279.

A railroad company constructing its road by agreement with the mortgagor is entitled to be relieved from the lien of the mortgage by payment of a ratable proportion of the value of the land taken irrespective of the value of the improvements placed thereon by the railroad company. Dows v. Congdon, 16 How. Pr. 571; North Hudson County R. Co. v. Booraem, 28 N. J. Eq. 450; Kennedy v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 22 Wis. 581; Aspinwall v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 41 Wis. 474 (statutory); Hartshorn v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 23 Wis. 602.

When construction of improvement is a trespass.

Upon the condemnation of land which a railway company is occupying as a trespasser, the owner is not entitled to compensation for the ties, rails, trestles, and other structures placed thereon by the company. Jones v. New Orleans & S. R. Co. 70 Ala. 227; Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 456; Morgan's App. 39 Mich. 875; Greve v. First Div. of St. Paul & P. R. Co. 26 Minn. 66; Justice v. Nesquehoning Valley R. Co. 87 Pa. 28; Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Dickson, 63 Miss. 380; Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. v. Adams, 14 L. R. A. 533, 27 Fla. 443; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Goodwin, 111 Ill. 273, 53 Am. Rep. 622, (obiter).

In Justice v. Nesquehoning Valley R. Co., supra, it is said: "This is not the case of a mere trespass by one having no authority to enter, but of one representing the state herself, clothed with the power of eminent domain, having a right to enter and to place these materials on the land taken for a public use—materials essential to the very purpose which the state has declared in the grant of the charter. It is true the entry was a trespass, by 16 L. R. A.

Greve v. First Div. of St. Paul & P. R. Co. 26 Minn. 66; Kennedy v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 22 Wis. 581; Lyon v. Greene Bay & M. R. Co. 42 Wis. 538; North Hudson County R. Co. v. Booraem, 28 N. J. Eq. 450; Goodin v. Cincinnati & W. W. Canal Co. 18 Ohio St. 169; Dows v. Congdon, 16 How. Pr. 571; California Pac. R. Co. v. Armstrong, 48 Cal. 88; Jones v. New Orleans & S. R. Co. & I. Asso. 70 Ala. 227; Aspinwall v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 41 Wis. 474; 6 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, 567.

Zane, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff brought this suit to recover eighty acres of land in Box Elder county, and the value of its use during defendants' possession. The defendants filed an answer denying the allegations of the complaint, and a cross complaint for the condemnation of a part of the land for school purposes. It appears from the evidence in the record that the trustees of the district erected a schoolhouse on the land in 1881; that the district has occupied it as a schoolhouse ever since, and that its use by the public is necessary; that the United States issued a patent for the land to the Central Pacific Railroad Company in 1884; that the company conveyed it to the plaintiff in 1886; that there has not at any time been any other occupation of the land or the schoolhouse; and that the trustees did not know who owned the land at the time they erected the schoolhouse upon it.

reason of the omission to do an act required for the security of the citizen, to wit, to make compensation or give security for it. For this injury the citizen is entitled to redress. But his redress cannot extend beyond his injury. It cannot extend to taking the personal chattels of the railroad company. They are not his, and cannot increase his remedy."

A landowner has no right of property in the materials used in the construction of a railroad over his land although without the right to use his land for that purpose having in any way been acquired. Preston v. Sabine & R. T. R. Co. 70 Tex. 875.

The paragraphs next following show that the decisions are not harmonious where the occupation of the land is a trespass.

The value of the superstructure placed upon land by a railway company without right or authority from the owner is properly included in the award of damages to the owner upon condemnation of the land. Re New York, W. S. & B. R. Co. 37 Hun, 317; Re Long Island R. Co. 6 Thomp. & C. 298; Cohen v. St. Louis, Ft. S. & W. R. Co. 34 Kan. 188, 55 Am. Rep. 243 (obiter).

It is said in Re Norwood & M. R. Co., 47 Hun, 489: "The principle laid down in Re Long Island R. Co., 6 Thomp. & C. 298, and Re New York, W. S. & B. R. Co., 37 Hun, 317, ought not to be extended. It is not equitable, and, at most, should apply only to the case where the putting of the rails, etc., on the land was a trespass."

In Hendry v. Trinity & S. R. Co. (Tex.) 24 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 286, a distinction was taken between such improvements placed by a railway company on land without the owner's consent as the landowner could use as they stood in employments connected with his freehold and those which he must detach and convert into personal property before using, and it was held that upon the condemnation of land upon which a railway company had placed

The issues were submitted to a jury, who found that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the possession of the land, and $66.80, the value of its use. The jury also found for the plaintiff on the cross-complaint, and awarded compensation to him to the value of the land taken, and damages to that not taken, without taking into consideration the value of the schoolhouse. The court overruled a motion by the plaintiff for a new trial, and entered judgment on the verdict, to which the plaintiff excepted. The plaintiff claims that the defendants committed a trespass in erecting the house upon the ground, and that it became a part of the realty, and vested in the owner of the land, and passed with it to the railroad company by the patent, and to the plaintiff by the deed of the company to him. The only question for special consideration in this opinion is, Was the charge of the court to the jury, not to take into consideration the value of the schoolhouse in assessing damages to the plaintiff, erroneous? In making their verdict the jurors took into consideration the value of the land taken, and the damage to that not taken; also the value of the use of the land to the time of the trial. But it is claimed that the law gave the owner of the land the building because the defendant committed a trespass in building it. If the entry upon the land is a naked trespass, and from an improper motive, the general rule in a proceeding to condemn is that buildings permanently attached to it become the property of its owner.

This rule rests upon the principle that an individual committing a naked trespass can acquire no right by his tortious acts, and also upon the presumption that a person who erects a building on land that he knows to be another's, and without any color of right, or reasonable expectation of its lawful acquisition, intends it to become the property of the owner of the land. In this case the trustees were acting for the public, and we cannot infer that they intended to erect a building for the United States, who appears to have been the owner of the land; nor do we feel authorized to say that they were actuated by a fraudulent or other improper motive, or that they intended to wrong the owner of the land; in fact, they did not know who was the owner. We may assume that the trustees believed that the owner, when ascertained, would consent to such use of it, or that the title could be obtained by gift, purchase, or condemnation. While the title remained in the United States, the law furnished no process by which it could be acquired and appropriated for such a purpose; yet the trustees might reasonably believe that the government would consent to such use of it, and that its grantee, whoever he might be, would either permit such occupancy or grant the same for a reasonable consideration, or, if not, that the right might be acquired in pursuance of the law of eminent domain. To require the district to pay the plaintiff for the house it erected would, in effect, compensate him for the land taken and a section house without authority, the owner was entitled to the value of the section house.

The Indiana Constitution provides that "no man's property shall be taken, by law, without just compensation; nor, except in the case of the state, without such compensation first assessed and tendered." Under this provision it is held that where a railway company enters without right upon land and constructs its road, upon a subsequent condemnation of the land the owner is entitled to compensation for the fixtures so erected thereon. Graham v. Connorsville & N. C. J. R. Co. 36 Ind. 463, 10 Am. Rep. 56. But after when the occupation is with the knowledge of and without objection from the owner. Indiana, B. & W. R. Co. v. Allen, 100 Ind. 409.

It was held in Meriam v. Brown, 128 Mass. 391, that rails and ties laid without the consent of the landowner or any proceedings by the railroad company to acquire a right of way became a part of the realty; and their removal was enjoined.

If the owner has in no way assented to the erection of a building on his land and the condemnation proceedings relied upon by the company to acquire title are adjudged void, the building becomes the property of the landowner. Hunt v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. 76 Mo. 115.

Effect of good faith or mistake of trespasser.

Where a railroad company pending condemnation proceedings entered upon land by virtue of an order of the court and constructed its roadway and the proceedings were dismissed, upon a condemnation of the land in proceedings instituted the second time, the owner is not entitled to compensation for the improvements placed on the land by the railroad company. California Pac. R. Co. v. Armstrong, 46 Cal. 85.

In United States v. Land in Monterey County, 47 Cal. 515, it was held that upon the condemnation by the government of lands upon which it had entered manu forti and erected a lighthouse and appurtenances, the owner was entitled to compensation for the structure so placed upon the land.

A railroad company which constructed its road upon land the ownership of which was unknown with the intention in good faith to institute condemnation proceedings is not liable in such proceedings to pay to the owner the value of improvements which it has placed on the land. Albion River R. Co. v. Hesser, 84 Cal. 435. In this case it is attempted to draw the distinction between California Pac. R. Co. v. Armstrong, 46 Cal. 85, and United States v. Land in Monterey County, 47 Cal. 515, that in the former the circumstances evinced the disposition in good faith to condemn and pay just compensation and in the latter an entry by the strong hand with no such intention. The court says that if this distinction cannot be maintained the latter case should be declared overruled. The value of the land only is the just compensation guaranteed by law to the owner.

A railroad company having erected improvements necessary in the operation of its road erroneously supposing them to be on its own land, in condemnation proceedings to acquire such location, the actual owner is not entitled to compensation for such structures. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Morgan, 42 Kan. 23; Oregon R. & Nav. Co. v. Mosier, 14 Or. 519.

Where a school district purchased a squatter title to land, being led to believe by counsel that it was superior to an outstanding patent of the same land, and relying thereon in good faith erected a schoolhouse notwithstanding notice from the holder of the patent title that it did so at its peril, in condemnation proceedings against the owner of the patent title, he is only entitled to the value of the land without the building as compensation. Searl v. Lake County School Dist. No. 2, 133 U. S. 553, 38 L. ed. 740, affirming 38 Fed. Rep. 12. J. G. G.

all damages to the land not taken, and in addition give him a house that cost the district $800. This, we think, would be giving more than a just compensation, and would be inequitable. We hold that the charge of the court was not erroneous. Justice v. Nesquehoning Valley R. Co. 87 Pa. 28; Toledo, A. A. & G. T. R. Co. v. Dunlap, 47 Mich. 457; Russell v. People's Sav. Bank, 89 Mich. 675; Meigs' App. 62 Pa. 28, 1 Am. Rep. 372; Daniels v. Chicago, I. & N. R. Co. 41 Iowa, 52.

In the case of Denver & R. G. W. R. Co. v. Standliff, 4 Utah, 117, it appeared that the railway company built its road across a tract of land owned by the United States. Standliff the defendant, afterwards obtained a patent for it, and the company instituted proceedings to condemn. The court said: "The company became a trespasser, not with a view of permanently holding the land without paying for it, but to hold it temporarily, and until it could be condemned in manner provided by law. Because the company was then a trespasser, it does not follow it should lose its railroad."

Appellant relies upon Searl v. Lake County School Dist. No. 2, 188 U. S. 553, 88 L. ed. 740. The defendant in that case wished to obtain land to erect a schoolhouse upon. The person in possession claimed what is known as a "squatter title." Another person claimed under a placer patent. Both claims were known to the school authorities, and were submitted by them in good faith to reputable counsel for advice, who advised them that the title was in the former. Relying upon his advice, they purchased of the person in possession, and erected a costly school building upon it. The title proved to be in the owner of the patent, and the defendant proceeded to have the land condemned under the law of eminent domain. The jury, under the instructions of the court, excluded the value of the building in assessing damages. Among other things, the court said: "But if the entry upon land is a naked trespass, buildings permanently attached to the soil become the property of the latter. . . . The circuit court was not dealing with an action of ejectment or trespass, but simply with a proceeding in the exercise of the right of eminent domain. That right is the offspring of political necessity, and is inseparable from sovereignty, unless denied to it by its fundamental law. It cannot be exercised except upon condition that just compensation shall be made to the owner, and it is the duty of the state, in the conduct of the inquest by which the compensation is ascertained, to see that it is just, not merely to the individual whose property is taken, but to the public, which is to pay for it. . . . The occupancy here was in no respect for a private purpose or pecuniary gain, but strictly and wholly for the public use. There could be no presumption that this public agent intended to confer public property upon a private individual, nor were the circumstances such as to impart the character of willful trespass to the entry by the district, or impose liability to the forfeiture of improvements made in discharge of its public duty. . . . The sole question is whether the circuit court erred in holding that the defendant could not be allowed for the improvements. We think that in this there was no error. In our judgment, the technical rule of law invoked to sustain the defendant's contention that he owned the schoolhouse was inapplicable, and the value of the improvements could not justly be included in the compensation." This opinion sanctions the principle that, if the authorities of the state, municipality, or other corporation, having the right to acquire the use of land for the public under the law of eminent domain, enter in good faith when such use is necessary, under a reasonable belief that they have the right, and make valuable improvements necessary to such use, their value should not be taken into consideration in awarding compensation to the owner of the land in condemnation proceedings afterwards instituted. The reasoning of this opinion appears to support the further rule, sanctioned by the cases cited above, that if such authorities make such entry and improvements without objection, in the expectation that the owner will permit the use, and with the intention, in case of refusal, of acquiring the right by purchase or condemnation, just compensation will not include the value of such improvements. The facts of the case in hand bring it within the latter rule, and its application to them authorizes the conclusion reached by us in this opinion. We are aware that cases cited are at variance with this principle, but we think that the better authority, as well as reason, supports it.

The judgment of the court below is affirmed.

Anderson and Blackburn, JJ., concur.

WASHINGTON SUPREME COURT.

Marie HAWKINS et al., Repts.,
v.
FRONT STREET CABLE R. CO., Appt.
(..... Wash.)

1. Loss of the society, companionship, and solace, of one's wife is not an element of the damages which he can recover in case of her injury through another's negligence.

NOTE.—For note on presumption of negligence from occurrence of accident, see Barnowski v. Helson (Mich.) 15 L. R. A. 83.
16 L. R. A.

2. Damages for loss or injury to the husband may properly be recovered in an action by husband and wife for a personal injury to her in jurisdictions where property acquired by either is community property for which the one having the disposition of it must sue, since he is the only necessary plaintiff in the action and may include in his demand all damages naturally flowing from the injury complained of.

3. No presumption of negligence on the part of a street-car company arises from the mere fact of injury without his fault to a passenger on one of its cars in consequence of a collision with a wagon on the highway.

4. It is not negligence for a passenger on a cable railway to take a seat on the outside of the grip car in a place provided for passengers, although there is room in the trailer.
5. Impairment of health and suffering growing out of the death and premature birth of the child of a pregnant woman by reason of injuries negligently inflicted on her by a third person, which would not have attended its birth at the usual time either alive or dead, may be considered in estimating the damages to be awarded for such injury.
6. Mere proof that an unborn child died and was prematurely delivered because of negligent injuries to its mother is not sufficient to establish her right to recover substantial damages for the injury.

(Scott, J., dissents.)

(January 21, 1892.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for King County in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from defendant's negligence. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. C. Haines, for appellant:

Although it is proper in cases of alleged tort against a wife, for the husband to join with her as plaintiff, still he cannot recover in the same cause of action for his own damage growing out of the tort to his wife. In the joint suit, no recovery can be had for special damage to the husband.

Wash. Code, § 102; Menckirter v. Hatlen, 42 Iowa, 288, 20 Am. Rep. 618; Tuttle v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 43 Iowa, 518; Laughlin v. Eaton, 54 Me. 154; Eberoll v. Krug, 3 Binn. 555; Brown v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 28 Mo. App. 209; Rarnes v. Martin, 15 Wis. 240, 82 Am. Dec. 670; Kavanaugh v. Janesville, 24 Wis. 618; Wheeling v. Troubridge, 5 W. Va. 855; King v. Thompson, 87 Pa. 865, 30 Am. Rep. 364; Sheldon v. The Uncle Sam, 18 Cal. 526, 79 Am. Dec. 193; Matthew v. Central Pac. R. Co. 68 Cal. 450; Tell v. Gibson, 66 Cal. 247; Scott v. Metropolitan R. Co. 4 Mackey, 152; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Cosby, 4 West. Rep. 464, 107 Ind. 32; Whitcomb v. Barre, 87 Vt. 148; Lindsey v. Danville, 46 Vt. 144.

The court erred in giving the following instruction: "It is the law that where a passenger, being carried on a train, is injured without fault of his own there is legal presumption of negligence, casting upon the carrier the burden of disproving it."

Holbrook v. Utica & S. R. Co. 12 N. Y. 236, 64 Am. Dec. 502; Curtis v. Rochester & S. R. Co. 18 N. Y. 534, 75 Am. Dec. 258; Brehm v. Great Western R. Co. 84 Barb. 256; Mitchell v. Western & A. R. Co. 80 Ga. 22; Warner v. New York Cent. R. Co. 44 N. Y. 471; 2 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. § 516.

Where the plaintiff takes a position upon the unprotected seat of a dummy, she assumes the added risk incident to such position. This is especially so when there is also furnished for her accommodation a thoroughly protected seat in the closed car.

16 L. R. A.

Indianapolis, B. & W. R. Co. v. Beaver, 41 Ind. 498.

Messrs. Ralph Simon and Allen & Powell, for appellees:

There is but one cause of action stated in the complaint. The common-law theory that the husband and wife must join in a suit to recover for the wife's injuries and the husband must sue separately for the losses and expenses incurred by him because of the injuries does not obtain in this state. The whole damage springs from the same wrongful act. Formerly the right to sue was divided; the defendant owed for one damage, but different parties. Section 7 of the Code permits the husband and wife to join in all causes of actions arising from injuries to the person or character of either or both of them. The right to sue for all causes of action arising from the injuries is thus vested in the same parties, and there is no misjoinder.

Pom. Civil Rem. & Rem. Rights, § 236. See Messe v. Fond du Lac, 48 Wis. 323; Holmes v. Fond du Lac, 43 Wis. 292.

The court did not err in instructing the jury that it is the law that where a passenger being carried on a train is injured, without fault of his own, there is a legal presumption of negligence, casting upon the carrier the burden of disproving it.

Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. 794-797; Laing v. Colder, 8 Pa. 479, 49 Am. Dec. 538; Sullivan v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 80 Pa. 284, 72 Am. Dec. 698; Louisville, N. A. & O. R. Co. v. Jones, 7 West. Rep. 83, 108 Ind. 551; Seybolt v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 95 N. Y. 562; White v. Boston & A. R. Co. 4 New Eng. Rep. 267, 144 Mass. 404; Eagle Packet Co. v. Defries, 94 Ill. 598, 34 Am. Rep. 245; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ritter, 85 Ky. 368; Smith v. St. Paul O. R. Co. 83 Minn. 1, 50 Am. Rep. 550; Moore v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co. 69 Iowa, 491; Coudy v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 85 Mo. 79; Baltimore & Y. Turnp. Co. v. Leonhardt, 66 Md. 70; Magoffin v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. 103 Mo. 540; 3 Suth. Damages, 258.

The rule is still more strict in regard to street railways running through obstructed and crowded thoroughfares.

Wilson v. Cunningham, 3 Cal. 241, 58 Am. Dec. 407; Heucke v. Milwaukee City R. Co. 69 Wis. 401; Wilson v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 41 Minn. 56.

The facts constituting negligence were established by undisputed evidence; the court would have been justified in instructing the jury that there was gross negligence.

Northern Pac. R. Co. v. O'Brien (Wash.) Jan. Term, 1889.

Appellant's contention in regard to the mis-carriage, being too remote to be considered in the estimate of damages, is not tenable. The argument makes the remoteness of damages entirely a question of time. There was no proof of any intervening cause. "Proximity of cause has no necessary connection with contiguity of space or nearness in time."

Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. p. 88; Ehrgott v. New York, 96 N. Y. 264, 48 Am. Rep. 622; Cincinnati, H. & I. R. Co. v. Eaton, 94 Ind. 474; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Buck, 96 Ind. 846, 49 Am. Rep. 168; Brown v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 54 Wis. 842, 41 Am. Rep. 41; Beau- champ v. Saginaw Min. Co. 50 Mich. 168. 45 Am. Rep. 80; Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 74.

It was a question for the jury, in the absence of proof of intervening cause.

Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hope, 80 Pa. 373, 21 Am. Rep. 100, Lake v. Milliken, 62 Me. 240, 16 Am. Rep. 456; Willey v. Belfast, 61 Me. 569; Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 256; Adams v. Young, 3 West. Rep. 145, 44 Ohio St. 80; Green Ridge R. Co. v. Brinkman, 64 Md. 52, 54 Am. Rep. 755; Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. p. 81, note 2.

Stiles, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action by husband and wife for damages resulting from injuries inflicted upon the wife through the negligent acts of the appellant's conductor and gripman, while she was a passenger on its street-car. She occupied an outside seat on the "dummy," at the side and near the front. At a certain place the railway track was blocked by a grocer's delivery wagon, the driver of which refused to move out of the way until the dummy came to a stop within a foot or two of the rear end of the wagon. After the gripman had called upon the wagon driver to move on, the conductor told the gripman to move the car up, and hit or push the wagon. The gripman obeyed the direction, and struck the wagon a light blow, when the driver of the wagon whipped up his horse, and drove down the street, still occupying the railway track, the dummy following closely after, and perhaps still pushing the wagon. They proceeded thus for about 800 feet, when suddenly the driver turned his horse sharply to one side, for the purpose of entering a cross-street; and the dummy, coming immediately behind, crashed into the rear end of the wagon, and upset and broke it. Some portion of the wagon, said to be part of a broken wheel, fell upon Mrs. Hawkins, and injured her. The complaint contained allegations of damage as follows: "Whereby, and by reason of which said plaintiff's [Mrs. Hawkins'] body was greatly bruised and injured, causing this plaintiff to suffer great pain of body and anguish of mind, and was by reason thereof confined to her bed under the care of a physician, and prevented from attending to her household duties, as also her business and employment, to wit, that of bath-tender, for a long space of time, to wit, ten days, and thus prevented from earning her salary of $3 per day; and this plaintiff the said George Hawkins, the husband of said Marie Hawkins, was deprived of the society, services, companionship, and solace of his said wife, and was compelled to and did incur large expense and outlay, both of time and money, in attending to and curing his said wife as aforesaid, whereby he was damaged in a large sum, to wit, $1,000. That at the time, to wit, the 26th day of May, 1890, when the said defendant corporation, by its carelessness and neglect as aforesaid, caused the injury aforesaid, the plaintiff Marie Hawkins was enroute, and that the injury to her body as aforesaid, caused by the collision aforesaid, was of such a severe character that it caused the death of the child with which the said 16 L. R. A.

plaintiff was then and there enroute as aforesaid; and that since the filing of the second amended complaint, and the answer thereto herein, to wit, on October 5, 1890, the plaintiff Marie Hawkins lost the said child, and by reason whereof the said Marie Hawkins suffered great pain in body and distress of mind in giving birth to the said child dead, and in the loss of the said child, and these plaintiffs were compelled to and did expend large sums of money in curing the said Marie Hawkins, and suffered other damages therein." The case was commenced within a few days after the injury occurred, and originally charged no damage accruing later than ten days from May 26, but subsequent to October 5 the last paragraph was added as a supplemental complaint.

The first error complained of relates to the husband's alleged damage. The defendant requested the court to charge that the fact that the husband was joined as a plaintiff in the action gave him no right to recover any damages on his own account, for loss or injury sustained by him. This request was refused, and the court charged instead: "If the jury find for the plaintiffs, and if they find that by reason of the injuries of the wife, Marie Hawkins, the husband, George Hawkins, was deprived of the ordinary benefit of his wife's services, then the jury may in computing the damages take into consideration a fair compensation of such loss caused by the wife's injuries." At common law, when a wife was injured through the tort of a third person, the injury and the right of action were hers; but she could not sue unless her husband, if living, joined her as plaintiff. The recovery in that case was the pecuniary measure of her own injury and suffering in body and mind. But there was another element of damage which could be recovered only by her husband suing alone in a separate action, viz., his loss of her services, and his outlay in restoring her to health. In this case the complaint seems to have been based upon the idea that he could also recover for the society, companionship, and solace of his wife, but we do not understand these to be recoverable injuries. As matter of fact, unless death ensues the husband is not deprived of either, although his enjoyment of them may be lessened by the knowledge of his wife's suffering. They are of those sentimental, intangible injuries which the law cannot measure. Even in case of death, they are not elements of damage. 2 Thomp. Neg. p. 1289; Howard County Comrs. v. Legg, 98 Ind. 528.

The departure from the common law has, in the most of the states, been in the direction of securing to the wife the right to sue alone for injuries to her, and giving her the fruits of her action as her separate property. In others, as Wisconsin (Rev. Stat. § 2680,) husband and wife may recover in the same action for all the injuries to both, in case of a tort committed against her. The instruction requested by the appellant was based upon the common-law rule, and would have been a proper instruction were the common law in this particular in force here. But inasmuch as the right to sue for a tort which one has suffered is a chose in action, and therefore property, in those states where, as here, all property acquired by either spouse, otherwise than by gift, bequest, demise, or descent, is common or community property, this chose in action is suable by that member of the community who has the disposition of the community personality. So in Texas it is held that the wife is not either a necessary or a proper party to an action for an assault committed upon her. Ezell v. Dodson, 60 Tex. 331; Gallagher v. Bowie, 68 Tex. 265. And in California the husband is held to be a necessary party, since he has the management and power of disposition of the right to damages as part of the common property. McFadden v. Santa Ana, O. & T. St. R. Co. 87 Cal. 464, 11 L. R. A. 252.

Our statutes are substantially the same in this respect as those of Texas and California, and we see no reason why we should not follow the decisions of those states. In this case, therefore, the husband was the only necessary party, though the wife, by section 7 (Code 1881), is a proper party, and in this action all of the damages naturally flowing from the injury complained of are recoverable. The first element of these to be considered is that directly connected with the person of the wife, the injury, and its subsequent consequences, whether permanent or temporary, and her pain, suffering, wounded feelings, etc., next, the cost of her nursing, medical attendance, and medicines, which, although they could, at common law, be recovered by the husband alone, are with us presumptively expenses incurred and paid by the community; and, lastly, the loss of the wife's services in the household. Under this ruling it is apparent that the instruction asked by the defendant was properly refused, and that given by the court, as above, was substantially correct.

The second point made by appellant is that the court erred in instructing the jury thus: "It is the law that where a passenger, being carried on a train, is injured without fault of his own, there is legal presumption of negligence, casting upon the carrier the burden of disproving it." Such is not the law as laid down by very numerous authorities. The language of the charge in question was apparently taken from Cooley on Torts, (2d ed.) p. 796, where it is quoted with approval, as being well said in a Pennsylvania case. There follow several lines in the text, however, which qualify the quotation, and make it clearly the law when applied to the cases intended to be covered by it. These additional lines are also taken from the Pennsylvania case, but without credit by quotation. The case was Meier v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 64 Pa. 225, 8 Am. Rep. 681, where the exact language is: "Prima facie, where a passenger, being carried on a train, is injured without fault of his own, there is a legal presumption of negligence, casting upon the carrier the onus of disproving it. . . . This is the rule when the injury is caused by a defect in the road, cars, or machinery, or by a want of diligence or care in those employed, or by any other thing which the company can and ought to control as a part of its duty, to carry the passengers safely; but this rule of evidence is not conclusive." No case cited to us, or that we have been able to find, goes further than this. See Patterson, Railway Accident Law, chap. 6, p. 438, et seq.

16 L. R. A.

In Federal St. & P. V. R. Co. v. Gibson, 96 Pa. 83, a passenger on the street-car of a railway company was struck and injured by a passing load of hay. The charge of the trial court was that if plaintiff was without fault he was entitled to recover, unless the defendant satisfied the jury by the weight of evidence that the injury arose from an accident which could not be prevented by the utmost skill, foresight, and diligence on the part of the driver. Held error; and the court said: "It is true in many cases the mere fact of injury to a passenger raises the presumption of want of care on the part of the railroad company. Such is the case when the injury results from defective tracks, cars, machinery, or motive power. Here there was no privity between the company and the driver of the wagon. . . . We see nothing in the case which relieved the defendant in error from proving negligence, or that threw on the company the burden of disproving it."

Applying the just rule thus laid down to the case at bar, we do not see how the charge given by the court, even had it been modified as quoted from Meier v. Pennsylvania R. Co., supra, could have been pertinent. The nature of the accident was not such as to warrant saying anything about the machinery; and the question whether the servants of the appellant violated any duty to Mrs. Hawkins in allowing the dummy to run so close behind the wagon as to touch or push it, so that when the wagon was turned into the side street by the driver it was upset, was the very question which the jury was to decide upon the proofs. They were to say whether, under all the circumstances, there was negligence in so running the car at the rate of speed at which it traveled, or in not stopping the car when the wagon slackened its pace in turning out. But if the fact of injury was to determine the negligence prima facie, the jury would naturally stop its consideration of the other questions, and look to the defendant's evidence to see whether there was anything to negative the presumption declared by the court. For this error the case must be reversed.

But there are some other matters which it is necessary to advert to in view of another trial. The appellant claims contributory negligence on the part of Mrs. Hawkins in taking a seat on the outside of the dummy when she could have sat safely on the inside of the trail car. This we cannot support. The seats on the dummy were for passengers, and any one sitting there had the same right to be protected against the negligence of the company's servants as though he had sat inside. The original claim in this case was for special damage to a dress worn by Mrs. Hawkins, in the sum of $25, $20 for loss of her earnings as a bath-tender, and $3,000 general damages. But by the third amended and supplemental complaint, filed after the delivery of her child, the demand was raised to $25,000. We can see no reason for this very great increase in the alleged damage, unless it was upon the theory that, if the death of the child could be shown to have been caused by the injury to its mother, that fact would be ground for an enhancement of the damage. Nor can we upon any other theory account for the vast amount of medical testimony adduced to show that the death of the child, some three weeks before its delivery, was attributable to the blows and fright inflicted upon Mrs. Hawkins four months and nine days before its delivery. Had this testimony been coupled with any attempt to show that in giving birth to the child the mother had suffered any unusual pain or illness, or that by the death of the child and her subsequent carriage of it for several weeks in that condition she had been subjected to extraordinary distress of body or mind, we might discern some purpose in it. But it is admitted that the mere loss of the child by its death en ventre sa mere is not a recoverable damage, and, for aught that appears, there was no perceptible difference in the amount of pain and illness attending the delivery of the child dead from what there would have been had it been alive. It may have been imagined that there would be, but there was no testimony that there was. It appeared that the child on May 26 must have been at least four months advanced. On that day the accident occurred, after which Mrs. Hawkins went home without assistance. She was immediately attended by a physician, who found symptoms of a miscarriage. But after about ten days of quiet and treatment the danger apparently passed away, and she resumed her accustomed household duties, using great care and caution, however, against any imprudence which might bring on the dreaded miscarriage. She continued somewhat nervous and anxious, and suffered some pain and had some faint spells; but the child was alive, and remained so until a certain time some four weeks before October 5, after which no signs of life were observed. No physician was summoned until the day of her delivery, and the confinement lasted some fourteen hours. It was about two months later before she could resume her household duties. Previous to the accident she was a healthy woman, and had none of the symptoms described. Upon these summarized facts, the jury was to find what pecuniary injury the plaintiffs suffered from the tort committed against Mrs. Hawkins, not in any sense against the child. Cases are cited to show that damages have been recovered for a miscarriage. Shurtle v. Minneapolis, 17 Minn. 808, (Gil. 284;); Barbee v. Reese, 60 Miss. 906; Brown v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 54 Wis. 842. But in all such cases it will be found that the recovery was for the ill-health and suffering attendant and consequent upon the miscarriage, and not in any sense for the loss of the child.

In this case, however, respondent's own medical experts say there was no miscarriage, but a premature birth, caused by the death of the child from insufficient nourishment, referable probably to the injury and fright occurring to the mother in May previously. Now, time is not considered in establishing liability for injuries, except that when what are claimed to be effects of an injury appear at a period remote from the injury the proximate cause of the cause is more difficult to prove. And so we have no doubt that if Mrs. Hawkins shows impairment of health and suffering growing out of the death and premature birth of her child, which would not have attended its birth at the usual time, either alive or dead, and also that the child's death is attributable to a negligent injury which she received, respondents can recover for her suffering and impaired health. But she must show the injury by appropriate evidence, and the mere proof that the child died, and was prematurely delivered, as a result of the accident, would not be sufficient to presume substantial damage therefrom. We are led to say this much from a belief that, from the way the case went to the jury, the death of the child probably occupied a large place in its calculations, and tended to cause the return of a somewhat excessive verdict, upon the showing of actual damage, though we do not wish it understood that, if the size of the verdict were the only ground of objection, we should on that account reverse the case. It is matter of common knowledge that every woman who is enceinte, and particularly one who is so for the first time, is more or less prone to nervousness and anxiety, as well as that the travail of childbirth is a time of suffering, illness and danger; so that it is not just to impose upon the merely careless tortfeasor, without previous knowledge of her condition, liability for more of her trouble than he has actually caused.

Judgment reversed, and cause remanded for a new trial.

Anders, Ch. J., and Dunbar, J., concur; Hoyt, J., did not sit at the hearing, he being disqualified.

Scott, J., dissenting:

I cannot agree with the conclusion reached by the majority in this case, as to the ground upon which the judgment is reversed, that the right to a recovery was not limited to cases where the injury was due to some act or omission of the company in the instruction which was given as to the presumption of negligence arising in case of injury. In this case the instruction could only have been injurious as bearing upon the fact that the injury might have been caused solely by the negligence of the driver of the express wagon in not getting out of the way, or in turning off so abruptly. There was no question as to the respondent having been hurt in this collision, and I think this general charge complained of was remedied, explained, and limited in a subsequent instruction, wherein the court charged the jury that "it is claimed in this case by the plaintiffs that the injuries received by Marie Hawkins were suffered from the consequences of a collision which took place between the cable car of the defendant and a wagon driven by one Keller, who is a witness in this cause. In order to enable the plaintiffs to recover, it is not sufficient to show merely that the collision occurred and that the plaintiff Marie Hawkins was injured in consequence of it. In order to make the defendant liable for such injuries, it must further appear by a preponderance of the evidence that the collision resulted from the negligence of the defendant or its employés. And I instruct you, further, that if you should find from the evidence that the collision was caused by the negligence or carelessness of the man who was driving the wagon, and not by the negligence or carelessness of the defendant, then the person driving or owning the wagon would be liable for such injuries, and it would be your duty in such case to find for the defendant in this case." Here the jury were specifically told that the plaintiffs could only recover in case the defendant was negligent, and that mere proof of the injury was not sufficient, and it seems to me that the jury could only have understood that the right to a recovery was so limited. I do not understand that any question was raised over the testimony relating to the death of the child, except that its death was claimed to have been too remote to warrant any recovery of damages for anything resulting from it, nor do I understand that the judgment is reversed upon any such ground; so I do not desire to examine or comment upon the evidence in this respect. I think the judgment should have been affirmed.

ALABAMA SUPREME COURT.

Emma L. LINDSAY, Appt.,

v.

Mary K. COOPER et al.

(.....Ala.....)

1. The silence of an administrator in respect to any individual title or claim to property sold by him in person as that of his intestate, under order of the court, estops him and those who claim under him from afterwards setting up a legal title which he had at the time of the sale.
2. Purchasers at a judicial sale, although for value and in good faith, are affected to the same extent as the person whose title they buy, by an estoppel in pais which prevented him from asserting the title.
3. A right of action to establish an interest in property purchased at a judicial sale under an invalid title, for which purchase money notes are given on receiving a bond for title, does not accrue until the notes are paid.
4. An estoppel may be the basis of a claim to establish a trust in land of which the defendants have both the legal title and possession.
5. An estoppel in pais alone is not sufficient to cause equity to compel a transfer of the title to real estate to the one in whose favor it runs when the value of the land has materially increased since the estoppel accrued, so that payment of its former value with interest will involve less injury to those in possession.

(January 6, 1891.)

APPEAL by complainant from a decree of the Chancery Court for Colbert County in favor of defendants in a suit brought to enforce an alleged trust in certain real estate. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. B. Moore, for appellant:

Price as administrator of Walker's estate filed a petition in the probate court for an order to sell the land in controversy in which under oath he alleged that Walker, his intestate, died "seised and possessed" of said land. He procured the order and sold the land to Winston. If now living he would be estopped from claiming this land and his petition would be conclusive evidence against him that the land belonged to Walker.

Steele v. Adams, 21 Ala. 584; Doe v. Walters, 16 Ala. 714; Hendricks v. Kelly, 64 Ala. 389; Powers v. Harris, 68 Ala. 409; Prickett v. Siebert, 75 Ala. 315; Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. South & North Ala. R. Co. 84 Ala. 570, 5 Am. St. Rep. 401; 1 Perry, Tr. § 438; 2 Perry, Tr. §§ 468, 464; Putnam v. Tyler, 10 Cent. Rep. 752, 117 Pa. 570; Miles v. Left, 60 Iowa, 108; Mason v. Williams, 66 N. C. 564; Vilas v. Mason, 25 Wis. 310.

"Seised and possessed" means a holding by the rightful owner.

NOTE.—Estoppel in pais upon defendant as basis for action to recover real estate.

A simple estoppel does not have the effect of conveying the legal title. Miller v. Cook, 10 L. R. A. 292, 185 Ill. 190, in which case an estoppel upon the mortgagor of property from questioning the validity of a tax deed thereof was held not to have the effect of conveying to the holder of the tax deed either the title or rights of the mortgagor.

The action of ejectment is confined to cases where the claimant has the possessory title. See note to Murphy v. Bolger (Ill.) 1 L. R. A. 309.

And plaintiff must recover upon the strength of his own title, and cannot rely upon the weakness of defendant's claim. See note to Greene v. Couse (N. Y.) 13 L. R. A. 206.

In accordance with the general principle upon which the action of ejectment is founded, and in view of the character of the rights created by an estoppel in pais, it seems to be generally held that the existence of such estoppel in favor of one out of possession of real estate will not enable him to maintain ejectment against the one bound by the estoppel who has the legal title and is in possession of the property. De Mill v. Moffat, 49 Mich. 126; Hayes v. Livingston, 34 Mich. 384, 22 Am. Rep. 533; 16 L. R. A.

Winslow v. Cooper, 104 Ill. 238; Nims v. Sherman, 43 Mich. 51; White v. Hapeman, Id. 267.

So in ejectment a plaintiff cannot rely on estoppel to prevent defendant from disputing his alleged title. To recover he must show a clear legal title. Nix v. Collins, 85 Ga. 219.

So an estoppel in pais cannot be made the basis of a writ of possession after a judgment foreclosing a mortgage. Thompson v. Campbell, 57 Ala. 188.

So estoppel by admission of the seisin of plaintiff's husband is not sufficient to sustain an action for dower. Hamlin v. Hamlin, 19 Me. 141.

On the other hand, equity seems never to have hesitated to compel a transfer of the title whenever it has been called upon to do so if the complainant was clearly entitled to such relief, although the cases in which the jurisdiction has been invoked seem to be rare; and it also seems that the estoppel has usually been used as a defense by the one in possession, either in the ejectment suit where such procedure is permitted, or by an application to equity to enjoin the ejectment suit, or to afford such other relief as was appropriate in the premises.

Where one having in his possession a deed of entail running in his own favor engrossed the jointure deed of the wife of his elder brother in McKenzie v. Baldridge, 49 Ala. 566; 1 Washb. Real Prop. 84; 4 Kent, Com. 2; Anderson v. Knox, 20 Ala. 161; 2 Devlin, Deeds, § 885.

Appellees claim title under and through Price who is estopped, and, being privies in estate to Price, are also estopped.

2 Herman, Estoppel, §§ 586, 587; Colburn v. Broughton, 9 Ala. 357; 1 Herman, Estoppel, §§ 20, 145, citing Bentley v. Cleveland, 22 Ala. 814; Edmondson v. Montague, 14 Ala. 370; Montgomery v. Gordon, 51 Ala. 377; Catterlin v. Hardy, 10 Ala. 511; Thomason v. Odum, 31 Ala. 103, 63 Am. Dec. 159; Carey v. McDougald, 25 Ala. 120; Dotson v. State, 62 Ala. 143, 34 Am. Rep. 2; Masteron v. Bentley, 60 Ala. 521; 2 Pom. Eq. § 415, note 1, §§ 683, 818; McCravey v. Remson, 19 Ala. 437, 54 Am. Dec. 194; Kennedy v. Brown, 61 Ala. 296; Hendricks v. Kelly, 64 Ala. 388; Taylor v. Agricultural & M. Asso. 63 Ala. 229; Rorer, Jud. Sales, §§ 444, 445.

Appellees claim title through one Barton, who purchased the property at a judicial sale. He purchased it at a sale made by Jones as administrator of Price and who obtained an order and sold it as belonging to said Price's estate. Appellees claiming as they do under a judicial sale cannot as against appellant claim and defend as innocent purchasers for value without notice.

The maxim "caveat emptor" strictly applies to judicial sales in which there is no warranty of title. The purchaser and those who claim under him have no cause of complaint if the title should prove valueless.

Wilson v. Wall, 34 Ala. 288; Witter v. Dudley, 42 Ala. 616; Thames v. Rembert, 63 Ala. 561; Wallace v. Nichols, 56 Ala. 321; Fore v. McKenzie, 58 Ala. 115; Bland v. Bowie, 53 Ala. 152; Hickson v. Lingold, 47 Ala. 449; Boykin v. Cook, 61 Ala. 472; Lovelace v. Webb, 62 Ala. 271; Counts v. Harlan, 78 Ala. 554; Derriek v. Brown, 66 Ala. 162.

There could have been no adverse possession between Steele, the verbal vendee of Winston, and his vendor, because Steele paid no part of the purchase money.

Sellers v. Hayes, 17 Ala. 749; McQueen v. Levy, 36 Ala. 308.

possession of the property, concealing the fact of the entail, the court, after the death of the brother, established the wife's jointure rights against the one holding the deed and all claiming by or under him. Raw v. Pote, 2 Vern. 239.

In Saunderson v. Ballance, 55 N. C. 322, 47 Am. Dec. 218, the court compelled one who stood by and saw lands in which he had an interest purchased as the land of another at public auction without disclosing his title, to convey his interest to the purchaser upon receiving what he paid for the land, which in that case was merely a nominal sum.

In equity an estoppel resting in parol may form the basis of an affirmative action to pass the title to lands. Taylor v. Agricultural & M. Asso. 63 Ala. 229.

Where the heirs-at-law induced plaintiff to purchase testator's land at an administrator's sale under an order of court which afterwards proved to be invalid, the court held that plaintiff had a remedy in equity to compel them to convey their interest in the premises to him. Favill v. Roberts, 3 Lana. 23, 50 N. Y. 223.

But the damages to support an estoppel and convert the owner into a trustee must be something 16 L. R. A.

Mr. R. C. Brickell also for appellant.
Mr. Roulhac & Nathan for appellees.

McClellan, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

It is sought by the bill in this case to declare and enforce a trust against the respondents in respect of a one-third undivided interest in a certain quarter section of land to which they have the legal title, and which they have been in possession of actually or by privity, since 1870. Complainant's theory is that she has a perfect equity in and to that interest; that the respondents hold the legal title in trust for her, and should be decreed to execute that trust by vesting title in her, and held to account for rents and profits accruing pending the existence of the trust. The facts are complicated, but the evidence which goes to establish them is substantially free from conflict. We encounter no difficulty in finding them to be as follows, so far as material: William H. Price became seised and possessed of the land in fee simple absolute about the year 1853, and continued in its occupancy for four or five years. In 1857 or 1858 he sold the land by executory contract to Isaac H. Walker, and put the purchaser in possession. Early in 1860 Walker died, without having paid the purchase money to Price, and without having received a conveyance of it. Price became Walker's administrator, and in that capacity took possession of the tract in controversy, together with other lands held by the intestate, and applied to the probate court for an order to sell all these lands for the payment of decedent's debts. An order of sale was made, and, acting under it, Price sold, on December 17, 1860, all of said lands as the property of the intestate. At this sale Thomas E. Winston became the purchaser of the quarter section in question. In accordance with the terms of the sale the purchaser executed him several notes, with sureties, for the purchase money, and Price executed to him a bond for title, binding himself, as such administrator, to convey all the right, title, and interest of the intestate upon payment of the purchase-money notes. Winston was let into possession immediately, and rented the land for the year more substantial than what would technically amount to a consideration for a contract. It must be of such character that the person sustaining it cannot be put back into his former position and cannot be adequately compensated by pecuniary damages. East v. Dolhite, 72 N. C. 563.

So where the former owner of land which had been sold for taxes represented to a third person that the tax title was good and persuaded him to purchase it, although enjoined upon learning that the tax title was void from setting up his legal title as against the claimant of the tax title, he was not compelled to make a transfer of his title rather than compensate the holder of a tax title for the amount claimed, nor was an agreement between the parties enforced which provided that in case the tax claimed was not paid within a certain time the tax title of the holder should become absolute. Nelson v. Kelly, 91 Ala. 569.

There is little doubt that other cases exist where similar equitable relief has been granted. But if such cases do exist, the fact of the granting of such relief seems to have remained unindexed since a careful search has failed to reveal them.

H. P. F.

1861 to John A. Steele. Steele was a surety on the notes given by Winston to Price as Walker's administrator. At the close of 1861, Steele and Winston had a parol understanding and agreement by the terms of which the former was to take the land off Winston's hands, and assume and pay the purchase-money notes as they matured. Under this agreement, Steele continued in possession and cultivation of the land as the owner of it until 1870, but paid nothing on the notes. Meantime Price died in 1865, without asserting any individual claim or title to the land, and without taking any steps as Walker's administrator to collect the notes of Winston. On December 18, 1865, Theophilus A. Jones qualified as administrator of Price's estate, and soon afterwards reported and had the estate declared insolvent; but it does not appear that he advanced any claim to this land prior to 1870. Winston died in 1869; and in 1870, Steele delivered the possession of the land to Jones, as Price's administrator, by whom it was sold as assets of Price's estate under probate order on April 24, 1872, to Clark T. Barton, the sale being regularly reported and confirmed, and conveyance executed to the purchaser as ordered by the court. The respondents, Mary K. Cooper, Minerva Winston, and Calvin G. Jackson, held by mesne conveyances from said Barton. After Price's death one Weatherford became the administrator de bonis non of the estate of Isaac Walker. Weatherford having died this administration was committed to Abner W. Ligon, general administrator for the county of Franklin on January 25, 1869. It does not appear that either Weatherford or Ligon ever made any efforts to realize on the Winston notes by proceedings against the makers thereof personally, or against the land, until 1872. Then Ligon, as administrator of Walker, filed a statement of the notes as a claim against the estate of Thomas E. Winston. Lewis B. Thornton, having qualified as administrator de bonis non of Winston's estate, reported the same insolvent, and a decree passed so declaring. The claim by Ligon was filed while the estate of Winston was being administered under this decree as insolvent, and, pending this state of things, Ligon obtained an order to sell the Winston notes, along with other claims belonging to Walker's estate. At a sale under this order John E. Moore bought these notes at the price of $50, which was distributed to the creditors of Walker's estate, and was let in to the representation of the claim based upon them against Winston's estate. This claim was contested by Winston's administrator, but whether meritoriously or not we are not advised, as the objection was held not to have been seasonably made, and the estate was upon that ground adjudged to be liable for it, (see Thornton v. Moore, 61 Ala. 847); and the administrator compromised it with Moore by paying $1,100 therefor. It appears, further, that no cognizance was had of this land, or the interest of Winston in it, in the administration of his estate. It was not administered. The estate, though declared insolvent, was not so in fact, or, rather, by compromises and the like, effected by Thornton with creditors, their demands were satisfied, and a considerable sum remained, which was distributed to the intestate's children. The present complainant is one of these children. There are two others who do not join in this bill. The complainant was born in March, 1864, and filed this bill September 10, 1887, within three years after attaining her majority.

Whether or not Price and his privies are estopped to assert his legal title against Winston and those claiming under him, and, among the rest, the present complainant, is a prominent, if not, indeed, a vital, question in the case. The facts specially bearing upon this inquiry, which have not before been adverted to, are the following: In his petition to the probate court for an order to sell this along with other land as the administrator of Walker, Price alleged that his intestate died "seised and possessed" of all the land sought to be sold; and this averment is not in any manner qualified by the statement of any other fact or circumstance in limitation of Walker's ownership. There is no intimation that Price himself and in individual capacity held the legal title, naked or otherwise, or any beneficial interest in the land, or any lien for the unpaid purchase money. The order of sale which passed in response to this petition is likewise without intimation that any less estate than an unincumbered fee in the land was to be sold. The sale under this order was made by Price in person. It is not pretended for respondents that at the time and place of the sale, or at any other time and place, Price advanced, asserted, or made known in any manner to those present at the sale, or to Thomas E. Winston, who then purchased the land, that he, Price, had the legal title to the land, and a lien upon it for the purchase money due from Walker to him, or either, or that any other or less estate than the unincumbered fee was in the estate of his intestate or intended to be passed by the sale he was then making. To the contrary, this record cannot be read without enforcing the conclusion that he gave no notice whatever of his personal title or interest or claim in and to the property. Persons present at the sale testify that the land was sold by Price as the property of Walker's estate. The bond for title which he executed in his representative capacity to Winston recites that the land was sold as Walker's, and evidences an undertaking to convey the title thereto as fully as it was vested in the obligor as Walker's administrator; and all this may be looked to, not, indeed, as importing an estoppel by the bond, but as admissions of Price against interest going to negative any reservation or notice of his personal interest at the sale to Winston. And, beyond all this, the uncontroverted evidence is that Winston purchased the land at its full market value, bidding therefor $15.02 per acre, amounting to $2,403, for the 160 acres, and executed his note for that sum. Moreover, the report of the sale imports no intimation that any less than an unincumbered fee in the land was sold. On these facts,—that Price alleged the seisin and possession of his intestate of the land, he asked for an order to sell, thereby importing a purpose to sell an estate in fee, (McKenzie v. Baldridge, 49 Ala. 564); that there is nothing in the petition, or the order of sale, or report of sale, or bond for title, or the notes accepted by Price, in any degree indicating that less than the fee was intended to be or was in fact sold; that, on the contrary, the manifest implication, from each and all of these papers, is that Walker's estate was in the unincumbered ownership of the land; that those present at the sale and who testify in this case in no wise suggest that any notice was given by Price of any individual interest or claim on his part, and that the land fetched its full market value (more, indeed, per acre than the other lands of the estate lying adjacent to it), as appears from the report of sale,—we cannot, without the greatest violence to the probative force of evidence, reach any other conclusion than that Price, selling the land in person, as Walker's administrator, gave no notice or intimation whatever of his individual rights in respect of it, but, conscious, as he must have been, that the purchaser was acting upon the assumption and in the belief that he was getting the land free from all incumbrance and claim of adverse title, allowed him to proceed upon that assumption and in that belief to a change of his position, to his detriment, in taking upon himself a pecuniary liability evidenced by the notes, which doubtless could have been enforced at the time, and which were subsequently enforced against his estate. These facts involve every element of an estoppel in pais upon Price, conceding that he had the legal title or a lien for unpaid purchase money, or both, to and on the land when he sold it as Walker's administrator, to subsequently assert that title, or enforce his lien against the purchaser at that sale. If he had the title and lien, or either, he must have known it. He must be holden to have known that Winston bought in the belief of the non-existence of any such adverse claim or right in him or in anybody else. It cannot be supposed that any sane man would pay the full value of property, not for the property, but for the privilege of paying its full value over again to its real owner, and thus acquiring it from the latter. Price not only stood by, in a sense, and saw Winston buy his land from another, believing that other to be its owner, and said nothing, but he represented that other in the transaction, and as his agent, in legal contemplation, participated in the sale of his own property to Winston, knowing that Winston's purchase was influenced by the belief, which Price knew to be ill-founded, that the property belonged to the principal, Walker's estate, and not to the agent, Price; and he said never a word of warning to the purchaser, but consciously, and hence intentionally and willfully, as the law looks upon his conduct, permitted Winston to buy and pay for, in the sense of becoming legally liable for the purchase money, that which he professed to sell as administrator, but which he knew he did not own as administrator and could not sell. In all reason and by all the authorities it was Price's moral and legal duty to speak, and to give notice of his claim and rights in the premises. And "his silence, when in good conscience he ought to speak, shall close his mouth when he would speak." Having been silent when every consideration of moral and legal obligation was upon him to apprise the purchaser, acting on the assumption, known to

16 L. R. A.

Price, of the nonexistence of the facts which Price could and should have disclosed to him, having changed his legal status to his detriment in consequence of Price's failure to discharge this duty, the law holds the latter estopped now to say that the real facts were other than he wrongfully allowed the purchaser to believe them to be at the time of the sale, on the familiar doctrine "that where one knowing suffers another, in his presence, to purchase property, to which he has a claim or title, which he willfully conceals, he will be deemed, under such circumstances, to have waived his claim, and will not afterwards be permitted to assert it against the purchaser." Herman, Estoppel, p. 1054 et seq.; Bigelow, Estoppel, p. 476 et seq.; Devey v. Field, 4 Met. 381, 38 Am. Dec. 876; Stephens v. Baird, 9 Cow. 274; Favill v. Roberts, 50 N. Y. 222; Greens v. Smith, 57 Vt. 269; Fielding v. Du Bose, 63 Tex. 631; Wells v. Pierce, 27 N. H. 509; Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Ragdale, 54 Miss. 200; Money v. Ricketts, 62 Miss. 209; Copeland v. Copeland, 28 Me. 525; Raley v. Williams, 78 Mo. 310; Bullis v. Noble, 36 Iowa, 618; Wendell v. Van Rensselaer, 1 Johns. Ch. 844, 1 L. ed. 165; Heard v. Hall, 16 Pick. 457; Dickerson v. Colgrove, 100 U. S. 578, 25 L. ed. 618; Pickard v. Sears, 6 Ad. & El. 469; Markham v. O'Connor, 52 Ga. 183, 21 Am. Rep. 249; Drake v. Glover, 30 Ala. 383; Burns v. Taylor, 23 Ala. 255; Williamson v. Ross, 33 Ala. 509; David v. Shepard, 40 Ala. 587; Leinkauff v. Munter, 76 Ala. 194.

The estoppel thus on Price is equally efficacious in its operation upon all who claim under or through him. They, too, will not be heard to say as against Winston or his privies that Price at the time of his sale as Walker's administrator had any claim or title to the land, in his individual capacity. Wood v. Seely, 33 N. Y. 105; Parker v. Crittenden, 37 Conn. 143; International Bank v. Bowen, 80 Ill. 541; Kinnear v. Mackey, 85 Ill. 96; Drake v. Glover, 30 Ala. 383; Kennedy v. Brown, 61 Ala. 206; Hendricks v. Kelly, 64 Ala. 388; Taylor v. Agricultural & M. Asso. 63 Ala. 229; Wortham v. Gurley, 75 Ala. 356. And this principle has been carried in the decisions of this court to the extent of giving effect to the estoppel even upon bona fide purchasers for value and without notice of the facts operating the estoppel upon their grantor. The one fact that they are privies of him who is estopped, and in respect of the estate upon which the estoppel operates, is, according to these cases, quite sufficient to estop them also, notwithstanding their good faith, want of notice, and payment of a valuable consideration. McCravey v. Remson, 19 Ala. 430, 54 Am. Dec. 194; Adler v. Pin, 80 Ala. 354. This doctrine, however, does not appear to be fully supported by the weight of authority, and, its soundness being questioned by some members of the court as now constituted, our conclusion that the respondents are bound by the estoppel which rested on Price will be rested upon another consideration. They are purchasers, it is true, in good faith, without actual notice, and for value. They are also, however, purchasers at a judicial sale,—the sale made by Price's administrator to Barton in 1872, under an order of the probate court. To such sales the rule of caveat emptor applies in its utmost rigor and strictness. The court orders the sale in such cases only of such interest and estate and rights in the premises as he had and could have asserted; no more, no less. The purchaser succeeds to his rights and attitude in respect of the property sold, "takes his shoes," stands in his place, acquires his interest as the same existed in his hands, subject to all infirmities of title then attaching to the estate, and to all equities, known or secret, which operated a limitation upon the nominal or apparent estate of the intestate in his lifetime. The purchaser buys at his peril. He takes upon himself the risks of any outstanding rights that could have been asserted against the decedent; and if, by reason of the existence of such rights, whether known or not, or discoverable or not, he takes nothing by his purchase, he cannot complain. Perkins v. Winter, 7 Ala. 855; Burns v. Hamilton, 88 Ala. 310; Bland v. Bowie, 58 Ala. 152; Fore v. McKennis, 58 Ala. 115; Lovell v. Webb, 62 Ala. 271. There are some expressions to be found in opinions handed down here indicative of a doubt in the minds of the writers as to "whether the rule of caveat emptor, which applies to judicial sales, will go further than to cover those defects which may be disclosed by an examination of the chain of title; or, at least, whether it would cover such secret equities as no ordinary diligence could discover." Wilson v. Holt, 88 Ala. 589. We do not share in this doubt. To give that limitation to the doctrine of caveat emptor would be to emasculate it altogether. To hold that the purchaser at an administrator's sale made under an order of the court of probate need only look out for defects disclosed by the proceeding in which the order is entered, and by the muniments of the intestate's chain of title, would be to put such purchaser upon the footing of a vendee from an individual, and to strip the fact that he buys at a judicial sale of all significance whatever; thus destroying the doctrine that he buys at his peril, and takes, not the estate the record and paper muniments indicate the intestate held, as would a vendee at a private sale, but the interest only which was so held in point of extraneous fact. We cannot subscribe to the limitation suggested, but, on the contrary, adhere to the broad doctrine announced in the authorities cited, that the purchaser at such sale gets only such right, interest, or estate as resided in the intestate, the apparent title being qualified and limited by every fact or circumstance, whether in pais or of record, which would have constituted an outstanding equity against the decedent in his lifetime; and, applying this principle to the case at bar, we hold that Barton and those holding under him are estopped in like manner, and to the same extent, that Price would now be were he yet living.

We have not been inattentive to the argument for appellees against an estoppel upon Price and his privies which proceeds on the theory that the estoppel is sought to be based on the acts of Price as Walker's administrator. The theory is at fault in that it is Price's conduct as an individual that is relied on to estop him. His averment that Walker was "seised and possessed" of the land, his report of the sale, the title bond executed by him as administrator, and his acceptance, as such administrator, of Winston's notes,—all representative acts,—have been referred to in the course of this opinion, not as going to raise up an estoppel upon him in that capacity or upon Walker's estate, but as evidence going to prove that in that capacity he sold the land as belonging absolutely to Walker's estate, without giving notice of any individual claim of his own to it,—to show his silence when the duty of speech as an individual was upon him, as a predicate for the application of that principle of law which closes his mouth, and the mouths of those claiming under him, when they would now speak, and to hold them to the aspect of things which he then wrongfully allowed to be presented to Winston, inducing prejudicial action on the part of the latter. It may be conceded that the sale to Winston was originally inoperative to pass the interest of Walker's estate because of the absence of jurisdictional allegations from the petition for the order to sell, and hence that neither Price, as Walker's administrator, nor any successor to him in that office, nor the heirs of Walker, would be estopped to question its validity, or to deny the claims of Winston and his privies under it. All that may be conceded without in any degree affecting the rights of the present complainant as against those of the respondents who claim under Price. They assert no right under Walker's administrator or heirs, and their position is essentially in denial and repudiation of all rights in Walker's estate. Their position is that they have succeeded to the right and title which Price had, as they claim, as well after as before the administrator's sale, and which were not affected by that sale, because, they say, it was Walker's interest alone, and not Price's at all, which was sold, and the only interest Walker had, they contend, was the naked privilege of paying for the land, and by payment acquiring title to it. They have no right to attack the sale by Walker's administrator, because no interest they now assert or have ever asserted was involved in that sale, or passed by it. Whether the sale was valid or invalid cannot concern them. Price originally could have attacked it, but only as the representative of Walker. Price's successor in that administration could, at one time, have drawn it in question, but only in the interest of Walker's estate. Walker's heirs, had the estate been administered as a solvent one, might likewise have had its invalidity declared. So, too, it may be that Winston could have repudiated it. But no assault has ever been made upon it from any of these sources. On the contrary, it has all along been treated by every party having the right to avoid it as a valid sale. So far as strangers are concerned, it has been a valid sale from the first, and parties to it have been, and are now, forever estopped to question its validity,—the representatives of Walker by the sale of Winston's notes and distribution of the proceeds to creditors of Walker's estate, and Winston's estate and his privies by the payment of those notes. And, moreover, no representative of or person interested in Walker's estate has ever contested, or is now contesting, the right sought to be effectuated by this bill. The sale must now be considered as valid, and as having been so all the time. By it and its consummation in the payment and receipt of the purchase money and its distribution to and retention for years by Walker's creditors, all the parties thereto are cut off from now objecting to its validity. By the conduct of Price as an individual at this sale made by him as Walker's administrator, he and his privies are estopped to set up any individual right or claim he then had as against the present complainant.

The case is not like that of Owen v. Slatter, 26 Ala. 547. The interest which the administratrix in that case had as an individual in the land which she sold in her representative capacity was an interest conferred by law,—the right of dower,—and attaching to all the lands of an intestate. The presumption is that all men have knowledge of this interest, as all men are presumed to know the law. The opinion proceeds on this theory, and can be supported upon no other. The court, among things, said: "If the purchaser blindly bids off the land without inquiring whether the widow had relinquished her dower, or consented to a sale of it, electing to take a share of the proceeds in lieu thereof, it is his folly, and he has no one to blame but himself."

Our conclusion that Price incurred an estoppel on the assertion of his individual rights in the land, and our views as to the effect of this estoppel upon the present holders of his title, dispose of the defense advanced on the idea that the respondents who are now in possession, claiming under Price, are entitled to protection as bona fide purchasers for value, adversely to them, and leaves for consideration the defense of laches on the part of complainant, and consequent staleness of the demand now asserted by the bill. This defense is to be considered from two points of view,—as respects the representatives and heirs of Walker's estate, and with reference to the purchasers from Price's estate. It may be conceded that, had twenty years elapsed from the last recognition on the part of Walker's representatives and heirs of the sale to Winston, the latter's heirs, though infants during the whole of that period, could not demand a specific enforcement of the contract of sale. But, even passing over the fact that possession under that sale was held on the part of or in behalf of Winston down to the year 1870, or to within seventeen years of the filing of the bill, the sale was recognized in the most unequivocal manner by Walker's administrator as late as the year 1872, by filing the purchase-money notes as a claim against Winston's estate, by subsequently selling those notes as assets of Walker's estate, and by the enforcement of that claim through the purchaser at said sale against Winston's estate. Upon these uncontroverted facts, there can be no room to say that the doctrine of prescription may be invoked by Walker's estate to defeat the right now asserted by the complainant. The fact is that that right did not accrue to the complainant until the payment of these notes, which was less than ten years before the institution of this suit; and during the greater part of this period she was an infant. It is true that Winston in his lifetime, and his privies at any time after his death, might have paid off the notes, and demanded a conveyance from

Walker's estate, or that, had a tender been declined, a bill might have been filed offering to pay the notes, and praying a specific performance of the contract made with Price as Walker's administrator, as evidenced by the latter's bond for title; but no laches can be imputed to Winston, or those claiming under him, in failing so to do, so long as the contract was treated by Walker's representatives as a subsisting one even to the extent of its actual enforcement against Winston's estate. Mrs. Lindsay cannot, therefore, be said to have lost any right against Walker's estate by negligent delay in asserting it. Has she been guilty of laches which will defeat her claim against those now holding under Price individually? On considerations already adverted to, the rights of these parties cannot be helped out by any reference to the title or interest of Price in the land prior to the sale to Winston. Whatever rights they have are such only as have accrued to them by their own dealings with and attitude towards the land since Price's death. What are these? The first transaction on their part, or which can be said to have taken place in their behalf, respecting the land, was in 1870. Till then they bear the relation of strangers to the subject-matter of the controversy. At that time Steele surrendered the possession of the land to Jones as Price's administrator. It cannot be successfully contended that this act of Steele had any other effect than to put Price's estate in the actual possession of the premises. There is no ground for any insistence that under his parol agreement with Winston, assuming its validity and binding efficacy upon Winston and his heirs, Steele had any authority to surrender the land to Walker's estate even, without saving Winston harmless on the purchase-money notes; and manifestly that arrangement never contemplated or authorized Steele to deliver possession to Price's administrator, or any other stranger, leaving the purchase-money notes to be paid by Winston's to Walker's estate. This surrender by Steele therefore stands for no more in this case than had Price's administrator casually and without license of any body, taken possession of the land in 1870. In the aspect of the case most favorable to these respondents in this connection, the utmost that can be affirmed in this behalf is that since 1870 they have had actual adverse possession, claiming in good faith against all the world. And it is admitted that, had complainant been sui juris during the period of this adverse possession, her rights would be foreclosed by the ripening of the adverse holding into a perfect title. But, on the other hand, it needs no argument or authority to demonstrate that, as she was an infant at the inception of this possession, and afterwards, until within three years of bill filed, no title accrued to the respondents from it as against her, (Code, §§ 2618, 2624;) and that, as the whole period of such possession up to the filing of the bill was less than twenty years, the doctrine of prescription has no application.

The complainant is, of course, entitled to the relief prayed against Walker's heirs. The purchase money having been in the manner detailed paid to the administrator of his estate, and distributed to his creditors, Mrs. Lindsay has a right to demand a conveyance to her of whatever interest his estate had in the undivided third part of the land which has descended to her, regardless of the original invalidity of the sale to her ancestor. The effect of the estoppel on Price individually was not to pass the title out of him into Winston; and the title having passed into the respondents now in possession, the operation of the estoppel upon them has not been to divest the legal title out of them and to vest it in Winston's heirs, but only to prevent an assertion of it by them against the complainant, who is entitled, moreover, to whatever rights would have been hers had Price in fact had no title to or claim upon the land, as he led her ancestor to believe. Bigelow, Estoppel, 561; Grisler v. Powers, 81 N. Y. 57, 87 Am. Rep. 475; Fall River Nat. Bank v. Buffinton, 97 Mass. 498. And upon this principle primarily she has a right to claim the conveyance of the legal title to a one third undivided interest by those respondents in whom it is now vested, since, had the truth as as to Price's want of title been as he led her ancestor to believe it to be, she would now be entitled to investiture of it by Walker's heirs.

There is, however, another principle which the chancellor may be justified in applying on the final disposition of the cause, but which, in the present state of the evidence as to the value of the land, and its yearly rental since it came to the possession of Barton, we are unable to apply intelligently. That principle is that estoppels are protective only, and are to be invoked as shields, and not as offensive weapons. Their operation in all cases should be limited to saving harmless or making whole the person in whose favor they arise, and they should not in any case be made the instruments of gain or profit. This doctrine has been given lodgment in our own adjudications, though it appears not to be generally accepted in other courts. Nelson v. Kelly, 91 Ala. 569; Adler v. Pin, 80 Ala. 351. It may be found, if the parties elect to go into that inquiry, that full equity can be done the complainant by charging the land with one third of the sum paid by Thorton in settlement of the Winston notes, with interest from the time of the payment, and that that course would involve less injury to those now in possession than to pass the title to one third of the land into the complainant, and hold respondents accountable for rents.

The decree of the chancellor is reversed, and, that this aspect of the case may be further considered, if the respondents desire, the cause is remanded.

Petition for a rehearing denied July 27, 1892.

NEW MEXICO SUPREME COURT.

Ella LUTZ (Formerly Sykes) et al., Piffs. in Err.,
v.

ATLANTIC & PACIFIC R. CO.

(.....N. M.....)

1. A statute giving a right of action for the death of "any person" through the carelessness or criminal action of an agent, officer, or other employé of a railroad company does not apply to a person killed by the negligence of a fellow servant.

2. When evidence is of such a character that it would be the duty of the court to set aside a verdict for one party it will in the first instance direct a verdict for the other party.

NOTE.—The relation of the proximate cause doctrine to the rule of liability of a master for injuries to his servant caused by combined negligence of himself and a fellow servant.

Few rules have received more general acceptance than the one holding a master liable for injuries to a servant which are caused by the combined negligence of himself and a fellow servant of the injured person. See note to Hunn v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. (Mich.) 7 L. R. A. 500.

The relative share which the master's negligence must bear in the production of the injury in order to render him liable has seldom if ever been directly considered. In the application of the doctrine to the decision of cases the negligence required to hold the master liable has varied from the slightest absence of care combined with great negligence of the fellow servant to negligence sufficient alone to produce the injury combined with slight negligence of the fellow servant.

The following are illustrations of expressions found in opinions dealing with the question:

The proximate cause is the object of inquiry, and when discovered is to be regarded and relied on. Hayes v. Western R. Corp. 3 Cush. 270.

The master, to be exempt from liability, must have himself been free from negligence. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. McKenzie, 81 Va. 71.

The rule which excuses the master from liability for injuries caused by a fellow servant presupposes that he has performed the obligations which the 16 L. R. A.

law imposes upon him and that the injury occurs solely through the negligence of the co-employé. Stringham v. Stewart, 1 Cent. Rep. 779, 100 N. Y. 518; Donohue v. Brooklyn City R. Co. 38 N. Y. S. R. 485.

If the negligence of the master combines with the negligence of a fellow servant and the two contribute to the injury, the servant injured may recover damages from the master. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Holt, 29 Kan. 156; Flak v. Central Pac. R. Co. 73 Cal. 42.

Where the injured person was knocked from a defective platform by a negligent act of a fellow servant the court held that the servant may recover for an injury caused by the combined negligence of the master and a fellow servant. Young v. Shickle H. & H. Iron Co. 108 Mo. 324.

Concurring negligence of a fellow servant with the negligence of the master will not relieve the master of liability. Kaiser v. Flaccus, 138 Pa. 332; Rogers v. Leyden, 127 Ind. 50.

If the negligence of the principal and that of a fellow servant together produced the injury, the principal is still liable therefor. Cowan v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 80 Wis. 284.

In Anderson v. The Ashbrooke, 44 Fed. Rep. 124, the court held that the promoting cause of the injury was defective appliances furnished by the master.

Unless the negligence of the master co-operated with that of the co-employé, the master is not re-

3. The proximate cause of the death of a railroad employee who is killed while in a caboose which is weak and unsubstantial, being merely a common box car, and which is struck and splintered by a locomotive of another train, is the negligence of the fellow servant in charge of the colliding train and the weakness and unsubstantial character of the caboose cannot be regarded as constituting any part of such cause.
4. A master is liable for an injury to a servant, the proximate cause of which is the result of the combined negligence of the master himself and of a fellow servant.

(Freeman, J., and O'Brien, Ch. J., dissent from proposition 3; Seeds, J., dissents from proposition 4.)

(August 15, 1892.)

ERROR to the District Court for Bernalillo County to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries resulting in death and alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. *Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Mr. Bernard S. Rodey, for plaintiffs in error:

Under the New Mexico Statute, Compiled

*Five judges compose the court, one of whom tries the case at not prius. It will be seen from the above opinions that on the main question as to the proximate cause of the death, two judges of the court in bank agree in affirming the opinion of the justice (Lee) who tried the case. Therefore the court stands three to two on that question.

sponsible. Abel v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 128 N. Y. 662.

In Paulmier v. Erie R. Co. 84 N. J. L. 155, the court said the injury was the result of two conjoined causes, one of which was the negligence of the master. For an injury so caused the master is liable.

A recovery may be had where the master contributes to the negligence of the fellow servant or to the injury. Crutchfield v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 78 N. C. 823.

If the master's negligence directly contributes to the injury he must be held liable, though it also appears that the negligence of a fellow servant contributed to the injury. Stetler v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 46 Wis. 510.

The master is liable for injuries resulting from defective machinery although the negligence of a fellow servant contributes to the accident. Boyce v. Fitzpatrick, 80 Ind. 530.

If the master failed to exercise reasonable care in providing suitable machinery for the work he is responsible for an accident although the negligence of a fellow servant contributed thereto. Griffin v. Boston & A. R. Co. 1 L. R. A. 688, 148 Mass. 143; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Lowe (Tex.) May 21, 1889.

So if the negligence was in not providing sufficient help. Booth v. Boston & A. R. Co. 73 N. Y. 33, 29 Am. Rep. 97.

Proximate cause.

It would seem that if an injury was produced by the combined negligence of two, such combined negligence would be the proximate cause of the injury and that the negligence of each would be only one of the elements which together make up the proximate cause, but it is a common occurrence for the courts to look through and beyond 16 L. R. A.

Laws 1884, §§ 2308-2310, a servant can recover against the master for an injury resulting from the negligence of a fellow servant,—if not, then the words "any person" in the opening sentence of the Act are superfluous, in fact the Damage Act would be just as complete were section 2308 entirely left out.

Schultz v. Pacific R. Co. 36 Mo. 18, and cases cited; Connor v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 59 Mo. 308; Gillenwater v. Madison & I. R. Co. 5 Ind. 340, 61 Am. Dec. 101; Fitzpatrick v. New Albany & S. R. Co. 7 Ind. 486; Chamberlain v. Milwaukee & M. R. Co. 11 Wis. 250; Little Miami R. Co. v. Stevens, 20 Ohio, 416.

To prevent courts from holding to the non-liability rule of master to servant for negligence of fellow servants, many states have passed laws expressly declaring the liability.

See McKinney, Fellow Servants, chap. 7, p. 215 et seq. See also Whittaker's Smith, Neg. pp. 443-487.

The court should not have instructed the jury at the trial on the issue raised on the second count to find for the defendant because it was the sole province of the jury to say whether or not McCarty had been negligent. And specific acts of negligence were competent proof to be considered by the jury.

McKinney, Fellow Servants, §§ 88-85, and cases cited in notes. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Mares, 128 U. S. 710, 81 L. ed. 296; Wabash R. Co. v. McDaniels, 107 U. S. 454, 27 L. ed. 605; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 469, 35 L. ed. 218; Fox v. Sanford, 4 Sneed, 86, 67 Am. Dec. 588; O'Donnell v. Allegheny R. Co. 59 Pa. 239, 98 Am. Dec. 336; Northern the combined cause to the element and make the question of liability depend on whether or not such element is of itself the efficient proximate cause of the injury. This course in many instances completely nullifies the rule as to combined negligence.

Where the chain connecting the lever with the coupling apparatus upon a passenger coach was broken and the brakeman was compelled to go under the car to pry the couplings apart in order to separate the cars, and while he was in that position the conductor signaled the train to go ahead whereby the brakeman was injured, the court said that the negligence in giving the signal, not the failure to repair the train, was the direct proximate cause of the injury. Pease v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 61 Wis. 163.

Where a brakeman was injured while attempting to make a coupling between a freight car and an engine, which was supplied with a gooseneck coupling iron, and his hand was crushed, the court held that the gooseneck was not the proximate cause of the injury, it was only the instrument which inflicted it, but that the injury was caused by the negligence of the engineer in running the engine back in the manner he did without notice or signal. Fowler v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 61 Wis. 159.

Where an injury occurred from the derailment of a train caused by the separating of the rails in the track and the company was negligent in not furnishing a safe road-bed, the court held this would be the proximate cause of injuries received in the accident, and that the negligence of fellow servants in not giving notice of the danger in time to avert it would not excuse the negligence of the company. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Pettis, 69 Tex. 689.

Where the chain which held a valve under an engine was broken and tied up and the valve had Paa. Co. v. Herbert, 116 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 755, and cases cited.

It was the duty of the railroad company to have furnished a fit and proper caboose to the deceased, and he accepted no additional risk by continuing in defendant's employ after he had given it notice, and it had promised to furnish him within a reasonable time with a proper caboose, and the defendant was liable for the death of plaintiff's husband resulting therefrom.

McKinney, Fellow Servants, §§ 16, 82-85 et seq. and all cases cited; Tennessee O. I. & R. Co. v. Kyle, 12 L. R. A. 103, 93 Ala. 1; Flike v. Boston & A. R. Co. 53 N. Y. 549; Fuller v. Jewett, 80 N. Y. 46, 36 Am. Rep. 575, and all cases there cited; Pantzar v. Tilly Foster Iron Min. Co. 99 N. Y. 868, and cases cited; Bessae v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 45 Wis. 477; Toledo, P. & W. R. Co. v. Conroy, 68 Ill. 560, and cases cited; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Norment, 84 Va. 167, and cases cited; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. McClain, 80 Tex. 85; Mater v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. (Mo.) March 23, 1891; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Davis, 64 Ark. 389; Davidson v. Southern Pac. Co. 44 Fed. Rep. 476; Rogers v. Leyden, 127 Ind. 50; Goodrich v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 5 L. R. A. 750, 116 N. Y. 898; Arnold v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 125 N. Y. 15; Lytile v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 84 Mich. 289; Grand Trunk R. Co. of Canada v. Cummings, 106 U. S. 700, 27 L. ed. 266; Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 213, 25 L. ed. 612; Wabash R. Co. v. McDaniels, 107 U. S. 454, 27 L. ed. 605; Washington & G. P. Co. v. McDade, 135 U. S. 554, 34 L. ed. 285;

Eureka Co. v. Bass, 81 Ala. 200, 60 Am. Rep. 152; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Sadler, 38 Kan. 128; Counsell v. Hall, 5 New Eng. Rep. 462, 145 Mass. 468; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Donnelly, 70 Tex. 371, 8 Am. St. Rep. 608; Louisville, N. A. & O. R. Co. v. Wright, 18 West. Rep. 798, 115 Ind. 378; Regan v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. 12 West. Rep. 387, 98 Mo. 848; Parsons v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. 12 West. Rep. 615, 94 Mo. 286; Missouri Furnace Co. v. Abend, 107 Ill. 44, 47 Am. Rep. 425; Greene v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 31 Minn. 248, 47 Am. Rep. 785, and cases cited; Tuttle v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 122 U. S. 193, 30 L. ed. 1116.

Messrs. W. C. Hasledine & H. L. Waldo for defendant in error.

Seeds, J., delivered the following opinion:

This is an action of trespass on the case, brought by the plaintiffs in error against the defendant corporation, for the statutory damages for the negligent killing of the plaintiff's (Ella Sykes') former husband by the defendant. The declaration contains three counts. The first count declares upon the negligence of the fellow servants of the deceased, he being a conductor upon a freight train of the defendant. The second count declares upon the negligent, careless, and improper selection of the deceased's fellow servants by the defendant, and the retention of said fellow servants in its employ after full knowledge of their incompetency, and alleges that the killing was caused by reason to be removed to oil the engine, to do which the chain was untied and the valve then dropped upon the ground under the engine and the injured person reached under to pick up the valve when the engineer negligently started the engine forward, the court held that the fact that the chain which held the valve was broken was not the proximate cause of the injury. Spencer v. Ohio & M. R. Co. (Ind.) Jan. 26, 1892.

Where a train broke in two and there was a defective coupling apparatus which a brakeman was endeavoring to remedy when the engineer negligently backed the forward part of the train upon him and killed him, the court ruled that the injury was not to be attributed to the company, that the injury did not result from the defective appliance but that the blame was to be solely attributed to the engineer who backed his part of the train upon the brakeman without due care. Course v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 17 N. Y. S. R. 715.

Where a brakeman's leg was crushed while descending the ladder upon a car upon which there was no bumper, and it was shown that the accident would not have happened had the bumper been present, the court held that the defective condition of the car, and not the negligence of the engineer in backing the engine when he did, was the proximate cause of the injury. Richmond & D. R. Co. v. George (Va.) 48 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 331.

Ransier v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co., 32 Minn. 331, in which the injury was caused by the breaking in two of a train, was decided on the ground that the defective apparatus which caused the train to break in two was the proximate cause of the injury.

Where an edger was so out of repair that it was liable to become clogged by the planks passing through it, in which condition it was very dangerous to attempt to remove the plank to relieve the clogging, and an employé was injured while such an attempt was being made, the court held that the accident was the direct result of the defective working of the machine and that he was not relieved from liability from the fact that a fellow servant of the injured person was also negligent in his method of attempting to relieve the clogging. Sherman v. Menomonee River Lumber Co. 1 L. R. A. 173, 72 Wis. 122.

Where a mine owner allows fire damp to accumulate in the mine, which is exploded by a servant going into it with an open lamp, the negligence of the servant is the direct and immediate cause of the injuries to other servants and the master will not be responsible. Berns v. Gaston Gas Coal Co. 27 W. Va. 305.

If the proximate cause doctrine is applied to determine the master's liability it is evident that in most cases of purely combined negligence he will escape since the test of proximate cause given by Parsons (8 Cont. 7th ed. 180), and which is emphatically approved in Jacksonville etc. R. Co. v. Peninsular Land Co. 17 L. R. A. 83, is, "Did the cause alleged produce its effect without another cause intervening or was it made operative only through and by means of this intervening cause?" In cases of purely combined negligence the negligence of the master never becomes operative of itself but requires the co-operation of the fellow servant's negligence to produce the injury. See note to Jacksonville etc. R. Co. v. Peninsular Land Co. supra. Hence if Mr. Parsons' test was applied to such cases no liability could be established.

Many cases make use of the term "proximate cause" to describe the negligence of the master when the case is decided on the ground of combined negligence.

Where the caboose in which the injured person of said incompetency. The third count declares upon the negligent conduct of the defendant in furnishing the deceased with an improper, unsafe, and defective caboose, knowing at the time that it was unsafe and defective, but which the deceased used under protest, and only under and by reason of the promise made by the defendant to the deceased that he should be provided with a safe one in a very short time; and because of the negligence and carelessness of the deceased's fellow servants upon another train of the defendant, running into and destroying the caboose in which the deceased was, by reason of which he was killed. To the declaration, and each count thereof, the defendant filed a demurrer. The court sustained the demurrer to the first and third counts, and overruled it as to the second; whereupon the defendant answered as to the second count. A jury was called, and after the plaintiffs' evidence was in and they had rested, the court, upon motion of the defendant, instructed it to find for the defendant. The plaintiffs sued out a writ of error, and allege error in sustaining the defendant's demurrer to the first and third counts, and in instructing the jury to find for the defendant upon the trial, under the second count.

1. The first count declared upon the negligence of the deceased's fellow servants, whereby he lost his life. Unless changed by statute, it is now the unquestioned law that damages cannot be recovered for injuries sustained by reason of the negligence of fellow servants. Negligence of such servants, of a common employer, is part of the risk which public policy requires that an employé take in entering upon a service in which there are fellow servants. Priestly v. Fowler, 8 Mees. & W. 1; Murray v. South Carolina R. Co. 1 McMull. L. 885; Farwell v. Boston & W. R. Corp. 4 Met. 49; Pierce, Railroads, 858; 2

Rorer, Railroads, 1188; 1 Lawson, Rights, Rem. & Pr. § 801; Beach, Contrib. Neg. § 102; Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 1008.

Beach in his work objects strenuously to the reasoning upon which this rule of law is based, but admits that it is now universal, unless when changed by statute, as it has been in some jurisdictions. We are content to adopt the rule as the law for this jurisdiction, whatever may be the theoretical objections to it, based upon what may be thought to be purely logical grounds, until such time as the Legislature sees fit to change it.

But the plaintiffs contend that the rule as above enunciated has been changed. The question for decision then is, Has it been changed? Sections 2808-2810, Comp. Laws N. M.* provide, in substance, that, when was driven forward by a rear-end collision, and by reason of the absence of proper bumper: the car ahead of it was thrown upward and fell upon and against it causing the injury, the court held that the absence of the bumpers was the proximate cause of the injury although it was enough to render the company liable if its negligence merely contributed to produce the injury. Ellis v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 96 N. Y. 546.

*The material portion of the statute referred to is as follows: Section 2808. Whenever any person shall die from any injury resulting from or occasioned by the negligence, unskillfulness or criminal intent of any officer, agent, servant, or employé whilst running, conducting or managing any locomotive, car, or train of cars, or of any driver of any stage coach or other public conveyance, while in the charge of the same as driver; and when any passenger shall die from any injury resulting from or occasioned by any defect or insufficiency in any railroad or any part thereof, or in any locomotive or car, or in any stage coach, or other public conveyance, the corporation, individual, or individuals in whose employ any such officer, agent, servant, employé, engineer or driver, shall be at the time such injury was committed, or who owns any such railroad, locomotive, car, stage coach, or other public conveyance, at the time any injury is received, resulting from or occasioned by any defect or insufficiency above declared, shall forfeit and pay for every person or passenger so dying, the sum of $5,000, which may be sued and recovered. First, by the husband or wife of the deceased. . . In suits instituted under this section, it shall be competent for the defendant for his defense to show that the defect or insufficiency named in this section, was not a negligent defect or insufficiency.

In Pullitro v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 37 N. Y. S. R. 63, in which an employé on a gravel train was injured while attempting to get upon the train after it had started by being caught between two cars which were not furnished with bumpers, the court said that it was a question for the jury to consider whether the failure to provide the bumpers was the proximate cause of the injury, and if it was, the master was liable, although the fellow servants of the injured person were negligent in running the train; since if the negligence of the master concurs with that of a fellow servant in producing the injury the master is not thereby excused.

The master is not relieved from liability if his negligence was the proximate cause of the injury although a concurring cause was the negligence of a fellow servant. Hunn v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. 7 L. R. A. 500, 78 Mich. 618.

"A" proximate cause as distinguished from "the" proximate cause.

In some cases the inquiry has been made whether 16 L. R. A.

or not the negligence of the master was "a" proximate cause of the accident, and they have not insisted that it must be "the" proximate cause.

If the master's negligence proximately contributes to the injuries, he will be liable. Franklin v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 37 Minn. 411.

In St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. McClain, 80 Tex. 85, an instruction was approved which stated that if one of the proximate causes of the accident without which it would not have occurred was the unsafe condition of the wheel or brake, or both, and that the company was guilty of negligence in furnishing them, then it would be liable for the injury, notwithstanding the negligence of the engineer or brakeman may have contributed to the accident.

Where an injury was caused by the misplacing of an unlighted switch, the company contended that the absence of the lights was not the proximate cause of the accident but that it was caused by the negligence of fellow servants of the injured person: the court held that the absence of the lights was just as much the proximate cause of the injury as the turning of the switch rails. The injury, in any event, was occasioned partly through the negligence of the company as to the lights, and partly by the condition of the switch rails, in which case the company would be liable. Town v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. 84 Mich. 222.

Where an injury resulted from a defective brake and from the negligent running of the train at a

"any person" comes to his or her death by reason of the negligence or carelessness or criminal action of an agent, officer, or other employé of a railroad company, that his or her representative may recover of the company $5,000. The contention is that "any person" in this statute has reference to any one whomsoever who may be killed, and hence includes one who may be a fellow servant. By further reading the statute it will be found that the words "any person or passenger" are used, which would seem, however, to throw doubt upon the real meaning of the words "any person," rather than to more definitely explain them. This statute is almost verbatim a copy of the Missouri Damage Statute. In that state it has received a decisive construction after a somewhat lengthy period of uncertainty. In Schultz v. Pacific R. Co., 86 Mo. 13, it was held that the general meaning of the words "any person" was the meaning which the Legislature intended to attach to them, and that, therefore, the common-law rule of fellow servants taking the risk of each other's negligence, when not notorious and known to the employer, was abrogated. But this was not satisfactory, and in the case of Connor v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 59 Mo. 808, two of the five judges vigorously dissented; Judge Hough in his dissent satisfactorily showing, to the writer's mind, that, whatever may be the sounder and more humane rule, the Legislature never intended to change the rule as to the liability for negligence of a fellow servant by that statute, but only to give a cause of action to the representatives of a deceased person where none existed before, and to limit the extent of that liability. Finally, in the case of Proctor v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co., 64 Mo. 112, the supreme court of that state took the view of the case so ably expounded by Judge

Hough, and it has remained the law of that state ever since. Upon a similar statute, the same words have received the same construction in Iowa, (Sullivan v. Mississippi & M. R. Co. 11 Iowa, 423;) in Maine, (Carle v. Bangor & P. O. R. Co. 43 Me. 271;) and in Colorado, (Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Farrow, 6 Colo. 498.) The statute of this territory (sections 2808-2810) was adopted after the final decision in the Connor Case in Missouri, and it was urged that it is the law that, when one jurisdiction adopts without change the statute of another jurisdiction, it also adopts the judicial construction placed upon it by that jurisdiction. While this is so, yet we do not think it necessary in this case to rest our decision upon that principle, but rather upon the broader principle that there is nothing in the statute itself, nor in the history of its adoption, which goes to show that it was the intention of our Legislature to overthrow a rule thoroughly ingrained in the judicial holdings of the courts of the land, and in view of which it must now be held that all contracts for hire to corporations, in the absence of express stipulations, are made. The action of the trial court in sustaining the demurrer to the first count was correct.

2. The second count was predicated upon the assumed fact that the defendant company was negligent in its selection of the fellow servants of the deceased, Sykes, or in the keeping of them in its employ after knowledge of their incompetency had been brought home to it, and that it was through such incompetency that the deceased was killed. After the plaintiffs' evidence was all in, the jury was instructed by the court to find for the defendant, which it did. Of this action the plaintiffs complain. They insist that there was something to go to the jury, and that in instructing it to find for the defend-greater speed than the rules of the company require, the court held that both causes were proximate, the defect in the brake as much as the speed, and that the company was liable. Young v. New Jersey & N. Y. R. Co. 46 Fed. Rep. 160.

Right to consider relative negligence.

Where the injury was caused by the starting forward of a locomotive, owing to its defective condition, the court held that the jury could not be permitted to inquire whether the exercise of extra diligence or skill on the part of the engineer would have neutralized the company's own negligence. This would require them to determine the comparative negligence of master and servant and strike a balance of negligence, which could not be permitted. The negligence of the servant does not excuse the principal from liability for an injury which could not have happened had the machinery been suitable for the use to which it was applied. Cone v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 81 N. Y. 206, 87 Am. Rep. 491.

Where the fall of a defective staging was caused by negligently dropping a stone on it, the court held that if the jury found that the defect caused it to fall, and that the accidental strain was a contributing cause, the force and violence of the strain were immaterial; it could do no more than contribute to the injury, and the degree of contribution could not be apportioned. Drommie v. Hogan, 158 Mass. 20.

16 L. R. A.

If the negligence of the master had a share in causing the injuries of plaintiff, the master is liable notwithstanding the contributory negligence of a fellow servant. Faren v. Sellers, 39 La. Ann. 1019.

Liability exists when master's negligence was an essential element.

In accordance with the doctrine that an inquiry into the comparative negligence of master and servant could not be permitted, the cases in which the question has been most directly before the courts have held that if the injury would not have happened but for the negligence of the master, contributory negligence on the part of a fellow servant is no defense to the master. Cone v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 15 Hun, 177.

Negligence of a servant does not excuse the master from liability to a co-servant for an injury which would not have happened had the master performed his duty. Coppins v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co. 122 N. Y. 537, aff'd 43 Hun, 298; New Jersey & N. Y. R. Co. v. Young, 49 Fed. Rep. 723.

Where an injury resulted from the fall of an elevator the court said the difficult and close question in this case is as to the proximate cause of the injury,—whether the absence of safety appliances, or the act of the engineer and the fellow brakeman of the injured person, or whether it resulted from both causes. The court then applied the following test: "Where several proximate causes contribute to an accident, and each is an efficient cause ant the court usurped the province of the jury, which was error. However, it is now the settled law of the supreme court of the United States, and of this court, that when evidence is of such a character that, should the jury find for one side rather than the other, it would be the duty of the court to set aside such verdict, it will in the first instance direct a verdict for the party thus entitled to it. Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 1008; Candelaria v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. (N. M.) 27 Pac. Rep. 497; Gildersleeve v. Atkinson (N. M.) 27 Pac. Rep. 477. We have thoroughly read the evidence produced by the plaintiffs to sustain the allegations of their second count, but we are unable to see where there is anything which tends to support those allegations. The action of the court, therefore, was correct.

3. The real difficulty in this case grows out of the sustaining the demurrer to the third count. It will be necessary, therefore, in order that a complete understanding of the count may be had, to set out in extenso the material portions of the same. After the allegations of incorporation, the place of doing business on the part of the defendant, its employment of the deceased, and its duty to furnish proper, safe, and reliable cars, cabooses, and other machinery, the count continues as follows: "Yet, not regarding its duty and promises in the premises, the said defendant did not so furnish the said Sykes with all safe, properly constructed, and reliable cars, locomotives, machinery, and tools for the proper conduct of his conducting of trains as aforesaid, in this: That after his engagement and entering the employment as aforesaid, and some short time previous to the happening of the event hereinafter mentioned, the said defendant failed to furnish said Sykes with a proper caboose or way car, such as is usually and ordinarily used upon said same railroad, and upon all other like railroads, but instead wrongfully, negligently, and carelessly gave and furnished him, for use upon his said trains, against his consent and over his protest, (but which he was induced to take and use, under faithful promises of the defendant, by its agents and their servants, then and there to him made, that he would be furnished with a proper caboose in a very short time,) a weakly-built, common, unsubstantial box car, without any platforms, bottom beams, springs, bracing, or proper trucks, and without any doors in the ends or windows in the ends, or cupola or lookout station in the top, through either of which approaching danger might be seen and prevented, as is usually upon cabooses and way cars upon other parts of said line and other like roads. And said box car, used as a caboose or way car as aforesaid, was so flimsily and improperly constructed it would, and did, during its use by said Sykes, aforesaid, easily become derailed and jump the track aforesaid, all of which was then and there known to said defendant but the said George W. Sykes, so relying upon the promises of the defendant so made to him as aforesaid, that it would in a very short time furnish him with a good, safe, and proper caboose, did, relying upon without which the accident would not have happened, it may be attributed to all or any of them, but it cannot be attributed to a cause unless without its operation the accident would not have happened;" and concluded that "from the evidence the jury could find both causes to be proximate," and that "if they did so, the master was liable." Kern v. De Castro & D. Sugar Ref. Co. 24 N. Y. S. R. 748.

If the negligence of the company contributed to, that is to say, had a share in producing the injury, the company was liable even though the negligence of a fellow servant of the servant injured was contributory also. If the negligence of the company contributed to, it must necessarily have been an immediate cause of, the accident, and it is no defense that another was likewise guilty of wrong. Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Cummings, 106 U. S. 700, 27 L. ed. 286.

Where an engine was caused to explode by its defective condition, and it appeared that the engineer might have prevented its doing so by using extra care, the court held that the refusal to instruct the jury that if the accident would not have happened without negligence on the part of the engineer the railroad company was not liable was properly refused. To say that the master should not be responsible for an injury which would not have happened had a proper safeguard been used, because the engineer was negligent, would be to say in substance and effect that he should not be liable at all for an injury resulting from the failure to use such safeguard. Cayzer v. Taylor, 10 Gray, 274, 69 Am. Dec. 817.

Where a locomotive without a headlight was left after dark standing on the track, over which a train came and collided with it, the court held that the jury should have been instructed that the company was not liable unless they find the accident would not have happened but for the absence of the headlight, and that it was error to charge that it was liable if its negligence contributed to the injury, though a fellow servant was also negligent. Whittaker v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 49 Hun, 400.

But the company would be liable if the absence of the headlight was an efficient cause without the operation of which the accident would not have happened. Whittaker v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 126 N. Y. 544.

The above cases furnish a test which would be at the same time uniform and logical. According to it, to determine the master's liability, withdraw entirely the element of his negligence as a possible cause of the injury. If with it withdrawn the injury would have been inflicted just the same, the master is not liable, but if without it the injury would not have happened, the master is liable. Under this test the result in many of the cases would have been the reverse of what it is, and in the principal case the question of liability would depend on whether or not the force of the collision was sufficient to crush the platform ordinarily used in a caboose. If not, the injury would probably not have happened, and the master's negligence was an essential element. It is evident that by directing the attention to the effect of an absence of the fellow servant's negligence rather than to an absence of that of the master, erroneous results will be attained, since the servant's negligence is an essential element of the combination, and if from the premise that the injury would not have occurred in the absence of the servant's negligence the result is reached that therefore the master is not liable, relief may be denied when it should be granted.

said promise, continue in said employment until the 30th day of March, A. D. 1888, at which said date, at to wit, the county of Bernalillo, in the territory of New Mexico, said George W. Sykes was, pursuant to the order of the defendant, proceeding with one of its trains with the aforementioned box car, being used as a way car, with all due and proper care and diligence, eastward in said county, towards said Albuquerque, and when he had so proceeded to a point upon said railroad, about four miles east of the small station of San José, and while still, as aforesaid, exercising all due and proper care and diligence in the premises, the defendant then and there being possessed, as aforesaid, of a certain other locomotive engine and train of cars attached thereto, which said latter locomotive engine and train of cars were then and there, under the care and management of drivers, then servants of the defendant, who were then and there driving the same upon and along said railroad, near and towards the point aforesaid, also in an easterly direction, and the said defendant then and there, by its servants last aforesaid, so carelessly, improperly, negligently, and unskillfully drove and managed the said locomotive engine and train of cars that, by and through the carelessness, negligence, unskillfulness, and improper conduct of the defendant, by its said servants in that behalf, and also by and through the negligence, carelessness, default, and improper conduct and wrongful act of the defendant in defaulting, refusing, and neglecting to furnish a proper caboose and way car to Sykes, as was its duty to do, the said locomotive engine then and there ran and struck, with comparative force and violence, upon and against the rear of the train and box car, being used as a caboose as aforesaid, and being conducted with all due and proper care and diligence by the said George W. Sykes, and, by reason of the poor and improper construction of the same, broke the same into splinters, and said George W. Sykes was then and there, with great force and violence, struck by said locomotive and by splinters of said box car being used as aforesaid, and thrown with great violence from out of said car," from the effects of which he afterwards died.

To this count the defendant demurred, and assigned several reasons therefor, among them that the said Sykes voluntarily used the said caboose; that it did not appear that there were any latent or hidden defects in or about the way car; that the negligence, if any, was the negligence of Sykes' fellow servants; and that the count is in many other respects uncertain, informal, and insufficient. The court sustained the demurrer. While this demurrer specifically sets out the grounds of objection, yet it is in substance a general demurrer, and under it any objections to the substance of the count may be urged, whether assigned or not. 1 Chitty, Pl. 633; Gould, Pl. p. 485, § 19. It is elementary that upon demurrer all facts which are well pleaded are admitted to be true. Therefore it must be considered that the facts in this count

Cases where the negligence of the master is the efficient cause.

A master is liable for the consequences of his own negligence, although the negligence of a co-servant also contributed to bring about the injury. McMahon v. Henning, 1 McCrary, 517.

Cases holding that the master is not liable for injuries resulting from the negligence of a fellow servant are applicable only where the injury complained of happened without any actual fault or misconduct of the principal. If the injury resulted directly from the negligence or misconduct of the master himself, he is liable. Keegan v. Western R. Co. 8 N. Y. 175.

Where the master makes an unreasonable order in the execution of which a servant is injured it will be no defense to an action for the master to say that the immediate cause of the injury was the negligence of a fellow servant in the execution of the order. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Henderson, 37 Ohio St. 552.

It does not exonerate the master from the consequences of a failure to perform his duty, if such failure contributed to the injury, to show that if others for whom he was not responsible had performed their duty the injury would not have occurred, or that it might have been avoided by care and vigilance on the part of those who were clearly fellow servants of the injured person. Elmer v. Locke, 135 Mass. 575.

Cases where the servant's negligence was the cause.

If the master failed to use due care he might be held responsible although the negligence of a fellow servant contributed to the accident; but if the court can see that the accident was caused solely by the neglect of a fellow servant no recovery 16 L. R. A.

from the master can be had. Myers v. Hudson Iron Co. 150 Mass. 125.

Where a switchman negligently left a switch open while he engaged in conversation with a third person and a train ran into the open switch causing the injury, the court said there is no evidence which warranted the jury in finding that any act of neglect on the part of the defendant contributed in any manner to produce the injury complained of. Harvey v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 88 N. Y. 481.

The mere existence of a defective coupling link in a train will not render the company liable if the reason of its being there was the negligence of a fellow servant in using that link instead of perfect ones which were provided. Sweeney v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 32 N. Y. S. R. 416.

Where a car with a defective brake was left standing on a side track without being blocked and started to move thereby colliding with a passing train and causing an injury, the court said the main question is whether the defective condition of the brake was the cause or one of the producing causes of the accident, and held that the injury was occasioned solely by the fault of the employees in failing to secure the car, and that the defective brake had nothing to do with it. Harvey v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 32 N. Y. S. R. 817.

Where defects in a hand-car cause it to jolt and an employé using it placed a water cask on the front of it in such a manner that it was jolted off and caused a wreck of the car and an injury to a coemployé, the court held the injuries resulted from the cask rolling off the car and that the negligence as to the condition of the car had no connection with the wreck and that therefore the master was not liable. Rose v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. (Tex.) Oct. 27, 1891.

H. P. F.

pleaded, which are well pleaded, are before us with the same effect as though found by a jury.

At the argument counsel for both parties rested their contention solely upon the alleged negligence of the company in failing to provide the deceased, Sykes, with a safe and proper caboose, within a reasonable time after having promised him to do so. The position of the plaintiffs was that, as the defendant knew of the unsafe condition of the way car or caboose, and had promised to provide another in its stead, it assumed all risks and dangers to the deceased during a "reasonable time" which he might use it while waiting for a new car; and that such use was not, upon the part of the deceased, contributory negligence. The defendant contends, upon the other hand, that it is shown that the defects, if any, in the caboose, were patent and evident as immediately dangerous, and therefore that the rule contended for by the plaintiffs did not apply, but that the use of such car, under the circumstances alleged in the count, notwithstanding the promise of the defendant, was contributory negligence on the part of the deceased, and that his representatives cannot recover. "If the servant complain of the defect to the master, and the latter promises to remedy or repair it, the servant, by remaining on this assurance for a reasonable time in the service, will not be considered to have waived it, and the question of a reasonable time will be for the jury." 1 Lawson, Rights, Rem. & Pr. § 312, and cases cited; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Brentford, 79 Tex. 619, 23 Am. St. Rep. 377, and annotated note; Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 218, 25 L. ed. 612. In this last case the court holds that it is not contributory negligence, as a matter of law, to remain in a dangerous employment for a reasonable time after a promise by the employer to remedy the defect complained of, but that it was a question for the jury to say whether it was contributory negligence to so remain. This is unquestionably the general rule of law where an employé gives notice to his employer of defects in the machinery that he is using, and the employer promises to remedy the defects in a short time, unless such defects are so evidently dangerous as that it would be reckless and foolish for the employé to use the defective machinery, even under a promise that it should be immediately remedied. The defendant contends in this case that the allegations of this count, admitted by it to be true show—First, that the deceased used the defective car for a longer period than by any possibility could be considered a reasonable time; and, second, that the defects set out in the count are so evidently dangerous that only a reckless person, one utterly careless of his safety, would have used the caboose without its being, at least, remedied. That, therefore, as a matter of law, he did contribute to his death, and that the action cannot be sustained. In the case of District of Columbia v. McElligott, 117 U. S. 621, 29 L. ed. 946, the court carefully limits the ruling in the Hough Case, supra. That was a case wherein McElligott was working in a gravel pit for the defendant. There was an overhanging bank, under which he with others was working, which threatened to break off and fall upon them. It was alleged that the supervisor of the work was notified of this danger, and promised to have it remedied immediately. Under that promise the plaintiff continued to work for but a short time, and while so working was injured. The court, in discussing the question of his contributory negligence, said: "If liability might come upon the district for the negligence of its officers controlling his services, he was under an obligation to exercise due care in protecting himself from personal harm while discharging duties out of which such liability might arise. If he failed to exercise such care, if he exposed himself to dangers that were so threatening or obvious as likely to cause injury at any moment, he would, notwithstanding any promises or assurances of the district supervisor of the character alleged, be guilty of such contributory negligence as would defeat his claim for injuries so received." 117 U. S. 633, 29 L. ed. 949.

If, then, the dangers were as great by reason of the alleged imperfections of the way car as are admitted by this demurrer, it would seem as though the case last cited went very far towards sustaining the defendant's contention that the deceased, Sykes, contributed by his own negligence to his death; and, if so, then clearly, under the law, his representatives cannot recover in this action. But whether they can or not, under this view of the law, yet we think that the action of the trial judge was correct upon another view of this count. The real question presented by this count, and the demurrer thereto, is, What was the proximate cause of the injury to the deceased? Was it the negligence of the fellow servants upon the second train, or was it the negligence of the company in failing, within a reasonable time, to provide the deceased with a suitable and proper way car, or was it the combined result of both negligences? If it was the first negligence, then clearly the action cannot be sustained, for in the first part of this decision we have seen that the law is that no recovery can be had for the negligence of a fellow servant. If the proximate cause was the resultant of the two negligences, and one of those negligences is not actionable, then there is no cause of action upon which the suit can be predicated, for the proof must correspond with the allegation, and there would be no proof of the negligence of the fellow servant allowed. It is admitted by the demurrer that the facts are as alleged, if properly pleaded. But, if the plaintiffs cannot recover for the negligence of a fellow servant, then that negligence, as an alleged cause of action, may not be so pleaded, and the demurrer in this case does not admit it as an actionable fact. Therefore the count is not good, upon the theory that the injury was the result of the joint negligences of the fellow servants of Sykes, and the failure upon the part of the company to furnish a safe caboose. It would seem that the fair interpretation of this count was that it does charge the injury to be the result of the joint negligence of the fellow servants and the company, and hence that it was not a legal statement of a wrong upon which a suit might be predicated. But, conceding that the negligent action of the fellow servants upon the second train is alleged by the plaintiffs simply as a mere condition of the injury, and that they insist that the proximate cause of such injury was the negligence of the company in failing to furnish a proper and suitable way car within a reasonable time, as it had promised to do, we have to inquire, Was such negligence the proximate cause of the death of Sykes? What is a "proximate cause?" Definitions have been given by text-writers and in adjudicated cases which will aid us materially in answering this question, though, as a matter of fact, each case will have, in a great measure, to depend upon its own particular facts in arriving at what is the proximate cause of an alleged injury. "A 'proximate cause' may be defined as that cause which, in natural and continued sequence, unbroken by any efficient, intervening cause, produced the result complained of and without which that result would not have occurred." 16 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, 416. This is the general rule "where no intervening efficient cause is found between the original wrongful act and the injurious consequence complained of." Another definition found in the same authority, and more particularly applicable here, is, "in order to warrant a finding that negligence, or an act not amounting to wanton wrong, is the proximate cause of an injury, it must appear that the injury was the natural and probable consequence of the negligence or wrongful act, and that it ought to have been foreseen in the light of the attending circumstances." This rule is sustained by the highest authority. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 475, 24 L. ed. 256, 259; Hoag v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 85 Pa. 298; 2 Thomp. Neg. 1085, § 2; 16 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, 436, and cases cited under note 4.

It must be remembered in this case that the negligence complained of is the failure upon the part of the company to furnish a proper caboose, which from its construction would not jump the track; that should be strongly built; that should have platforms, bottom beams, springs, bracings, proper trucks, doors, end windows, and cupola. Now, under these definitions, and the law as laid down in the cited cases, the question is, Could this defendant have foreseen, by any ordinary or any extraordinary foresight, that, because of its negligence to furnish such a caboose, another train upon its tracks would negligently run into this caboose, rather than into one properly built and fitted up? If the second train is eliminated from the consideration of the case, was the negligence of the company to furnish a proper caboose in any manner whatever the cause of the death of Sykes? How, then, can that negligence be said to be the proximate cause of the injury? Supposing that the deceased had been furnished with a proper way car, and that a second train had run into it with comparative force and violence, is there any presumption from the fact that it was a proper way car that an accident would not have happened? Would not the way car have been thrown from the track, and the deceased with it, and would not the result of the force and violence of the collision and of the splinters from the way car have been, in all probability, the same as in this case? If it would, then the proximate cause of the injury was not the negligence in failing to furnish the proper way car, but the collision with the second train. In other words, if you take away this bad caboose, and place a good one in its stead, leaving all the other facts as alleged in the count, you will have the accident and the injury; but, if you take away the negligence of the fellow servants in the second train,—it makes no difference whether there is an imperfect caboose or not,—there will be no accident, and the negligence in not furnishing a proper caboose would not be the natural or probable cause of the injury, and, under the ruling of the courts, would not be the proximate cause of Sykes' death.

If because of the weakness or lack of support, or of the platform, or of bottom beams, the car had broken down, or jumped the track, and the injury had been caused, a far different case would have been presented; or if because of the lack of windows, and without any other alleged negligence, the way car had been run down, and the deceased injured because he could not see the approaching danger, which he was looking for, the case would be different; but there is no allegation in this count which can be construed into meaning that Sykes came to his death by reason of the absence of the windows. We are not to be understood as holding that, if there had been proper allegations of the defects in the way car being the primary cause of injury to the deceased,—the fact that the force which caused those defects to operate disastrously was brought into action by the negligence of the fellow servants of the deceased in the second train,—there would have been no cause of action. If the allegation had been, for instance, that, by reason of the negligence of the defendant in failing to furnish a way car with windows in the end, and with a cupola, the deceased was unable to see approaching danger, for which he was on the lookout, and therefore he was injured, he probably would have alleged a good cause of action. It is true that the plaintiffs alleged generally in this count that the way car had no doors or windows in the ends by "which approaching danger might be seen and prevented," but that is all. The allegation as to his injuries is that, "by reason of the poor and improper construction of the same, (referring to the way car,) broke the same into splinters," and that Sykes was then and there struck by said locomotive, and by the splinters of said box car. This was the cause of his death, and we are unable to see how the failure to furnish a way car with proper end doors and windows, upon these allegations, can by any construction be considered the proximate cause of his death. The following cases fully sustain, in our judgment, the above holding: Pease v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 61 Wis. 163; Fowler v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 61 Wis. 159; Hayes v. Western R. Corp. 8 Cush. 271; Whittaker v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 49 Hun. 400; Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Thomas, 51 Miss. 637; Gilman v. Eastern R. Corp. 10 Allen, 238; King v. Boston & W. R. Corp. 9 Cush. 112; Handelum v. Burlington C. R. & N. R. Co. 72 Iowa, 709; Campbell v. Stillwater, 82 Minn. 308; Hoag v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 85 Pa. 293; West Mahanoy Twp. v. Watson, 116 Pa. 344, 8 Cent. Rep. 543.

As, then, the deceased, under the facts as pleaded in this count, met his death by reason of the negligence of the fellow servants on the second train, which was, in our view of the case, the proximate cause, we find no error in the rulings of the court below, and they are therefore affirmed.

McFie, J., concurring:

I agree with the conclusions of the court, that the court below did not err in sustaining the demurrer to the first count of plaintiffs' declaration, and that the court below properly instructed the jury to find for the defendant on the trial had, upon issue joined under the second count of plaintiffs' declaration, as the proof clearly failed to sustain the allegations of the declaration. I agree with the conclusions of Mr. Justice Seeds that the court below properly sustained the demurrer of the defendant to the third count of plaintiffs' declaration. The first count declared upon the negligence of fellow servants of the deceased; the second count charged the negligence of the defendant in the selection and retention of incompetent fellow servants, after full knowledge of their incompetency, and that decedent was killed by reason of such incompetency; and the third count, that the decedent was killed by reason of the combined negligence of the defendant and fellow servants. I do not question the right of recovery in a proper case, for the combined negligence of master and fellow servant, where the negligence of each contributed to the injury, but the third count of plaintiffs' declaration is subject to the demurrer because it fails to point out with certainty wherein the negligence complained of on the part of the defendant contributed to the injury. It is not sufficient to allege negligence on the part of the defendant. It must also be shown that the injury complained of resulted from the specific negligence complained of. It will not do, in actions of this nature, to leave it a matter of conjecture as to whether the injury resulted from the negligence complained of or not. The declaration must state a cause of action, and if it fails to do so, either by insufficient allegations, or by alleging matter that destroys the right of action, it must yield to a demurrer. The negligence of the defendant is alleged to be that it furnished deceased with an improper, unsafe, and defective caboose, knowing that it was unsafe and defective; and, although defendant promised to do so, it failed to furnish the deceased with a proper caboose or way car, such as is usually and ordinarily used upon said same railroad, and upon all other like railroads, but instead wrongfully, negligently, and carelessly furnished him with a weakly-built, common, unsubstantial box car, without any platforms, beams, springs, bracing, and proper trucks, and without doors and windows in the ends or cupola, or lookout station on the top. These concluding allegations are simply descriptive of a box-car caboose, as distinguished from the usual caboose or way car used by that and other roads; not that the box car was particularly defective, by being broken and unfit for use, but because it was a box car, whereas the company had promised to give plaintiff a regular caboose, and had failed and neglected to do so. But, suppose the defendant was negligent in this respect, we fail to see how such negligence caused or contributed to the injury complained of, much less became the proximate or promotive cause, as defined by law. "That, in determining what is proximity of cause, the true rule is that the injury must be the natural and probable consequence of the negligence, such a consequence as, under the surrounding circumstances of the case, might and ought to have been foreseen by the wrongdoer as likely to flow from his act." West Mahanoy Twp. v. Watson, 116 Pa. 344, 8 Cent. Rep. 543. In the case of Hoag v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 85 Pa. 293, 27 Am. Rep. 653, Mr. Justice Trunkay, then president of the common pleas of Venango county, in his charge to the jury on the trial of the above-named case, said: "The immediate, and not the remote, cause is to be considered. This maxim is not to be controlled by time or distance, but by the succession of events. . . . The question is, Did the cause alleged produce its effects without another cause intervening, or was it to operate through or by means of this intervening cause?" "The question always is, Was there an unbroken connection between the wrongful act and the injury,—a continuous operation? Did the facts constitute a continuous succession of events, so linked together as to make a natural whole, or was there some new and independent cause intervening between the wrong and the injury? It is admitted that the rule is difficult of application. But it is generally held that, in order to warrant a finding that negligence, or an act not amounting to wanton wrong, is the proximate cause of an injury, it must appear that the injury was the natural and probable consequence of the negligence or wrongful act, and that it ought to have been foreseen in the light of the attending circumstances." And in the same opinion he says: "We do not say that even the natural and probable consequences of a wrongful act or omission are in all cases to be chargeable to the misfeasance or nonfeasance. They are not, when there is a sufficient and independent cause operating between the wrong and the injury. In such a case, the resort of the sufferer must be to the originator of the intermediate cause. But, when there is no intermediate efficient cause, the original wrong must be considered as reaching to the effect and proximate to it. The inquiry must therefore always be whether there was any intermediate cause, disconnected from the primary fault, and self operating, which produced the injury." Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 469, 24 L. ed. 256. To the same effect, in Massachusetts, it is held "that the proximate cause is the object of inquiry, and when discovered is to be regarded and relied upon. We cannot reason as to chances or probabilities. They are held to be too remote to form the basis of judicial decision." Hayes v. Western R. Corp. 3 Cush. 271.

A case involving the same questions as the one under consideration is found in 61 Wis. 159, (Fowler v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co.) In it a switchman was injured, while making a coupling, by an engine being backed down upon him. The engine was not a regular switch engine, but it was a regular road engine, being used for switching purposes, and had been so used for 16 days. The regular switch engine would not have had the goose-neck projection by which he was injured, and would have been so constructed as not to obstruct the view backward. It was held that the negligence of coservants, and not any insufficiency or unfitness in the engine itself, was the proximate cause of the injury, and that the company was not liable. About the same time that court held, where the chain coupling was broken, and the brakeman had to go under the platform to make the coupling, and while he was under it the conductor, not knowing his position, gave the signal to the engineer to move up, and thereby the brakeman was killed, that it was the negligence of the conductor, and not the imperfect coupling, that was the proximate cause of the injury, and therefore the company was not liable. Pease v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 61 Wis. 168. In Henry v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co., 76 Mo. 288, it appeared that the plaintiff was wrongfully commanded to get off a caboose of the defendant, where he had a right to be. He obeyed the command, and while upon the ground stepped upon a track, where he was run upon and injured by a train. Hough, J., speaking for the court, said: "It is, perhaps, probable that, if the plaintiff had not been ordered out of the caboose, he would not have been injured, but this hypothesis does not establish the legal relation of cause and effect between the expulsion and the injury. If the plaintiff had not left home, he certainly would not have been injured as he was, but his leaving home could not, therefore, be declared to be the cause of his injury. As the plaintiff's injury was neither the ordinary, natural, nor probable consequence of his expulsion from the caboose, such expulsion, however it might excite our indignation in the absence of any regulation to justify it, cannot be considered in this action, and the legal aspect of the case is precisely the same as it would have been if no such expulsion had taken place."

Where several concurring acts or conditions of things, one of them a wrongful act or omission, produce an injury, such wrongful act or omission is to be regarded the proximate cause of the injury, if the injury be 16 L. R. A.

one which might reasonably be anticipated from the act or omission, and which would not have occurred without it. Campbell v. Stillwater, 82 Minn. 308.

From these decisions, the proximate cause of the injury in this case was not the negligence of the defendant in failing to furnish the usual way car or caboose, because the car used by the deceased, although a box car, was making its run regularly, and, so far as the declaration shows, was rendering as safe and complete service as if another car had been furnished, until it was dashed into by another train. What injury would have been done the deceased, if the second train had not run into the first? Clearly, none whatever. It is pure speculation to say that any injury would have resulted, and the law abhors speculation. The plaintiff alleges that this box car was liable to jump the track, as it had done before; but a complete answer to that is that it did not do so but, on the contrary, was making its regular run. If the declaration had alleged that the car had jumped the track, and by reason thereof the deceased was killed, a cause of action not demurrable would be stated, because it would be apparent that the injury resulted from the negligence of the company in furnishing a car that was liable to run off the track, and in failing to furnish one that was not. The negligence would appear to be the immediate and proximate cause of the injury, there being no intervening, independent cause between the negligence and the injury.

The third count of this declaration, however, presents a very different case. Here we have the intervention of an independent cause, which actually caused the death of the deceased,—a rear-end collision by another locomotive and train, managed by coservants of the deceased. The averment is as follows: "The said locomotive engine then and there ran and struck, with comparative force and violence, upon and against the rear of the train and box car, being used as a caboose aforesaid, and being conducted with all proper care and diligence by the said George W. Sykes, and, by reason of the poor and improper construction of the same, broke the same into splinters, the said George W. Sykes was then and there, with great force and violence, struck by the said locomotive, and by splinters of the said box car being used as aforesaid." In view of this averment that the car was broken to splinters by the force of the collision, it seems idle to contend that, if the defendant company had furnished the deceased the kind of a car he desired, he would not have been killed. The collision, and the injury resulting in the death of the deceased, were almost simultaneous occurrences. There can be no reasonable doubt as to the cause of the death of Sykes. He was killed by the second train dashing into the first, and this was the proximate cause of the injury. Having discovered the proximate cause, the inquiry stops there, because to go back of it would be both endless and useless. Lewis v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. 54 Mich. 55, 52 Am. Rep. 790.

It is true the plaintiff avers, in general terms, that the defendant's failure to furnish another car was also the cause of the injury; but, in my opinion, she wholly fails to point out in what way it caused or contributed to the injury. The averment seems to me to be destitute of foundation, and in the nature of a predicate for the introduction of uncertain and improper evidence. In the case of Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Jones, 76 Ill. 311, where the plaintiff alleged negligence in keeping a crossing in repair, where he received an injury by a collision of a train with plaintiff's wagon, there was no averment that the condition of the crossing contributed to the injury, but the gravamen of the action was the failure to give the statutory signal, and failure to slack the speed, held, that evidence could not be given to show the condition of the crossing, nor can its condition be shown as a make-weight to sustain an entirely different charge, in which the condition of the crossing is not an element. In this case the wrong complained of against the company is that they failed to furnish a certain kind of car for the use of said employé, but it is not averred that their failure in this respect was the cause of the locomotive running into the car. But it is charged that the collision was caused by the wrong, negligence, and incompetency of the defendant, by and through its servants. An employer is not liable for the negligent acts of coservants to each other. Tuttle v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co., 122 U. S. 189, 30 L. ed. 1114. Therefore, so far as it attempts to charge the defendant with the negligent acts of coservants, the count is bad. It is an immaterial inquiry which of these fellow servants were at fault, but it is very clear that both of these trains did not have a right to the same part of the track at the same time. One or the other was in the wrong, and, to create a liability against the defendant, the declaration must aver the particular act or omission of the defendant that caused the collision, and this it does not attempt to do. An omission that was not the proximate cause would not be sufficient. In this respect the count does not state a cause of action against the defendant, for it avers the proximate cause of the injury to have been the intervention of an independent locomotive, which ran into the car, as in West Mahanoy Twp. v. Watson, above cited. Eliminate this second train from consideration, and there is nothing left upon which to found an action for damages against the defendant. There is no averment in this count that the company knowingly selected incompetent servants. That was the subject of the second count, upon which the plaintiff secured a trial, and therefore such cannot be considered as an element of damages under this count. The demurrer being interposed, the facts well pleaded were admitted. The demurrer challenges the sufficiency of the facts stated to constitute a cause of action in law. The trial is by the court, as the matter at issue is one of law, and not of fact. The court below found, upon the facts stated, that the negligence of coservants of the deceased was the proximate cause of the injury complained of, and not the combined negligence of defendant and coservants, as alleged in the count, and hence sustained the demurrer. The plaintiff stood on his demurrer, refused to amend, and judgment was properly given for the defendant.

Freeman, J., delivered the following opinion:

I am unable to agree with the majority of the court in the conclusions reached in this case. I agree that the doctrine of the non-liability of the master to the servant for the negligence of a fellow servant seems to be now well settled. I shall not undertake to review the numerous authorities, nor to discuss the many hotly-contested cases through which this questionable doctrine has passed. It has come up "through great tribulation," and is possibly entitled to a rest. But the decision of a majority of the court in this case proceeds a step further, and that, too, in the wrong direction, to exempt the master, not only from the consequences of his servant's negligence, but from that of his own, if it appear that a coservant contributed to the result. This proposition is to my mind too dangerous in its tendency, and too far reaching in its consequences, to be allowed to pass without dissent. That the grounds of my dissent may not be misunderstood, I will state what I understand to be the precise issue. The plaintiff alleges, in substance, that the injury for which redress is sought was the combined result of the conduct of the injured party's fellow servant and the use of defective machinery (a way car) in the hands of the injured employé, which he was induced to use by the promises of the employer to repair. To this count a demurrer was interposed and sustained. The opinion of a majority of this court affirms the action of the court below. I shall endeavor to sustain the proposition that, while the master is not liable to one servant for the wrongful act of a fellow servant, he is nevertheless liable for his own wrong; and that he cannot escape responsibility by showing that the negligence or wrong of the injured party's fellow servant contributed to the result; and that while an employé assumes the ordinary risks incident to his employment, among others, breakage of machinery, and injury from defects in machinery, yet if the servant discover defects in such machinery, and point them out, and the master promise to repair within a reasonable time, and the servant is induced thereby to continue in the use of such defective machinery, the danger to such use not being so imminent or impending as to deter a man of ordinary prudence, and while thus employed he is injured by such machinery, he has a right of action against the master. Eastern Counties R. Co. v. Marriage, 6 Hurlst. & N. 937; Patterson v. Pittsburg & O. R. Co. 76 Pa. 389, 18 Am. Rep. 413; Le Clair v. St Paul & P. R. Co. First Div. 20 Minn. 9 (Gil. 1); Conroy v. Vulcan Iron Works, 62 Mo. 35; Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 218, 25 L. ed. 615.

Before, however, inviting attention to the discussion of the main question involved, I desire to suggest, with great respect, that it seems to me the reasoning employed by the majority of the court to sustain the demurrer is at fault, in that the conclusion is reached from two absolutely contradictory premises. It is held that the count is defective, in that it shows that the dangerous character of the machine (way car) was so apparent that it was contributory negligence to use the car. This for the purpose of bringing the case within the rule laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of District of Columbia v. McElligott, 117 U. S. 621, 29 L. ed. 946. This position, however, is not only abandoned, but entirely overturned, in the effort to establish the contrary proposition, that the defective machinery, so far from being so palpably dangerous as to prevent its use by an ordinarily prudent man, was not in fact at all dangerous, and did not in fact even contribute to, much less cause, the accident.

The rule as to the effect to be given to the negligence of a fellow servant, when combined with the negligence of the master, is thus stated in note 10, p. 981, Thomp. Neg.: "It is but another expression of rules already announced, to say that, if the negligence of the master combines with the negligence of a fellow servant, and the two contribute to the injury, the servant may recover damages of the master." The learned author cites, in support of this proposition, Crutchfield v. Richmond & D. R. Co., 76 N. C. 320, wherein the doctrine is laid down in this language by Reade, J.: "The decisions, both English and American, go very far towards the conclusion that one servant cannot recover of the employer for any injury which results from the negligence of a fellow servant, in a business common to both. There may be exceptions, but, grant that to be so, for the sake of argument, yet it is not so where the employer contributes to the negligence of a fellow servant, or to the injury; as if he employs an unfit servant, or, as in the case of a bad engine, knows that it is bad, and fails to repair it. So in this case, if the defendant answers that the plaintiff cannot recover because the injury resulted from the negligence of his fellow servant, the engineer, the plaintiff may reply that the defendant contributed to the negligence of the engineer, and to the injury, by having a bad engine."

The same doctrine was laid down in the case of Booth v. Boston & A. R. Co., 78 N. Y. 88, 29 Am. Rep. 97. The facts in that case were substantially as follows: The plaintiff was engineer in the defendant's employ, and, as such, went with a freight train from Greenbush on the morning of February 8. This train was preceded by one under an engineer named Hughes, with seventeen cars, two brakemen, and a conductor. Plaintiff's evidence tended to show that three brakemen were necessary to such a train, and were usually sent. One or two other trains had preceded it the same morning. There was a head conductor, Rockefeller, who gave the conductors directions as to what cars were to go in the different trains. He also assigned the brakemen to go with the several trains. After receiving instructions, trains were started by, and were each under the control of, each conductor. Three brakemen had been assigned by Rockefeller, and were ready to go with Hughes' train of 17 cars on the morning in question, but one overslept himself, and failed to go, and the conductor of the train started without him, and without giving any notice to the head conductor, Rockefeller, of the absence of the third brakeman. Hughes' train, upon arriving at Chatham, was stopped to take coal upon the engine, as was customary. A train ahead of it still stood at the coal pile taking coal, and Hughes' train stopped and stood behind it for some ten minutes. The conductor and one brakeman got off and went forward to be ready to put on coal. When the forward train had gone, Hughes started his train up to get to the coal pile. The train broke in two, and eleven cars ran back. Upon them was the other brakeman, named Losty, who tried in vain to stop them. They collided with plaintiff's train, and he was injured. In this case it was held that the company were liable. Says the court, Andrews, J., delivering the opinion: "The rule that the master is not liable for the negligence of a coservant does not, however, go to the extent of exempting him from liability in every case when it appears that he did not himself do or direct the doing of the negligent act, or even when the immediate negligence is that of a person who in some sense was the coservant of the person injured. There are certain duties which concern the safety of the servant, which belong to the master to perform, and he cannot rid himself of responsibility to his servant for not performing them, by showing that he delegated the performance to another servant, who neglected to follow his instructions, or omitted to do the duty intrusted to him. The duty of the master to select competent servants, and to provide safe implements and machinery for the use of his servants, belongs to this class. The rule that the servant takes the risks of the service 'supposes,' says Lord Cranworth, 'that the master has secured proper servants and proper machinery for the conduct of the work.'"—citing Bartons Hill Coal Co. v. Reid, 4 Jur. N. S. 767, 3 Macq. 275. It is there held that the duty to provide competent servants and proper machinery is a duty at all times resting upon the company, which it was bound to discharge for the protection of all persons, its servants as well as others, and which, if neglected and injury to a servant resulted from the neglect, gave a right of action, notwithstanding the fact that the immediate negligence was that of coservants intrusted with such performance. The rule is thus stated in the case of Paulmier v. Erie R. Co., 84 N. J. L. 155: "The rule already referred to is that the master is not responsible to one servant for the ill consequences of the negligence of a fellow servant in the course of common employment. The reason for this rule is that, as the master cannot prevent carelessness in his servants, it is reasonable to presume each servant agrees to run the risk of that which he knows, in the nature of things, to be inevitable. But the servant does not agree to take the chance of any negligence on the part of his employer; and no case has gone so far as to hold that, where such negligence contributes to the injury, the servant may not recover. It would be both unjust and impolitic to suffer the master to evade the penalty for his misconduct in neglecting to provide properly for the security of his servants. Contributory negligence, to defeat a right of action, must be that of the party injured."

In the case of Cayzer v. Taylor, 10 Gray, 274, 69 Am. Dec. 317, the cause of action was stated substantially as follows: The defendant negligently managed his engine, and did not provide a competent and suitable engineer and boiler and engine and pump and gauge and appendages and machinery and precautions for safety used therewith, but knowingly and carelessly provided such as were not competent and suitable and sufficiently safe, and knowingly and carelessly continued the same in use, and improperly used them while out of order and unsafe, either solely or in connection with his servants. There was a verdict for the plaintiff, and, on appeal to the supreme court, it was said by Thomas, J., delivering the opinion: "It is now well-settled law that one entering into the service of another takes upon himself the ordinary risks of the employment in which he is engaged, including the negligent acts of his fellow workmen, in such employment, [citing Farwell v. Boston & W. R. Corp. 4 Met. 49; King v. Boston & W. R. Corp. 9 Cush. 112; Gillshannon v. Stony Brook R. Corp. 10 Cush. 228.] It has not been settled that the master is not liable for an injury which results from the employment of an incompetent servant, or use of a defective instrument. If the defendant employed a competent engineer, and used a boiler properly constructed and guarded, he would not be responsible for the injuries resulting from an act of carelessness or negligence of such an engineer; but we are not prepared to say that if one uses a dangerous instrumentality without the safeguards which science and experience suggest, or the positive rules of law require, he is not to be responsible for an injury resulting from such use, because the negligence of one of his servants may have contributed to the result, or because a possible vigilance of the servant might have prevented injury. The very object and purpose of a safeguard, like the fusible plug, are protection against the occasional carelessness and negligence of the engineer. It is intended to be in some degree a substitute for his vigilance, to keep watch if he nods. To say that the master should not be responsible for an injury which would not have happened, had a safeguard required by law been used, because the engineer was negligent, would be to say, in substance and effect, that he should not be liable at all for an injury resulting from the failure to use it. . . . The counsel for the defendant asks of us a liberal application of the principle by which the servant is presumed to assume the risks of the business, and among others, the negligence of his fellow servants, for the protection of the master. The principle should not be so extended as to impair in the least degree the obligation resting upon the master in the prosecution of a business, involving unusual risks of health, or life or limb, to employ well-guarded instruments, with competent engineers." Continuing the quotation from the note already cited from Thompson on Negligence, it is said: "This [the liability of the master for injuries to servants] happens where the negligence of the master in furnishing defective machinery or appliances, or an insufficient force of collaborators, combines with the negligence of the servants whose duty it is to oversee and use the particular machinery, whereby another servant is injured; or where the negligence of the master in selecting an incompetent servant combines with the negligence of such servant; or where the negligence of a railroad company in not furnishing a sufficient number of workmen for the management of a train combines with the negligence of a particular servant in starting a train while insufficiently manned.

16 L. R. A.

Perhaps a better expression of the rule is that given in the headnote of Cayzer v. Taylor, 10 Gray, 274, 69 Am. Dec. 317, 'that the master is liable to his servant for injuries resulting from a defect in his machinery, although the negligence of a fellow servant contributes to the accident.' The doctrine is thus stated by Mr. Wood, at page 685 of his work on Master and Servant: "The servant, although he may know that the instrumentalities of the business are not in good repair or condition, is not therefore necessarily chargeable with negligence in remaining in the master's employ, and using them, unless real danger therefrom is apparent. In all cases where there is any doubt, the question is for the jury." "The master," says the same author, at page 687, "is bound to exercise reasonable care to prevent accidents to his workmen. He is bound to furnish suitable machinery, and see that it is properly protected and kept in proper repair."

The case of Snow v. Housatonic R. Co., 8 Allen, 441, 85 Am. Dec. 720, was an action against the railroad company to recover damages incurred by the plaintiff, who was injured while endeavoring to uncouple the train. The proof showed that the accident was the result of a defect in the road, of which defect the plaintiff had knowledge. Bigelow, Ch. J., in a very able opinion, wherein he reviewed the questions relating to the relations existing between master and servant, held that the continuance in the service of the company by the plaintiff after knowledge of the defect was not of itself evidence of such negligence as to defeat the action, and that in all such cases the question of negligence on the servant's part is a question for the jury. The rule that the master is liable for an accident growing out of the use of defective machinery by the servant is thus laid down in Wood, Mast. & Serv. §378: "But if there is any evidence that tends to excuse the plaintiff from the imputation of negligence on his part, as that he had called the attention of the master to the defect, and he had promised to repair it, or if the danger was not obvious, or if he incurred the risk by the express direction and command of the master or his agent, and the danger was not inevitable or a necessary result of performing the service, then it is a question for the jury whether or not the performance of the service or his acts at the time of the happening of the injury, were negligent in fact. Where the servant, being aware of the danger of the service, complains to the master, and he promises to remedy the defect, the master is liable for injuries resulting to him therefrom, and he is not chargeable with contributory negligence by remaining in the service, unless the danger is so great that a man of ordinary prudence would not remain." In support of this proposition a long line of authorities are cited. Mr. Wharton, in his work on Negligence, supports the same proposition, and speaks of it as a doctrine peculiar to this country. This, however, is not altogether correct, the leading English case on the subject being that of Clarke v. Holmes, 7 Hurlst. & N. 942. The same doctrine is supported by the following decisions: McGowan v. St. Louis & I. M. R. Co. 61 Mo. 528; Conroy v. Vulcan Iron Works, 6 Mo. App. 102; Greenleaf v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. 29 Iowa, 14, 4 Am. Rep. 181; Patterson v. Pittsburg & O. R. Co. 76 Pa. 889, 18 Am. Rep. 412; Laning v. New York Cent. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 521, 10 Am. Rep. 417.

The doctrine of the master's liability to the servant for accidents resulting from the use of defective machinery is thus laid down by Mr. Justice Harlan in the case of Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co., 100 U. S. 218, 25 L. ed. 612: "If the servant of such a company, who has knowledge of the defects in the machinery, gives notice thereof to the proper officer, and is promised that they shall remedy it, his subsequent use of it, on the well-grounded belief that it would be put in proper condition within a reasonable time, does not necessarily or as a matter of law, make him guilty of contributory negligence. It is a question for the jury whether, in relying upon such promise, and using the machinery after he knew its defective and insufficient condition, he was in the exercise of due care. The burden of proof in such case is upon the company to show contributory negligence." Nor can the master shield himself from responsibility for injury growing out of the use of defective machinery by showing that the negligence of a fellow servant contributed to it. Where the injury is the result in part of the negligence of a fellow servant, and in part the negligence of the master, the latter is liable. In the case of Tennessee C. I. & R. Co. v. Kyle (Ala.) 12 L. R. A. 108, the accident resulted from a collision between an engine (running without a cowcatcher or pilot) and a cow, and the company was held to be liable. In the case of Town v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 84 Mich. 214, the plaintiff, an engineer, was injured by running into an open switch. The switch had some months before been abandoned, and the lights taken down. Shortly previous to the accident, however, the switch had been reopened, but the lights had not been replaced. The company contended that the absence of the light was not the proximate cause of the accident; 16 L. R. A.

that if the switch had been locked the engine would have passed over safely; and that the opening or unlocking of the switch was caused either by the intermeddling of a stranger, or by the negligence of a fellow servant of the plaintiff, and that in either event he could not recover. But the court held that, if the lights would have prevented the accident by giving timely warning of the condition of the switch, their absence was just as much the proximate cause of the accident as the unlocking or turning of the switch, "and if they were concurrent causes the defendant would be liable." In Cone v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 81 N. Y. 206, 37 Am. Rep. 491, the company was held liable for an accident resulting from the sudden starting of a locomotive, caused by its being out of repair. In that case, as in this, the doctrine of the negligence of a fellow servant (the engineer in charge) was invoked. If he had been careful, it was alleged, he might have prevented the accident. But the court held otherwise, saying: "If this doctrine is accepted, it will loosen the rule of responsibility, which now bears none too closely upon corporate conduct." In Elmer v. Locke, 185 Mass. 575, the injury was the combined result of the defective construction of trestlework and the negligence of a fellow servant. The defendant was held liable, the court holding that "it does not exonerate him from the consequences of failure in the performance of his duty, if such failure contributed to the injury, to show that, if others for whom he is not responsible had performed their duty the injury would not have occurred,"—citing Cayser v. Taylor, 10 Gray, 274, 69 Am. Dec. 317; Baton v. Boston & L. R. Co. 11 Allen, 500; Simmons v. New Bedford, V. & N. S. B. Co. 97 Mass. 861; Lane v. Atlantic Works, 111 Mass. 186. To the same effect is the case of Franklin v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 87 Minn. 409. The same defense as in this case was attempted to be set up in the case of Ellis v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co., 95 N. Y. 546, but the court said: "This rule, [the fellow-servant rule,] however, has no application if the company has at the same time disregarded its obligation to provide either a suitable roadbed or engine or cars." The following authorities also support the same proposition: Hunn v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. 78 Mich. 518, 7 L. R. A. 500; Steller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 46 Wis. 497; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Holt, 29 Kan. 149; Cayser v. Taylor, 10 Gray, 281, 69 Am. Dec. 317; Booth v. Boston & A. R. Co. 73 N. Y. 38, 29 Am. Rep. 97; Paulmier v. Erie R. Co. 34 N. J. L. 151; McMahon v. Henning, 1 McCrary, 516, 8 Fed. Rep. 353; Crutchfield v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 76 N. C. 320; Stringham v. Stewart, 100 N. Y. 516, 1 Cent. Rep. 779. Indeed, the doctrine of the master's liability, where his negligence contributes to the accident, is settled by such an unbroken chain of authorities as to lead the learned author of the notes to English and American Railroad Cases to declare: "The cases affirming this proposition are numerous, and the doctrine is supported with a unanimity not to be found among the authorities on any other branch of the law of fellow servants." Coppins v. New York Cent. & H. R. R. Co., 123 N. Y. 557, 44 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 623. This doctrine "has been so often asserted by the courts of the highest character as to be no longer an open question." Richmond & D. R. Co. v. George (Va.) 48 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 385. "It is a cruel and inhuman doctrine that the employer, though he is aware that his own neglect to furnish the proper safeguards for the lives and limbs of those in his employment, puts them in constant hazard of injury, is not to be held accountable to those employes who, serving under him, under such circumstances, are injured by his neglect and omissions." Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Norment, 84 Va. 167, cited in Richmond & D. R. Co. v. George, supra.

The fatal error which, in my opinion, lurks in the doctrine propounded by the majority of the court, consists—First, in the application of the doctrine of fellow servants, in a qualified sense, at least, to the relation of master and servant; and, second, in the application of the doctrine of proximate and remote, mediate and immediate, cause, to cases wherein the injury is the result in part of the negligence of the master and in part of that of the servant. I affirm without hesitation that, wherever the facts of the case demonstrate that the negligence of the master contributed to the accident, negligence is to be regarded, as a matter of law, as direct and proximate. This doctrine is laid down without qualification by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Grand Trunk R. Co. of Canada v. Cummings, 108

U. S. 702, 27 L. ed. 267, where the court says: "In the instruction which was given we find no error. It was, in effect, that, if the negligence of the company contributed to, that is to say, had a share in producing the injury, the company was liable, even though the negligence of a fellow servant of Cummings was contributory also. If the negligence of the company contributed to, it must necessarily have been an immediate cause of the accident, and it is no defense that another was likewise guilty of wrong." The only possible escape from this unbroken line of authorities is to say that, notwithstanding the declaration of plaintiff in error that her late husband came to his death "also by and through the negligence, carelessness, default, and improper conduct and wrongful act of the defendant, in defaulting, refusing, and neglecting to furnish a proper caboose and way car," yet this court will determine, as a matter of fact, that the alleged defect in the way car contributed nothing whatever to the accident; that, even if the deceased had been provided with a proper way car, the result would have been the same. I insist that this and like questions are matters for the jury. "The true rule is that what is the proximate cause of an injury is ordinarily a question for the jury. It is not a question of science or legal knowledge. It is to be determined as a fact, in view of all the circumstances of facts attending it." Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Kellogg, 94 U. S. 474, 24 L. ed. 258.

O'Brien, Ch. J., concurs.

NORTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

L. M. WATERS

v.

RICHMOND & DANVILLE R. CO., Appel.

(.....N. C.....)

1. No excuse for the breach by a carrier of its contract to furnish a car and transport cattle to a certain place by a certain day is furnished by the fact that the shipper's object in naming that day was to enable him to offer the cattle for sale on Sunday contrary to law, unless that object entered into the contract as part of the inducement or consideration.
2. Damages for breach by the carrier of a written contract under which cattle were shipped, cannot be recovered in an action for breach of a prior oral contract to transport them at a certain time.

(April 5, 1892.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for Ashe County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for alleged breach of contract to transport cattle. Reversed.

Statement by Davis, J.:

A former appeal in this action was decided at February term, 1891, (108 N. C. 849), when a new trial was granted, after which plaintiff filed an amended complaint, in which it is alleged in substance that the defendant is a corporation duly created by law, owning and operating a line of railroad between the town of Taylorsville, in North Carolina, and the city of Charleston, S. C. That on or about the 10th of May, 1888, he was the owner of a lot of cattle, which he desired to ship from Taylorsville to the city of Charleston; and, in order to reach said city on the Saturday morning following, he contracted with the defendant for and in consideration of the sum of $58.50, to furnish on the Wednesday night one safe and substantial R. & D. stock-car, capable of holding and transporting the said cattle, 32 in number; and that the said car should be transported with diligence and dispatch from Taylorsville to Charleston, and reach the latter place on Saturday morning. That the defendant at the time of making the said contract was distinctly and plainly informed that the plaintiff desired to reach Charleston on Saturday, to be ready for the Monday market. That the defendant neglected and failed to perform and comply with said contract, and by reason of said neglect and failure the plaintiff sustained $350 damage, and he demands judgment for the same and for costs, etc. The defendant answered, admitting that it was a corporation as alleged, but denying all the other allegations aeriatim, and for a further defense alleged: "(1) That, as it is informed and believes, a cattle car of a kind in constant use on its road was tendered to the plaintiff on his arrival at the town of Taylorsville, and refused by him. (2) That, as it is informed and believes, it was Sunday market in Charleston which plaintiff desired to reach, and this information is obtained partly from the sworn statement of plaintiff in his original complaint; and, as it is advised and believes, the law of South Carolina prohibits the sale or offering for sale of any property in said state on Sunday. (3) That plaintiff's cattle were shipped by defendant from Taylorsville within a reasonable time from their delivery at its depot." This answer was duly sworn to. Upon the trial the plaintiff offered in evidence the verified answer of the defendant in the original action, and afterwards the defendant put in evidence the original verified complaint of the plaintiff, which are set out in full in the record. Much other evidence was offered, to which there were many exceptions. At the close of the evidence the defendant asked in writing twenty-one special instructions, eight of which were refused, and exceptions entered by defendant; but only two (the second and twenty-first) seemed to be insisted upon by counsel in his brief for defendant. The second prayer for instructions was as follows: "If the jury believe the evidence of the plaintiff himself, he had in his mind at the time of making the contract the purpose to expose his cattle to sale on Sunday, and communicated this purpose to the defendant, and the contract, if made, was void, and the plaintiff is not entitled to recover." Instruction refused, and defendant excepted.

NOTE.—As to the validity of contracts remotely connected with illegal purpose or transaction, see notes to Anheuser-Busch Brewing Assn. v. Mason (Minn.) 9 L. R. A. 506; Jackson v. City Nat. Bank 16 L. R. A.

(Ind.) 9 L. R. A. 657; Graves v. Johnson (Mass.) 15 L. R. A. 884, and the case of Gray v. Western Union Tele. Co. (Ga.) 14 L. R. A. 95.

Mr. George F. Bason for appellant.

Messrs. George W. Bower and Strong & Stronach for appellee.

Davis, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

When this case was before us on the former appeal (108 N. C. 849), the court said that the judge below very properly declined to give the instruction that the "contract was based upon an illegal consideration, and was void, . . . as there is not the slightest illegality either in the consideration or promise. The consideration was the sum of $53.50, and the promise was to transport the cattle so as to reach the city of Charleston on Saturday. We presume that the defendant intended to present the question as to the effect of the alleged illegal purpose of the plaintiff, but, as the point is not presented in the prayer for instruction, we do not feel at liberty to pass upon it in this appeal." The question which the court declined to pass upon because not presented by the prayer for instruction is now directly presented by the prayer, but there is no issue to which the prayer for instructions is applicable. There was no objection to the issues framed, and none was tendered as to the purpose of the plaintiff with regard to the sale of cattle on Sunday, or of the knowledge of the defendant of his purpose; but there was evidence tending to show the plaintiff's illegal purpose to sell on Sunday, and that that purpose was communicated to the defendant. The jury were instructed at the request of the defendant that, "if the plaintiff had in his mind, at the time of making the alleged contract, the purpose to sell his cattle or expose them for sale in Charleston on Sunday, and communicated his purpose to the defendant, and the contract was made with this understanding, then it is void, and the plaintiff is not entitled to recover;" and we think this instruction was fully as liberal as the defendant was entitled to, bearing upon the illegality of the contract; and, though the question was not presented by any issue, we deem it proper to say that railroad companies are public carriers of passengers and freight, and they cannot exempt themselves from liability for damages by reason of the fact that freight is to be used for some illegal purpose at the point of destination or that the object of the passenger is to do some illegal act at the point of destination, even if the railroad company had knowledge of the illegal purpose, unless that illegal purpose was the consideration and inducement of the contract. The railroad company has no right to say to the passenger or to the shipper, "I will not transport you or your freight, for it is your purpose to do some unlawful act;" but, if it makes some special contract, not in the regular order of transportation,—as, for instance, to furnish a special train to passengers to go to a particular point to engage in a prize-fight,—the contract will be illegal and void, and no action could grow out of it. An illegal contract furnishes no ground, in law, of action; but the railroad is not exempt from liability for negligence, even though the purpose of the shipper or passenger be illegal, unless the illegal purpose enter into the consideration of the contract of transportation. The twenty-first prayer for instruction, which the court refused to give, was: "Plaintiff can recover nothing for the drift at Columbia, nor for his expenses there, and nothing for the drift at Taylorsville, except for such as would have occurred notwithstanding good care and attention." It is in evidence that the cattle were shipped, not under the contract for the breach of which this action is brought. The plaintiff himself testified, "I shipped my cattle on a written contract, different from the one first made." There is no allegation in the complaint of any breach of the written contract under which the plaintiff shipped his cattle, nor of any damage by reason of detention in Columbia. The written contract under which the cattle were shipped was made, according to the evidence, after the plaintiff reached Taylorsville, and after the breach of the parol contract, for the breach of which this action is brought, and his honor erred in refusing the last instruction.

Error.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

First Case.

PEOPLE of the State of New York, as rel.
George C. CARTER, Appl.,

v.
Frank RICE, Respt.

Second Case.

PEOPLE of the State of New York, as rel.
Charles F. POND, Appl.,

v.
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF MONROE COUNTY, Respt.

Third Case.

Hartley V. D. HORN, Appl.,

v.
BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF ONEIDA COUNTY, Respt.

(.....N. Y.....)

1. An extraordinary session of the Legislature called by the governor for that purpose is a session within the meaning of a constitutional provision requiring the alteration of the districts from which members of the Legislature are elected at the "first session after the return of every enumeration."
2. Judicial notice may be taken of the length of time ordinarily required to complete an enumeration of the inhabitants of a state.
3. Upon the omission of the Legislature to make an enumeration of the inhabitants and apportion the districts for electing members of the Legislature in the year fixed by the Constitution for that purpose, the duty rests upon each succeeding Legislature until it is performed; and an apportionment cannot be set aside as unauthorized although it was made seven years after the constitutional time.
4. The provision of the New York Constitution requiring the omission of colored persons not taxed from the number of inhabitants in apportioning senate districts, became inoperative when the Constitution was amended by striking out the provision limiting the liability of colored persons for taxes to those assessed upon real estate, and making the payment of taxes necessary to entitle them to vote; the plain intention of the people being to blot out all distinctions of a political nature between white and colored citizens.
5. Courts will not spend time in attempting to remedy errors in an apportionment of members of the Legislature among the inhabitants of the state which injure no one and which raise nothing but abstract questions for adjudication.

6. The court will not, in the absence of evidence on the question, presume the existence in one election district of more persons of a certain class which has been unlawfully included in the enumeration upon which an apportionment of members of the Legislature was founded, than exist in other districts for the purpose of establishing injury to the inhabitants of such district as a basis for setting aside the apportionment.
7. Discretion as to the apportionment is vested in the Legislature by a constitutional provision that members of Assembly shall be apportioned by it among the several counties of the state "as nearly as may be, according to the number of their respective inhabitants," which the courts have no power to review unless it has been so abused as to clearly show an open and intended violation of the letter and spirit of the Constitution.
8. No abuse of the discretion vested in the Legislature as to the apportionment of members of Assembly is shown where each county has been given a member for every full ratio of representation which it contains and the only inequalities alleged are in the distribution of the remaining members to counties having a smaller surplus over the ratio than other counties have; at least where the reason for such action was not partisan and the fair inference is that it was absolutely necessary to secure the passage of the bill.
9. A Legislature cannot be charged with unfairness in distributing the remaining members of Assembly among the counties after all full ratios are provided for because it takes into account the losses sustained by the most populous counties by reason of the adoption of a certain ratio of representation rather than of some other more favorable to them, nor because it regards increases of population shown by the census.
10. The result which may follow from one construction or another of a statute or constitution is always a potent factor and is sometimes in and of itself conclusive as to the correct solution of the question.
11. That the effect of setting aside an apportionment Act would be to cause every subsequent Act to be brought before the courts for review which might happen at a critical time; to originate the greatest confusion as to an impending election with a possible total suppression of it; and at all events to continue in force an Act containing greater inequalities than the one attacked—is of itself sufficient to induce the court to say that only in a case of plain and gross violation of the spirit and letter of the Constitution should it exercise such power.

NOTE.—For the recent decisions upon the subject of legislative gerrymanders, see State, Adams County, v. Cunningham (Wis.) 15 L. R. A. 561; Giddings v. Blacker (Mich.) ante, 402; Houghton Co. Supra v. Blacker (Mich.) ante, 432; McPherson v. Blacker (Mich.) ante, 475.

In considering the various decisions it will be noticed that the Wisconsin Constitution does not contain the clause "as nearly as may be" (see State, 16 L. R. A.

Lamb, v. Cunningham (Wis.) 17 L. R. A. 145), which clause found in the New York Constitution is in the above case relied upon to some extent to establish the existence of discretion in the Legislature. On the other hand, the Michigan Constitution does contain such clause, (see Houghton Co. Supra v. Blacker, ante, 432), but no importance seems to have been attached to that fact.

12. Former apportionment Acts may be examined by the court when it is asked to set aside such an Act, for the purpose of finding a valid one which may be declared in force.

(Andrews and Finch, JJ., dissent from propositions 7-12.)

(October 12, 1892.)

APPPEAL by relator from an order of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Third Department, denying a motion for a peremptory writ of mandamus to require the secretary of state to issue election notices for the election of members of Assembly pursuant to the Act of 1879, disregarding the Act of 1892. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry M. Love, with Messrs. Risley & Robinson, for appellant:

Any citizen has the right to apply for the relief asked.

When the action or non-action of a public officer or board is in violation of any provision of the Constitution or of the law, every citizen's rights are violated.

People v. Collins, 19 Wend. 56; People v. Halsey, 87 N. Y. 844; People v. Rice, 129 N. Y. 461; People v. Sullivan County Supra. 56 N. Y. 249; People v. Rice, 14 L. R. A. 643, 129 N. Y. 449; People v. Halsey, 87 N. Y. 844; Pond v. Monroe County Supra. opinion of Rumsey, J.

The Apportionment Act was not passed at the "first session after the return" of the enumeration, and is invalid and unconstitutional.

The Constitution of 1846, art. 10, § 6, says that the political year and legislative term shall begin on the first day of January, and those words are still in use.

A definite limit of life for each and every Legislature is clearly fixed, and it cannot be lengthened or shortened by the exercise of any power, save that of the people.

The Constitution has granted the power of adjournment, which means that the single session, or life, may be suspended, but is not destroyed.

People v. Fancher, 50 N. Y. 288.

This period of existence can be termed nothing else than a session, of which all sittings within the year are mere parts.

Ever since 1777, the Acts of each Legislature have been known as the "Session Laws" of the particular year, from which it must be plain that the life of each Legislature is a "session," nothing more or less.

By the established rules of interpretation, the meaning of the words is to be fixed by their general use and meaning, which has been shown very plainly.

1 Story, Const. § 406; People v. Wemple, 125 N. Y. 485.

It certainly is logical, and is in strict line with the established principles of American Constitutions, that the people shall appoint their own agents, and that the body which enacts a law cannot secure for itself any advantages which may arise from its execution.

To protect the people against any such abuse of power is the intention of the Constitution.

Lanning v. Carpenter, 20 N. Y. 448.

Any enactment, contrary to the purpose, ex-16 L. R. A.

pressed or necessarily implied, is as clearly void as if in express terms forbidden.

People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50, and note, 55.

It is by no means a correct rule of interpretation to construe the same word in the same sense, wherever it occurs in the same instrument.

1 Story, Const. § 454.

There can be no comparison made between the clause in question in this case and that providing for constitutional amendments, and the phrase in question must be read only as it stands, according to the plain rules of construction, and in view of the sense and intention in which they were adopted.

Newell v. People, 7 N. Y. 9.

The enumeration and the apportionment based upon it are unconstitutional and void because "persons of color not taxed" are included.

N. Y. Const. art. 3, § 4.

Under the law the plain sense was, and is, that persons of color not taxed upon $250 worth of freehold estate are to be excluded.

Nothing can be found in the laws of this state which changes this meaning, or prescribes different rules of interpretation. If the law has not this meaning, it is meaningless.

1 Story, Const. § 407; People v. Potter, 47 N. Y. 875; People v. Wemple, 125 N. Y. 485.

No arguments based upon supposed inadvertence, possible contrary intention, or subsequent change of mind, as claimed in opposition, have any place here, nor have they any right of consideration.

1 Story, Const. §§ 426, 427; People v. Wemple, supra.

The business of the courts is with the "text of the fundamental law as they find it."

Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 41; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 546.

The court cannot dispense with a constitutional or statutory rule because it appears that the policy upon which it was established has ceased.

Brown v. Clark, 77 N. Y. 869.

If any Act of the Legislature violates the Constitution, it is a nullity, and as if it had never been. No rights can be acquired by it and no duty imposed.

Pond v. Monroe County Supra. supra; Bailey v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. 4 Harr. (Del.) 389; Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill, 140, 40 Am. Dec. 274.

The Constitution plainly directs (art. 3, § 4), that the senate districts shall be altered according to inhabitants, excluding "persons of color not taxed."

But the enumeration of 1892 contains no such exception, nor does it show the number of such inhabitants, but it states merely "inhabitants," "citizens," or "aliens."

The court may take judicial notice of the fact there are numbers of such persons of color not taxed.

Kernitz v. Long Island City, 50 Hun, 428; Howard v. Moot, 64 N. Y. 282; New York v. Sands, 7 Cent. Rep. 268, 105 N. Y. 210; Pond v. Monroe County Supra. supra.

Quite plainly, then, the Legislature passed a law which goes beyond the limits set by the people in the Constitution.

The question simply is, Which is supreme? a question which has many times been answered to the effect that no Legislature can amend the Constitution; which would be the effect here, if the Acts in question, or either of them, be held constitutional.

1 Story, Const. §§ 409, 418, 448, 451, 458; Taylor v. Porter, supra; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; Cooley, Const. Lim. 168 et seq.; Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 41; Kinney v. Syracuse, 80 Barb. 849, affirmed 8 Keyes, 110; People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50, note, 55; People v. Wemple, 125 N. Y. 485.

The provisions of the 14th and 15th Amendments to the Federal Constitution are not in point, and our laws are not subversive of any of their enactments.

The law does not deny to that class the right of citizens to vote, but merely excludes them from the count which fixes the quantity of representation.

All powers not delegated to the Federal government are reserved to the states, and no provisions of national law forbid any such action by our own state.

U. S. Const. § 8, Amend. arts. 10, 14, 15; Slaughter House Cases, 88 U. S. 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 568; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588; Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252, 29 L. ed. 615.

The Constitution ordains in art. 8, § 4, that the senate districts shall be so altered that "each senate district shall contain, as nearly as may be, an equal number of inhabitants, excluding aliens, and persons of color not taxed."

In art. 8, § 5, it is ordained that "the members of Assembly shall be apportioned, as nearly as may be, according to the number of inhabitants."

The apportionment as made is not "as nearly as may be" in accord with the number of citizens.

The language means that when the enumeration shall have been taken—the apportionment shall be made as nearly equal as can be done, under those facts.

Newell v. People, 7 N. Y. 9.

The highest power and law of the state has fixed the rule for increasing representation according to increased population, to be the law forever.

1 Story, Const. § 505a; People v. Potter, 47 N. Y. 875; People v. Wemple, 125 N. Y. 485; People v. Fancher, 50 N. Y. 288.

The principle that representation in a government by the people shall be equal, or as exactly so as possible, has been so often established and recognized that it has become almost axiomatic.

Kinney v. Syracuse, 80 Barb. 849, affirmed, 8 Keyes, 110.

In formulating the Constitution, the people laid down the rule that representation should be as nearly equal as possible.

No provision, or hint of authority, was made for any elaborate system of computation, which, to an indefinite extent, changes the fraction of individual authority.

To change the ratio overthrows the entire system of popular representation, and is a flagrant violation of the highest law.

16 L. R. A.

1 Story, Const. §§ 684, 678 et seq.

But no one can be so bold as to claim that the Legislature is left free to follow fancy or partisan motives; without regard to any standard of propriety.

Matter of discretion is but another name for matter of judgment.

People v. Collins, 19 Wend. 56.

Discretion does not mean license, and the facts in this case prove that the Legislature departed widely from the rule of action laid down in the Constitution.

State v. Cunningham (Wis.) 15 L. R. A. 561; Giddings v. Blacker (Mich.) ante, 402. See also Houghton County Supra. v. Blacker (Mich.) ante, 432.

Courts have no political maxims and no line of policy to further or advance. Their only duty is the humble one of construing the Constitution by the language it contains.

People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 546; Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 41.

The peculiar duty of the judiciary is to exercise the power here invoked.

1 Story, Const. 3d ed. §§ 876, 898.

It is not necessary to show an express prohibition upon the Legislature from acting as it did.

People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50; Newell v. People, 9 N. Y. 119.

Mr. Simon W. Rosendale, Atty-Gen., for respondent:

The enumeration of the inhabitants of the state on which the apportionment was founded, was constitutional and legal, notwithstanding the fact that it was taken in the year 1892, and not in a year the number of which ended with the figure "5."

Where a statute or written constitution provides that an act shall be done and specifies a time for its performance, such specification is merely directory and not mandatory, and the act may be performed at any other time.

Smith v. Jones, 1 Barn. & Ad. 828; Ex parte Heath, 8 Hill, 42; People v. Chenango County Supra. 8 N. Y. 830. See also Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 41; People v. Allen, 6 Wend. 486, and cases cited; People v. Tompkins, 64 N. Y. 57; Metcalf v. New York, 17 N. Y. S. R. 97; State v. Smith, 67 Me. 328; State v. Camden, 39 N. J. L. 620; Re Census Superintendent, 1 New Eng. Rep. 156, 15 R. I. 614; People v. Jones, 8 Cent. Rep. 763, 106 N. Y. 830; People v. New York Board of Police, 46 Hun, 296, affirmed, 107 N. Y. 235.

The same general rules which govern the construction and interpretation of statutes and written instruments generally apply to, and control in, the interpretation of written constitutions.

People v. Fancher, 50 N. Y. 288, citing Story, Const. § 400; McCluskey v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 601; People v. Potter, 47 N. Y. 875; People v. Angle, 12 Cent. Rep. 759, 109 N. Y. 564; People v. Wemple, 125 N. Y. 485.

The duty to pass such an Act is a continuing one from the time it is constitutionally devolved upon the Legislature until performed.

State v. Cunningham (Wis.) 15 L. R. A. 561.

The Apportionment Law being Laws of 1892, chap. 397, is not rendered invalid, because passed at an extraordinary session of the Legislature, held in 1892, subsequent to the return of the enumeration.

1. The provision as to time is merely directory.

Rumsey v. People, supra. See State v. Cunningham, supra.

2. The law was passed at the first session of the Legislature after the return of the enumeration.

An extra session of the Legislature is as much a "session" of that body as a regular session. It is denominated in the Constitution as a session.

N. Y. Const. art. 4, § 4.

It has been treated as a "session" by this court.

People v. Fancher, 50 N. Y. 288.

Separate and several sessions are distinctly contemplated by the Constitution. It speaks of final adjournment of the Legislature—thus referring to the close of the session.

N. Y. Const. art. 4, § 9.

A final adjournment marks the end of a session, and limits the time for action by the executive on bills.

Ibid.; Hequembourg v. Dunkirk, 49 Hun, 550.

In Wisconsin, where the provisions of the Constitution as to apportionment are in substance the same as our own, its court of last resort said: "The plain intent of this provision is to enable a new apportionment to be made at the earliest practicable period after the enumeration, to the end that the change in representation thereby required shall readily become effective, and not be unreasonably delayed."

State v. Cunningham (Wis.) 15 L. R. A. 561.

If it had been intended to prohibit action during the legislative term of the year in which the enumeration was made, the Constitution would have so stated.

As to proposed amendments to the Constitution, they are to be "referred to the Legislature to be chosen at the next election of senators."

N. Y. Const. art. 18, § 1.

If the Constitution had intended that this Act could be passed only at the next "regular" or "annual" session, or by the next Legislature, it would have said so.

Ill. Const. 1870, art. 4, § 18; People v. Lipincott, 64 Ill. 256.

The objectment that the senate apportionment is unconstitutional because, in estimating the number of inhabitants in the senate districts, the Legislature did not, and were not furnished with any information whereby it could, exclude from representation "persons of color not taxed," is not well taken.

1. The objection is unavailing to the appellant, as the law is unquestionably valid as to assembly districts, so far as this point is concerned.

The parts of the Act relating to the Senate and Assembly are separable.

Where part of the law is in conflict with the Constitution, and that part is entirely separate from the residue so that other portions of the law can be enforced without reference to it, then only the unconstitutional part will be condemned.

Wynehamer v. People, 18 N. Y. 442; Presser v. Illinois, 116 U. S. 252, 29 L. ed. 615; Keokuk N. L. Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S. 80, 24 L. ed. 877; Penniman's Case, 108 U. S. 714, 16 L. R. A.

26 L. ed. 602; Unity v. Burrage, 108 U. S. 459, 28 L. ed. 409; Trademark Cases, 100 U. S. 92, 25 L. ed. 551; Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U. S. 679, 30 L. ed. 757.

2. There is no such classification of inhabitants now recognized in the Constitution of this state as "persons of color not taxed."

By the amendment of the Constitution of the state of New York in 1874 that classification was expunged.

The words in section 4 were, in effect, repealed and rendered nugatory by the adoption of the amended section 1 of article 2.

Any provision will be regarded as revoked and repealed by subsequent repugnant enactment. It was repealed by implication.

Murdock v. Memphis, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Lyddy v. Long Island City, 5 Cent. Rep. 927, 104 N. Y. 218.

The provisions as to "persons of color not taxed" has been rendered nugatory by the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States.

Slaughter House Cases, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 86, 21 L. ed. 394; Presser v. Illinois, supra; Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 308, 25 L. ed. 664; People v. King, 1 L. R. A. 298, 110 N. Y. 416; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 567.

The practical construction of the provision as to "persons of color not taxed" and the acquiescence therein for a long period, by all the public authorities, ought to control the court.

Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 42; People v. Dayton, 55 N. Y. 867.

The words "as nearly as may be" are words conferring discretion; they are not limitations on the power of the Legislature.

See Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Horst, 98 U. S. 300, 23 L. ed. 901; Emma Silver Min. Co. v. Park, 14 Blatchf. 414; Beardsley v. Little, 14 Blatchf. 105; Reedy v. Smith, 42 Cal. 251; Opinion of Justices, 18 Me. 460; Prouty v. Stover, 11 Kan. 261.

An inquiry into the comparative population of the districts would involve an investigation of facts, outside of any document or record, of which judicial notice can be taken, and such an investigation the courts will not tolerate.

People v. Durston, 7 L. R. A. 715, 119 N. Y. 569; Waterloo Woolen Mfg. Co. v. Shanahan, 14 L. R. A. 481, 128 N. Y. 845; Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 42; People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50; Re New York Elev. R. Co. 70 N. Y. 827; Amy v. Watertown, 130 U. S. 819, 32 L. ed. 952.

Whatever the motive of the Legislature the legal presumption is that it was a proper one.

People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; People v. Durston, supra.

The act of altering the senate districts and the apportioning members of the Assembly by the Legislature is not within the power of the judiciary to review.

The legislative power of the state is vested in a Senate and Assembly.

N. Y. Const. art. 3, § 1.

The separation of the legislative, executive, and judicial departments is enjoined just as imperatively as though by express mandate.

Article by William Hamilton Cowles, 31 Am. L. Rev. 436.

All legislative power is vested in the Legislature, and all judicial power in the courts, except as otherwise expressly provided in the several Constitutions.

Hayburn's Case, 2 U. S. 2 Dall. 410, 1 L. ed. 486, note; Marbury v. Madison, 5 U. S. 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 26 L. ed. 377; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 192; People v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401.

The power of dividing the state into senate districts and apportioning members of the Assembly is essentially a political one.

The courts have no power in political questions.

Luther v. Barden, 48 U. S. 7 How. 1, 13 L. ed. 581; Georgia v. Stanton, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 50, 18 L. ed. 721; Montague v. Hayes, 10 Gray, 611.

The Legislature having acted upon the facts, the courts will not review.

Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 42; Waterloo Woolen Mfg. Co. v. Shanahan, 14 L. R. A. 481, 128 N. Y. 845, citing People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50; Re New York Elec. R. Co. 70 N. Y. 327; People v. Durston, 7 L. R. A. 715, 119 N. Y. 569; Amy v. Watertown, 180 U. S. 819, 32 L. ed. 952; De Camp v. Ireland, 19 Barb. 81; Stevenson v. Colgan, 14 L. R. A. 459, 91 Cal. 649, 25 Am. St. Rep. 280.

To declare the apportionment void because not equitably made would be, in effect, to declare that the apportionments should be made by the courts.

The question may be safely dismissed by the judiciary, for unlike most instances where its power is invoked, because there is no other relief, there is here a remedy.

The remedy which the Constitution provides by the apportionment for frequent renewals of legislative bodies, is far more efficacious than any which can be afforded by the judiciary.

People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 582, cited in Waterloo Woolen Mfg. Co. v. Shanahan, supra.

The court ought not to declare the Act unconstitutional.

Before the court will deem it their duty to declare an Act of the Legislature void, a case must be presented in which there can be no rational doubt.

Ex parte McCollum, 1 Cow. 550.

If the Act can be upheld upon any views of necessity or public expediency which the Legislature may have entertained, the law cannot be challenged in the courts.

People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 582.

Improper motives cannot be attributed to the Legislature in any law for the government of the state.

Amy v. Watertown, 180 U. S. 819, 32 L. ed. 952; People v. Orange County Supra, 17 N. Y. 285; Com. v. McWilliams, 11 Pa. 61; Sharpless v. Philadelphia, 21 Pa. 147, 59 Am. Dec. 759; Metropolitan Board of Excise v. Barrie, 84 N. Y. 657; People v. Budd, 5 L. R. A. 559, 117 N. Y. 1, quoted with approval in Waterloo Woolen Mfg. Co. v. Shanahan, 14 L. R. A. 481, 128 N. Y. 845.

SECOND CASE.

APPEAL by relator from an order of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Fifth 16 L. R. A.

Department, affirming an order of a Special Term for Monroe County denying a motion for mandamus to compel the Board of Supervisors of Monroe County to proceed to apportion the Members of Assembly among the inhabitants of the County according to the directions of the Law of 1892. Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Mr. C. D. Kiehel, for appellant:

The writ of mandamus is the proper remedy in this case sued out at the relation of a citizen and elector of the city of Rochester.

It is not necessary to show that the relator has any private or peculiar interest in the matter.

People v. Sullivan County Supra, 56 N. Y. 249; People v. Halsey, 37 N. Y. 344; People v. Rice, 14 L. R. A. 648, 129 N. Y. 449, 129 N. Y. 461.

The court has the power to compel the board of supervisors to perform the duties required of them in section 8 of the Apportionment Act, chap. 397 of the Laws of 1892.

People v. Chenango County Supra, 8 N. Y. 330; People v. Ulster County Supra, 34 N. Y. 268; People v. Schiellain, 95 N. Y. 184.

The enumeration taken pursuant to Laws of 1892, chap. 9, was constitutional.

The state Constitution, art. 3, § 4, provides: "An enumeration of the inhabitants of the state shall be taken under the direction of the Legislature in the year 1855 and at the end of every ten years thereafter."

If the Constitution requires that this shall be done at the time and in the manner specified without expressly declaring what shall be a consequence of noncompliance, the provision becomes merely directory.

Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 481; People v. Chenango County Supra supra; McPherson v. Leonard, 29 Md. 377; Hill v. Boyland, 40 Miss. 618; Miller v. State, 3 Ohio St. 475.

The Apportionment Act was not passed at the same session during which said enumeration was returned, but at the first session after the return thereof.

People v. Fancher, 50 N. Y. 288; State v. Cunningham (Wis.) 15 L. R. A. 561.

The exercise of the discretion reposed in the governor to call an extraordinary session was legal and constitutional, and his decision in this respect is final and cannot be reviewed by the courts.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 54; Opinion of the Court, 49 Mo. 216.

The Apportionment Act is not unconstitutional upon the ground that it is based upon an enumeration prepared and reported by the secretary of state to the Legislature in which "persons of color not taxed" are included.

The 15th Amendment removed this restriction and prevented the states from giving preference to one citizen of the United States over another, on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 568; United States v. Cruikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 23 L. ed. 588.

A state is not an independent, separate, political organization, and does not possess in itself inherent and absolute powers of legislation, but the functions of its rulers are not only limited by its local Constitution, but by that of the United States.

Pom. Const. Law, § 40; People v. Snyder, 41 N. Y. 408.

The apparent inequalities in the apportionment of members of Assembly and senators is a question of fact within the discretion of the Legislature and cannot be reviewed by this court.

N. Y. Const. art. 3, § 4; Arnold v. Rees, 18 N. Y. 57; Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 48; Niagara County Supra. v. People, 7 Hill, 505; People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 533; Prouty v. Stover, 11 Kan. 261.

Mr. W. A. Sutherland, for respondent:

Monroe County was defrauded in the apportionment of 1892, and has the right to insist that the old apportionment shall stand until a new one shall do her justice.

Houghton County Supra. v. Blacker (Mich.) ante, 432.

The court will not by mandamus compel the supervisors to comply with a direction of the Legislature which leads to any violation of the Constitution.

People v. State Canvassers, 14 L. R. A. 646, 129 N. Y. 860.

Under the census of 1892, Monroe County is absolutely entitled to four assemblymen.

The Constitution says (art. 3, § 5): "The members of Assembly shall be apportioned among the several counties of the state . . . as nearly as may be, according to the number of their respective inhabitants."

There is no room here for an elastic discretion.

Webster pointed out in his great argument in the case of McCulloch v. Maryland, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 327, 4 L. ed. 582, that "the question of constitutional power can hardly be made to depend on a question of more or less."

The Constitution has not given discretion to the Legislature, nor has it empowered the courts to inquire into the wisdom of any other basis of representation than that of equality.

To give, as the apportionment of 1892 does, four to the smaller county and three to the larger, is just as clear a violation of the Constitution as if the disproportion were greater.

Kinney v. Syracuse, 80 Barb. 349, affirmed, 3 Keyes, 110; Giddings v. Blacker (Mich.) ante, 402; Houghton County Supra. v. Blacker (Mich.) ante, 432; State v. Ounnsingham (Wis.) 15 L. R. A. 561.

The court of last resort in the state of North Carolina held in 1875 that even in the revision of the charter of a city, the arrangement of ward lines must be had with reference to equality of representation in the board of aldermen.

People v. Canady, 73 N. C. 196; Darby v. Wilmington, 76 N. C. 183.

The apportionment is void because it was had at the same session which provided for, and which received, the returns from the enumeration, and hence, before the "first session after the returns of" the enumeration.

N. Y. Const. art. 3, § 4, 5.

After the Legislature had adjourned, its members could not convene again in a lawful body without command of the governor, "under the power conferred upon him to convene the Legislature on extraordinary occasions, and 16 L. R. A.

if in session, they could not be convened by the governor in another session."

People v. Fancher, 50 N. Y. 290.

The word "session" as here used means the entire period covered by the life of one Legislature, to wit, one calendar year.

N. Y. Const. art. 10, § 6, art. 3, § 11.

Beginning with the adoption of the first Constitution, 1777, all of the doings of any Legislature in any year have been described as the acts of one session, and are known as the "Session Laws" of that particular year.

Counting the sittings of the Legislature for each legislative year as making one session, the recent session would be the 115th session.

So it was declared to be by the presiding officers of the Senate and Assembly when those bodies respectively adjourned sine die, April 21.

The Legislature met more than once in several legislative years. The laws passed in each of these legislative years, as in every other legislative year from 1777 to the present time, were published under the direction of the Legislature itself, and the entire legislation of each legislative year was designated in each instance as the legislation of a single session.

Prior to 1821 the same Legislature which directed the census could have rearranged the districts.

The Constitution of 1777 as amended in 1801, said at art. 4, "that upon the return of every such census, the Legislature shall apportion," etc.

But by 1821 the people had evidently concluded that an election should intervene between the return of the census and the Act of redistricting, so that the people could speak directly on the subject.

The Constitution of 1821 therefore says, as does that of 1846: "An apportionment of members of Assembly shall be made by the Legislature, at its first session after the return," etc.

The Legislature of 1892 attempted to cheat the people out of their reserved prerogatives, that of electing assemblymen, reflecting the wishes of the people after a study of the census returns.

The governor was not able to create a new Legislature by reconvening the old one.

The Legislature which adjourned sine die April 21 was the same Legislature when it assembled April 25, and its doings on both dates were the Acts of the Legislature at its 115th session.

Suppose that the governor should be opposed to any reapportionment. He could recall the Legislature in a message, making no mention of reapportionment, and under art. 4, § 4, the Legislature would be prohibited from doing that which art. 3, §§ 4, 5, command to be done at that very time.

Article 4, § 4, provides that the governor "shall communicate by message to the Legislature at every session the condition of the state."

It has never been held obligatory upon the governor to transmit a formal state paper to the Legislature when sitting on "an extraordinary occasion;" and no such message greeted the 115th session when it reconvened April 25, 1892.

See Lanning v. Carpenter, 20 N. Y. 453;

Smith v. People, 47 N. Y. 341; Kinney v. Syracuse, 30 Barb. 387, 8 Keyes, 110.

By naming the time when the Legislature shall apportion, the Constitution by implication forbids the Legislature from making an apportionment until that date arrives.

An apportionment of representatives is a mere ministerial act, which does not inhere in a legislative body. It is an act which can be performed as well by any ministerial officer.

State v. Campbell, 48 Ohio St. 485.

It does not partake of the nature of legislative power. To apportion is not to enact a law; it is only to exercise a limited conferred power.

Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 64; Opinion of Justices, 18 Me. 458.

It is not true that the inhibitions of the Constitution must always be expressed. They are equally effective when they arise by implication.

Page v. Allen, 58 Pa. 838, 98 Am. Dec. 272; McKean v. Devries, 8 Barb. 196.

When a Constitution directs how a thing shall be done, that is in effect a prohibition to its being done in any other way.

State v. Barnes, 24 Fla. 29; People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50.

The Apportionment of 1892 was void because not based upon a constitutional census or enumeration.

It (Constitution) regards the apportionment as a continuing act or process, beginning with the enumeration of voters in the several towns and wards, and ending with the assignment of the towns and wards to senatorial districts.

Opinion of Justices, 142 Mass. 604.

The act of apportionment including the preliminary census or enumeration, is not an act of legislation, which the Legislature may take up at its pleasure. An apportionment is the act of the people by their agents, whereby the people ordain how their voice shall be heard through the Legislature.

Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 90.

The people had a right to, and did, say that a census should be taken at stated intervals, no matter what party would reap benefit from a reapportionment, and they also had the right to, and did, prohibit the taking of a census at any other time.

When a constitution directs how a thing shall be done, that is in effect a prohibition to its being done in any other way.

State v. Barnes, 24 Fla. 29; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 78; People v. Lawrence, 86 Barb. 177; Brown v. Goben, 129 Ind. 118; State v. Cunningham (Wis.) 15 L. R. A. 561.

The Constitution expressly prohibits any reapportionment except one based upon a census taken in a year ending with the figure 5.

N. Y. Const. art. 3, § 5.

This prohibition is addressed to the Legislature as well as to the boards of supervisors.

Kinney v. Syracuse, 8 Keyes, 110; Opinion of Justices, 18 Me. 458; People v. Morrell, 21 Wend. 568; Newell v. People, 7 N. Y. 9; People v. Albertson, 55 N. Y. 50.

The senate apportionment is unconstitutional because in estimating the number of inhabitants in the new senate districts, the Legislature did not and were not furnished with any information whereby they could exclude from the basis of representation "persons of color not taxed."

If the apportionment of 1892 be not unconstitutional, a legislature and governor elected in 1894 may redistrict the state, without regard to any of the restrictions of the Constitution, and may place disproportionate power in the hands of a minority of the people.

It will not do to say that a Legislature might not, or would not go so far.

McCulloch v. Maryland, 17 U. S. 4 Wheat. 327, 4 L. ed. 582.

THIRD CASE.

A PPEAL by relator from an order of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Fourth Department, affirming an order of the Special Term, entered in the office of the clerk of Oneida County denying a motion for a peremptory mandamus to compel the Board of Supervisors of Oneida County to divide that county into assembly districts in accordance with the provisions of the Law of 1892. Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Mr. H. J. Cookinham, for appellant:

Mandamus is the proper proceeding to compel a board of supervisors to perform a duty required by law.

People v. Chenango County Supra. 8 N. Y. 330; People v. Ulster County Supra. 34 N. Y. 268; People v. Schellein, 95 N. Y. 184.

A peremptory mandamus may issue in the first instance where the applicant's right to the writ depends upon questions of law only, and notice has been served upon the defendant.

N. Y. Code Proc. § 2070; People v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co. 4 Cent. Rep. 197, 108 N. Y. 95.

A citizen of the county has sufficient interest in the performance of a duty imposed upon the board of supervisors to institute proceedings for mandamus.

People v. Sullivan County Supra. 56 N. Y. 249; People v. Halsey, 87 N. Y. 344; People v. Rice, 14 L. R. A. 643, 129 N. Y. 449.

The Act known as chapter 5 of the Laws of 1892, which provides for an enumeration of the inhabitants of the state, is constitutional.

The constitutional requirement that an enumeration shall be taken in the year 1855 and at the end of every ten years thereafter is not mandatory, but only directory.

Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 41.

When a statute requires that something shall be done, or that something shall be done in a particular manner, but does not provide what shall be the consequences if it is not done as directed, such statute is directory only.

People v. Cook, 14 Barb. 259, 8 N. Y. 67; Ex parte Heath, 8 Hill, 42; People v. Chenango County Supra. supra.

There can be no implied limitation to the powers of the Legislature.

Bank of Chenango v. Brown, 26 N. Y. 467; Re Thirty-Fourth Street R. Co. 8 Cent. Rep. 805, 102 N. Y. 343; People v. New York Board of Police, 9 Cent. Rep. 727, 107 N. Y. 235; People v. Tompkins, 64 N. Y. 53; People v. Allen, 6 Wend. 486.

The report of the enumeration of inhabitants made by the secretary of state to the Legislature, known as Senate Document No. 60, furnished the proper evidence upon which to act in fixing the senate districts and apportioning members of Assembly among the counties of the state.

Lanning v. Carpenter, 20 N. Y. 448; De Camp v. Bodland, 19 Barb. 81.

It was not necessary to make a separate enumeration of colored citizens not taxed, for the reason that this requirement of the state Constitution is in conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

Neal v. Delaware, 108 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 587; Strauder v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 808, 25 L. ed. 664; People v. King, 1 L. R. A. 298, 110 N. Y. 416.

A statute composed of different parts and referring to different subjects may be in part constitutional and in part unconstitutional.

Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378; Keokuk N. L. Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S. 80, 24 L. ed. 877; Unity v. Burrage, 108 U. S. 447, 26 L. ed. 405.

The words of a statute, and by this is meant the Constitution, if in common use, are to be taken in their natural, plain, and ordinary signification and import.

1 Kent, Com. 12th ed. 863; Potter's Dwar. Stat. 656; People v. Potter, 47 N. Y. 875.

No technical words are used in the Constitution, in regard to the time when the Legislature should pass an apportionment bill. The words are: "And the said districts shall be so altered by the Legislature at the first session after the return of every enumeration."

The natural, plain, obvious, and ordinary signification and import of these words is that the apportionment shall be made at the first session of the Legislature after "the return of every enumeration," whether such session be an annual or extraordinary session.

As the power is conferred upon the governor to convene the Legislature, it follows, as a necessary conclusion, that he must determine when the extraordinary occasion arises which calls upon him to exercise this power.

Opinion of the Court, 49 Mo. 215.

The governor had the right to issue his proclamation convening the Legislature in extraordinary session before the annual session of 1892 had terminated.

People v. Fancher, 50 N. Y. 288.

The court cannot say that the apportionment bill is unconstitutional, for the reason that the division of the state into senatorial districts was unfairly made. This Act of the Legislature is the determining of a question of fact, and is not reviewable by the court.

Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 41; People v. Lawrence, 36 Barb. 177; United States v. Williams, 5 McLean, 183; People v. Durston, 7 L. R. A. 715, 119 N. Y. 569.

The court cannot look outside of the statute for a fact to determine whether the statute is constitutional or not.

Re New York Elec. R. Co. 70 N. Y. 327.

The Act making apportionment is constitutional although one district contains more inhabitants than another. Some discretion must be left to the Legislature.

Provy v. Storer, 11 Kan. 261; Opinion of Justices, 18 Me. 460.

All intendments must be taken in favor of 16 L. R. A.

the statutes; and "before a court will deem it its duty to declare an Act unconstitutional, a case must be presented in which there is no rational doubt."

Ex parte McCollum, 1 Cow. 580; Rick v. Flanders, 39 N. H. 804; Hartford Bridge Co. v. Union Ferry Co. 29 Conn. 210; People v. Briggs, 50 N. Y. 553; Kerrigan v. Force, 68 N. Y. 881; Speer v. School Directors, 50 Pa. 150; Baltimore v. State, 15 Md. 876.

The court will not impute to the Legislature corrupt or improper motives, but it must be taken for granted that the Legislature always acts with good motives and for the best interest of the public.

People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 532; Amy v. Wattertown, 130 U. S. 319, 32 L. ed. 952.

Messrs. J. L. Sayles, W. E. Scripture and D. F. Searle, for respondent:

The Legislature has not the inherent power to take an enumeration or make an apportionment. The sovereign people, and not their servants, determine the number and location of their representatives. And it is no part of "legislative power" to add to or take from that number, or in any manner change the representation. The legislative power we understand to be the authority under the Constitution to make laws and to alter or repeal them. Laws, in the sense in which the word is here employed, are rules of civil conduct, or statutes, which the legislative will has prescribed.

Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 90.

The Legislature, in the absence of an express grant, has no power to subject the citizen to the inquisitorial annoyance necessarily attendant upon the taking of a census.

People v. Webb, 23 N. Y. S. R. 824; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 108 U. S. 168, 26 L. ed. 877; People v. Keeler, 1 Cent. Rep. 157, 99 N. Y. 477.

The Legislature is a creature of the Constitution.

N. Y. Const. art. 3.

It has no power except that which is given by the Constitution.

N. Y. Const. art. 3.

All Acts of the Legislature in contravention of the Constitution, or not within the limit of its authority, are absolutely void.

People v. Allen, 42 N. Y. 404; People v. Brooklyn Board of Education, 18 Barb. 400; Taylor v. Porter, 4 Hill, 140, 40 Am. Dec. 274; Lanning v. Carpenter, 20 N. Y. 447; People v. Gillson, 12 Cent. Rep. 616, 109 N. Y. 389.

The Act of the Legislature requiring the board of supervisors to meet on the third Tuesday of July, 1892, and divide the county of Oneida into two assembly districts, known as chapter 897 of the Laws of 1892, is unconstitutional and void.

The alteration of the senate and assembly districts therein made was not based upon an enumeration of the inhabitants taken in conformity with section 3, article 4, of the Constitution which requires such enumeration. "In the year 1855, and at the end of every ten years thereafter."

The practical construction given by the Legislature to a constitutional provision and for many years so accepted and acted upon by the executive and administrative departments, has almost the force of a judicial exposition.

People v. Dayton, 55 N. Y. 387.

Pursuant to the first Constitution, the Legislature provided for the taking of a census in the year 1790.

N. Y. Laws 1790, chap. 7.

And at irregular intervals afterwards up to 1825 the census was taken and Apportionment Acts passed.

N. Y. Laws 1795, chap. 11, 1796, chap. 19.

Pursuant to the Constitution of 1821, the Legislature of 1825 enacted a general law for the enumeration of that year and at the end of every ten years thereafter.

N. Y. Laws 1825, chap. 100.

In 1835 the Legislature amended the Law of 1825 and took the enumeration under its provisions as amended.

N. Y. Laws 1835, chap. 40.

In 1845 the Legislature repealed the previous laws and enacted a new general statute for taking an enumeration in that year and at the end of every tenth year thereafter.

N. Y. Laws 1845, chap. 140.

In 1885 no enumeration was taken. Whatever the reason for the omission may have been it could not confer upon any other Legislature the power to take the enumeration at some other time than at the end of the decade.

Lanning v. Carpenter, 20 N. Y. 453; DeCamp v. Eoeland, 19 Barb. 87, 102.

That which the Constitution says shall remain unaltered cannot be lawfully altered either directly or indirectly.

Kinney v. Syracuse, 3 Keyes, 111, 80 Barb. 849.

The apportionment was in violation of the constitutional provision that such apportionment shall be "at the first session after the return of every enumeration."

DeCamp v. Eoeland, and Lanning v. Carpenter, supra.

The enumeration is to be taken and a return thereto made under the direction of the Legislature at the end of the decade, and the apportionment is to be made at the next session thereafter. The members of the different Legislatures understood the meaning to be as we contend. The enumeration was taken in 1825. An apportionment was made at the regular session in 1826. So in 1835, 1836, 1845, 1846, 1855, 1856, 1865, 1866.

The words "at the first session after the return of every enumeration," as used in the Constitution, do not permit an apportionment to be made at an extraordinary session.

N. Y. Const. art. 4, § 4.

There can be no good ground for doubting that what was meant to be understood by the "next session," is the annual session, for the language employed to refer to it is wholly unqualified, while the session to be convened by the governor is designated an "extraordinary session." The one is clearly intended to be the common, and the other the extra, or unusual session. And this seems to be the popular sense of the words made use of. They are addresses to the public to be understood as the words are popularly understood.

Purdy v. People, 4 Hill, 384.

The intention of the Constitution is to prevail, and that is to be collected from its words.

Ogden v. Saunders, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 214, 16 L. R. A.

6 L. ed. 606; Re O'Neil, 91 N. Y. 516; People v. Hyde, 89 N. Y. 12.

Any other construction would make the provisions of the Constitution as framed in 1846 inconsistent with each other.

See Story, Const. § 400; McClusky v. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 601.

When the Constitution defines the circumstances under which a right may be exercised or a penalty imposed, the specification is an implied prohibition against legislative interference.

Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 64; Page v. Allen, 53 Pa. 338, 98 Am. Dec. 272; State v. Barnes, 24 Fla. 29; McKean v. Devries, 8 Barb. 196.

The members of Assembly are not proportioned among the several counties of the state as nearly as may be according to their respective inhabitants, as required by sections 4 and 5, article 8.

Giddings v. Blacker (Mich.) ante, 402; State v. Cunningham (Wis.) 15 L. R. A. 561.

Peckham, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The first above entitled proceeding is an appeal from an order of the general term of the supreme court, third department, denying the application of the relator made to it for a mandamus against the secretary of state, directing him to issue election notices under the Apportionment Law of 1879, and enjoining him from filing election returns, etc., under the Apportionment Law of 1892, or performing any act under that law.

The second proceeding is an appeal from an order of the general term, fifth department, affirming an order of the special term denying a motion for a mandamus to compel the supervisors of Monroe county to forthwith commence and to immediately divide the county into three assembly districts in accordance with the Apportionment Act of 1892.

The third proceeding is an appeal from an order of the general term, fourth department, affirming an order of the special term, which denied a motion for a mandamus to compel the Oneida county board of supervisors to meet and proceed to divide Oneida county into assembly districts under the Apportionment Act of 1892.

All the proceedings have for their object the decision of the question as to the validity of the Apportionment Act of 1892. The boards of supervisors of the counties of Monroe and Oneida are the only boards in the state which have refused to make a division of their counties into assembly districts for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Act of 1892.

The secretary of state has issued and delivered to the clerk of Oneida county an election notice in which provision is made for the election of but two members of Assembly therein, and the supervisors claim the right of the electors of the county to elect three members under the Apportionment Act of 1879, and therefore it is specially asked that the secretary be compelled to issue notices for the election of three members of Assembly in the county of Oneida, pursuant to the apportionment contained in the Law of 1879, and that the secretary be commanded to desist from doing any act or thing under chapter 379 of the Laws of 1892, or to in any way recognize that Act as valid or binding.

This apportionment of 1892, it is alleged, violates the provisions of the Constitution in several particulars, which are set forth, and the court is called upon at the instance of all parties to these litigations to decide the questions involved at the earliest practicable moment, in order that the supervisors and the election officers may be guided in the discharge of their duties by the opinion of this court as to the validity of the Act of 1892.

We have given all the consideration possible to these cases since the argument thereof, and while the questions are in themselves most important and far reaching, yet we are compelled by the necessities of the case to decide them at the earliest moment. We however feel more competent to do this because however important the questions may be we think the proper and correct answers are quite plain and clear.

The rule which has governed courts ever since the adoption of our Constitution, both Federal and state, in relation to the exercise of the power to declare an enactment of the legislative body unconstitutional, has been plainly laid down in many reported cases and has been rigidly adhered to by both the Federal and state courts. Before courts will deem it their duty to declare an Act of the Legislature void as in violation of some provision of the Constitution, a case must be presented in which there can be no rational doubt. The incompatibility of the legislative enactment with the Constitution must be manifest and unequivocal. Judge Denio in People v. Draper, 15 N. Y. 546, expressed the rule in substantially the above language. There is no doubt of its correctness, and I have heard no counsel who have challenged it.

We must proceed to the examination of the constitutionality of the Act of 1892, guided by the rule above set forth. Section 4 of article 3 of our state Constitution reads as follows: "An enumeration of the inhabitants of the state shall be taken under the direction of the Legislature in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, and at the end of every ten years thereafter; and the said districts shall be so altered by the Legislature at the first session after the return of every enumeration, that each senate district shall contain, as nearly as may be, an equal number of inhabitants, excluding aliens and persons of color not taxed, and shall remain unaltered until the return of another enumeration, and shall at all times consist of contiguous territory, and no county shall be divided in the formation of a senate district, except such county shall be equitably entitled to two or more senators.

Section 5 of the same article, after providing for one hundred and twenty-eight members of Assembly, continues: "The members of Assembly shall be apportioned among the several counties of the state by the Legislature as nearly as may be, according to the number of their respective inhabitants, excluding aliens, and shall be chosen by single districts. . . . The Legislature, at its first session after the return of every enumeration, shall apportion the members of Assembly among the several counties of the state in manner aforesaid," etc. The apportionment and districts must remain unaltered until another enumeration shall be made as provided in the Constitution."

First. It is contended on the part of those who allege the invalidity of the Law of 1892 that it was passed in violation of that provision of the Constitution which directs the alteration to be made by the Legislature at the "first session after the return of every enumeration."

The Act was in truth passed at an extraordinary session of the Legislature called by the governor, and after the return of the enumeration of 1892. The point is made that an extraordinary session is not such a session of the Legislature as is contemplated by the Constitution. To my mind the objection is wholly without force. An extraordinary session is nevertheless a session of the Legislature. The governor by the terms of the Constitution has "power to convene the Legislature (or the Senate only) on extraordinary occasions." When thus convened is not the Legislature in session? And can it be for a moment correctly contended that a session thus convened is the same session which had already terminated by an adjournment without day? It is not a regular session, it is true; it is what the Constitution describes it, an extraordinary session, but yet a session of the Legislature. The Constitution does not say that the session which is to deal with the question must be a regular one. All it directs is that the Legislature at the first session after the return shall proceed to make the alterations. The Constitution provides for the assembling of the Legislature on the first Tuesday in January in each year. When it adjourns sine die has not the session of the Legislature ended? The term of office of its members may not have ended, but the legislative session has certainly terminated by an adjournment without day. It could not again assemble and perform any valid act unless the governor under the special power given him by the Constitution should convene it. When thus convened the Legislature is in session, and it is clearly not the same session which was ended by a prior adjournment thereof without day. The Constitution does not provide that the next Legislature after the return of the enumeration at its first session shall make this apportionment. It is directed to be made by the Legislature at the first session after such return. Wherein does this extraordinary session fail to fill that description? It was a session of the Legislature, and it was the first which was held after the return of the enumeration, and it was competent to deal with that subject because of the recommendation of the governor.

There is no basis in the language of the Constitution for the claim that the session of the Legislature referred to in that instrument is the first session of a legislature which itself first convenes after the return of the apportionment. The Constitution does not say so, and I fail to find any reason in principle or in the nature of the subject which calls for such a construction. On the contrary, to so construe it is to arbitrarily supply words which are not used, and which neither the context nor the surrounding circumstances call for. Such construction also twists and distorts the ordinary and plain meaning of the language actually employed. The result is that in order to construe the Constitution in the manner desired, words must be supplied which have not been employed and the language actually used must be construed as meaning something different from the meaning ordinarily given to it.

This court is not prepared to make such an attempt.

We also fail entirely to see the force of any argument based upon the assertion that the Constitution intended that some considerable interval should elapse between the return of an enumeration and the apportionment of senators and members of Assembly under it. There is nothing whatever in the language of the Constitution which assumes or seems to provide that any material interval ought to pass after the return of the enumeration and before the enactment of the statute. On the contrary, the language of that instrument, with regard to that provision, would seem clearly to point to definite and prompt action at the earliest practicable moment; in other words, action at the first session of the body that can make the alteration. Such language is not that which would be used for the purpose of advising or directing delay.

Judicial notice may be taken of the fact that an enumeration of the inhabitants of the state was ordinarily a matter that occupied some time to complete it, and the members of the constitutional convention of 1846, as well as the people, knew that it might, and in all probability it frequently would, happen that the Legislature which ordered the enumeration would complete its other business and adjourn without day before the enumeration provided for was itself completed. In such event, the Legislature, not being in session, could not apportion the districts and members. In order, however, to insure prompt action upon the matter and at the earliest opportunity, the Constitution provides for the alteration consequent upon an enumeration at the first session after its return. I think that under this constitutional provision the Legislature which ordered the enumeration might remain in session until after its return and then itself proceed to the alteration made necessary by the results of such enumeration.

It would seem to be a complete perversion of the ordinary and plain meaning of language to change what on its face is clearly a direction for prompt action, into one providing for or securing delay. There is nothing in the nature of the subject which calls for it. On the contrary, as these alterations are to last but ten years before an enumeration is again presented for another alteration, every intendment would point to the prompt and speedy fulfillment of the constitutional duty, so that the Legislature should at once represent the people of to-day, and not those of years ago.

An argument in favor of that construction of the Constitution which would cause a delay in making alterations after an enumeration has been returned is suggested in the fact that an examination of the different returns might reveal some great mistake or a gross fraud, and to such an extent that no alteration of a previous apportionment ought to be based upon such an enumeration. It is of course true that mistakes are possible, and it is conceivable that a fraud might possibly be perpetrated in some portion of the state. The idea however that the Constitution looks to any delay in legislative action following the enumeration, because of such possibilities, finds no lodgment in the language used in the instrument itself. Such possibilities attach to all human affairs, and would be the accompaniment of the second as well as of a first enumeration.

But the possibilities of any error or fraud which would really work any material injustice are so remote, both as to perpetration and discovery, that an argument for delay based upon them can have no weight whatever when brought before and compared with the plain language of our fundamental law. The question of an interval of time is also answered by the fact that the Legislature might provide for taking an enumeration in November or December, and the filing of the returns in the last of the month of December. The incoming Legislature, which might meet in a day or two thereafter, is concededly competent to deal with the subject. And yet here is no interval of time provided for or authority existing.

Another argument against regarding the extraordinary session of the Legislature as competent to deal with this subject consists in the assertion that if such a session can be claimed to fill the conditions of the Constitution, it would in that event rest with the governor whether an Apportionment Act should be then passed, for he might call an extraordinary session and not recommend the consideration of this subject, and if he did not the Legislature, it is said, could not pass an Apportionment Act, although the extraordinary session were the first session after the return of the enumeration.

If the governor should call such a session and not recommend this subject for consideration, it might then be a question which of the two constitutional provisions should prevail, that which provided for the passage of the Apportionment Act at the first session, or the one which provided that in an extraordinary session the Legislature should consider no other subject than such as should be recommended to it by the governor. If the former provision should be held to prevail, the Act could be passed, and if the latter, it could not. In such case the extraordinary session would not be the first session of the Legislature within the meaning of the Constitution. Admitting that unless the governor recommended the consideration of the subject to the Legislature at the extraordinary session called by him, an Apportionment Act could not then be passed, it by no means follows that the Legislature could not pass the Act at such extraordinary session, provided the subject were recommended to its consideration by the governor. In the one case the extraordinary session is not the first session after the return of the enumeration within the meaning of the Constitution, and in the other case it is. This is saying nothing more than that where a Legislature which has ordered an enumeration and adjourns without day before the return thereof, unless the governor call an extraordinary session, the first session of the Legislature after the return of the enumeration will not occur until the regular legislative session provided for by the Constitution, but that if the governor after a return of the enumeration should choose to exercise his constitutional power, and convene the Legislature in extraordinary session and recommend the subject of the apportionment to it, such extraordinary session would have the constitutional power to deal with the subject.

There is nothing either dangerous or in the slightest degree calculated to awaken the fears of the friends of good government in holding that such a session of the Legislature is under the circumstances stated fully competent to deal with the subject. And the holding is itself plainly called for by the language of the instrument under consideration.

Again, the fact that the public printer has for many years included in one volume the laws passed at the regular and at extraordinary sessions of the same Legislature, and indorsed the volume as containing the laws passed at the ninety-first or other regular session, taking no note of the extraordinary session, is not of the least consequence. For convenience of indorsement or for reference to a volume the regular and extraordinary session may be regarded as the same, but their inherent difference as separate sessions of the Legislature cannot be obliterated, and the fact that they constitute two sessions cannot be expunged by any action of the printer or of a state officer. No court in this state has decided the proposition that an extraordinary session of the Legislature which was the first session thereof after the return of the enumeration, could not pass an Apportionment Act.

The language of Judge Denio in Lanning v. Carpenter, 20 N. Y. 453, as to the lack of power of the Legislature to alter the assembly, senate or judicial districts until the session of the Legislature commencing in 1856, was evidently based upon the assumption that the return of the enumeration was not to be made until the commencement of that session. In such case the legislative session of that year would be the first session after the return of the enumeration. The case does not hold or pretend to hold that the Legislature of 1856 could not have provided for an earlier return of the enumeration, which might then have been acted upon by the regular session of the Legislature, if then in existence, or at an extraordinary session thereof called by the governor and actually in session before January 1, 1856. That question was not before the court and received no consideration at the hands of the learned judge.

We think there is no force in the several objections made as to the extraordinary session not being the first session of the Legislature.

Second. The Act is alleged to violate the Constitution because based upon an enumeration taken in 1892 instead of 1885. It is true that it was the duty of the Legislature in 1885 to direct an enumeration of the inhabitants of the state in that year, and if it had discharged that duty it would have been the duty of the Legislature at the first session after the return of that enumeration to proceed to apportion the districts. The Legislature of 1885 omitted to perform the duty of directing an enumeration which was cast upon it by the Constitution. Each succeeding Legislature up to 1892 also omitted to perform this duty, and thus for seven years the constitutional mandate had been violated. It is wholly immaterial to discuss the reason for such omission. It is clear that such omission ought not to prevent the performance of the duty by the next succeeding Legislature. The provision of the Constitution is so far mandatory that we can say the Legislature of 1885 ought to have complied with it by directing the enumeration, yet as it did not, the duty continued and the power of the next Legislature to deal with the subject cannot be disputed upon any well-founded principle. And this duty continued and was cast upon each succeeding Legislature until the constitutional obligation was fulfilled. The same may be said of the obligation to make the apportionment. If it be not made at the first session after the return of the enumeration, the duty to make it devolves upon the Legislature at the next and each following session until the duty is performed. It cannot be tolerated that a Legislature by a mere omission to perform its constitutional duty at a particular session, could thereby prevent for another ten years the apportionment provided for by the Constitution. The apportionment made in 1879, which the Onelda board of supervisors asks us to still enforce, was itself not made by the Legislature at the first session after the return of the enumeration of 1875. In the case of Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 41, the learned judge delivering the opinion of the court says the apportionment is valid, although not passed at the first session after the enumeration. It would seem as if authorities ought not be required upon such a proposition.

Here is a plain duty imposed upon a Legislature and it wholly fails to perform it. The Constitution does not in turn limit the performance of this duty to the particular Legislature. It is a duty which in its very nature and essence is continuous. If the first Legislature fail to perform it, can it be that upon a subject of this kind this failure shall be sufficient to thereafter prevent the performance of the constitutional mandate for the whole decennial term? There is, as it seems to us, neither sense nor principle upon which to base so extraordinary a proposition.

Because the duty has been omitted for one year we think it rests with accumulated force upon the next and each subsequent Legislature until it has been performed. It is of a nature which requires performance and it is to the interests of the whole people that it should be performed as directed, and if not at that time, then at the earliest possible moment thereafter. We are of opinion that the objection made has no color of validity.

Third. A third objection is raised to the validity of this Act. It is stated that as to the senate districts it is not based upon an equal number of inhabitants, excluding "persons of color not taxed."

One answer to this objection is offered by stating that these proceedings have reference to the invalidity of assembly districts only, and that in the provision of the Constitution for their formation it is not required to exclude from the enumeration persons of color not taxed.

We are inclined to the view that the Act of Apportionment is so closely connected as a whole that if the senate districts are based up on an absolutely unconstitutional enumeration, and to such an extent that it can be judicially seen that great injustice to many of the inhabitants of the state is the necessary and unavoidable result of such an enumeration, we cannot separate the assembly from the senate district and the whole Act must go down.

The objection itself is one which in its nature appears to be most ungracious. It urges a ground of invalidity which if allowed strikes out from the senate constituency all colored citizens who are not taxed. These men, it is claimed, must not be counted as inhabitants of the state for the purpose of creating senate districts. Since the adoption of the amendments to our Constitution in 1874 this view of the law which is now urged with so much eagerness has not been regarded as the true one.

The law which provided for the enumeration in 1875 did not contain any direction to separate persons of color into two classes, those who were and those who were not taxed, and to exclude the latter as a basis of apportionment, nor did the Apportionment Act of 1879 itself provide for the exclusion of persons of color not taxed in making up the senate districts. This of course is not in any way conclusive of the question, although perhaps of some importance as a legislative interpretation made by two different Legislatures and almost immediately after the adoption of the Amendments of 1874.

We think however there is an answer to the objection which we will now proceed to give. From the earliest period of our state history up to 1874 a discrimination of some kind was made against the negro in regard to his right to vote.

By the Constitution of 1777, which created a property qualification as a condition of voting, the negro then being in a state of slavery was unable to comply with its provisions and hence was unable to vote. In 1821, although a property qualification or its assumed equivalent was imposed upon all citizens as a condition of voting, yet it was made more onerous in the case of colored citizens, and such citizens were exempted from taxation unless seised and possessed of a certain prescribed amount of real estate.

In the Constitution of 1846 no property qualification as a condition of voting was imposed upon the white citizen, but it was therein provided that "no man of color, unless he shall have been for three years a citizen of this state, and for one year next preceding any election shall have been seised and possessed of a freehold estate of the value of $250 over and above all debts and incumbrances charged thereon, and shall have been actually rated and paid a tax thereon, shall be entitled to vote at such election. And no person of color shall be subject to direct taxation unless he shall be seised and possessed of real estate as aforesaid." Const. 1846, § 1, art. 2.

Here was among other things a property condition annexed to the exercise of the right to vote on the part of a colored person.

The meaning of the exclusion in sections 4 and 5 of article 3 of the Constitution of 1846 is at once plain when the above fact is considered.

In order to vote a colored person had to be taxed as provided for in the Constitution, and unless he was the owner of a certain amount of real estate, he was exempt from all direct taxation. Here there was a class of colored persons who, by the term of the Constitution itself, were exempt from the taxation therein spoken of. And when the Constitution in the subsequent article (3) speaks of "persons of color not taxed," it clearly and without doubt refers to the colored persons not taxed as provided for in the preceding article limiting their right to vote and providing for their exemption from direct taxation, unless owners of real estate as prescribed in the same article.

The framers of the Constitution evidently thought that persons of color who were not entitled to vote ought not to be counted in making up the number of inhabitants upon which to base the alteration of senate and assembly districts.

The Constitution remained for many years in this condition, both as to the formation of senate and assembly districts and as to the right of the colored persons to vote. While it remained in this condition the War of the Rebellion commenced and came to an end. Before 1874 the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Federal Constitution were ratified and their adoption duly proclaimed.

Those Amendments showed the great change which had come over the public mind in this country relative to the rights of the colored person. Slavery had been banished from the land by virtue of one of these Amendments, and the right of the colored person to vote was treated of by the last of such Amendments, and the right was not to be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude. I allude to these Amendments only for the purpose of showing the trend and strength of the sentiment of the people of the North, and also of this state, upon the subject embraced in these Amendments. History shows that this state was one of the ratifying parties to all of them, and their adoption by this and the other states shows that in the public estimation the time had passed when a man's color should be permitted to disqualify him from the exercise of any political rights or privileges.

All these Amendments to the Federal Constitution had been ratified and adopted before the proceedings ending in the adoption of certain amendments to our own Constitution were inaugurated. The amendments to our state Constitution passed two Legislatures consisting of different Senates, and were submitted to the people and adopted by them in the fall of 1874. The first section of article 2 was amended by wholly omitting the condition for the exercise of the elective franchise by the colored person, so that his right to vote was from that time placed upon the same foundation as that of the white inhabitant. The condition that he must be the owner of real estate to the amount of $250, and actually taxed thereon, disappeared and with it also disappeared all legal distinction between colored persons into those taxed and those not taxed.

An amendment to the fifth section of article 3 was at the same time submitted to the people and adopted, and the clause providing for the exclusion of persons of color not taxed was omitted from the section as adopted. In some way not affecting this question the amendment to section 4 of the same article striking out the exclusion as to senate districts regarding persons of color not taxed, was not submitted to the people and hence in words that section remains as it was. Does the section therefore still demand the exclusion of persons of color not taxed? I think not. It will be remembered that the plain meaning of the phrase in the two sections regarding the enumeration, as the Constitution stood at the time of its adoption as a whole, was that the Legislature was to exclude from the inhabitants persons of color not taxed, as provided for in article 2, section 1, of the same Constitution. That section did provide both in regard to their taxation before being permitted to vote and also as to their exemption from direct taxation, and hence when a subsequent section alludes to persons of color not taxed it naturally if not necessarily follows that it means by the use of such an expression the persons of color not taxed as already provided for in the same instrument. And when by amendment the provision which is thus referred to is stricken out, does not such exclusion impliedly abrogate the provision which was based upon the part thus dropped out? I think it does in a case like this where the reason for the continued existence of the provision in the fourth section of article 3 has been wholly taken away by the amendment already made to the first section of article 2.

A repeal by implication is not favored even in regard to a statute, still less can it be favored in regard to any provision of our organic law. It is however a question of intention in both cases. The power that made can unmake.

A constitutional provision can be impliedly abrogated by the adoption of another and later one which is antagonistic to it, although the original provision may in terms remain unaltered. The later will of the people constitutionally made known must in such case take the place of the other provision, even though it may still in form remain in the organic law as a part thereof. It can only be said that in the case of the constitutional amendment the fact of its opposition to a former provision and the intent to displace it by the amendment adopted must be so plainly shown by the provisions themselves that there can be no rational doubt in regard to it. I think these conditions are entirely filled by the proof showing the adoption of the amendments to section 1 of article 2, and to section 5 of article 3. I have no manner of doubt that the people intended by the adoption of these amendments to effectually blot out all distinctions of a political nature between white and colored persons, and I think these amendments taken in connection with the sections as they stood before amendment clearly show that such intention has been effectually accomplished so far as the Constitution is concerned.

We are fully conversant with the indisputable proposition that courts cannot dispense with a constitutional or statutory provision, merely because it appears that the policy upon which it was established or created has ceased or changed. Brown v. Clark, 77 N. Y. 869. When, however, that change in constitutional policy is proved by wholly incontestable and overwhelming evidence, and indeed is nowhere challenged or denied, and where effect to such change has been given in terms by amendments to more than one section of the Constitution, and where it appears that the provision in still another section, although not stricken out by an amendment in terms, is by the other amendments left without reason or excuse for its existence, it is not too much to hold that in such a case the alterations and amendments which have been actually made in the course of the attempt to effect the change of policy, do in effect and by implication strike out and abrogate a provision which, by reason of the amendments, has no longer any excuse for existence.

Another answer has been suggested to the general objection under discussion. It is that there can be no presumption that any particular proportion of colored persons not taxed lives in any one district, and it cannot be presumed without proof that any one has therefore been injured by a failure to exclude such colored persons from the number of inhabitants upon which to base the senate districts. If the same proportion of whites to colored persons not taxed existed in all the districts, it is clear no one would suffer any harm from this failure to exclude such colored persons, and if no one would be harmed it of course follows that no court would spend time in attempting to remedy errors which injured no one and which brought up nothing but abstract questions for adjudication.

No court should be called upon to presume any particular fact without the least legal evidence of its existence, for the purpose of thereby furnishing a reason for overthrowing an enactment of the Legislature which must be presumed to have been enacted from good motives and for proper purposes.

Unless an unequal proportion of colored persons not taxed to white persons should be found or presumed to exist in the different districts, it cannot be said that any human being suffers harm. There is no evidence of the fact in these papers, and its existence ought not to be presumed.

I think on both grounds herein set forth the answer to the claim of invalidity may well be placed.

So far in the discussion we have not alluded to any legal effect which the adoption of the amendments to the Federal Constitution may have upon the provisions of our state Constitution on the same subject. We do not decide the case upon any such ground and we intimate at present no opinion upon that subject.

For the reasons above given we are of the opinion that the objection to the validity of the Act of 1892, based upon the failure to exclude persons of color not taxed, cannot prevail.

I have given these objections such an extended discussion, not because I have felt the least doubt as to their proper decision, but because they have been so eagerly and zealously urged by counsel at the bar, and because of the opinions of some of the learned judges in the courts below, which gave a force and validity to one or two of them, which it is impossible for us to allow, and therefore we feel called upon to give our reasons for our dissent at greater length than we should otherwise deem necessary.

There is another objection to this Act which we will now consider.

Fourth. It is finally objected that the Act is invalid because the senate districts do not contain an equal number of inhabitants as nearly as may be. These proceedings relate only to the assembly districts in Oneida and Monroe counties, but the inequalities in the senate districts in other portions of the state are cited for the purpose of showing a violation of the constitutional mandate in their formation, and as a consequence the invalidity of the whole Act, including the apportionment of members of Assembly. This question of inequality contains, in my judgment, the only debatable proposition arising in these cases.

The Act of 1892, when compared with the returns of the population as contained in the last enumeration, must be conceded (when a like comparison is made of the former Acts with the enumerations which preceded them) to be the one which most nearly approaches fairness and equality, yet it is the only one which has been brought before the courts.

From the formation of government under written constitutions in this country the question of the basis of representation in the legislative branch of the government has been one of the most important and most frequently debated. It is not true that equality of members in representation has been the leading idea at all times in regard to republican institutions. Political divisions of the state have in New England been the bodies which were entitled to representation, and the town as a town, and irrespective of the number of inhabitants, has had its representative in the Legislature, so that a large town necessarily had no more representation than a much smaller one. This is the case to-day in some of the New England states.

The power to readjust the political divisions of a sovereignty with the view of representation of those divisions or of the inhabitants thereof, in the Legislature, resides, of course, in the first instance, with the people, who in this country are the source of all political power. The essential nature of the power itself is not, however, altered by that fact. In its nature it is political as distinguished from legislative or judicial. In intrusting such power to any particular body, the people could by their Constitution give written instructions as to how it should be carried out, yet the essential nature of the power still remains. If a portion of it be intrusted to a body of men acting as a board for the mere purpose of making a mathematical calculation, and with instructions to discharge its duties in a way which is solely mathematical, it is clear that the board has no discretion whatever, and it is bound strictly by the terms of the grant of power. In such case the people have not in reality parted with the whole power. There may then be a power in the court to correct the very slightest deviation from what can be clearly seen to be a mere ministerial duty. There being no possibility for the exercise of the slightest discretion, a violation of a rule in mathematics would become a violation of the Constitution, and as such might be the subject of review by the courts. The power to review would exist because of the fact that the people had so bound and limited the exercise of the power to readjust the political divisions of the state that the power itself, thus limited, had become in its exercise by the body to which it was intrusted one of a ministerial nature only. Its nature as a political power in the board itself would in such case have been changed by the refusal of the people to permit of its exercise upon any other than a mathematical basis. Hence a direction to a body created by the people for such a purpose, which permitted no discretion in its exercise under any circumstances, might properly form the subject of enforcement by the courts. This, however, is not the case under our Constitution. The power to alter these political divisions has been deposited by the people with the Legislature and under such circumstances as necessarily compels the exercise of legislative discretion in carrying out the power granted. The political nature of the power is thus retained. The learned judge who delivered the opinion at special term in the Pond Case himself admits that some discretion is vested in the Legislature, and that in the nature of things it must be so left. He was of opinion that the discretion thus vested in the Legislature had been overstepped, and that the Constitution had been thereby violated, and that the courts could review and reverse this action of the Legislature. Discretion is necessarily reposed in the Legislature because of the direction of the Constitution that in making up the senate districts they must at all times consist of contiguous territory, and that no county shall be divided in the formation of a senate district, except such county shall be equitably entitled to two or more senators. It is also provided that in apportioning members of Assembly every county shall be entitled to one member.

This renders the mathematical process impossible, both as regards senate districts and the apportionment of members of Assembly. We start then with the proposition that to the Legislature is intrusted some discretion in the matter of apportionment. Is the court to interfere with such power whenever it thinks that the Legislature might possibly have come nearer to an equality, after complying with the special conditions mentioned in the Constitution? This would be to assert a power in the court to supervise the exercise of the discretion granted to the Legislature, if such discretion were exercised in the slightest degree after the constitutional mandate in regard to county lines and county members had been complied with. We do not believe in the propriety or necessity of any such rule. On the contrary, we think that the courts have no power in such case to review the exercise of a discretion intrusted to the Legislature by the Constitution, unless it is plainly and grossly abused. The expression, "as nearly as may be," when used in the Constitution with reference to this subject, does not mean as nearly as a mathematical process can be followed. It is a direction addressed to the Legislature in the way of a general statement of the principles upon which the apportionment shall be made. The legislative purpose should be to make a district of an equal number of inhabitants as nearly as may be, and how far that may be carried out in actual practice must depend generally upon the integrity of the Legislature. We do not intimate that in no case could the action of the Legislature be reviewed by the courts. Cases may easily be imagined where the action of that body would be so gross a violation of the Constitution that it could be seen that it had been entirely lost sight of and an intentional disregard of its commands both in the letter and the spirit had been indulged in.

In the report made to the Senate of the United States, in April, 1832, by a committee of that body of which Mr. Webster was chairman, it was stated that the words of the Federal Constitution were equivalent upon this subject to a direction to apportion the representatives among the states upon the basis of population, as nearly as may be. 3 Webst. Misc. Wks. 369. It was then stated that the process theretofore adopted by Congress was unconstitutional, and that the true process was a mathematical one, which the report set forth. It was not then adopted by Congress, which adhered to its old method. There is no intimation in the report that the action of Congress, although what was termed unconstitutional, was subject to the revision of the courts. No such remedy was ever suggested. Congress has since that time adopted the theory of the report, and made a mathematical problem of the subject, and referred it to the secretary of the interior to carry out its instructions on the basis of arithmetic.

In this case mathematics cannot enter into the whole problem, because of the constitutional obligation as to county lines and county representation, and hence the sole question now is whether the legislative discretion has been so far abused as to render the Act liable to an overthrow by the courts. This brings us to an examination of the Act itself.

It can be stated at the outset that although the fairest that has been passed upon the subject, the Act is not an absolutely ideal one. There are some inequalities which any one individual intrusted with the power might at once remedy, but which might be very hard to alter when brought under the review of one hundred and twenty-eight assemblymen and thirty-two senators. Local pride, commercial jealousies and rivalries, diverse interests among the people, together with a difference of views as to the true interests of the localities to be affected; all these things and many others might have weight among the representatives upon the question of apportionment, so that in order to accomplish any result at all compromise and conciliation would have to be exercised. Looking at the Act as a result of such circumstances, and it seems clear that it cannot be said to be so far a violation of legislative discretion as to cause its complete overthrow by the courts.

In regard to the senate districts, some criticism has been indulged in, both in the courts below and by counsel here, for the purpose of showing that they are inequitably made up. So far as regards the Oneida and Monroe districts, there does not seem to be much room for adverse criticism. Those who claim the Act to be void cite other senate districts which, when compared together, are alleged to be unequal, and hence they claim the constitutional obligation in regard to senate districts has been disobeyed, and therefore the whole Act is void.

It is proper to here remark that there are figures in the record in these proceedings from which it may be determined what are the numbers of inhabitants in the different senate districts in the city of New York. Certain figures have been referred to by counsel, but they have been obtained, not from the record in these proceedings, or from any public record, but from some source whose accuracy cannot be relied on, and which at all events is not in any manner before the court.

The real burden of their complaint lies in the alleged violation of the Constitution in regard to assembly districts. So far as these parties litigant are concerned, it would seem that courts would not be specially astute to discover some inequality in senate districts which did not affect the propriety of equality of the representation in the senate districts of which they are inhabitants.

As to the senate districts, when it is considered that in their make-up county lines must be adhered to, unless a county is equitably entitled to two senators, it is plain that great and necessary discretion is left to the Legislature in their formation. The union of different counties in the state for the purpose of making up a senatorial district which must consist of contiguous territory, and in regard to which counties cannot be divided, necessarily results in inequalities which can in no possible way be avoided.

Certain districts may be picked out from the whole number and compared with certain others, and inequality be charged against them. But when all the counties in the state are to be arranged and brought into connection upon some plan in which the express commands of the Constitution as to territory and county lines are to be observed, it will pass the wit of man to make such an alteration of the senate districts for this state that may not be the subject of adverse criticism and of alleged possible improvement. We are of opinion that the Legislature, by the alteration of the senate districts under the Act of 1892, has not violated the legitimate and necessary discretion intrusted to it by the Constitution.

As to the assembly districts the burden of complaint rests upon the apportionment of four or five members of Assembly out of one hundred and twenty-eight.

The learned counsel for the appellant in the case of the relator Carter makes up a list of the members of Assembly as they have been apportioned and as he claims they should have been apportioned. In this list he shows that Albany is entitled to three, while four members are actually awarded; Dutchess is entitled to one, while two have been awarded; Kings is entitled to nineteen, while but eighteen have been awarded; New York is entitled to thirty-one, while but thirty have been awarded; Monroe is entitled to four, while but three are awarded; Queens and Rensselaer are entitled to but two each, while three each have been awarded them. This list shows that at least two counties (New York and Kings) have by the action of the Legislature lost each one member, while it is notorious that both were in accord with the dominant party in the Legislature. It cannot be said that in regard to the others partisan consideration entered into the subject, because the counties to which the members were awarded are, when divided into districts, very uncertain as to the political complexion of their representatives in the Assembly. By this Act each county has been in fact awarded every member to which it was entitled by the ratio which obtained between population and representation. The only claim asserted or in fact existing is that in apportioning the remaining members after each county had been awarded its full number of members to which it was entitled upon the ratio adopted, the members thus remaining were in some few instances awarded to counties which had a less surplus over their ratio than some other counties, no counties having enough to entitle it to another member upon the ratio existing.

In regard to these fractional parts of a ratio, an examination of the debates in the constitutional convention of 1846 shows that the subject of the representation of such fractions was discussed and efforts were made to provide in terms for a rule of representation for them, so as to limit the discretion of the Legislature. Debates on Constitution of 1846, page 866. See also debates of constitutional convention of 1866 and the commission of 1872, where the subject was debated.

The convention of 1846 finally framed the provision without any statement as to the fractions of ratios or how they should be treated, and the question was thus left to legislative discretion to be exercised in good faith and not to be abused.

The reason for the particular action of the Legislature upon this question must be sought for in some considerations other than partisan, for I think it is shown these did not enter into the question upon this point.

The inference is fair that these changes were absolutely necessary in order to secure the passage of the bill, having regard to the conditions under which legislative action is practicable. The Constitution is silent as to the ratios, and some of the assailants of the bill insist upon making up a new ratio, which shall require a larger number of inhabitants than the one one-hundred-and-twenty-eighth part, in order to entitle any county to a member, and they obtain this ratio by deducting the population of thirty counties, which must have one member each, from the total population of the state, and then dividing it by ninety-nine, the number remaining to be apportioned, which gives them a new ratio of 48,800, which is 8,559 in excess of the ratio based upon an absolute equality of apportionment. This operates unjustly against the counties entitled to the largest number of members, so that in the case of New York, entitled to at least thirty-one members, there is a loss of thirty-one times 8,559, or 110,829. And so correspondingly in the case of Kings. There is no arithmetical necessity in the adoption of this new ratio, if there be a sufficient number of members of Assembly, to be apportioned to give one to every one one-hundred-and-twenty-eighth part of the entire population, with four to spare. By adopting the larger ratio, which the opponents of the measure insist on, eleven members of Assembly remain to be assigned to counties not having a full multiple of the ratio necessary to entitle them to an additional member. As to eight of these it is conceded that they are actually assigned to counties having the highest fractional excesses, but not so large as the other counties named if the assignment was made according to the plurality of excess. But it must be observed that by the adoption of this new, arbitrary and unreasonable ratio, New York's representation was reduced from thirty-one to twenty-nine, and Kings from nineteen to eighteen, and that loss of three fell to a portion of the state which according to its population had a much larger proportion of the business and wealth of the state.

Here were two ratios presented for adoption, each one of which had its defects, and the Legislature certainly cannot be charged with any desire to be unfair or unjust if, in the distribution of the members of Assembly after each county had received its full quota according to the highest ratio, it took into account the large losses incurred by the populous counties if such ratio were adopted without modification.

It is also to be noted that the three members were assigned to counties all of which have shown by the census increased population.

Other considerations might be added to show that the Legislature of 1892, in the passage of the Act under review, did not approach the danger line of an abuse of legislative discretion, but this opinion, which has grown to such large proportions, as well as the total lack of time, both warn me to desist from an attempt which is really unnecessary. It is proper at this stage to advert to the consequences which would or probably might follow the overturning of the Act.

It is said indeed that courts have no right to look at the consequences which may follow their decision of legal questions. This is quite an erroneous statement of the principle. After a decision has been come to, it is true that courts have nothing to do with consequences. But in seeking for a correct solution of any legal question, especially the question of the proper construction of a statute or a Constitution, the result which may follow from one construction or another is always a potent factor, and is sometimes in and of itself conclusive. In speaking upon the same subject in Rumsey v. People, 19 N. Y. 52, the learned judge, in delivering the opinion of the court, said, upon a question of construction: "We have a right to consider the evil which would result from the prevalence of the alternative . . . should the Act be annulled and the new county (Schuyler) annihilated; the consequences would be disastrous." The learned judge then proceeds to state what they would be, and argues from them that another construction ought, if possible, to be given to the Act.

We are asked to say that in this Act of 1892 the Legislature has abused or overstepped the discretion devolved upon it by the Constitution. What is the result which would follow?

In the first place we should have every enumeration and every Apportionment Act brought before the courts for review, and as it would not be necessary to act immediately, any citizen at any time during the running of the decennial period would have the right to invoke the aid of the court to set aside as void any such act, and leave the people to suddenly confront such a situation as is now presented. This in itself is sufficient to induce a court to say that only in a case of plain and gross violation of the spirit and letter of the Constitution should such a power be exercised. Every county in the state but the two before us has acquiesced in the requirements of the Act, apportioned its members among the towns and wards of the county or city, and done everything necessary to proceed to an election under its provisions. The greatest confusion and disorder would result from a holding that this Act is invalid. Whether any members of Assembly could actually be elected under any other law at this late day, is quite problematical. The spectacle of a Legislature elected under an unconstitutional law, or part of the members elected under it and part under another, is one which ought not to be contemplated without the greatest anxiety by all honest citizens.

When we come to the question of what law is in force in this state if the law of 1892 is not, the situation becomes more alarming. In the case of the relator Carter we are asked to command the secretary of state to issue notices for the election of members under the Act of 1879. This Act, if enforced now, would work still greater injustice than has ever been suggested against the Act of 1892.

The same reasoning which would set aside as void the Act of 1892 would be still more powerful and cogent as showing the total invalidity of the Act of 1879. That Act when passed, was well known to be a most unjust and unequal one, particularly in regard to the interests of New York and Kings counties. Gov. Robinson, in his memorandum filed with the Act, which he refused to approve, shows beyond question its gross disregard of the constitutional mandate as to equality. The governor therein called particular attention to the matter, and said: "In the distribution of members of Assembly, the bill is still further from meeting the requirements of the Constitution. I find that Cattaraugus County, with 45,737 inhabitants, has two members, while Suffolk, with 50,830, is given but one. Orange, with 82,225 inhabitants, has but two members, while St. Lawrence, with only 78,014, gets three. Nor can I understand the philosophy which gives to the latter county, with 78,000 inhabitants, the same representation as Monroe, which exceeds it in population by nearly 50,000. These discrepancies are not to be explained. They admit of no apology or excuse. They are of the same class as that so-called necessity which entirely deprives 150,000 inhabitants in New York and Kings of their proper representation." So wrote Governor Robinson, while refusing to veto the Act, because as it stood it was better than the condition of things which it was to replace. Should this court now, after thirteen years, and when the injustice and inequality have vastly increased, still order the secretary of state to issue election notices under such a law and should a legislature be elected under it? It is said in answer that we need not decide upon the invalidity of the Act of 1879, but leave it to the secretary of state what course to pursue and what law to regard, so long as he does not regard the Act of 1892. This is, as it seems to us, a most absurd proposition, and at the same time one fraught with the most alarming contingencies. To hold the Act of 1892 void for this reason, and yet to say nothing in regard to the law of 1879, which is far more obnoxious, to the very arguments upon which we are asked to avoid the Act of 1892, is to place the people of the whole state in a most improper and unfair position. The necessity of deciding is also founded upon the position of the relator in the case against Rice, that he shall be ordered to give notices under the Act of 1879. The question will arise at once, What Act are we living under and what apportionment is the true one upon which to base election of members of Assembly? The people are entitled to know what law they are living under, and where the apportionment is to be found which is legal and under which they could proceed to elect members if there were time enough left in which to put the machinery at work to accomplish that end. But there is not in fact time enough left for such purpose.

If the Act of 1892 is void, the Act of 1879 is also plainly void, and no election of members of Assembly should be tolerated under it. This might relegate the people to the Act of 1866, and thus we might have an attempt at an election for members of Assembly under an Act more than a quarter of a century old and a legislative representation of the people of that time. This would be a travesty on the law and upon all ideas of equality, propriety, and justice.

We are compelled to the conclusion that this Act of 1892 successfully withstands all assaults upon it, and is a valid and effective law.

Upon the argument our attention was called to certain cases decided in Michigan and Wisconsin, involving to some extent the questions decided herein.

In some of them the violation of the spirit of the Constitution was gross beyond cavil or argument. They would come within the description of an abuse of legislative discretion. In others the positive commands of the Constitution as to counties were plainly violated. The actual decisions might perhaps be upheld on the lines laid down in this opinion, but there are some things stated in some of the opinions which go beyond what this court is prepared to concur in.

The discretion necessarily vested in the Legislature must be finally disposed of then, unless, as we have said, there is such an abuse of it as to clearly show an open and intended violation of the letter and spirit of the Constitution.

The order in the first above entitled proceeding should be affirmed, with costs in all courts, and those in the second and third above-entitled proceedings should be reversed, and the motions for a mandamus granted, with costs in all courts.

Gray, J.:

I concur in holding the Apportionment Act to be valid. The gravest objection which has been urged against its validity is that it has violated the constitutional requirement as to equality of representation in the Legislature. I consider that the other points which have been presented have been sufficiently answered. They do not seem to me to suggest reasonable grounds for assailing this legislative Act. But if any provision of the fundamental law of the state, intended to secure the equal representation of its citizens in the legislative department, has been violated by the Act in question, it is then properly the duty of the judicial department of power to declare it unconstitutional, and therefore void. The judiciary has a duty to pronounce all legislative Acts null which are contrary to the manifest tenor of the Constitution of the state.

Is that the case here? If it is, it arises out of the apportionment of members of Assembly. I fail to see that in the arrangement of senate districts there exist any substantial grounds for complaint. As to members of Assembly, the constitutional requirement is that the Legislature shall apportion them among the counties "as nearly as may be according to the number of their respective inhabitants." I think this language imports that some amount of discretion may be exercised by the Legislature in perfecting an apportionment. For such an opinion I find support both in the juxtaposition of the words and in the manner of their introduction into our Constitution. If no discretionary power resided in the Legislature to vary from a mathematical and methodical adjustment of members of Assembly, according to the population of counties, the presence of the words "as nearly as may be" is meaningless. Their absence would better consist with the sense contended for. But they were brought in by an amendment of our first Constitution, which was adopted in 1801. Previously the Constitution required that "the Legislature do adjust and apportion" the representatives in Assembly to the number of electors in the counties. By the amendment in 1801 that provision was amended so as to require them to apportion "as nearly as may be, according to the number of electors," etc. In this change or substitution of language I deem an intention evidenced to confine something to the judgment of the Legislature, and in view of many obvious considerations, very wisely and justly so.

It was apparent that greater or less inequalities must arise in an apportionment, and that after each county had received its full number of assemblymen according to the ratio of apportionment established, there would remain some members to be distributed among those counties having excesses of population over the ratio. The contention of counsel is that that distribution must be in the order of the highest excesses or remainders over, and any discretion in the matter is denied.

In the present case, for instance, there were eleven members of Assembly to be so distributed among counties having fractional excesses, and the showing is that three were apportioned out of the strict order in which those excesses stood. It may be remarked, in passing, that in an apportionment of one hundred and twenty-eight members among the counties, this showing evidences no glaring departure from strict equality, not any scheme to defraud the people in the matter of representation. It is the general rule of law that the courts have no concern with the motives of the legislative body in passing an Act. If they find the power conferred to so enact, they may not intervene to prevent the execution; and at all times they should be slow to interfere with the legislative department of power. If there were here a flagrant disregard and an unmistakable violation of the constitutional injunction that the apportionment should be "as nearly as may be," according to the number of citizens, the courts might feel justified in declaring the Act void for unconstitutionality. But we have no reason to impute any fraudulent motives, and the showing of three instances of departure from a methodical apportionment is not enough to evidence any deliberate violation of the constitutional requirement. The legal presumption is in favor of the constitutionality of every Act of the Legislature, and that presumption is not overcome in this instance, where the legislative Act simply evidences the exercise of discretion in performing a political duty.

We may concede that adherence to a simple or mathematical system of distribution of members among the counties in the order of their excesses of population over the ratio is the better rule; but deviations may be demanded by public exigencies. Some consideration must be had of the difficulties which environ the passage of an Act of apportionment in the conflicting claims and demands of representatives, some latitude of action must be permitted in considerations which pertain to the geographical situation and necessities of counties, and some allowance must be made for the active opposition engendered by political feeling. As the bill was reported an exact and mathematical apportionment appeared, but to secure the passage of the Act some changes were made by the Legislature. I do not think that the Legislature is to act as a mechanical contrivance for the mathematical distribution of members of Assembly. The Constitution does not say so in unmistakable terms, and if it does not courts should hesitate to assert it. Something is confided to the wisdom and judgment of the legislative body in performing this constitutional duty, and if in the execution of the duty the result is not perfect, the courts should presume that the Legislature endeavored to accomplish it as nearly as might be. I think, according to a logical and candid view of the constitutional requirement, it might be impracticable, unless there was some discretion vested in the Legislature with respect to carrying it into effect. There has been no abuse of this discretion, and for us to judge the Act unconstitutional and to declare it void would be, in my judgment, a most unwise construction, and would be to arrogate a power of interference as dangerous in the precedent as it seems unwarranted in the law.

Earl, Ch. J., O'Brien and Maynard, JJ., concur with Peckham and Gray, JJ. Andrews and Finch, JJ., dissent upon point discussed in opinion of Andrews, J., but concur with Peckham, J., on all other points.

Andrews, J., dissenting:

I am of opinion that the Apportionment Act of 1892 is void for the reason that in apportioning members of Assembly among the counties of the state it violates the rule of equality prescribed by the Constitution. It is the cardinal principle of free representative government that every elector shall have equal weight in exercising the suffrage. Proportionate representation according to population is the rule both in the Federal and state Constitutions, except where by reason of constitutional arrangements and compromises its full application has been departed from. The rule can never be disregarded consistently with our representative system, except under the express sanction of the people, given in the Constitution, or necessarily implied from its provisions. This is a constitutional principle so fundamental and so well recognized that the citation of authorities in its support is unnecessary.

The Constitution of New York in prescribing the manner of constituting the Legislature has adhered to the principle of representation according to citizen population, except so far as it was necessarily modified to accomplish another purpose also deemed of great importance, viz.: that the autonomy of the counties should be preserved in the formation of senate districts and that each county should be entitled to at least one member of Assembly. The Constitution (art. 8, § 4) prescribes that counties shall not be divided in the formation of senate districts except where a county shall be equitably entitled to more than one senator and (art. 8, § 5) that each county, except the county of Hamilton, shall be entitled to one member of Assembly, and that when a county is entitled to more than one member, it shall be divided into districts; but that no town shall be divided in the formation of assembly districts. This scheme of creating territorial districts for the election of senators and members of Assembly necessarily results in some inequality. But except as modified by these provisions, the Constitution carefully preserves the principle of representation according to population. It enjoins upon the Legislature to so constitute the senate districts "that each senate district shall contain as nearly as may be an equal number of inhabitants, excluding aliens and persons of color not taxed" (art. 8, § 4), and it commands that "the members of Assembly shall be apportioned among the several counties of the state by the Legislature, as nearly as may be, according to the number of the respective inhabitants, excluding aliens." Art. 8, § 5.

The intention of the people to preserve and guard by the Constitution the principle that every voter is to have equal weight and voice in the selection of representatives, subject only to the modification before referred to, is unmistakably indicated in other parts of the legislative article. The provisions describing decennial enumerations of the inhabitants of the state, and a decennial arrangement of senatorial and assembly districts, were inserted to accomplish this object. The supreme purpose of these provisions was to secure at short recurring periods a readjustment of inequalities which might arise from the growth or shifting of population during the decennial period. Further, to prevent such inequality and to secure the practical operation of the fundamental principle of equal suffrage, the Constitution in the provision quoted enjoined upon the Legislature that the senate districts should be organized and the members of Assembly should be apportioned as "nearly as may be" according to the number of inhabitants.

By what process the Legislature reached the results embodied in the Apportionment Act does not distinctly appear. It had before it the enumeration of the representative population in each of the counties of the state. The problem (in respect to the Assembly) was to apportion among the several counties the one hundred and twenty-eight members of Assembly, "as near as may be," according to the number of the respective inhabitants, excluding aliens. It seems to have first assigned to twenty-nine counties (reckoning Fulton and Hamilton as one), each having less than a full ratio of population necessary to constitute an assembly district, one member each, leaving ninety-nine of the one hundred and twenty-eight members unassigned. It then assigned to each of the other counties a member or members, corresponding with the number to which it was shown to be entitled, as ascertained by dividing the whole population of the county by the ratio. This left remainders in all the counties, and eleven of the one hundred and twenty-eight members unassigned.

The eleven counties having the largest remainders were: Orange, 44,474; Onondaga, 44,460; Kings, 39,400; Ulster, 39,593; Monroe, 34,833; Steuben, 32,600; St. Lawrence, 31,800; Westchester, 31,226; Queens, 26,376; Dutchess, 26,272; Chautauqua, 25,085.

If, in apportioning the eleven unassigned members, the apportionment had been made upon the principle of assigning them to the counties having the highest remainders, one would have been assigned to each of the counties above named in their order. The Legislature did assign an additional member to each of the first four counties named, and when it came to Monroe skipped and gave no additional member to that county, but did instead award one to Steuben. It refused to give an additional one to St. Lawrence, but gave one to the succeeding county, Westchester. It gave one to Queens and one to Dutchess, but gave none to Chautauqua. In preference to Monroe, St. Lawrence and Chautauqua, it gave an additional member to Albany, having a much smaller remainder than the others. It gave one to New York county, which had a remainder of 8,813, and one to Rensselaer, having a remainder of 24,081. Neither Albany, New York county nor Rensselaer had a remainder equal to any of the eleven counties named, and in some of the cases the disproportion was very great.

The inequality in the distribution of political power under this apportionment is illustrated by another form of statement contained in the opinion of Judge Dwight. Dutchess county, with a population less than St. Lawrence, receives double the representation of the latter; Albany county, with less than twice the population of St. Lawrence, receives four times its representation; and Monroe county, with 24,000 more population than Albany, receives one less representation.

The question is, Was this apportionment of members to counties having smaller remainders of representative population than other counties, and giving the former additional representation denied to the latter, a compliance with the command of the Constitution that the apportionment should be made "as nearly as may be" according to the number of inhabitants of the respective counties. I think the question admits of but one answer, and that it is incontestable in reason, that the constitutional rule required that the eleven members should have been assigned to the counties having the highest remainders. This would have been the nearest approximation to equality, according to population. That this is so is a mathematical certainty, and admits of no controversy.

A question identical in principle was considered by Mr. Webster in a report made to the United States Senate in 1832, by a committee of that body, of which Mr. Webster was chairman, relating to the rule which ought to prevail in the apportionment of members of Congress among the states. The Federal Constitution provides (art. 1, § 8) that "representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several states according to their respective numbers," etc. The question considered by the committee was as to what was the constitutional method of apportioning unassigned representatives as between states having fractions of population less than a full ratio. The committee were unanimously of the opinion that the loss of members arising from the residuary numbers should be made by assigning as many additional members as are necessary for that purpose to the states having the largest fractional remainders, and this was the rule subsequently adopted by Congress. 8 Webst. Wks. 368. It will be observed that the words "as near as may be" are not in the provision of the Federal Constitution, but it was the opinion of the committee that the meaning was the same as if these words had been inserted. Mr. Webster said: "The Constitution therefore must be understood, not as enjoining an absolute relative equality, because that would be demanding an impossibility, but as requiring Congress to make an apportionment of representatives among the several states according to their respective numbers, as near as may be. That which cannot be done perfectly, must be done in a manner as near perfection as can be. If exactness cannot from the nature of things be attained, then the nearest practicable approach to exactness ought to be made. Congress is not absolved from all rule merely because the rule of perfect justice cannot be applied. In such a case approximation becomes a rule; it takes the place of the other rule, which would be preferable, but which is found inapplicable, and becomes itself an obligation of binding force. The nearest approximation to exact truth, or exact right, when that exact truth or that exact right cannot be reached, prevails in other cases, not as matter of discretion, but as an intelligible and definite rule dictated by justice and conforming to the common sense of mankind; a rule of no less binding force in cases to which it is applicable, and no more to be departed from than any other rule or obligation."

Again (p. 379): "The Constitution, as the committee understood it, says, representatives shall be apportioned among the states according to their respective numbers, as near as may be. The rule adopted by the committee says, out of the whole number of the House, that number shall be apportioned to each state which comes nearest to its exact right according to its number of people."

No one can fail to perceive the analogy between the question discussed in this report and that which is involved in the apportionment now under consideration. The argument urged upon us that the words "as nearly as may be" give a discretion to the Legislature if it means anything, as applied to the circumstances of this case, means that the Legislature may disregard the plain meaning and mandate of the Constitution. I deny that the rule that apportionment must be "as nearly as may be" according to population, is, or under any circumstances can be discretionary. I can conceive that an Apportionment Act should not be held to be unconstitutional for every trivial departure from the rule of equality. Some mistakes will invariably be made in the enumeration in the first instance, and afterward by the Legislature in making the apportionment, although it may act under the most sincere desire to apply the rule of the Constitution. But because the apportionment cannot be exact according to population, and some inequality is unavoidable, this does not absolve the Legislature from applying the rule in every case, and it cannot, under the cover of the words "as nearly as may be," disregard the rule and relegate the proceeding to the domain of discretionary powers and escape its binding obligation. When the court can see that the rule of the Constitution was not in fact applied, and the circumstances for its application were clear and unequivocal, then there is nothing left to the court but to declare the apportionment void. The suggestion that the circumstances under which Legislatures act in such matters give opportunity for the play of passion and prejudice, and therefore this must be considered in determining the validity of an Apportionment Act, seems to me to have no place in this discussion. The very object of constitutional restrictions is to establish a rule of conduct which cannot be varied according to the passion or caprice of a majority, and to fix an immutable standard applicable under all circumstances. If a departure from the fundamental law by legislatures can in one case be justified by the frailties of human nature, and the constitutionality of an Act may be made to depend in one case upon such a consideration, the constitutionality of all legislation may be governed by the same rule. I have said the very object in imposing restraints in the Constitution is to protect great principles and interests against the operation of such eccentric and disturbing forces. The discretion of the Legislature, if any, in apportioning members, ends where certainty begins, and that point was reached when the counties having the largest remainders were ascertained. The attempt to justify the apportionment of 1892 by the fact asserted (which seems to be true) that the apportionment of 1879 was subject to as great or greater objection on the score of inequality than the later Act, fails because the fact is irrelevant. It is one thing that a Legislature has disregarded its duty on a former occasion and that the people have acquiesced in the usurpation, and quite a different and a much more serious thing if such a disregard of constitutional limitation should receive judicial sanction.

Reference was made on the argument to the senate districts constituted by the Constitution of 1846, and by the convention which framed that instrument. The tables presented by the attorney-general show that the ratio for a district was about 81,000, and the greatest variations were in New York, which with four senators had a remaining surplus of about 48,000, a little more than half enough for another senator, and in the thirtieth district, which consisted of the counties of Allegany and Wyoming, in which there was a deficiency of about 28,000. These were the two extremes. The problem to be solved had three inflexible elements preventing equality and compelling instead approximation. The convention found in existence a Senate of thirty-two members elected in eight districts or four from each. Those districts were to be changed from eight to thirty-two, each electing a single senator. That was the first condition. The next was that no county should be divided unless it was entitled to two or more senators; and the third that the districts should be composed of contiguous territory. The debates show that it was quite generally conceded that a nearer approach to equality could only be reached by enlarging the number of the districts, which the convention was unwilling to do; and no different and better apportionment consistent with the conditions was formulated by anybody, or shown to be reasonably possible. It was the opinion of the members of the convention, as shown by the debates, that no nearer approach to the equality for which they struggled could be reasonably attained. To cite a necessary inequality as a precedent for an unnecessary one, a discrepancy compelled by inexorable conditions for one which there was perfect freedom to avoid, the compulsion of an inherent difficulty for a wrong both voluntary and needless, constitutes no answer to the inequalities in the assembly apportionment. If in 1846 there had been one additional senator to be allotted to some one district and such allotment had been denied to the first district with a surplus of 48,000, and given to the thirteenth, with a surplus of about 1,000, it would have been a precedent for what was done in the case at bar.

The convention in projecting the new scheme was treading on unfamiliar ground, but it did not leave in doubt the rule by which future Legislatures should be governed.

The departure from the constitutional method in the Act of 1892 is substantial, and its validity having been challenged in the courts, it cannot be upheld without establishing a dangerous precedent for the future.

16 L. R. A.

The claim that the Legislature in making an apportionment may take into consideration the probable unequal growth of populations, has no support in the Constitution. The apportionment is to be based on existing populations, as ascertained by the preceding enumeration. The decennial enumeration and apportionment is the constitutional remedy for any such temporary inequalities. If the Legislature was permitted to act upon the ground suggested, it would introduce a most uncertain element, and might be made the cover for great abuses. It is plain that in the present case the inequalities are not attributable to any such consideration. Monroe county, containing a rapidly growing city, and with a much larger population than Albany county, was given three members, and Albany was given four. It is unnecessary to consider in this case the question of the constitutionality of the Act of 1892, so far as it relates to senate districts. The inequalities in some instances are very great, and seem to have been unnecessary. For example, one of the districts in the city of New York has a population of 241,188, while another district in the same city has a population of 105,720, and they are not bounded by ward or election district lines. But having reached the conclusion that the Apportionment Act in the apportionment of members of Assembly violates the Constitution, the question as to the senate districts is unimportant in the decision of this case. The Act must stand or fall as a whole, and if in respect to one branch of the Legislature the Act is unconstitutional, it cannot be upheld as to the other.

I shall not undertake to show that the question presented is of judicial cognizance. That it is a judicial question cannot, under the authorities, be denied. The Legislature and the courts are alike bound to obey the Constitution, and if the Legislature transgresses the fundamental law and oversteps in legislation the barriers of the Constitution, it is a part of the liberties of the people that the judicial department shall have and exercise the power of protecting the Constitution itself against infringement.

The power of the courts to set aside an unconstitutional apportionment has quite recently been asserted and exercised by the courts of Wisconsin and Michigan. State v. Cunningham (Wis.) 15 L. R. A. 561; Giddings v. Blacker (Mich.) ante, 403; Houghton County Supra. v. Blacker (Mich.) ante, 432. These cases consider with much ability the question of judicial power, and determine that a substantial departure in an Apportionment Act from the rule of equality, renders it void.

I recognize the gravity of the question now presented. Nor do I fail to appreciate that holding the Apportionment Act void will produce temporary inconvenience, but the evils which may flow from this are not to be compared, I think, with the public injury which will result from sanctioning a disregard of one of the vital principles of representative government.

RHODE ISLAND SUPREME COURT.

Arthur T. PARKER
v.
Lydia A. MACOMBER.
(.....R. L.....)

1. A person prevented from continuing his contract by the arbitrary act of the other party may disregard it and recover the value of his services rendered in partial performance of it.
2. The death of a woman whose services and attendance are contemplated in a contract by which she and her husband agreed to board, care for and maintain her aunt during life, makes such a substantial failure in the consideration that the aunt is justified in rescinding the contract.

3. The prevention by the act of God of full performance of an entire contract will permit a recovery upon an implied assumpsit for personal services already rendered in part performance of the contract.

4. A count in quantum meruit is not necessary to permit a recovery for personal services in part performance of a contract which it has become impossible to complete where the declaration contains the common count in indebitatus for work and labor.

(April 11, 1902.)

PETITION by defendant for a new trial of an action brought to recover the value of board, care and services which had been furnished by plaintiff to defendant, and in which

NOTE.—Recovery for services on contract interrupted by sickness or death.

The doctrine of the above case that a recovery may be had for services performed under a contract the completion of which is prevented by sickness or death is supported by practically unanimous authorities.

The illness of an employé has been held in numerous cases a sufficient excuse for failure to complete an entire contract for services, and to entitle him to recover on a quantum meruit for the services actually performed. Fenton v. Clark, 11 Vt. 557; Seaver v. Morse, 20 Vt. 623; Hubbard v. Belden, 27 Vt. 645; Fahy v. North, 19 Barb. 341; Clark v. Gilbert, 26 N. Y. 279, 84 Am. Dec. 189; Wolfe v. Howes, 20 N. Y. 197, 75 Am. Dec. 868; Ryan v. Dayton, 25 Conn. 188, 65 Am. Dec. 590; Green v. Gilbert, 21 Wis. 803; Coe v. Smith, 4 Ind. 79; Lakeman v. Poliard, 43 Me. 463; Dickey v. Linscott, 20 Me. 453; Hargrave v. Couroy, 19 N. J. Eq. 281.

And after recovery from his illness the employé need not return and offer to complete his service. Seaver v. Morse and Hubbard v. Belden, supra.

The terms of the contract furnish the measure of recovery, subject to reduction for the damages caused to the employer. Clark v. Gilbert, supra.

But an Indiana case holds that the recovery cannot be for more than the amount of benefit conferred, and in no case more than a proportionate part of the contract price for the work done. Coe v. Smith, supra.

This was a case in which an attorney was employed for a lump sum to conduct a law-suit.

So in Wisconsin it is said that the recovery is not on the contract, but on quantum meruit. Green v. Gilbert, supra.

The damages caused by the failure to perform the services may be deducted from the recovery. Patrick v. Putnam, 27 Vt. 757.

Perhaps these cases do not, when considered with reference to the facts, really deny the rule of the New York case which allows the contract rate of compensation to govern after deducting the damages.

The same doctrine which is held in the above cases appears also in the decision that an agreement to give notice before leaving service does not apply to a case of sickness. Fuller v. Brown, 11 Met. 440; Harrington v. Fall River Iron Works Co. 119 Mass. 82.

Another Massachusetts case extends the doctrine by a decision that the sickness of an apprentice indentured for three years is no ground for the abatement or diminution of his stipulated wages during that time so long as he lives. Caden v. Farwell, 98 Mass. 137.

16 L. R. A.

The doctrine is also applied in a decision that an agreement to pay a person employed by the year in case of his death during the year at a certain "pro rated sum" per annum, requires payment to be computed to the day of his death, and not merely to the time when he ceased work by reason of sickness. Dunlap v. Montgomery, 123 Pa. 27.

The employment of an attorney is within the above rule as to the effect of the interruption of his services by sickness or death. Coe v. Smith, 4 Ind. 79.

So is the employment of a consulting engineer; and his death during his period of employment authorizes a recovery for what he had already earned. Stubbs v. Holywell R. Co. L. R. 2 Exch. 811.

But an absolute agreement to serve twelve months as a condition of compensation is not excused by sickness. Greene v. Linton, 7 Port (Ala.) 133.

The death of an overseer under a contract for a year was held in an early Alabama case not to permit pro rata compensation for a part of the services which had been performed. Givhan v. Dailley, 4 Ala. 330.

But this rule has been changed in that state by Ala. Code, § 2222. Dryer v. Lewis, 57 Ala. 551.

In admiralty a special rule has been followed. In Chandler v. Grieves, 2 H. Bl. 603, note, it was held that the wages of a seaman for the whole voyage became due by admiralty usage when he became disabled during the voyage.

This rule was followed in Sims v. Jackson, 1 Pet. Adm. 157; but is said by the court in Gray v. Murray, 3 Johns. Ch. 167, 1 L. ed. 580, to have been rejected, after full consideration, in Natterstrom v. Smith, 2 Hall. L. J. 350.

In Cutter v. Powell, 6 T. R. 320, no wages were allowed a sailor who died on a voyage and who had taken for his services a promissory note for much more than "ordinary wages" provided he proceeds, continues and does his duty "to port."

See discussion of this case in the opinion of the main case above.

In Gray v. Murray, 3 Johns. Ch. 167, 1 L. ed. 580, a supercargo whose contract was for a percentage on the value of the property brought home died during the voyage, but provided substitutes to be paid out of his commissions and who completed his work, and it was held that the full compensation agreed upon was earned.

For note on the effect of intervening impossibilities to perform as a relief from the obligation of a contract, see Stewart v. Stone (N. Y.) 14 L. R. A. 215.

R. A. R.

a verdict had been returned in favor of plaintiff. Denied.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Samuel W. K. Allen, for defendant, in support of the petition:

The contract is entire, and plaintiff must show full performance or a readiness to perform in full all the obligations on his part before he can recover.

The declaration contains only a portion of the common counts and no special count. The evidence at least shows a contract which has not been executed. Such evidence will not support such a declaration.

The plaintiff should have declared specially on his contract.

1 Chitty, Pl. ed. 1809, p. 839, 16th Am. ed. pp. 350-360.

Mr. Charles J. Arms, for plaintiff, contra:

This agreement was doubly within the Statute of Frauds, as it was not to be performed within one year and stipulated for the conveyance of a leasehold interest in land.

Potter v. Arnold, 2 New Eng. Rep. 621, 15 R. I. 850.

Plaintiff being precluded from suing upon the invalid agreement relies upon the defendant's implied promise to pay him what his labor and services were reasonably worth.

Quantum meruit and quantum valdebat counts are wholly unnecessary, and under an indebitatus count in assumpsit or debt plaintiff may recover, although there be no evidence of a fixed price.

1 Chitty, Pl. 16th Am. ed. § 352.

A party who refuses to go on with an agreement void by the Statute of Frauds after having derived a benefit by a part performance must pay for what he has received.

Lockwood v. Barnes, 8 Hill, 128, 38 Am. Dec. 620.

An oral agreement within the Statute of Frauds for services cannot be set up in defense to an action on a quantum meruit for services performed under it.

King v. Welcome, 5 Gray, 41.

Plaintiff contends that induced by the contract he furnished to defendant labor, supplies, and services. It would be iniquitous to rule that he has no redress for his loss and injury. If the provisions of the Statute of Frauds is to have this effect, instead of preventing fraud, it will be making it the instrument and means of perpetuating fraud.

Ray v. Young, 13 Tex. 550; Wonsettler v. Lee, 40 Kan. 367; Butcher Steel Works v. Atkinson, 68 Ill. 421; Freeman v. Foss, 5 New Eng. Rep. 302, 145 Mass. 361; Miller v. Eldridge, 128 Ind. 461; Towsley v. Moore, 80 Ohio, St. 184; Frazer v. Howe, 106 Ill. 563; Mills v. Joiner, 20 Fla. 479; Buckingham v. Ludlum, 37 N. J. Eq. 187; Cohen v. Stein, 61 Wis. 508; Cadman v. Markle, 5 L. R. A. 707, 76 Mich. 448.

Indebitatus assumpsit will lie, whether plaintiff was prevented by the act of defendant or by inevitable accident.

Note to Cutter v. Powell, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 9th Am. ed. pp. 1226, 1227; Freeth v. Burr, L. R. 9 C. P. 208.

Upon rescission, plaintiff had the right, if he had done anything under the contract, to 16 L. R. A.

sue immediately for compensation on a quantum meruit. That he should do so is consistent with reason and justice, for it is clear that defendant cannot be allowed to take advantage of her own wrong and screen herself from payment for what has been done, by her own tortious refusal to perform her part of the contract, which refusal alone has enabled plaintiff to rescind it.

Note to Cutter v. Powell, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 9th Am. ed. p. 1241; Perkins v. Hart, 24 U. S. 11 Wheat. 237, 6 L. ed. 463; Mitchell v. Scott, 41 Mich. 108; Hoagland v. Moore, 2 Blackf. 167; and cases cited in 1 Walt, Act. & Def. 882; Kelly v. Rowane, 38 Mo. App. 440; Moulton v. Trask, 9 Met. 577; Selby v. Hutchinson, 9 Ill. 819; Dubois v. Delawares & H. Canal Co. 4 Wend. 285; Steeple v. Newton, 7 Or. 110, 33 Am. Rep. 705.

Where the plaintiff is at liberty to treat the contract as at an end, though only partly performed, he may declare on the common counts and recover what his services were worth.

Cadman v. Markle, 5 L. R. A. 707, note, 76 Mich. 448; Dane, Abr. chap. 9, art. 22, §§ 17, 18; Anthon, Am. Prec. 114, 115.

If plaintiff had been incapacitated by the death of his wife for the performance of his contract—which was not shown at the trial—he could still recover in this action what his services were reasonably worth.

Fuller v. Brown, 11 Met. 440; Seaver v. Morse, 20 Vt. 620; Fenton v. Clark, 11 Vt. 557; Haynes v. St. Louis Second Baptist Church, 13 Mo. App. 546.

Douglas, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of assumpsit, brought to recover compensation for board, maintenance, care, and nursing for 390 weeks from April 1, 1881, to October 1, 1888, at $5 per week,—$1,950. The declaration contains the common counts in indebitatus assumpsit for goods sold and delivered, work and labor, money had and received, and for interest. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, and assessed his damages at $1,072.50, being at the rate of $2.75 per week for 390 weeks. It appeared that the services rendered were induced by a parol agreement between the parties by which the plaintiff agreed that he and his wife should live in the house of the defendant and care for and maintain her during her natural life, and the defendant agreed, in consideration of these services, that she would charge no rent for the house, would pay $8 per month board, and would give the house and leasehold interest in the lot to the plaintiff at defendant's death. She did not pay the board as agreed, but did pay some milk bills for the plaintiff on account. Plaintiff's wife died February 13, 1888, and from that time he furnished housekeepers. In August, 1888, defendant notified plaintiff to leave the house, and he removed October 1. Evidence was introduced, against the objection of defendant, of the value of the services rendered. The defendant now prays for a new trial, on the ground that the services were performed under an entire contract, which was not completed by the plaintiff because of the death of his wife, whose personal attendance formed an essential part of the consideration of it, and because the evidence objected to was inadmissible under the declaration. The plaintiff contends that after the death of his wife the same services were rendered by the housekeepers whom he engaged, and that he was prevented from completing the contract by the defendant, who ejected him from the house, and not by his wife's death.

The questions which are raised by the petition are whether the plaintiff can recover what his services are reasonably worth, notwithstanding the making of the contract, and, if so, whether this declaration is sufficient without a count in quantum meruit to admit evidence of the value of the services and to sustain judgment therefor. We cannot doubt that when this action was brought the agreement had been annulled, if it ever had had any validity. If the leasehold interest were for a term exceeding one year, the agreement amounted to an attempt to convey an interest in real estate by parol, and was void under the Statute of Frauds. In such case, as the defendant refused to continue the arrangement, whether justifiably or not, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the value of his services already rendered. Lockwood v. Barnes, 3 Hill, 128, 38 Am. Dec. 620; King v. Welcome, 5 Gray, 41.

While it seems to be assumed that the lease was for a long term, and the probabilities of the situation lead us to the same supposition, unfortunately there is no evidence reported which enables us to find the fact, and we cannot presume that the agreement was void without proof. We must therefore consider the agreement as originally binding, and determine the rights of the parties upon that view of the case.

If the plaintiff was prevented from continuing his contract by the arbitrary act of the defendant, he may disregard it, and recover the value of the services he has rendered in partial performance of it. Greene v. Haley, 5 R. I. 260. If the death of the plaintiff's wife was a substantial failure of the consideration, then the defendant was justified in rescinding the contract, as the full performance of it on the part of the plaintiff had become impossible. We think such was the case. The personal services and attentions of the wife to the defendant, who was the plaintiff's aunt, were undoubtedly contemplated by the parties as more agreeable and efficient than the services of strangers could be, and may well be considered an essential part of the benefits which the defendant was to receive. Yerrington v. Greene, 7 R. I. 589; Knight v. Bean, 22 Me. 581; Spalding v. Rosa, 71 N. Y. 40, 27 Am. Rep. 7; Stewart v. Loring, 5 Allen, 306, 81 Am. Dec. 747.

The question is then presented whether a person who has rendered personal services under an entire contract which the act of God has prevented him from fully performing can recover upon an implied assumption what those services are reasonably worth. In case of the destruction of the fruits of the services, so that neither party has the value of them, the loss must be adjusted according to the scope of the contract and the circumstances of the case, and different courts may come to diverse conclusions in cases which are very similar to each other. But when, as in this case, the defendant has received and retains the benefit of the services, we think that the plaintiff should recover. It is not just that we should benefit by the labor of another, and make no return, when the event which ends the service happens without fault of either party, and is not expressly or impliedly insured against in the agreement which induced the labor. This conclusion seems now to be established by authority, as well as to rest in sound reason. We know of no case which holds that, if the special agreement is no longer binding, the plaintiff may not resort to a quantum meruit. The leading case of Cutler v. Powell, 6 T. R. 820, held the special contract not to have been annulled by death, and there were circumstances connected with the agreement which gave color to that construction. The contract was to perform a voyage for a compensation to be paid upon arrival largely in excess of the ordinary wages for such services. The sailor died before the voyage was finished, and it was held that his administrator could not recover anything. The king's bench seem to have felt the harshness of the rule they were bound by even in that case, and caused inquiry to be made if some custom of the maritime law might not be found to mitigate the severity of the contract; but at the end of the term, no such usage having been found, they gave judgment for the defendant. W. W. Story says of this decision: "But this case may be explained by the fact that the thirty guineas was an extra price for the voyage, much larger than the ordinary wages would amount to for the length of such a voyage, and that both parties understood and intended that the contract should be entire, and that the sailor should take the risk of the whole voyage. In other tribunals, and where there is no expressly entire contract, the death or sickness of the laborer is a sufficient excuse for nonperformance, and he may recover pro tanto for the time he has labored." 1 Story, Cont. 19; Smith, Lead. Cas. 9th Am. ed. 1288, note to Cutler v. Powell.

The death of either party puts an end to a contract for personal services, unless it is otherwise agreed. President Tucker, of the Virginia court of appeals, referring to the same case, says: "That case can only be sustained, I think, on the ground, principally relied on, of extra wages. But, notwithstanding these and other cases which vigorously deny compensation unless there is entire performance, there can be no doubt, that where the subject is divisible, where the failure as to part can be fairly and accurately compensated by an apportionment of the consideration, the law permits, as justice certainly requires, that it should be done." Bream v. Marsh, 4 Leigh, 21, 29. In Haynes v. St. Louis Second Baptist Church, 12 Mo. App. 536, 539, it is said by the court: "If money is to be paid when the work is done, nonperformance of the work is a good defense; and where there has been a partial performance only, and not a performance of what is substantial in the contract, as a general rule plaintiff cannot recover. The rule always applies when the nonperformance is voluntary on the plaintiff's part. But when the nonperformance is caused by the defendant or by the act of God, the rule is not always applied, and in this country Cutter v. Powell has not been followed, but in contracts for services sickness and death have been held to excuse the non-performance of an entire contract." See also Carpenter v. Gay, 12 R. L. 306; Farrow v. Wilson, L. R. 4 O. P. 744.

Wolfe v. Howes, 20 N. Y. 197, 75 Am. Dec. 288, is closely analogous to the case at bar. The plaintiff's declaration contained the common counts only for work, labor, and services rendered by his testate as a skilled workman to the defendants. A contract was set up in defense, by which the testator had agreed to work a year at $40 per month, $10 of which was to be paid monthly. Before the end of the year he became unable to work from sickness, and so continued till his death. It was held by the referee that by reason of this sickness and death of the workman he was discharged from the further performance of his contract, and his executor was entitled to recover a reasonable compensation for his services preceding the sickness. The supreme court affirmed the decision, and the court of appeals, after a careful examination of the authorities, held that the contract contemplated the personal services of the workman, and that full performance, being prevented by sickness or death, was not a condition precedent to the right to recover, and laid down the general proposition that one who, under a contract requiring his personal services, and providing for partial payment during the employment and the remainder at the end of the term, performs services valuable to the employer, but before the expiration of the stipulated period is disabled by sickness from completing his contract, is entitled to recover as upon a quantum meruit for such services as he rendered. Allen, J. (page 200), in considering the case of Cutter v. Powell, says it "is distinguishable in this: that by the peculiar wording of the contract it was converted into a wagering agreement by which the party, in consideration of an unusually high rate of wages, undertook to insure his own life, and to render at all hazards his personal services during the voyage, before the completion of which he died." See, also, to the same general effect, Fuller v. Brown, 11 Met. 440; Seaver v. Morse, 20 Vt. 620; Fenton v. Clark, 11 Vt. 557; Cadman v. Markle, 76 Mich. 448, 5 L. R. A. 707, note; Clark v. Gilbert, 26 N. Y. 279, 84 Am. Dec. 189; Coe v. Smith, 4 Ind. 79; Hubbard v. Belden, 27 Vt. 645; Patrick v. Putnam, Id. 759; Lakeman v. Pollard, 43 Me. 463; Ryan v. Dayton, 25 Conn. 188, 65 Am. Dec. 500; Green v. Gilbert, 21 Wis. 401.

The question remains whether the plaintiff's declaration is sufficient without the count in quantum meruit. We think it is sufficient. A count in quantum meruit, as well as one in indebitatus assumpsit for work, labor, skill, care, and diligence, etc., claims a certain sum as due. In either case the plaintiff may recover less, and the judgment is for so much of his stated claim as is found to be justly merited. The counts in quantum meruit and quantum valebat are therefore unnecessary in any case. 1 Chitty, Pl. *352, 353.

The petition for a new trial must be denied and dismissed.

MINNESOTA SUPREME COURT.

Charles CHURCH, by His Guardian ad Litem, Roseltha Church, Appt.,
v.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE & ST. PAUL
R. CO., Resp't.

(.....Minn.....)

*1. A construction train of defendant, in charge of a conductor, having

*Head notes by MITCHELL, J.

pulled into a station, the conductor temporarily left the train to attend to his usual duties at the station, leaving the trainmen to do some switching, so as to transpose some of the cars: one of the brakemen, called "head brakeman," having charge of the switching movements of the train. At the request of this "head brakeman," the plaintiff, a bystander at the station, got on the cars to assist in the switching, and while doing so sustained injuries caused by the movement of certain car trucks which were loaded on one of the cars, and which were

NOTE.—Volunteer, who is.

One who has no interest in the performance of the work, which he undertakes, whether of his own volition, or at the suggestion of others engaged in the work, and merely to assist them in its performance, is a volunteer and assumes all the risks of the employment, and cannot recover for injuries occasioned by an accident happening through the negligence of those with whom he is acting. Mayton v. Texas & P. R. Co., 68 Tex. 77; New Orleans, J. & G. N. R. Co. v. Harrison, 48 Miss. 112; Flower v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 69 Pa. 210. See Mellor v. Merchants Mfg. Co., 5 L. R. A. 792, and note, 150 Mass. 362. See also Brook v. Copeland, 1 Esp. 203; Ilott v. Wilkes, 3 Barn. & Ald. 804; Bird v. Holbrook, 4 Bing. 622; Priestley v. Fowler, 3 Mees. & W. 1; Davies v. Mann, 10 Mees. & W. 546; Lynch v. Nurdin, 1 Q. B. 29; Barnes v. Ward, 19 L. J. C. P. 196; Rigby v. Hewitt, 5 Exch. 240; Greenland v. Chap- lin, Id. 242; Hutchinson v. York, N. & B. R. Co., Id. 242; Wigmore v. Jay, Id. 354; Wiggett v. Fox, 11 Exch. 539; Manchester, S. & L. R. Co. v. Wallis, 23 L. J. C. P. 85; Lygo v. Newbold, 23 L. J. Exch. 106; Tarrant v. Webb, 18 C. B. 797; Southcoote v. Stanley, 25 L. J. Exch. 339; Patterson v. Wallace, 1 Macq. 748; Potter v. Faulkner, 81 L. J. Q. B. 80; Warburton v. Great Western R. Co., L. R. 2 Exch. 80, 36 L. J. 1 Exch. 2.
16 L. R. A.

But it would be otherwise if such volunteer was acting at the time in furtherance of his own or of his master's business.

In such a case he will not stand in the relation of a fellow servant to those he assists, and if he is injured by their negligence the doctrine of respondent superior will apply and their master will be held responsible. 2 Thomp. Neg. 1045, citing Holmes v. Northeastern R. Co., L. R. 4 Exch. 264, L. R. 6 Exch. 123; Wright v. London & N. W. R. Co., L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 252.

not properly blocked. Held, that the brakeman had no authority to employ additional men to assist in switching. The fact that the existing force might have been insufficient to do the work did not, under the circumstances, give him any implied authority to do so; that, if any one on the ground had such authority, it was the conductor.

2. The plaintiff was a mere volunteer, and assumed all the risks of the situation.

(June 22, 1892.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from an order of the District Court for Ramsey County overruling a motion for new trial after verdict in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. S. P. Crosby, for appellant:

One who is engaged in defendant's work, at the request of the man in charge, though he expects no pay, and is employed for a mere temporary purpose, is, for the time being, a servant of defendant, and entitled to the same protection as any other servant.

Johnson v. Ashland Water Co. 71 Wis. 553, 77 Wis. 51.

In conducting a railroad, personal presence of directors and officers all along the line being impossible, subordinates with more or less discretionary authority are indispensable.

Michigan Cent. R. Co. v. Dotan, 32 Mich. 511.

The principal cannot expect third persons to have notice of limitations and restriction which are in their nature secret and undisclosed.

Mechem, Ag. 708, 734, §§ 714, 715.

The plaintiff in the case seeing Oleson in charge of the train and directing its movements had a right to presume that he was clothed (temporarily at least) with all the authority of a conductor and had a right to call to his aid such assistance as he deemed necessary for the proper performance of his duties in doing the switching called for.

Merchants Nat. Bank of Boston v. State Nat. Bank of Boston, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 604, 19 L. ed. 1008.

Express authority for this purpose was not necessary. In such an emergency there must be discretion and authority somewhere, to supply the place of disabled or missing servants, and no one could exercise this power so well or so prudently as the conductor in charge of the train.

Georgia Pac. R. Co. v. Propst, 88 Ala. 524, 85 Ala. 203, 90 Ala. 1; Soan v. Central Iowa R. Co. (Iowa) 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 145; Derrigan v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 52 Conn. 285, 23 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 438; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Rand (Tex.) 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 399.

The conductor of the train had power and authority, necessarily implied from the necessities of the case, to require the plaintiff to act as brakeman on the trip; and the railroad company cannot be heard to say that he was acting outside the scope of his employment.

Wood, Neg. 876, § 439; Mann v. Oriental Print Works, 11 R. I. 152; Mobile & G. R. Co. v. Peebles, 47 Ala. 322; Thomp. Neg. 974, 1045; Lalor v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 52 Ill. 401, 4 Am. Rep. 616; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Fort, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 553, 21 L. ed. 739; Derrigan v. New York & N. E. R. Co. supra; Whittaker's Smith, Neg. 148, note b.; Kerlin v. Chicago, P. & St. L. R. Co. 50 Fed. Rep. 186.

The true test is whether the person in question is employed to do any of the duties of the master.

Whittaker's Smith, Neg. 148, note b.; Gunter v. Graniteville Mfg. Co. 18 S. C. 262, 44 Am. Rep. 573; Beach, Contrib. Neg. 334.

The question is not solved by comparing the act with the authority.

Higgins v. Waterlot Turnp. & R. Co. 46 N. Y. 26.

An agreement by an agent of a corporation made in the course of the business intrusted to him is binding on the corporation, although in excess of his instructions.

Adams Exp. Co. v. Schlessinger, 75 Pa. 246; 1 Wait, Act. & Def. 288, and authorities cited; Brooks v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. (Pa.) 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 67; Evans, Ag. 594, 606; Flike v. Boston & A. R. Co. 53 N. Y. 549, 13 Am. Rep. 545; Crispin v. Babbitt, 81 N. Y. 516, 37 Am. Rep. 521.

Church stood in the relation of a servant to defendant as in the language of Judge Tyler in the Wisconsin case supra, not a volunteer, and the law protects him.

So where an owner of freight transported by a railway company was allowed to assist in its delivery, and in so doing was injured, through the negligence of defendant's servants, he could recover damages of the company. Holmes v. North Eastern R. Co. and Wright v. London & N. W. R. Co. supra.

So where a street-car passenger volunteered to assist the driver in backing the car upon a switch, and was injured through the negligence of the driver of a car, coming in from an opposite direction, he could recover damages of the company. McIntire St. R. Co. v. Bolton, 1 West. Rep. 65, 48 Ohio St. 224.

One who volunteers to associate himself with defendant's servant in the performance of the defendant's work, and this without the consent or even the knowledge of the defendant, cannot stand in a better position than those with whom he associates himself with respect to the master's liability. L. R. A.

Potter v. Faulkner, 81 L. J. Q. B. 80; Abraham v. Reynolds, 6 Jur. N. S. 53.

Instances.

A foreman of an engine asked a boy ten years old to put in the hose and turn in the water at a station. Flower v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 69 Pa. 210.

The conductor of a train ordered a boy standing near by to uncouple the cars, which he refused to do but on being threatened, complied, and in uncoupling the cars he was injured. New Orleans, J. & G. N. & Co. v. Harrison, 48 Miss. 113.

In these cases the court held that the defendant was not liable. Wood, Mast. & Serv. 909, notes; Degg v. Midland R. Co. 1 Hurlst. & N. 773.

The fact that the plaintiff was requested by an employé of the railway company to assist him makes no difference. Flower v. Pennsylvania R. Co. and New Orleans, J. & G. R. Co. v. Harrison, supra; Osborne v. Knox & L. R. Co. 68 Me. 49.

R. D.

Cleveland v. Spier, 16 C. B. N. S. 399; Thomp. Neg. 1046.

A mere passer-by, asked to help by workmen, is not a volunteer assistant. Nor is a person who performs a part of a contract or duty which another is bound to perform, by the permission of the person who would otherwise have to do it.

Whittaker's Smith, Neg. 146, 147.

A person ceases to be a volunteer if his assistance is given on request.

Ewell's Evans, Ag. 682; Wright v. London & N. W. R. Co. L. R. 1 Q. B. Div. 252; McIntire St. R. Co. v. Bolton, 1 West. Rep. 65, 48 Ohio St. 224; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 33 Md. 542; Holmes v. North Eastern R. Co. L. R. 6 Exch. 123; Wilton v. Middlesex R. Co. 107 Mass. 108, 9 Am. Rep. 11; Eason v. S. & E. T. R. Co. 65 Tex. 577.

Mr. W. H. Norris, for respondent:

A person who assumes to assist the servant of another, without being authorized so to do by the master, and who while thus acting becomes injured, has no right of action against the master for his injury, upon the ground that he is a mere volunteer, and further, that an unauthorized request of an employé does not bind the master.

Sparks v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 82 Ga. 156; Rhodes v. Georgia, R. & Bkg. Co. 84 Ga. 320, 41 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 302; Sherman v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 72 Mo. 62, 4 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 589; Eberhart v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. (Ind.) 4 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 599; Aitchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Lindley, 6 L. R. A. 646, 42 Kan. 714; Flower v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 69 Pa. 210.

Mitchell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Taking the admissions in the pleadings, the evidence admitted, and accepting as true all that plaintiff offered to prove, the facts in this case were as follows: Plaintiff had been in the employment of the defendant as a brakeman on a freight train running east of Calmar, Iowa. Having been taken ill, he had gone, on a leave of absence, to his home in Northfield, Minn. On the day in question he went down to defendant's depot in Northfield, for the purpose of writing or telegraphing to Austin for a pass over defendant's road to go back to his work. While he was at the depot a wrecking train came into the station in charge of a conductor, and with an engineer, fireman, and two brakemen, one of whom is called "head brakeman." This train was on its way to pick up a wreck, and, in addition to an engine and tender, consisted of two or more flat cars, upon one of which was loaded a derrick, and on another two pair of heavy car trucks. After the train pulled into the station the trainmen proceeded to switch the cars and transpose them so as to put the "derrick car" in the rear, and place the "truck car" next in front of the derrick. On its arrival the conductor left the train to attend to his other usual duties at the station while this switching was being done, the head brakeman being in charge of the switching movements of the train. While this switching was going on, the head brakeman being on the cars and the other brakeman at the switch, and a third man being necessary (as plaintiff offered to prove) to do the switching, the head brakeman, seeing plaintiff standing by, requested him to get onto the cars and assist. The plaintiff did so and while thus engaged sustained the injuries complained of, caused, as is claimed, by reason of the trucks on the flat car not being properly blocked.

It was necessary for the plaintiff to establish, as the essential foundation of his right to recover, the existence of the relation of master and servant between himself and the defendant company, and this in turn depended upon the authority of the head brakeman to employ him to assist in the switching. In our opinion, none of the evidence introduced or offered had any tendency to prove any such relation between plaintiff and defendant, or any such authority on the part of the head brakeman. The fact that plaintiff had been or was in the employment of the defendant elsewhere is wholly unimportant. He was not at the station on defendant's business. He was not an employé of defendant at that place or as to the switching of that wrecking train. The case stands precisely as if the head brakeman had called on any other bystander at the station to assist. While the head brakeman had charge of the movements of the train in doing this switching during the temporary absence of the conductor from the cars on other business, yet this was the entire scope and extent of his authority. The conductor had not abdicated the general charge and control of the train, or turned it over to the brakeman. The latter had no authority, actual or apparent, express or implied, either from custom or from any present pressing emergency, to employ additional brakemen, either permanently or temporarily. It was wholly immaterial whether two brakemen were or were not sufficient to do the switching. Even if they were not, that fact would not, under the circumstances, give a mere brakeman authority to employ an additional force. If any one on the ground had any implied authority to do so it was the conductor, who had charge and control of the train. In doing what he did the plaintiff was, therefore, a mere volunteer, and, as such, assumed all the risks incident to the position. The defendant did not bear to him the relation of master or employer, and owed him no duty as such. Flower v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 69 Pa. 210; Sherman v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 72 Mo. 62; Sparks v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 82 Ga. 156; Eberhart v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 78 Ind. 292; Rhodes v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 84 Ga. 320; Aitchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Lindley, 42 Kan. 714, 6 L. R. A. 646.

Counsel for plaintiff has cited no case which sustains his contention in this case. Many of those which he cites have no bearing whatever upon the question here involved. There are cases which hold that, when a regular brakeman is absent, and the proper and safe management of the train so requires, the conductor in charge has authority to supply the place of the absent brakeman.

Such, for example, are the cases of Sloan v. Central Iowa R. Co. 69 Iowa, 728, and Georgia Pac. R. Co. v. Propst, 88 Ala. 518.

And if any sudden or unexpected emergency should arise, such that the safety of the train demanded an extra force of brakemen, probably it would be held that it was within the implied authority of the conductor to employ them. But such cases are clearly distinguishable from the present, where a mere brakeman, without the knowledge of and without authority from the conductor in charge of the train, and in the absence of any sudden emergency, assumed to call upon a bystander to assist in switching. Another line of cases cited by counsel is also clearly distinguishable from the present one. They are those where one assists the servants of another at their request for the purpose of expediting his own business or that of his master. Such is the case of Eason v. S. & E. T. R. Co. 65 Tex. 577. The case of McIntire St. R. Co. v. Bolton, 48 Ohio St. 224, 1 West. Rep. 65, is also referable to the 16 L. R. A.

same class. See also Holmes v. North Eastern R. Co. L. R. 4 Exch. 254, affirmed L. R. 6 Exch. 128. The decisions in this class of cases are placed upon the ground that, though performing a service beneficial to both, the party is doing so in his own behalf, and not as the servant of the company, and is entitled to the same protection against its negligence as if attending to his own private affairs. See also Thomp. Neg. 1045, and cases cited. Neither is the case of Johnson v. Ashland Water Co., 71 Wis. 553, so much relied on by counsel, particularly in point. The question there arose merely on demurrer to the complaint, and the decision is really made to rest upon the fact that the complaint alleged that the person who employed the plaintiff to assist was at the time the superintendent having charge and control of the work.

There was no error in excluding the evidence offered by plaintiff, and consequently the order appealed from must be affirmed.

END OF CASES IN BOOK XVI

RÉSUMÉ OF THE DECISIONS PUBLISHED IN THIS BOOK.

SHOWING the Changes, Progress, and Development of the Law during the First Quarter of the Judicial Year Beginning with Oct. 1, 1892, Classified as Follows:

- I. PUBLIC, OFFICIAL, AND STATUTORY MATTERS.
- II. CONTRACTUAL AND COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.
- III. CORPORATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS.
- IV. DOMESTIC RELATIONS; PERSONAL CAPACITY.
- V. FIDUCIARIES AND REPRESENTATIVES.
- VI. TORTS; NEGLIGENCE; INJURIES; NUISANCES.
- VII. PROPERTY RIGHTS; LIENS; GIFTS; WILLS.
- VIII. CIVIL REMEDIES; RULES AND PRINCIPLES.
- IX. CRIMINAL LAW AND PRACTICE.

I. PUBLIC, OFFICIAL, AND STATUTORY MATTERS.

A statute prohibiting those engaging in mining or manufacturing to keep or be interested in any truck store, shop, or scheme for furnishing supplies and merchandise to employes is declared unconstitutional in Illinois, following decisions in West Virginia and Pennsylvania as against one in Indiana. (Ill.) 492.

The rule as to self-executing constitutional provisions is applied in a Minnesota case to a provision making stockholders liable to the amount of their stock. (Minn.) 281.

The power of the Legislature over an infant's lands extends to authorizing them to be taken for railroad uses by agreement with the infant's guardian. (Miss.) 251.

The constitutional right of women to serve as jurors is a question raised but not decided in a Wyoming case which decides on this point that their exclusion on the trial of a man for crime does not violate his constitutional rights. (Wyo.) 710.

The exercise of the police power in respect to the condition of human habitation extends to requiring water-closets therein. (Mass.) 400.

Contempt.

The constitutional provision as to the division of the powers of government into three departments is involved in a case which decided that the power to punish for contempt being judicial cannot be conferred upon a state board of tax commissioners. (Ind.) 108.

Civil Rights.

Discrimination against colored persons in theaters is not unlawful in the absence of any civil-rights statute. (Mo.) 558.

Aliens; Treaties.

The effect of a treaty guaranty to aliens in connection with that of the 14th Amendment for equal protection is held to make void a covenant not to rent property to a Chinaman. (U. S. C. Cal.) 277.

Ex Post Facto Laws.

A statute declaring a person an habitual criminal on the third conviction of a felony is held not to be an ex post facto law. (Mass.) 256.

Elections.

The recent Ballot Reform Laws continue to furnish important cases. The "Australian Ballot Law" of Missouri is construed by a decision involving several interesting questions as to the validity of an election. (Mo.) 754.

The requirement of the Louisiana statute that "all the names of persons voted for shall be printed on one ticket" is held to be mandatory and a vote by writing another name in place of a printed name, which is erased, is invalid. (La. Ann.) 278.

But in New York, where the ballot reform statute allows the voter to write or paste the name of any person for whom he desires to vote on his ballot, he may vote for one who has had no nomination. (N. Y.) 606.

Where pasters are allowed by the Ballot Reform Law, the fact that at a town election pasters printed at private expense for candidates of an independent meeting or caucus had also the names of excise commissioners who could not be legally voted for on that ticket, does not constitute a marking for identification which will justify a refusal to count the ballot and declare it in the result where all those printed for the candidates of such caucus were alike. (N. Y.) 606.

A statutory provision that a ballot having a mark, sign, signature, or device not permitted by the statute shall be void, is constitutional, and the same is true of a clause allowing official ballots only to those parties who cast a certain percentage of the votes at the last election. (N. J.) 769.

Gerrymanders.

Legislative apportionments attacked as gerrymanders have received unusual attention during the current year. Closely following the Wisconsin case (15 L. R. A. 561), which held the Apportionment Act of that state unconstitutional, came Michigan decisions to the same effect. (Mich.) 402, 432.

On the other hand, the New York Act which was sharply attacked was held constitutional. (N. Y.) 836.

The division of a county in the apportionment of election districts is held to be constitutional in Michigan. (Mich.) 432.

Presidential Electors.

The constitutionality of an Act providing for the election of presidential electors by congressional districts is upheld by a Michigan decision as being clearly within the constitutional provision that the state should appoint them in such manner as the Legislature may direct. (Mich.) 475.

Officers.

An express provision of statute that on neglect to take the oath of office within the time prescribed by law the office shall become vacant does not create a vacancy ipso facto by such neglect, but the oath may be taken thereafter if it is done before any action is taken to declare the office vacant. (Wash.) 140.

The question whether the appointment to office is an executive function is discussed, but not decided, in an Oregon case, which holds that the appointment of bridge committeemen who are mere agents of a city may be by statute given to the judges of a court. (Or.) 787.

The effect of the removal of a city councilman from his ward on his right to the office, which is regarded by an Indiana court as one of first impression, is held not ipso facto to deprive him of his office under the Indiana Constitution and statutes. (Ind.) 688.

The right of an officer appointed for a definite term, and subject to removal for specified cause, to have notice and opportunity to defend in case of removal, is discussed, with a review of authorities, in a South Dakota case. (S. Dak.) 413.

The validity of the removal of fire and police commissioners is involved in a Nebraska case which extensively discusses the law as to removal of officers. (Neb.) 791.

The power of a board of commissioners to bind their successors in office is denied in a case relating to the designation of newspapers for official publication and printing. (Kan.) 257.

But an important Indiana case upholds a contract by a city for gas for a term of twenty-five years. (Ind.) 435.

County Legislation.

The power of the Legislature to delegate to boards of supervisors the right to allow a county officer additional pay for deputies, thereby changing a general law, is denied under a constitutional provision that the Legislature shall regulate the compensation of such officers by general laws. (Cal.) 161.

Municipalities.

The control of the Legislature over municipalities extends to the transfer of the control of a cemetery from a town to a city. (Wis.) 695.

The validity of amendments to a city charter is discussed in a Washington case, in which they are upheld against certain irregularities in submitting them. (Wash.) 214.

The question of estoppel as to the assertion of governmental power is presented to a limited extent in an Illinois case, which holds a village estopped to claim certain territory. (Ill.) 178.

A borough ordinance which practically prohibits peddling by requiring a higher license fee, but exempts residents of the borough, is void as an attempted trade regulation. (Pa.) 49.

16 L. R. A.

Insolvency.

A judgment held by a resident of the state was held not to be affected by his debtor's discharge in insolvency where the judgment was obtained in another state upon a contract of that state. (Cal.) 159.

Fisheries.

A statutory regulation of fisheries, prohibiting the use of a seine during a certain period of the year, is not unconstitutional as applied to a small lake wholly upon the lands of a private owner and connected with an unnavigable river only during the time of high water. (Ill.) 684.

Highways.

The subjection of the rights of the owners of the soil of streets in municipal corporations to public uses is held in a Pennsylvania case to extend to the laying of a drain therein by a private person with the permission of the municipal authorities but without consent of the owners of the soil. (Pa.) 715.

The right to run traction engines over a bridge is presented in an Indiana case which holds that it is proper when that is a usual and ordinary use of the bridge. (Ind.) 228.

The regular use of a steam traction engine for drawing heavy loads of stone on a common highway from a quarry, which amounts to serious hindrance to travel and endangers the safety of bridges, is an indictable nuisance. (Pa.) 148.

The power of a city council to lay a street railway in a street where only eight feet seven and one-half inches will be left for teams on each side of a street-car is upheld in Michigan against the vigorous dissent of two judges. (Mich.) 752.

The doctrine that the discontinuance of a highway does not entitle a landowner to any damages unless his access to the system of public streets is substantially impaired, is reiterated by a Massachusetts decision. (Mass.) 591.

Service of Notice.

Service of a notice which a statute requires to be made upon a person is held to mean a personal service and not merely the leaving of a notice with a member of his family. (N. J.) 200.

Lack of notice to the owner of premises of proceedings to lay out a highway over them is not fatal to jurisdiction if a tenant or other occupant was made a party and duly notified. (Ind.) 186.

Taxation.

The taxation of a mortgagee's interest in mortgaged land is held in a very exhaustive case constitutional, even as to mortgages in which the mortgagor had agreed to pay all taxes. (Mich.) 59.

The situs of negotiable notes for the purpose of taxation is held in an Alabama case extensively reviewing the authorities to be the domicile of the owner, and such notes are held to be personal property. (Ala.) 739.

A debt owing to a nonresident of a state is not liable to be taxed by the state. (La.) 56.

The appointment of a local board of directors by a foreign corporation to conduct its business within a state under direction of the head office, does not localize its business so as to make the corporation taxable therein any more than if its business was conducted by any other agency. Id.

The rights and franchises of a water company are held proper subjects for taxation under a statute requiring all property not exempted to be taxed. (Wis.) 581.

Lots on which are situated the pumping station and works of a water company are held not to be taxable apart from the water mains, franchises, and other property constituting its plant. Id.

The water mains and electric wires of a water and light company are held in Illinois, in contrast with the Iowa case in 15 L. R. A. 296, to be personal property for the purposes of taxation. (Ill.) 505.

The constitutional equality and uniformity in respect to occupation taxes is held violated by an ordinance which is fair on its face, but which there is no attempt to enforce except against a distinct class of the persons affected by it. (Tex.) 608.

A statute requiring a fee of $1 per mile of track to be paid into the state treasury by a railway company creates a tax and violates a constitutional provision that property shall be taxed according to its true value. (Ohio) 880.

General provisions in a statute for local assessment upon real property do not include public schoolhouses, although a constitutional exemption of such property from taxation is not applicable to such assessments. (Ark.) 418.

II. CONTRACTUAL AND COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

Novation.

The doctrine that a purchaser who agrees to pay all or a part of the consideration to his vendor's creditor thereby becomes the principal debtor and the other only a surety, is applied to effect a release of the vendor by extension of time without his consent for payment by the purchaser. (Kan.) 85.

Reasonableness.

An agreement that arbitrators may fix their own compensation, is subject to the implied condition that the allowance made to themselves shall not be unreasonable, and that its reasonableness may be determined by the court. (N. C.) 514.

Notice to Stop.

The right to complete a contract after notice to stop is denied, in a case which holds that the only remedy is for damages for the breach of the contract. (N. Dak.) 655.

Death of Party.

The right to recover for partial performance of a contract where full performance is defeated by the death of a party, is upheld in a Rhode Island case in which the personal services of the party dying were contemplated by the contract. (R. I.) 858.

Monopoly.

A monopoly in the business of furnishing electric lights under the Massachusetts statutes forbidding any other company to "lay or erect" electric wires in streets without consent of the authorities in a town where a company is already engaged in the business, is held effectual against any attempted evasion by the ownership of the wires where they cross the streets, by the customers of the company. (Mass.) 398.

Courts.

The power of the courts to review a legislative apportionment of election districts, and declare it unconstitutional if the Legislature has not exercised a fair and honest discretion so as to preserve the equality of representation as near as may be, is affirmed by the Supreme Court of Michigan. (Mich.) 402.

The exclusive jurisdiction first acquired by a state or Federal court does not prevent a state court from taking jurisdiction of a creditor's bill to attack a mortgage on which foreclosure has been begun in a Federal court. (Ala.) 564.

16 L. R. A.

The effect on the jurisdiction of an appellate court of issuing a remittitur is discussed extensively in a Florida case which holds that it is not lost where the decision was due to a mistake in the transcript. (Fla.) 818.

Eminent Domain.

The right of eminent domain in favor of a manufacturing company for the condemnation of a right of way of a railroad for its own use, merely to connect its establishment with another railroad, is held constitutional under the South Carolina Constitution permitting a right of way to be taken by persons or corporations for works of internal improvement, but declaring that private property shall not be taken "for public use or for the use of corporations or for private use" without consent of the owner or just compensation. (S. C.) 586.

Condemnation of land for a private road to be laid out upon the application of a particular individual and paid for and kept in repair by him is for a public purpose where the road is in fact for public use by all who desire to use it. (Idaho) 81.

A private cemetery belonging to a religious corporation may be taken in condemnation proceedings for a public park under N. Y. Laws 1887, chap. 320, giving power to condemn "any and all lands" within a district which includes the cemetery. (N. Y.) 180.

Whether or not a railway operated by a steam motor in a public street is an additional burden is a question not settled in a Michigan case, which holds that the owner of the fee is entitled to compensation before the railway can be made by cutting and filling, using ties and T-rails, and leaving a ditch on each side so as to practically block up that portion of the highway for ordinary uses. (Mich.) 371.

The exception to the rule that compensation for land condemned should be according to its value at the time of condemnation, which has been made in cases where the land had been actually appropriated and applied to the purposes for which it was desired prior to the proceedings for condemnation, is illustrated in a Utah case where a schoolhouse had been built on land of an unknown owner. (Utah) 805.

Impairing Obligation of Contract.

The constitutional provision against impairing the obligation of contracts is violated as to a purchaser at a tax sale by a statute extending the time for redemption. (Fla.) 808.

Bank Transactions.

The effect of a third person's signing a certificate of deposit to prevent a depositor from withdrawing his money from the bank is discussed in a Vermont case which holds that there is a good consideration for the agreement and that the addition of the word "surety" to the signature does not prevent the signer from being held as a maker. (Vt.) 664.

A strong illustration of the rule that a deposit is not special unless it is kept separate from the funds of the bank is shown in a case where a certificate of deposit was given stating that it was made to indemnify the banker for liability as surety on a bond. (Ill.) 516.

The effect of obtaining the certification of a check is sharply presented in a Massachusetts case which holds that it releases the drawer if obtained by the payee or holder, but not if the drawer obtains it in his own behalf before he delivers the check. (Mass.) 510.

Bills and Notes.

The liability of the indorser of a note for annual interest before maturity of the principal is held in a Vermont case to be dependent on the prior demand of the maker, but against the opinion of the chief justice to the effect that the indorser is not liable at all until the principal is due. (Vt.) 295.

The distinction between a sale and a discount of negotiable paper is discussed in a Kentucky case. (Ky.) 223.

Even in the hands of a bona fide holder for value a note given by a married woman as surety for her husband is void under the Indiana statutes. (Ind.) 45.

The rule as to liability on a note signed by a corporation and its officer is clearly stated in a New Jersey case holding that the corporation only is liable if its name is signed to the note followed by that of its president without anything in the body of the note to show the maker. (N. J.) 143.

Oral Partnership in Land.

An oral agreement of partnership in the profits of buying and selling real property is not within the Statute of Frauds. (Cal.) 745.

Bailment of Merchant.

The liability of a storekeeper for the safety of a customer's property given into his custody while trying on garments, which is involved in a New York case in 10 L. R. A. 431, is again considered in a Pennsylvania case which makes ordinary care the measure of the duty. (Pa.) 451.

Public Inn.

The fact that a hotel stands within enclosed grounds does not prevent it from being a public inn. (Cal.) 188.

Tradename.

The right of brothers named Fish to use the name Fish Bros. and the picture of a fish on wagons which are manufactured is upheld in a Wisconsin case, although the name and picture had been previously used by them in a business which had been transferred with all its goodwill and trademarks to a corporation which has also the right to the use of such name and picture. (Wis.) 458.

Champerty.

The doctrine of champerty is reviewed in an Ohio case which holds a contract by an attorney 16 L. R. A.

to advance the costs and expenses of collecting a judgment in consideration of one half the proceeds if successful and of the repayment of one half the outlay in case of failure, is not unlawful. (Ohio) 723.

Illegal Purpose.

The effect of an illegal purpose on a contract is involved in a case which holds that a carrier is not excused for breach of its contract for transportation of cattle by a certain day by the fact that the shipper's purpose was to reach a Sunday market. (N. C.) 834.

License for Business.

The rule that a contract in the exercise of a business by one who has failed to obtain the license therefor which the law requires is invalid is applied to the case of a real-estate broker for whom a license is required by ordinance. (Minn.) 423.

Implied Covenants.

An implied agreement that a house is fit for habitation is held to exist in the case of a lease of a completely furnished summer residence at a watering place for the season, and the fact that it was infested with bugs was held a sufficient reason for refusing to occupy it. (Mass.) 51.

But a New York case decides that no such covenant is implied on the lease of an unfurnished dwelling. (N. Y.) 236.

Insurance.

A policy of insurance for $200 on a storehouse, and $3,800 on goods therein, is so far severable that a forfeiture as to the building by breach of a condition as to the title of the land will not defeat the insurance on the goods. (Ohio) 174.

What constitutes a single building or risk for purpose of insurance is a question discussed in an Alabama case, which holds that there was but one risk where partitions extended above the roof and divided a building into stores or sections which were connected by large doors through the partitions and were used under one management for the same purpose. (Ala.) 291.

The fatal effect of a false warranty by an applicant for life insurance is not avoided by his belief that it was true and the knowledge of the agent of the insurer that it was false. (N. Y.) 83.

The constructive loss of a foot within the meaning of an insurance policy is held not to be caused where the foot was injured, and could not be used unless the person wore a plaster jacket to prevent an injury in another part of the body from affecting the use of the foot. (Pa.) 446.

Carrier's Contracts.

On an extensive review of the authorities the Texas Supreme Court holds it to be established law that an initial carrier may by contract protect itself against liability for loss on a connecting line. (Tex.) 39.

The right of a passenger to pay fare after the train has stopped to eject him for refusal to pay it is held dependent on the question whether his refusal was or was not wrongful. (Ga.) 53.

The right to eject a passenger for failure to pay fare for the distance already ridden, although he offers to pay for his future ride, is extended by an Alabama decision to a case in which the passenger on being notified that he must pay fare for the whole distance or be put off at the next station has procured a ticket at that station for the remainder of the trip and tenders it to the conductor. (Ala.) 55.

(CORPORATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS—DOMESTIC RELATIONS; PERSONAL CAPACITY.)

A ticket good for a continuous passage only will not give a passenger the right to break his journey and finish it upon the train which he ought to have taken in the first place where he has voluntarily taken passage on another train which he must be held to have known would not take him to his destination. (Ark.) 818.

The right of a passenger to complete his journey commenced in good time where he is delayed by a wreck on one road so long that the time limited by his ticket expires before he reaches the last of the connecting roads, is denied in a Texas case where he had a coupon ticket which expressly limited the liability of the first carrier to its own line and made it agent simply for the other carriers. (Tex.) 471.

The illegibility of the date on a ticket which the passenger receives in that condition does not impose on him the duty of getting the indorsement of a ticket receiver as to its validity because it is questioned by the gateman, and a rule of the railroad company making such a requirement is unreasonable because it would subject a passenger to great inconvenience and might cause him to lose his train. (Md.) 449.

Transfer Tickets.

A decision on the subject of street railway transfer tickets holds that such a ticket designating the route so generally as to be applicable to several lines entitles the passenger to ride over either of them. (Minn.) 347.

The validity of a restriction that such a ticket must be used within fifteen minutes after it is punched on the first line is upheld in a Michigan case in the absence of any charter, ordinance, or contract to the contrary. (Mich.) 345.

III. CORPORATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS.

See also, as to tax on corporation, supra, I.

A conflict between corporations as to the right to a certain name appears in an Illinois case in which a proposed corporation obtained a license under a certain name after another corporation had called a meeting to vote on the question of adopting that name. (Ill.) 429.

The distinction between a joint-stock company and a corporation is discussed at much length in a New York case, which holds that the inherent difference, although obscured by the statutes of the state, remains unimpaired, and that the capital of a joint-stock company is not taxable as that of a stock corporation. (N. Y.) 183.

The retaliatory provisions of the Ohio statute as to foreign insurance companies are confined by an Ohio decision to cases within the letter of the statute, and are held not applicable to a foreign insurance company where no Ohio company has been formed to do the same kind of business. (Ohio) 611.

The right of directors to compensation does not exist unless provided for or expressly sanctioned by the charter, except for services outside their duties as directors rendered under an express contract. (Colo.) 426.

Shares of increased stock apportioned pro rata among stockholders to represent the increased value of property resulting from development of the business constitutes capital and not dividends or income. (Conn.) 461.

A right of action for damages because of a wrongful expulsion from a mutual benefit society is denied in a Rhode Island case on the ground among others that such action implies a waiver of the illegality of the expulsion which in effect waives the whole cause of action. Also that there is no fund for payment of damages and no rule for measuring them. (R. I.) 392.

IV. DOMESTIC RELATIONS; PERSONAL CAPACITY.

A common-law marriage is held to be unlawful, under the Washington statute, which requires a license. (Wash.) 699.

The right of a married woman to form a partnership in a mercantile business with her husband is denied in Arkansas, although she has the right to a separate estate and to carry on any trade or business. (Ark.) 526.

Likewise in Washington, although the statutes have abolished the civil disabilities of a wife giving her full control of her property and power to make contracts and incur liabilities as if unmarried. (Wash.) 530.

Divorce.

The legal fiction that a wife's domicile follows that of her husband is held sufficient to give jurisdiction of a suit for divorce to a court in a state where the husband resides, although the wife has always resided in another state in which she deserted him. (Mass.) 497.

Injury to bodily health is not necessary in 16 L. R. A.

order to make the infliction of mental suffering constitute extreme cruelty under the California Code, which defines it as the infliction of grievous bodily injury or grievous mental suffering. (Cal.) 660.

The repeal of a statute under which a cause of action for divorce arose was held not fatal to the action where a new statute was passed at the same time which authorized a divorce on the same grounds. (Utah) 482.

The same case holds that a general Statute of Limitations does not apply to an action for divorce.

The right of a wife to sue in equity for maintenance without asking for a divorce, where she has been deserted by her husband and left destitute, is maintained by the Supreme Court of Montana after a full discussion of principles and authorities. (Mont.) 94.

Infants.

The day on which a person becomes of age

(FIDUCIARIES AND REPRESENTATIVES—TORTS; NEGLIGENCE; INJURIES; NUISANCES.)

is the day before his twenty-first birthday. (Tex.) 542.

The marriage of a minor is held valid in Massachusetts although he was married in another state to which he went solely to evade a statute requiring his father's consent, and he is entitled to his own wages so far as necessary for his own support and that of his wife and children. (Mass.) 578.

The validity of an attorney's stipulation as against infant clients is denied where it is not shown to be for the infants' interest. (Minn.) 507.

The rule that the court will seek the best interest of an infant in awarding its custody is applied in an Iowa case which denies to a father the custody of his child which he has left to the care of others without properly providing for it. (Iowa) 681.

The nature of proceedings to commit infants to a reform school is discussed in a Minnesota case which decides that they are not criminal proceedings. (Minn.) 691.

Incompetency.

A belief in spiritual manifestations is held not necessarily evidence of incapacity to convey real estate. (Iowa) 677.

V. FIDUCIARIES AND REPRESENTATIVES.

The vindication of the honor of his intestate is not a purpose for which an administrator can use funds of the estate by employing counsel to aid in prosecuting for murder one who killed the intestate and attacks his honor by matters which he alleges in justification of the crime. (S. C.) 748.

The power of a court to reject an executor appointed by will is reviewed in a Connecticut case, which decides that such power exists only when specially provided by law, and that a mere lack of honest integrity and business experience does not make one "incapable to accept the trust" within the meaning of a statute. (Conn.) 538.

The power of a foreign administrator to sue in his own name on a judgment recovered by him in another state is sustained in a Missouri case. (Mo.) 410.

A notary who is the trustee in a deed of trust cannot take an acknowledgment thereto. (Tex.) 719.

The doctrine that a receiver of a corporation is not bound by a contract of the corporation, applies to a case in which freight charges had been paid in advance for the whole distance under a contract which gave the shipper the right to take off the freight at an intermediate point where it was at the time of the receiver's appointment; and the receiver is not bound either to complete the transportation of the freight or repay any part of the charges prepaid. (U. S. C. C. Ga.) 90.

See also, as to receiver's certificates, infra, VI.

VI. TORTS; NEGLIGENCE; INJURIES; NUISANCES.

Libel.

The custom of a newspaper to publish spicy gossip without inquiry as to its truth, when it has appeared in the columns of another paper, shows such recklessness as to justify exemplary damages in an action for libel. (U. S. C. C. App. 2d C.) 803.

The malicious filing of a mechanic's lien is held in a Virginia case to constitute a libel where it is done without authority of law and results in damages. (Va.) 625.

Fireworks.

A voluntary spectator of a display of fireworks in a highway must be held to assume the risk of injury from accident without negligence, although the show is unauthorized. (Mass.) 395.

Lateral Support.

An exception to the rule that the owner of a building must himself guard against the danger of excavating near it is presented by a Missouri decision that a promise by the party who is excavating to do the work in sections will make him liable for changing his plan without notice to the owner of the building and causing its fall by digging a long and deep trench. (Mo.) 380.

Imputed Negligence.

The negligence of the owner of a carriage in driving his team is not imputable to one riding with him at his invitation and who has no authority over him. (U. S. C. C. App. 8th C.) 600.

10 L. R. A.

Licensees or Trespassers.

The rule as to the assumption of risk by trespassers or licensees is held applicable to a neighbor who is injured by a defective stairway while in search of a child. (N. Y.) 640.

So the risk of defects in a tenement building such as unsafe outside steps is assumed by one who goes there to attend the wake of a relative of a tenant in the building, at least where there is nothing to show that he had an invitation or was related to any of the occupants. (Mass.) 557.

The assumption of risks by a licensee is illustrated also by a decision denying a recovery for the death of a telegraph operator who was killed by the derailing of a train, while making a friendly call on the operator. (W. Va.) 271.

Electric Wires.

The failure of an electric-light company to have the splices on its wires perfectly insulated as required by ordinance is negligence for which it is liable for the death of a person who comes in contact with a wire while attempting to repair a roof over which the wire is stretched if he was not negligent. He had a right to assume that the wires were properly insulated and was required to allow only for patent defects in the insulation. (La.) 43.

Injury by electricity generated in a telephone wire negligently allowed to hang across a highway where a traveler touches it is held chargeable to the telephone company on the ground that the wire furnished the means by which the injury was done. (U. S. C. C. App. 5th C.) 545.

The act of a traveler in stooping to pick up and throw out of the way a telephone wire hanging so as to endanger travelers is held not to be such negligence as a matter of law that he cannot recover for injury thereby sustained on the ground that the wire charged with electricity was a defect in the street. (Mass.) 605.

Municipal Liability.

The rule that a city is not liable for negligence of members of its fire department is affirmed in a Nebraska case where a child was killed by the negligent or reckless driving of a ladder wagon or truck in a street merely to exercise the team. (Neb.) 849.

Negligence of Carrier or Passenger.

The obligation of a railroad company to a person who has negligently stepped or fallen from a train running at high speed and lies helpless on the track requires it to stop the train and remove him from the track or notify a train which is to follow, where either precaution was possible and would have prevented him from being killed by the second train. (Ohio) 674.

The duty of a carrier to keep its platforms and approaches thereto in safe condition is illustrated in an Oregon case in which a carrier was held liable for the dangerous condition of an elevated walk to a boat landing which was used only for its purposes, although upon land dedicated for a street. (Or.) 598.

The lack of lights was not excused by the fact that the boat did not start until morning where passengers were provided with sleeping accommodations on the boat. Id.

The duty to allow persons to get safely on board before starting a street-car is affirmed in a Minnesota case. (Minn.) 879.

The negligence of a passenger in putting his hand out of the window, although but a few inches, is held fatal to his right to recover from the carrier. (Va.) 91.

Riding in an express car in violation of a rule of the carrier is held in a Florida case extensively reviewing the authority to defeat a right to recover for injuries caused by the carrier's negligence if they would not have been received had the passenger remained in the passenger car. (Fla.) 681.

The frequency of death or injuries caused by electric cars gives interest to a Massachusetts decision that no liability exists for the death of a person who steps off from a street-car while it is slowing up directly in front of an electric car running fifteen miles an hour where it was lighted and its gong sounding. (Mass.) 490.

Assault on Passenger.

The liability of a railroad company for an unprovoked assault on a passenger by a fellow passenger where the conductor was warned of it and could have prevented it with the assistance of employes and willing passengers, is enforced in a Mississippi case following an earlier decision with reluctance. (Miss.) 627.

The liability of a carrier for false imprisonment by acts of its ticket agent in restraining a person whom he charges with having passed counterfeit money upon him is upheld in a New York case, distinguishing the recent case of Mulligan v. New York & R. P. R. Co. (N. 16 L. R. A.

Y.) 14 L. R. A. 791, in which it was held that the agent was acting out of the scope of his employment because he took the bill believing it to be counterfeit merely for the purpose of detecting a supposed criminal. (N. Y.) 136.

Proximate Cause.

A good illustration of the law as to proximate cause is furnished by a Pennsylvania case in which it was held that the lack of a barrier along a steep bank beside a highway is not the proximate cause of an injury to an omnibus passenger where the omnibus went over the bank during the struggles of the horse to get on his feet after falling in the middle of the street. (Pa.) 106.

The proximate cause of nervous convulsions caused by the fright of a passenger resulting from a carrier's negligence is the negligence causing the fright. (Minn.) 203.

Previous Disease of Injured Person.

The effect of a previous disease of a person injured on liability for causing the injuries is involved in two cases which hold that liability for negligently causing the injury is not thereby defeated. (Minn.) 203; (Tenn.) 268.

Attempt to Escape Danger.

To allow recovery for injury in attempting to escape apprehended danger there must be a reasonable cause of alarm. (Ark.) 787.

Injury to Servant.

The liability of a railroad company for negligently loading a car with lumber or iron projecting over the end is discussed at length in a Florida case, which holds such loading and acceptance of the car in that condition is negligence, but that a brakeman assumes the risk of coupling such cars where they are frequently taken by his train. (Fla.) 837.

On the other hand, for such negligent loading the company was held liable in Michigan although it had provided a competent inspector of cars and the car was received, after it was loaded, from another road. (Mich.) 342.

The theory that an employé is to be regarded as standing in place of the master in respect to the performance of a duty with which the master is chargeable, is well illustrated in the case of a section foreman who failed to give notice of a snow-slide across a railroad track. (Or.) 519.

A telltale to warn brakemen of a bridge, but which is unsafe for brakemen on some of the cars of unusual height, is a defective appliance for which a railroad company is liable, although it is safe for brakemen on ordinary cars, and the risk of injury from it is not assumed by a brakeman. (R. I.) 648.

The conductor of a train who negligently leaves it standing where it is struck by another is held not a fellow servant of a brakeman on the other train who is injured in the collision. (W. Va.) 883.

A master is liable for an injury to a servant of which the proximate cause is the resultant of the combined negligence of the master himself and of a fellow servant. (N. M.) 819.

Volunteer.

The rule that a volunteer assumes all the risks of work which he engages in is applied to a by-stander who gets on a construction train to assist in switching during the temporary absence of the conductor, although requested to do so by the head brakeman. (Minn.) 861.

Railroad Signals.

The liability of a railroad company for failure to give the statutory signals at a railroad crossing is held by a Michigan case to extend to injuries received by a person crossing the track at a distance from the crossing, where he was using a private crossing by license and invitation of the company and was relying upon the performance of the duty to give such signals. (Mich.) 119.

Highway Injuries.

For injuries caused by defects in a highway bridge which a railroad company is bound to maintain over its tracks, the railroad company cannot escape liability on the ground that an action would lie for the injury against the township. (Pa.) 554.

See, as to nuisance in highway, supra, I.

VII. PROPERTY RIGHTS; LIENS; GIFTS; WILLS.

Berries.

Blackberries while growing on the bushes are not subject to levy on execution as personal property. (Minn.) 103.

Ice.

The right to ice on a public pond by making a prior appropriation is discussed at length in a Maine case. (Me.) 774.

Dog.

A dog is held by a Utah decision to be property which cannot be taken without due process of law, but an ordinance allowing dogs to be killed by any person unless registered and collared is held to be a valid police regulation. (Utah) 689.

Fixture.

A parol gift or reservation of a barn which constitutes a fixture is ineffectual. (N. Y.) 805.

Dedication.

The dedication of a park is held to be effected by recording a map of a tract on which a space is marked "park" and selling lots facing thereon according to the map. (Cal.) 145.

Flats.

By analogy to the rule as to boundary on fresh-water streams flats in the bed of a channel into which the tide flows, but from which it wholly ebbs at low water, where they are between separate channels of a fresh-water stream, are held in a very interesting Massachusetts decision to be divided between riparian owners, to whom they are given by the Colonial Ordinance of 1641-47, by straight lines from the points where the division lines of the owners end on the bank drawn to and at right angles with the center line of the tidal channel at the ordinary stage of the waters. (Mass.) 353.

Gas.

The right to explode nitroglycerine in a gas well to increase the flow is upheld in an Indiana case although gas is thereby drawn from the premises of adjoining owners. (Ind.) 443.

Easement.

The right to fence a right of way is not given by a reservation in a deed of "a reasonable right of way across the land." (Wis.) 512.

Tenancy.

A landlord can forcibly eject a tenant without legal possession after the expiration of the tenancy although he holds possession in good faith and under a color and reasonable claim of right. (R. I.) 798.

Cotenancy and Partition.

A stipulation between cotenants to prevent them, their heirs, or assigns from ever beginning proceedings for partition without written consent of all the parties, is unreasonable and void. (Mo.) 220.

One tenant in common has no lien against his cotenant's interest in the property for rents in excess of his share collected and retained by such cotenant before partition of the land. (Md.) 547.

A parol partition is insufficient as a basis for ejectment, and does not even constitute color of title for the purpose of adverse possession as against the cotenant. (Ill.) 826.

Dower.

The effect of a sale in partition to bar an inchoate right of dower of the wife of a tenant in common is thoroughly discussed in a South Carolina case holding it to be so barred although the husband had previously sold his undivided share. (S. C.) 776.

The doctrine that a widow is not dowable of an interest in mines unopened at her husband's death is repudiated by the Supreme Court of Michigan, which says the question has not previously been determined in this country. (Mich.) 247.

A release of a wife's inchoate right of dower may be made by her husband under a power of attorney given him under N. Y. Act 1878, chap. 800. (N. Y.) 209.

Surety in Judgment.

The right of a judgment debtor, who is in fact only a surety of a codefendant, to take an assignment is held not dependent on the fact of a prior adjudication of such suretyship or an indication thereof on the face of the judgment. (Ind.) 115.

Liens; Priority.

The architect of a building who superintends its erection is entitled to a lien for "work or labor" upon the building. (Ala.) 600.

Subcontractors' liens relate back, in Minnesota, to the commencement of the work as against an intervening mortgage where a building is constructed under one entire contract between the owner and the original contractor. (Minn.) 335.

A mechanics' lien is held, in Minnesota, to be inferior to a prior unrecorded mortgage in the absence of any statute to the contrary or of any estoppel. (Minn.) 238.

The superiority of an execution lien over a prior unrecorded conveyance is fixed at the time of levy if this is made without notice of the conveyance, and the title of a purchaser under the execution does not depend on his being a purchaser for value. (Tex.) 663.

Receiver's Certificate.

The rule that a receiver's certificates may be made a lien superior to a prior mortgage, which has been applied in the case of railroad mortgages, is denied application in a circuit court of the United States to the property of a mere private corporation such as a coal mining company. (U. S. C. C. Ill.) 603.

Power.

The rule that a power of appointment is not executed by a will which does not refer to it is enforced in a Rhode Island case where the power was created by a Rhode Island will by express statute in England, where the donee executed his will, and in New York, where he was domiciled, the contrary rule is established. (R. I.) 367.

Wills.

The construction of a conveyance as a will rather than as a deed is illustrated in an Alabama case. (Ala.) 576.

A discussion of conditions in wills in restraint of marriage is given in a Maine case, which holds that a devise to an unmarried daughter of a life estate in the testator's homestead unless she shall marry, does not make an illegal condition in restraint of marriage. (Me.) 707.

VIII. CIVIL REMEDIES; RULES AND PRINCIPLES.

Several interesting questions relating to estoppels are involved in an Alabama case, which holds that an administrator may be estopped to set up his individual title to land sold by him under order of the court without giving notice of his own title, and that such an estoppel binds purchasers in good faith and for value at a judicial sale of his property. (Ala.) 813.

A right of action to recover back payments made under duress may exist for a payment of a mechanics' lien filed on an unfounded claim, where it is made to obtain a loan to meet pressing obligations which the owner had no other means of meeting. (Minn.) 376.

The inability to specifically perform a contract where there is no other ground for equitable interference is held fatal to jurisdiction in equity of a suit for specific performance or damages. (Wash.) 614.

Mistake.

A mistake as to the extent of one's right under the law is held not a mistake of law such as would defeat relief. Id.

Alteration of Instruments.

The fraudulent alteration of a promissory note discharges a mortgage by which it is secured. (Neb.) 468.

Lost Note.

That an action at law on a lost negotiable note cannot be maintained is decided by the supreme court of the District of Columbia. (D. C.) 205.

Injunction against False Statements.

The right to an injunction against false and malicious charges of infringement and threats to sue plaintiff's prospective customers if they use his device, is denied by a Missouri decision in accordance with what is therein declared to be the better authority. (Mo.) 248.

On the other hand such right is upheld in a Michigan case so far as to restrain the use of a decree obtained by fraud in a patent case to threaten alleged infringers. (Mich.) 721.

Question of Law or Fact.

The question of negligence as being one of law or fact receives a very clear and able discussion in an opinion of the Missouri supreme court holding that it is for the jury where the facts or the inferences drawn therefrom are in any degree doubtful. (Mo.) 189.

Judgments.

The invalidity of a personal judgment rendered on constructive service merely, applies 16 L. R. A.

to a judgment in a bastardy proceeding. (Ind.) 281.

In line with the decision as to personal judgments on service by publication is one that a judgment quieting title taken by default on such service will be set aside if plaintiff obtained it upon a knowingly false cause of action. (Cal.) 361.

A judgment in favor of a minor procured by his father as next friend is held a bar to an action by the father personally for a portion of the same cause of action. (Mich.) 154.

Damages.

The effect of a premature birth of a child on damages for a personal injury is involved in a Washington case in which it is held that this may be considered but that it does not alone establish a right to substantial damages. (Wash.) 808.

Evidence.

On the question of expert testimony as to negligence, it is held that opinions of experts are not admissible to show whether or not a certain speed of a railroad train is dangerous. (Or.) 519.

The rule that parol evidence cannot be admitted to change a will is applied in Illinois to prevent showing that a devise of land in the northwest quarter of a section was by mistake for land in the southwest quarter. (Ill.) 321.

Evidence that fires were repeatedly set by defendant's engines is admissible in an action for a fire set by engines which cannot be identified. (Pa.) 299.

A limitation on the rule allowing exclamations of pain to be proved is made where the witness is a physician called for the express purpose of making him a witness. (Mich.) 437.

The presumption of due care by a person found killed at a railroad crossing is recognized in a Minnesota case. (Minn.) 261.

The rule as to presumption of negligence of a carrier when a passenger is injured does not apply in case of injury to a passenger on a street-car by collision with a wagon. (Wash.) 808.

The criminal-law rule as to proof beyond a reasonable doubt is held by a New York case not applicable to evidence of mistake as a ground for reforming a written contract. (N. Y.) 561.

Limitation of Actions.

The right to redeem land from a mortgage or absolute deed given as security is governed by the law of the place where the land lies, and a rule there prevailing that such right is barred when an action on the debt is barred must control, although in another state where the parties reside and the contract was made the bar of the debt would not defeat the right to redeem. (Cal.) 646.

A clause limiting a suit on an accident policy to one year from the time of the "accidental injury" is held not to set the time running until death resulting from the injury where the action is brought for the death. (N. Y.) 138.

The bar of the Statute of Limitations against a judgment rendered in another state is not removed by a revivor of the judgment in that state without appearance by or service upon the defendant. (Kan.) 198.

See, as to divorce cases, supra, IV.

IX. CRIMINAL LAW AND PRACTICE.

An important case on the question of the power of a state to punish crimes committed in another state is a North Carolina case concerning a bigamous marriage contracted in another state, and a statute attempting to make such offense punishable in North Carolina is held unconstitutional. (N. C.) 130.

A discussion of what constitutes a felony appears in a Rhode Island case, which decides that forgery is not a felony at common law and that an indictment therefor need not charge that the offense was feloniously committed. (R. I.) 550.

The forcible passage to the upper rooms of a hotel against the remonstrance and resistance of the landlord and his wife and servants on the mere suspicion that there was an illegal sale of liquors, but without any warrant, is not justified by the common-law power of peace officers or by the statute giving marshals of law and order societies authority without warrant to arrest persons who have violated any law. (N. J.) 500.

The conclusiveness of an acquittal is not defeated by the fact that it was procured by bribery of the prosecuting attorney. (Ind.) 225.

A constitutional requirement that all prosecutions shall be in the name of and by the authority of the state makes an information invalid, although it appears on its face that it was filed by the state's attorney, where it does not name the state as a party or aver directly or indirectly that the defendant was prosecuted in the name or by the authority of the state. (N. Dak.) 150.

The constitutional right of trial by jury is not violated by a statute which provides for the examination of witnesses and the determination of the degree of the crime by the court where a person accused of murder confesses his guilt in open court. (Ohio) 358.

The right to peremptory challenges on the selection of a new juror in place of one discharged for sickness, as permitted by the North Dakota statute in a criminal case, extends only to such challenges as have not been exhausted in selecting the other eleven jurors. (N. Dak.) 150.

The denial of a continuance on an admission by the prosecuting attorney of what an absent witness will testify is held not to violate a constitutional right of the accused to meet the witnesses face to face and have process to compel their attendance. (Ill.) 239.

The denial of a continuance on an admission by the prosecuting attorney of what an absent witness will testify is held not to violate a constitutional right of the accused to meet the witnesses face to face and have process to compel their attendance. (Ill.) 239.

INDEX TO NOTES.

(The General Index follows this.)

Acknowledgment ; validity of acknowledgment of deed of trust taken by trustee	719
Aliens ; treaty guaranties to	277
Alteration of instruments ; effect on mortgage of alteration of note secured thereby	468
Arrest ; right of peace officers to enter dwellings to make; without a warrant; with a warrant; to recapture escaping prisoner; necessity of; notification and demand before entering	500
Banks ; purchase of notes and bills by, as distinguished from discounting; what is discounting; whether discounting includes buying and selling; application of usury laws	228
When a deposit is special so that the title remains in the depositor	516
Bills and notes ; rights of bona fide purchaser of note declared void by statute	45
Right of action at law on lost bills and notes; non-negotiable paper; presumptions; negotiable paper; paper overdue or otherwise subject to equities; action against indorser; loss pending action; destroyed bill or note	205
Buildings . See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.
Carriers ; right of passenger to pay fare after train begins to stop for purpose of ejecting him	53
Payment of back fare for distance already ridden as condition of being carried further	55
How far ticket may be used for passage after expiration of time limited	471
Passenger's negligent exposure of person at car window, question of law or fact; passengers on street cars	91
Duty of to protect passenger from assault by fellow passenger	627
Passenger's riding in baggage or express car as contributory negligence; violation of rules; where riding in such car did not contribute to accident; power of conductor to waive rule	631
Regulations as to admission of passenger to train house	449
Duty to maintain safe approaches beyond its own premises	598
Check ; effect of certification on liability of drawer	510
Constitutional law ; constitutionality of private statutes to authorize disposal of property; limitations of the power; distinctions between those ut juris and those who are not; giving power to guardians of infants; non compos mentis ; as to decedents' estates	251

Constitutional law—Continued.
Self-executing constitutional provisions; prohibitions generally; cases as to taking property for public use; as to jury; exemptions may be regarded as prohibitions; taxation; appropriations; stockholders' liability	281
Constitutionality of laws charging the expense of police regulations on the business to be regulated	380
Police power over condition of buildings	400
Continuance ; denial of, upon admissions by the prosecution, as affected by right of accused to meet witnesses; impeaching or contradicting affidavit	239
Contract ; effect of failure to procure license for business on validity of contract therein; where contract prohibited; effect of imposition of penalty; sales of liquor; contracts of agents, brokers, etc.; contracts of physicians, surgeons; United States revenue laws; contracts in other kinds of business; application and limitation of the rule	428
Validity of parol partnership for dealing in lands; agreement to procure land on joint account; incorporation of such contract in partnership agreement; other contracts relating to land; transfer of partnership interest	745
Right of one who completes in disregard of notice to desist	655
Recovery for services interrupted by sickness or death	858
Change of decision of state court as impairing obligation of	646
Corporations ; right to increased stock and stock dividends as between owner of capital and income; the English rule; how far such rule followed in this country; departures from English rule; right to subscribe for stock	461
Co-tenancy ; how far share of co-tenant collecting rents is subject to lien in favor of his co-tenant	547
Counties ; delegation of legislative power to county boards of supervisors	161
Criminal law ; statute allowing plea of guilty in capital case	358
Damages ; the value of improvements made by one taking property by eminent domain as an element of damages; when improvement is consented to by owner, mortgagor, etc.; when construction of improvements is a trespass; effect of good faith or mistake of trespasser	805
Dangerous agencies . See FIREWORKS.
Disease ; effect of previous disease of person injured on liability for causing the injuries; causing death of diseased person; limitations and exceptions to the rule	298

Dividends. See CORPORATIONS.

Divorce. See HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Dower; release of inchoate right by attorney under power given by married woman 209

Right to, in mines 247

Effect of partition sale upon dower rights of one not a party 776

Drains. See HIGHWAYS.

Duress; by lien on real property 376

Eminent domain; constitutionality of condemnation proceedings to establish a private road; outlet for communication with the public; necessity of road 81
Sufficiency of notice to occupant only 196

Estoppel; as to assertion of governmental power 178

In pact upon defendant as basis for action to recover real estate 818

Evidence; presumption as to exercise of due care by person found to have been killed by the alleged negligence of another; (a) presumption of care; application of presumption; question for court or jury; weight of presumption; overcoming presumption; (b) presumption of negligence; (c) where no presumption is allowed; burden of proof on plaintiff; burden on defendant 261

Parol evidence of mistake in description of land devised 321

Executors and administrators; requisite moral qualifications of 536

Fireworks; liability for injuries caused by the discharge of 396

Fruit; classification of growing fruit as real or personal property 108

Guardian ad litem. See INFANTS.

Highways; lawfulness of the use of steam traction engine on 148

Power of municipality to authorize use of, for private drain 715

Right of one injured on, to proceed in the first instance against the one ultimately liable 554

Husband and wife; domicile of wife for purpose of divorce suit 497
Partnership between 536

Income. See CORPORATIONS.

Incompetent persons; belief in spiritualism, witchcraft, etc., as affecting capacity to make will or deed 677

Infants; control of guardian ad litem or next friend over action 507

On what day a person becomes of age 548

How far marriage of, works emancipation 578

Commitment to reformatories without conviction of crime 691

Injunction; against false statement as to plaintiff's property or business 248

Insurance; effect of agent's knowledge of falsity of statements in application; agent's perversion of information by the insured; agent's falsely filling up blanks; misconstruction of facts by agent 33

Judgments; validity of personal judgments rendered upon constructive service of process; against nonresidents (1) in states other than where rendered, (2) in state where rendered; against residents; what property subject to; for alimony or costs 231

Judgment—continued.

Priority of lien of judgment or of prior unrecorded conveyance; in absence of express statutory definition; by virtue of statutes; effect of notice on rank of lien of judgment; priority of right of purchaser at sale under judgment; when judgment creditor purchases at sale 699

Relief from, when rendered on publication of process 361

Right of surety who has paid judgment to enforce it for his own benefit; at law; in in equity; under statutes 118

Jury. See TRIAL.

Landlord and tenant; liability of landlord to tenant for forcible expulsion after termination of tenancy; in England; the prevalent American rule; a different view 739

Libel. See also INJUNCTION.

By filing lien 636

License. See CONTRACTS.

Lien. See also JUDGMENT.

Relation back of sub-contractor's lien to the date of that of the original contractor 386

Right of architect to mechanics' lien; simply furnishing plans; superintending 609

Master and servant. See also CONTRACTS.

The relation of the proximate-cause doctrine to the rule of liability of a master for injuries to his servant caused by the combined negligence of himself and a fellow-servant; proximate cause; "a" proximate cause as distinguished from "the" proximate cause; right to consider relative negligence; liability exists where master's negligence was an essential element; cases where the negligence of the master was the efficient cause 819

Who is a volunteer 861

Mines. See DOWER.

Mortgage. See also TAXES.

Release of mortgagor as surety by mortgagee's dealing with vendee who has assumed the mortgage 85

Municipal corporations; discrimination by municipality between its own residents and other residents of the same state 49

Authority of Legislature to remove from trusteeship 696

Natural gas. 448

Negligence. See DISEASE.

Next friend. See INFANTS.

Notice. See EMINENT DOMAIN.

Officers; vacancy in office by failure to file bond within the time prescribed 149

Power of public officers to make contracts binding on their successors or for a term of years; for services of teachers, attorneys, or depositaries; for water, gas, etc. 237

Partition. See also DOWER.

Validity of agreement against right to 220

Parol partition to give legal title or color of title 336

Personal property. See FRUIT.

Principal and surety. See JUDGMENT.

Private roads. See EMINENT DOMAIN.

Proximate cause. See MASTER AND SERVANT.

Railroads; at what railway crossings signals of trains are required; private crossings 119

Real property. See JUDGMENT.

Receiver; obligation on the contract of the party whose property he holds 90
Power to permit receiver of a private corporation to create liens on its property 608

Records. See JUDGMENT.

Reformatories. See INFANTS.

Service; what constitutes personal service of papers 200

Specific performance; effect of inability to perform, upon jurisdiction of chancery; when plaintiff knows that performance cannot be enforced; when defendant disables himself pending action; when defendant has at any time rendered himself incapable of performing; general jurisdiction over damages; effect of modern legislation, of code provisions 614

16 L. R. A.

Supervisors. See COUNTIES.

Tax; power to tax mortgages; double taxation; where taxable; nonresident owners 59
Situs for purpose of taxation of debts evidenced by notes and mortgages; in general; mortgages; notes; when held by agent residing in different State from principal 729

Tenant in common. See CO-TENANCY.

Traction engine. See HIGHWAYS.

Treaties. See ALLENS.

Trial; coercion of disagreeing jury; by court; by bailiff in charge 648

Voters and elections; effect of irregularities in nomination papers or in voting under Australian ballot laws 754

GENERAL INDEX

TO

OPINIONS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

(Separate Index to Notes precedes this.)

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

A notary who is the trustee in a deed of trust cannot take an acknowledgment thereto. Rothschild v. Dougher (Tex.) 719

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Acknowledgment; validity of acknowledgment of deed of trust taken by trustee. 719

ACTION OR SUIT.

1. A denial of the constitutional rights of women in a criminal proceeding against a man cannot be set up by him in his own behalf. McKinney v. State (Wyo.) 710

2. The wife of a tenant in common is not a necessary party in the suit for partition. Holley v. Glover (S. C.) 776

3. The heirs of the owner of a building who dies before the filing of a lien thereon are necessary parties to the proceeding. Hughes v. Torgerson (Ala.) 600

4. After the death of an administrator suing in his own name in a foreign state upon a judgment obtained in the state of his appointment, the suit may be revived in the name of his administrator appointed under the laws of the foreign state. Tittman v. Thornton (Mo.) 410

5. A stipulation for the removal of a cause to another county waives an objection that it was not brought in the proper county. Goy v. Brierfield Coal & I. Co. (Ala.) 564

6. The filing of a paper stating that an action is dismissed does not take away jurisdiction of the court until entry of a judgment of dismissal. Barnes v. Barnes (Cal.) 660

ACT OF GOD. See also CONTRACTS, 14.

The burning of a hotel cannot be attributed to an irresistible superhuman cause, where the origin of the fire is not shown except that it broke out in a room containing nothing but batteries which supplied the place with electricity. Fay v. Pacific Imp. Co. (Cal.) 188

ADVERSE POSSESSION.

1. A parol partition does not constitute color of title for the purpose of adverse possession against the co-tenant. Sontag v. Bigelow (Ill.) 826

2. The mere receipt of rents and payment of taxes by a tenant in common is not a sufficient L. R. A.

cient claim of adverse possession as against his co-tenant. Id.

AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE. See OFFICERS, 4, 5.

ALIENS. See also CONTRACTS, 12.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Aliens; treaty guaranties to. 277

ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

1. An unauthorized alteration of a non-negotiable note by the payee, by inserting the word "bearer" after his name, is a material alteration which will nullify the instrument. Walton Flow Co. v. Campbell (Neb.) 468

2. A mortgage is discharged by the fraudulent alteration of a promissory note which is secured by it. Id.

3. A material and fraudulent alteration of a promissory note defeats any recovery on the original consideration for which it was given, as well as upon the note. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Alteration of instruments; effect on mortgage of alteration of note secured thereby. 468

ANIMALS.

A dog is "property" within the meaning of the constitutional provision against taking property without due process of law. Jenkins v. Ballantyne (Utah) 689

APPEAL AND ERROR.

1. An excessive verdict cannot be corrected in the Federal courts upon a writ of error. Morning Journal Assn. v. Rutherford (C. C. App. 2d C.) 808

2. A decision upon a motion for a new trial is not the subject of review in a Federal appellate court. Id.

3. To present a question as to damages on appeal, it must have been assigned as a cause for a new trial. Vincennes v. Citizens Gaslight & C. Co. (Ind.) 485

4. An appeal on a special bill of exceptions will not be dismissed for lack of a general bill which could not be considered for any purpose whatever. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Minor (Miss.) 627

879

5. The overruling of a motion to quash the entire panel of jurors, interposed before the trial began, may be considered independently of a motion for a new trial in which it was unnecessarily embodied, but which was filed too late. McKinney v. State (Wyo.) 710

6. The defense that a passenger who was injured by riotous conduct of fellow passengers voluntarily placed himself in danger thereof cannot be raised for the first time on appeal. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Minor (Miss.) 627

7. The constitutionality of a statute making the third verdict conclusive as to the amount of damages cannot be attacked for the first time on appeal. Id.

8. An injunction against an alleged nuisance, granted against a great preponderance of evidence, will be reversed. Wood v. McGrath (Pa.) 715

9. Only the entire absence of a material fact in a complaint will make it insufficient on appeal to sustain a judgment on the merits. Bates v. Babcock (Cal.) 745

10. The New York Court of Appeals cannot draw the inference of fraud in the first instance for the purpose of supporting a judgment which does not proceed upon that ground, even though there is evidence which would permit such inference, if there is also evidence negating its existence. Clemans v. Supreme Assem. R. S. of G. F. (N. Y.) 88

11. A verdict in favor of a railway passenger to compensate him for injuries to his arm caused by contact with a bridge abutment cannot be sustained on appeal, after the striking of a count alleging that he voluntarily placed his arm out of the car window, if the other counts allege that it was flung out by a lurch of the car caused by one rail being lower than the other, and the evidence shows only a four inch difference in the height of the rails, that the window was 15 feet from the abutment, which was not touched by the car, and the body of no passenger was moved from its position, the allegation being so improbable in view of the evidence that the stricken count must have influenced the verdict. Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Scott (Va.) 91

12. Ten thousand one hundred seventy-five dollars damages is not so excessive as to cause a reversal on the ground of corruption, passion, or prejudice, when given to a doctor sixty years old, who was injured at a railroad highway crossing by the company's negligence, where his horse and buggy were demolished, and he received permanent injuries, such as a disfigured and partially paralyzed face, broken ribs, lameness, and constant pain which disabled him to some extent from practicing his profession, the income from which was $2,500 a year at the time of the accident. Gratiot v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Mo.) 189

13. An instruction that a railroad company is bound to exercise very great vigilance and care in maintaining order and guarding passengers against violence will require a reversal of a judgment against such a company based on lack of care, although other instructions correctly require a lower degree of care. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Minor (Miss.) 627

14. An appellate court, having reversed a 16 L. R. A.

judgment in a capital case on a transcript of the record of the court below, which was an entire misrepresentation of the real record, does not lose its jurisdiction by issuing a remittitur to the court below, but may vacate its entry of judgment and restore the cause to its docket; and the case is not altered by the fact that the misrepresentation was unintentional. Lovett v. State (Fla.) 818

APPORTIONMENT. See CENSUS; ELECTION DISTRICTS; STATUTES, 1.

ARBITRATION.

1. An agreement that arbitrators may fix their own compensation is subject to the implied condition that the allowance made to themselves shall not be unreasonable, and that its reasonableness may be determined by the court. Kelly v. Lynchburg & D. R. Co. (N. C.) 514

2. The court when asked to confirm a report of arbitrators may, upon suggestion by exception or by motion, determine whether an allowance which the arbitrators have made to themselves by consent of the parties is or is not reasonable; and a formal action is not necessary. Id.

ARCHITECTS. See LIENS, 3.

ARREST. See also ASSAULT.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Arrest; right of peace officers to enter dwellings to make; without a warrant; with a warrant; to recapture escaping prisoner; necessity of notification and demand before entering. 500

ASSAULT. See also CARRIERS, 2, 3.

Forcing a passage to the upper rooms of a hotel against the remonstrance and resistance of the landlord and his wife and servants, thereby injuring the landlord's wife, on a mere suspicion that the law in respect to the sale of intoxicating liquors is being violated there, but without any knowledge of the fact and without any warrant for the arrest of any person,—cannot be justified under the common-law powers and authorities of constables or other peace officers, or by the statutory authority of marshals of law and order societies in New Jersey, to arrest persons who have violated any law, without warrant. DeLafoile v. State (N. J.) 500

ASSIGNMENT. See JUDGMENT, 5, 6.

ASSOCIATIONS. See also BENEFIT SOCIETIES.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Associations; remedy of member for expulsion from. 392

ASSUMPSIT.

1. An occupation tax paid under coercion of criminal proceedings may be recovered back where the ordinance imposing it was unconstitutional, although fair on its face, because of the persistent failure to enforce it against part of the persons to whom it applies. Hoefling v. San Antonio (Tex.) 608

2. Payment under protest of a mechanic's lien filed upon an unfounded claim, in order to clear the title of record so that the owner might consummate a loan upon the property which he had negotiated in order to raise money to pay a prior overdue mortgage and other oppressing debts, when he had no available means of raising the money, is made under duress and may be recovered back. Joannin v. Ogilvie (Minn.) 876

3. Duress may be shown with respect to real property as well as personal, so as to render a payment on account of it involuntary and permit it to be recovered back. Id.

ATTORNEYS. See also CHAMPERTY.

1. A stipulation by an attorney that the action shall abide the event of another action pending binds his adult clients, unless it be improvidently, fraudulently, or collusively made. Eidam v. Finnegan (Minn.) 507

2. But such stipulation does not bind an infant party unless approved and ratified by the court upon a showing that it is for the interest, or, at least, not prejudicial to the interest, of the infant. It must appear that the matters in controversy in the two actions, so far as affect the infant, are precisely the same, and that he is represented in the two actions by the same guardian ad litem. Id.

BAILMENT.

1. A bailment is for hire, although no hire is paid, when it is a necessary incident of a business in which the bailee makes a profit. Woodruff v. Painter (Pa.) 451

2. A retail merchant is liable for the loss of a customer's watch and chain which is taken off, and, at the suggestion of a salesman, put in a drawer while the customer is trying on clothing, if ordinary care is not exercised for its safety, but not if it is stolen where he has exercised such care. Id.

BANKS.

1. A deposit is not special by reason of a certificate of deposit showing that it is made to secure the banker against a liability as surety of the depositor, where the latter knows that the money is mingled with funds of the bank; but such deposit passes to the banker's assignee in case of his insolvency. Mutual Acc. Assn. v. Jacobs (Ill.) 516

2. The return of a certificate of deposit is properly made to the receiver of a bank where the bank has been closed and a receiver appointed. Ballard v. Burton (Vt.) 664

3. Merely adding the word "surety" to his signature, by one who signs his name on the back of a certificate of deposit in order to induce a depositor to take such certificate in place of a former one instead of withdrawing his money, does not prevent him from being held liable as maker instead of as indorser. Id.

4. Forbearing to withdraw money from a bank for a reasonable time, although without any definite time agreed upon, is a sufficient consideration for the signing by a third person as surety of another certificate of deposit in place of a former one which is surrendered. Id.

5. Absence of an assignment, or an assignment without recourse, and the nonaccountability of the assignor for the value of the note, are necessary to make a transfer of a note to a bank for value, before maturity, in the usual course of discounting, and without notice of any infirmity, a barter and sale as distinguished from a discount. Nicholson v. New Castle Nat. Bank (Ky.) 228

6. The purchase by a bank of a note by a lumping trade which results in a greater discount than would be produced by an exact calculation at the usual rate does not deprive the paper of its standing as a bill of exchange, if the circumstances attending the transaction show a discount, and not a bargain and sale. Id.

7. The title of a note and its negotiability are not affected by the fact that a national bank discounts it at a usurious rate of interest, although the bank thereby forfeits the entire interest. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Banks; purchase of notes and bills by, as distinguished from discounting; what is discounting; whether discounting includes buying and selling; application of usury laws. 228

When a deposit is special so that the title remains in the depositor. 516

BASTARDY. See JUDGMENT, 1.

BENEFIT SOCIETIES.

The unlawful expulsion of a member of a mutual benefit society will not give him a right of action for damages, as such action is based on an acquiescence in the expulsion and a waiver of the illegality which must be counted a waiver of the entire cause of action. Other reasons against the action are found in the lack of any fund from which damages can be paid and in the impossibility of measuring the damages. The proper remedy is mandamus to restore him to membership. Lavalle v. Société St. Jean Baptiste de Woonsocket (R. I.) 892

BERRIES. See LEVY AND SEIZURE.

BIGAMY.

1. Contracting a bigamous marriage in one state cannot be made a crime in another state which can be punished in the latter, in the absence of any illegal cohabitation there, although the persons come within the state. State v. Outshall (N. C.) 180

2. Cohabitation within the state under a bigamous marriage contracted in another state is not punishable under N. C. Code, § 988, which attempts to make it a crime to contract a bigamous marriage in another state. Id.

BILLS AND NOTES. See also BANKS, 7; LOST INSTRUMENTS.

1. The liability of the indorser of a note for annual interest which becomes due before the maturity of the note is dependent upon a prior demand of the maker. Mt. Mansfield Hotel Co. v. Bailey (Vt.) 295

2. A note given by a married woman as surety for her husband is void, even in the hands of a bona fide holder, unless she has estopped herself to deny its validity under Ind. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 5119, providing that a married woman shall not enter into any contract of suretyship whether as indorser or in any other manner, and that such contract as to her shall be void. Voris v. Nussbaum (Ind.) 45

3. The use of the words "we promise to pay," in the body of a note signed in the name of a corporation followed by the name of its president, does not show that it is his individual note, or the joint note of himself and the corporation. Reese v. Glassboro First Nat. Bank (N. J. Err. & App.) 148

4. A note signed by a corporate name under which appears the name of an officer of the company, with his corporate official title affixed thereto, is taken conclusively to be that of the corporation, where nothing appears in the body of the note to indicate the maker. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Bills and notes; rights of bona fide purchaser of note declared void by statute. 45

Right of action at law on lost bills and notes; non-negotiable paper; presumptions; negotiable paper; paper overdue or otherwise subject to equities; action against indorser; loss pending action; destroyed bill or note. 205

BLACKBERRIES. See LEVY AND SEIZURE.*BOUNDARIES.

The boundary line between owners of land on opposite sides of a channel not more than 200 rods wide into which the tide flows, but from which it wholly ebbs and through which a fresh water stream flows, is the middle of the tidal channel and not affected by the fresh-water stream, although the Colonial Ordinance of 1641-47, which extends the ownership of the land on tidal waters to low-water mark if not more than 100 rods, furnishes no guide for the division, since the land to be divided is all above low-water mark. Tappan v. Boston Water-Power Co. (Mass.) 858

BRIBERY. See CRIMINAL LAW, 1.*BRIDGES.

1. One who subjects a bridge to an unusual and extraordinary load or strain cannot recover damages for an injury which he receives in consequence. Vermillion County v. Chipps (Ind.) 228

2. A mistake in respect to the safety of a bridge made by a competent person employed by the proper county officers to examine it and put it in good repair will not make the county liable if it remains unsafe. Id.

3. County officers are not negligent in accepting a bridge containing defective timbers which an expert employed by them to examine it honestly believes sufficient. Id.

4. For injuries caused by defects in a highway bridge which a railroad company is bound to maintain over its tracks, the railroad company cannot escape liability on the ground that an action would lie for the injury against the township. Gates v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 554

BROKERS. See CONTRACTS, 10.*BUILDINGS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, NOTES AND BRIEFS; INSURANCE, 5.

1. The placing and maintenance of water-closets in buildings which are designed for habitation and are so situated that they can be connected with public sewers may be compelled by the state under its police power, although the buildings were lawfully erected without them. Com. v. Roberts (Mass.) 400

2. An Act providing that buildings designed for habitation shall have sufficient water-closets connected with the public sewers, and imposing a penalty on "any person violating any provision" of it, applies to violations which continue after its passage as well as to those which then come into existence. Id.

3. A water-closet within the meaning of an Act providing that every building designed for habitation shall have sufficient water-closets connected with the sewer, and shall not have a cess-pool or privy, is an arrangement with a permanent water supply which can be used systematically and regularly for carrying whatever is deposited therein to the sewer, and does not include a privy vault which, although connected with the sewer, can be flushed only by a rain-storm or from a hydrant. Id.

CABLE RAILWAYS. See CARRIERS, 19.*CAPITAL. See CORPORATIONS, 7.*CARRIERS. See also CONTRACTS, 11; DAMAGES, 6-8.

1. Failure to stop a train and remove from the track one who has stepped or fallen from the train while it is going at high speed, and is helpless upon the track, where this could be done without danger or any considerable inconvenience, or to notify those in charge of another train of his exposed condition, which could be done by telegram before the other train has left the nearest station,—will render the railroad company liable for the death of such person, where he is killed by the following train, although those in charge of it are not guilty of negligence. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Kassen (Ohio) 674

2. A common carrier is required to protect a passenger from an unprovoked assault of a fellow passenger, if the conductor knows that it is threatened and can prevent it with the assistance of employes and willing passengers. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Minor (Miss.) 627

3. A ticket agent who follows a woman who has bought a ticket, out upon the platform, and charges her with having given him counterfeit money, with a demand for other money in its stead, and on her refusal angrily insults her by slandering her character, and puts his hand upon her telling her not to stir until he gets a policeman to arrest and search her, but lets her go when he fails to get an officer,—is acting within the scope of his employment, and renders the carrier liable for false imprisonment and slander, if the detention was unlawful and his charges false. Palmeri v. Manhattan R. Co. (N. Y.) 186

4. A rule requiring passengers to remain in the cars provided for them, and prohibiting them to ride in an express car or other place of increased danger set apart for another purpose, is reasonable. Florida S. R. Co. v. Hirst (Fla.) 681

5. A passenger who rides in an express car in violation of a known rule of the carrier, even with the permission, connivance, or knowledge of the conductor of the train, and is there injured through the negligence of the carrier, cannot recover if he would not have been injured had he remained in the passenger car as required by the rules. Id.

6. Although a carrier may abandon its rule prohibiting passengers to ride in an express car, the mere delinquency of a conductor in enforcing the rule is not sufficient to constitute an abandonment, without such conduct as in effect establishes the concurrence of the carrier in the disregard of the regulation. Id.

7. The mere failure to pay fare will not prevent a person from being entitled to the status of a passenger, where, without any attempt on his part to defraud the carrier, the conductor has failed to call upon him for the fare. Id.

8. A carrier's liability for the lack of proper lights on a walk leading to its boat landing, on account of which persons are injured while on their way to the boat in the evening, is not defeated by the fact that the boat did not start until morning, where passengers were provided with sleeping accommodations on the boat at an extra charge. Skottow v. Oregon S. L. & U. N. R. Co. (Or.) 593

9. The fact that an elevated walk to a boat landing is upon a public street does not relieve the carrier which maintains it from liability for injuries caused by its dangerous condition, where the street has never been opened as such, or used except by the carrier and those doing business with it. Id.

10. The court cannot declare it to be contributory negligence for persons to walk off from an elevated walk in the dark at a place where there is no railing, while they are on their way to a boat landing. Id.

11. A carrier is not liable for injury to a passenger's hand from striking against a bridge, where he put it out of the car window, although it projected but 8 inches. Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Scott (Va.) 91

12. The prudence of a passenger's leaving a railway train to escape an apparent danger must be judged by the circumstances as they appeared to him at the time, and not by the 16 L. R. A.

result. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Murray (Ark.) 787

13. A reasonable cause of alarm occasioned by the negligence or misconduct of the carrier must have existed to render it liable for injuries received by a passenger while leaving a train in an effort to escape an apprehended danger. Id.

14. That those in charge of a railroad train used sufficient precaution to prevent collision with a train standing on the track ahead of it, and no collision in fact occurred, will not relieve the company from liability for injuries received by a passenger in leaving the forward train to avoid being injured by the collision, which appeared to him to be imminent. Id.

15. If the negligence of a carrier places a passenger in a position of such apparent imminent peril as to cause fright, and the fright causes nervous convulsions and illness, the negligence is the proximate cause of the injury, and the injury is one for which an action may be brought. Purcell v. St. Paul City R. Co. (Minn.) 203

Street railways.

16. A street-car company is liable for injury to a passenger caused by starting the car after he has got on the step or footboard, before he has a reasonable opportunity to reach a safe place. Steege v. St. Paul City R. Co. (Minn.) 879

17. Stepping from a street car which is slowing up, but is still in motion, in front of an electric car coming from the opposite direction at the rate of 15 miles an hour, and which was lighted and could be plainly seen, and the gong of which was ringing, is such negligence as will prevent the liability of the street-car company for the resulting death of a passenger, where there was nothing to show that his senses were defective or that he exercised any care or caution, although his fellow passengers shouted to him to stop. Creamer v. West End Street R. Co. (Mass.) 490

18. The relation of a passenger is terminated as soon as he steps from a street car upon the street, and does not continue during his passage to the sidewalk. Id.

19. It is not negligence for a passenger on a cable railway to take a seat on the outside of the grip car, in a place provided for passengers, although there is room in the trailer. Hawkins v. Front Street Cable R. Co. (Wash.) 808

Fare; tickets.

20. A higher rate of fare can be demanded of a passenger who has no ticket, only when the failure to procure a ticket is not due to the nonattendance of the ticket agent, or some other fault or default of the carrier. Georgia S. & F. R. Co. v. Asmore (Ga.) 58

21. A passenger cannot avoid expulsion by tendering fare while the train is being stopped, or after the stoppage, with a view to his expulsion, if he has made the stop necessary by refusal of a rightful demand for fare. Id.

22. Refusal to pay fare for the distance already ridden without a valid ticket will justify the ejection of a passenger who, on notice that he must pay such fare or be put off at the next station, has procured at that station a ticket for the remainder of his trip. Manning v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Ala.) 55

23. A coupon ticket over connecting roads, limited as to time and expressly providing that the carrier selling it is not responsible beyond its own line, but is only an agent of the connecting roads, will not entitle a passenger to be carried over the last road in the series after the time has expired, although his failure to complete the journey on time was due to a wreck on one of the other connecting roads. Gulf, C. & F. S. R. Co. v. Looney (Tex.) 471

24. A ticket over connecting roads, limited as to time, but which is a joint contract of the carriers, entitles a passenger who is delayed by a wreck on one of the roads to complete his journey, although the time expires before he reaches the last of the connecting roads. Id.

25. The illegibility of the date on a ticket which the passenger receives in that condition does not impose on him the duty of getting the indorsement of a ticket receiver as to its validity because it is questioned by the gateman; and a rule of the railroad company making such a requirement is unreasonable because it would subject a passenger to great inconvenience and might cause him to lose his train. Northern C. R. Co. v. O'Conner (Md.) 449

26. A ticket which is good for a continuous passage only does not entitle a passenger who voluntarily takes passage upon a train which he must be held to have known would not convey him to his destination, and who leaves that train at an intermediate point, to be carried the remainder of the journey on the train which he ought to have taken in the first place. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Henry (Tex.) 818

27. A transfer ticket issued to a street-railway passenger, by which the route is designated so generally as to be applicable to several lines, entitles him to be transported over either. Pine v. St. Paul City R. Co. (Minn.) 847

28. A restriction that a street-railway transfer ticket given without extra charge must be used within fifteen minutes after it is punched on the first line is not unreasonable or invalid in the absence of any contract to carry a passenger on both lines for a single fare, without exception or conditions or any provision to that effect in the charter or ordinance, or of any holding out to the public to this effect, although this might be subject to exception if no car came along within the time limited. Heffron v. Detroit City R. Co. (Mich.) 845

Connecting carriers.

29. An initial carrier may protect itself by contract against liability for loss not occurring on its own line, whether the shipment be wholly within one state or be interstate. McCara v. International & G. N. R. Co. (Tex.) 89

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Duty of, to protect passenger from assault by fellow passenger. 627

Passenger's negligent exposure of person at car window; question of law or fact; passengers on street cars. 91

Passenger's riding in baggage or express car 16 L. R. A.

as contributory negligence; violation of rules; where riding in such car did not contribute to accident; power of conductor to waive rule. 631

Regulations as to admission of passenger to train house. 449

Duty to maintain safe approaches beyond its own premises. 598

How far ticket may be used for passage after expiration of time limited. 471

Effect of provision in ticket for continuous passage. 818

Right of passenger to pay fare after train begins to stop for purpose of ejecting him. 53

Payment of back fare for distance already ridden as condition of being carried further. 55

Effect of rules of street railways. 345, 347

Limitation on liability for negligence. 89

CEMETERY. See also EMINENT DOMAIN, 2.

The control of a cemetery which has been acquired by a town solely for public use and in which it has no beneficial interest may lawfully be taken from it by the Legislature and vested in a city which has been organized within its limits, and which embraces the cemetery within its boundaries, if the rights and beneficial interests in the property of the inhabitants of both city and town are saved to them. Columbus v. Columbus (Wis.) 695

CENSUS.

Upon the omission of the Legislature to make an enumeration of the inhabitants and apportion the districts for electing members of the Legislature, in the year fixed by the Constitution for that purpose, the duty rests upon each succeeding Legislature until it is performed; and an apportionment cannot be set aside as unauthorized although it was made seven years after the constitutional time. People, Carter, v. Rice (N. Y.) 886

CERTIFICATE OF DEPOSIT. See BANKS, 2-4.

CERTIFIED CHECKS. See CHECKS

CHAMPERTY.

An agreement by an attorney to advance the costs and expenses of collecting a judgment which he has obtained for a client, of which one half only shall be repaid in case of failure to make the collection, in consideration of which he is to have one half the net proceeds of the judgment in case of success,—is not unlawful on the ground of champerty. Reece v. Kyle (Ohio) 723

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Champerty; by a contract with attorney. 723

CHECK.

1. If the payee or holder of a check gets it certified in his own behalf or for his own benefit, instead of getting it paid, the drawer is discharged,—especially where the certification amounts to an extension of the time of payment. Minot v. Russ (Mass.) 510

2. The drawer of a check who gets it certified in his own behalf or for his own benefit, and then delivers it to the payee, is not discharged, but continues liable, where the bank fails before payment of the check. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Check; effect of certification on liability of drawer. 510

CIVIL RIGHTS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 9.

1. A discrimination against colored persons by permitting them to sit only in the balcony of a theatre is not unlawful, in the absence of any statute to the contrary. Younger v. Judah (Mo.) 558

2. Colored persons to whom tickets for the orchestra of a theatre are sold at the box office may be prevented from using them and required to give them up for balcony tickets or for the return of their money, where the tickets were sold without knowledge that the persons who were to use them were colored, and the rule of the theatre, as well as a custom and usage prevailing in the state, permit colored persons in the balcony only. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Civil rights; discrimination on account of color in use of theatres. 558

COMMERCE. See LICENSE, 2.

CONFLICT OF LAWS.

1. The law of the domicil of the donor of a power given by will must govern, as against the law of the domicil of the donee, in determining whether or not the will of the latter is an execution of the power. Cotting v. Desartiges (R. I.) 867

2. The establishment by express statute, both in England where a will was made, and in New York where the testator was domiciled, of the rule that a general devise is sufficient to execute a power of appointment, cannot prevail in respect to a trust fund held under the will of the donor, whose domicil was in Rhode Island, as against the contrary rule, which, in the absence of a statute, prevails in the latter state. Id.

3. The right to redeem land from a mortgage or absolute deed given as security is governed by the law of the place where the land lies; and a rule there prevailing, that such a right is barred, when an action on the debt is barred, must control, although in another state where the parties reside and the contract was made, the bar of the debt would not defeat the right to redeem. Allen v. Allen (Cal.) 646

16 L. R. A.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. See also ACTION OR SUIT, 1; BIGAMY, 1; BUILDINGS, 1; CONTINUANCE, 4; CONTRACTS, 12, 17-21; ELECTION DISTRICTS, 8; OFFICERS, 1.

1. Nonuser will not defeat a power to exercise rights expressly delegated in a written constitution. McPherson v. Blacker (Mich.) 475

2. The provision of Minn. Const. art. 10, § 8, that "each stockholder in any corporation (excepting those organized for the purpose of carrying on any kind of manufacturing or mechanical business) shall be liable to the amount of stock held or owned by him," is self-executing, and creates an individual liability on the part of the stockholder for corporate debts to an amount equal to the amount of stock held or owned by him. Willis v. St. Paul Sanitation Co. (Minn.) 281

3. The exclusion of women from a jury on the trial of a man for crime, even if wrongful, does not deprive him of any rights or privileges under a constitutional provision giving women the right to vote and hold office, and declaring that both male and female citizens shall equally enjoy all civil, political, and religious rights and privileges. McKinney v. State (Wyo.) 710

4. A statute designating one who is convicted of a felony after having been convicted of two others, an habitual criminal and subjecting him to long imprisonment as such, is not ex post facto, although by its terms it may be enforced against one whose former convictions occurred before its passage. Com. v. Graves (Mass.) 256

5. The Legislature cannot delegate to the board of supervisors power to change or suspend a provision of a general law requiring a county clerk to pay his own deputies, by allowing him the expense of necessary deputies if in their opinion his salary is insufficient to pay for such services, where the Constitution provides that the Legislature by general and uniform laws shall regulate the compensation of all such officers. Bougherty v. Austin (Cal.) 161

6. The rule of law against delegation of power by the Legislature refers to the law-making power, and does not prohibit the Legislature from delegating the selection of mere municipal agents. State, Sherman, v. George (Or.) 787

7. The power to fine and imprison for contempt is essentially a judicial one, and an attempt to confer it on a state board of tax commissioners who have power to take testimony is in violation of a constitutional provision that no person charged with official duties under either the legislative, executive, or judicial department of the government, shall exercise any of the functions of another, since such board belongs to the executive or administrative department. Langenberg v. Decker (Ind.) 108

8. A statutory prohibition of fishing with a seine during a part of the year is not unconstitutional, even as applied to a lake wholly upon lands of a private owner and connected with an unnavigable stream only in time of high water. People v. Bridges (Ill.) 684

9. The rule of a theatre, that colored people can sit in the balcony only, does not violate U. S. Const. 14th amend, which declares that "no state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the United States." Younger v. Judah (Mo.) 553

10. The constitutional equality and uniformity of occupation taxes is violated by an ordinance which is fair on its face, imposing a tax upon those who sell meat, but which is collected only from those who sell in their own shops, while there is a persistent failure to collect it from those who rent stalls from the city, although they pay only the rental-value thereof. Hoefting v. San Antonio (Tex.) 608

11. An ordinance making a dog liable to be killed by any person unless registered and collared as provided by the ordinance is not in violation of the constitutional provision against depriving a person of property without due process of law; but is a valid police regulation. Jenkins v. Ballantyne (Utah) 689

12. A statute which makes it a misdemeanor for persons in one branch of industry to do what is lawful for those in another branch of industry, in like relation and under like conditions, is unconstitutional. Frorer v. People (Ill.) 492

13. A statute making it unlawful for a person or corporation engaged in mining or manufacturing to engage or be interested in keeping or controlling any truck, store, shop, or scheme, for furnishing supplies, tools, clothing, provisions, or groceries, to employes, but which does not apply to those employing laborers in other branches of business,—violates the constitutional guaranty that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. Id.

14. Legislative authority to a general guardian of an infant to agree with a railroad company as to the amount of damages for a right of way across the infant's lands, or to release the claim or right to such damages, is not unconstitutional as a legislative usurpation of judicial power. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Jordan (Miss.) 251

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Constitutional law; constitutionality of private statutes to authorize disposal of property; limitations of the power; distinctions between those sui juris and those who are not; giving power to guardians of infants; non compos mentis; as to decedents' estates. 251

Constitutional powers of tax officers. 108

Discretion of Legislature in enforcement of Constitution. 886

Police power over condition of buildings. 400

Constitutionality of laws charging the expense of police regulations on the business to be regulated. 880

Self-executing constitutional provisions; prohibitions generally; cases as to taking property for public use; as to jury; exemptions may be regarded as prohibitions; taxation; appropriations; stockholders' liability. 281

16 L. R. A.

CONTEMPT. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 7.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Contempt; power to punish for. 108

CONTINUANCE.

1. A continuance for the testimony of absent witnesses is properly denied if substantially the same testimony as that which is absent is offered at the trial. McKinney v. State (Wyo.) 710

2. There is no abuse of discretion in refusing a motion for a continuance if the circumstances cast suspicion on the good faith of the application. Barnes v. Barnes (Cal.) 690

3. Discretion may be vested in the court to deny a continuance to the accused because of the absence of a witness, upon admission by the prosecution that he will testify to the facts set out in the affidavit for continuance, without requiring an admission of their truth, in the absence of a constitutional provision prohibiting it. Hoyt v. People (Ill.) 239

4. Denying a continuance on an admission by the prosecuting attorney that an absent witness would testify as alleged in the defendant's affidavit for continuance, without requiring an admission of the facts which such testimony would prove if true, does not violate a constitutional right of the accused to "meet the witnesses face to face," and to have "process to compel their attendance," if a reasonable time for that purpose has already elapsed. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Continuance; denial of, upon admissions by the prosecution, as affected by right of accused to meet witnesses; impeaching or contradicting affidavit. 239

CONTRACTS.

1. The interpretation which the parties themselves have put upon an indefinite or ambiguous contract will be adopted by the courts. Vincennes v. Citizens Gaslight & C. Co. (Ind.) 485

2. A benefit to the promises or a detriment to the promisor is not necessary to make a good consideration for a contract, if the exercise of a present right is forborne because of the promise. Ballard v. Burton (Vt.) 664

3. An apparent absence of consideration is only a circumstance to be taken into account with other facts and circumstances in the case in determining whether or not a conveyance was procured through fraud and undue influence. Lewis v. Arbuckle (Iowa) 677

4. A belief in spiritual manifestations and in having had communication with deceased persons is not necessarily evidence of such a disordered mental condition as to render one incompetent to make a conveyance of real estate. Id.

Validity.

5. An oral agreement of partnership in the profits of buying and selling real property is not within the Statute of Frauds. Bates v. Babcock (Cal.) 745

6. A parol reservation of a barn when conveying the real estate of which it is a part, by absolute warranty deed, is ineffectual to retain title in the grantor. Leonard v. Clough (N. Y.) 305

7. A parol gift is ineffectual to transfer title to a barn which is part of the real estate. Id.

Illegality.

8. Transactions in violation of law cannot be made the foundation of a valid contract. Buckley v. Humason (Minn.) 428

9. Where a statute or an ordinance duly authorized and enacted makes a particular business unlawful for unlicensed persons, any contract made in such business by one not authorized is void. Id.

10. A person violating a valid city ordinance which makes it unlawful for any person to exercise within the city the business of a real-estate broker without a license can recover no commissions for his services. Id.

11. No excuse for the breach by a carrier of its contract to furnish a car and transport cattle to a certain place by a certain day is furnished by the fact that the shipper's object in naming that day was to enable him to offer the cattle for sale on Sunday, contrary to law, unless that object entered into the contract as part of the inducement or consideration. Waters v. Richmond & D. R. Co. (N. C.) 884

12. A covenant not to rent property to a Chinaman is void as against public policy, as violating U. S. Const. 14th amend. providing for equal protection of the laws, and as an infraction of the treaty with China guaranteeing to Chinamen in the United States all the rights, privileges, and immunities accorded to citizens and subjects of the most favored nation. Gandolfo v. Hartman (C. C. S. D. Cal.) 277

Performance.

13. A person prevented from continuing his contract by the arbitrary act of the other party may disregard it and recover the value of his services rendered in partial performance of it. Parker v. Macomber (R. I.) 858

14. The prevention by the act of God, of full performance of an entire contract, will permit a recovery upon an implied assumpsit for personal services already rendered in part performance of the contract. Id.

15. The death of a woman whose services and attendance are contemplated in a contract by which she and her husband agree to board, care for, and maintain her aunt during life, makes such a substantial failure in the consideration that the aunt is justified in rescinding the contract. Id.

16. A contractor to perform certain work cannot proceed with the work and collect the full contract price after express refusal of one of the other parties to perform on his part, although the contract was made with several persons, but one of whom has refused to carry it out. Davis v. Bronson (N. D.) 655

Impairing obligation.

17. Decisions on which the parties to a contract rely do not constitute a part of it so as to exempt the contract from the operation of a subsequent decision declaring a different rule. 16 L. R. A.

upon the same subject and overruling the earlier decisions. Allen v. Allen (Cal.) 646

18. The time for redemption of land from a mortgage or absolute deed given as security cannot be extended by a subsequent statute, as this would change the contract rights and obligations of the parties. Id.

19. The obligation of a prior mortgage contract is not impaired by a statute providing for the assessment to the mortgagees of taxes which had previously been paid by the mortgagor, and permitting the mortgagor, in case he pays such taxes, to deduct the amount from accrued interest on the indebtedness, and if it exceeds the interest due, then from the principal, even though the effect of the latter would be to extinguish a part of the interest-bearing debt. Detroit Common Council v. Rents (Mich.) 59

20. The right of redemption from a tax sale is governed by the law in force at the date of the sale; and a statute extending the time is unconstitutional as impairing the obligation of the contract. Hull v. State, Rollins (Fla.) 308

21. A statutory provision that the release of one shall not discharge another is not unconstitutional as applied to cases where the liability of the stockholder was incurred before, but the proceedings under the Insolvent Act were had and the corporation discharged subsequent to, its passage. Willis v. St. Paul Sanitation Co. (Minn.) 231

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Contracts; validity of parol partnership for dealing in lands; agreement to procure land on joint account; incorporation of such contract in partnership agreement; other contracts relating to land; transfer of partnership interest. 745

Effect of failure to procure license for business, on validity of contract therein; where contract prohibited; effect of imposition of penalty; sales of liquor; contracts of agents, brokers, etc.; contracts of physicians, surgeons, etc.; United States revenue laws; contracts in other kinds of business; application and limitation of the rule. 428

Recovery for services interrupted by sickness or death. 858

Right of one who completes in disregard of notice to desist. 655

Change of decision of a state court as impairing obligation of. 646

CORPORATIONS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 2; CONTRACTS, 21; JOINT-STOCK COMPANY.

1. A corporation is not created by merely making and filing articles of incorporation in the office of the secretary of state, where the stock has not been subscribed and paid in or directors chosen. State, Attorney-General, v. Fidelity & C. Ins. Co. (Ohio) 611

2. The business residence of a foreign corporation is not established within a state for purposes of taxation, by reason of the appointment of a local board of directors to conduct the affairs of the company in that state under direction of the head office. Liverpool & L. & O. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors (La.) 56

8. A license to form a corporation under a certain name, issued by the secretary of state, gives such corporation the right to that name as against an already existing corporation having a different name, which has passed a resolution and given notices for a meeting to vote on a change of its name to that selected by the proposed corporation,—at least where the proposers did not know at the time of their license of the proposed change. Illinois Watch-Case Co. v. Pearson (Ill.) 429

4. The secretary of state cannot revoke a license to form a corporation under a certain name, merely because another corporation before the license was issued had called a meeting to vote on the question of adopting such name, instead of that which it then had. Id.

5. Directors of a corporation are not entitled to compensation for their services as such unless it is provided for or expressly sanctioned by the charter. Brown v. Republican Mountain Silver Mines (Colo.) 426

6. For services of a director clearly outside of his duties as such, and in pursuance of an express contract made in good faith, he is entitled to compensation if the services are such as the company may legally contract for. Id.

7. Shares of increased stock which represent the increase in value of the property of an association resulting from the development of its business, and which are not, strictly speaking, the product of stock dividends and do not represent surplus earnings in the ordinary sense and which are apportioned pro rata among existing shareholders,—constitute capital, and not income or dividends, as between a person entitled to the income or dividends of the original shares during life and a person entitled at her death to the reconveyance of the stock. Spooner v. Phillips (Conn.) 461

8. The provision in Minn. Laws 1889, chap. 30, § 1, amending the Insolvent Law of 1887, "that the release of any debtor under this Act shall not operate to discharge any other party liable as surety, guarantor, or otherwise for the same debt," includes stockholders who are liable for the debts of the corporation. Willis v. St. Paul Sanitation Co. (Minn.) 281

9. To make a case for the retaliatory provision of Ohio Rev. Stat. § 282, as to insurance companies of a state which imposes prohibitions upon Ohio companies "doing business in such state," it must appear at least that an Ohio company has been formed to do substantially the same kinds and lines of insurance as the foreign company wishes to do in Ohio. State, Attorney-General, v. Fidelity & O. Ins. Co. (Ohio) 611

10. A state statute imposing on insurance companies of another state or nation the same obligations and prohibitions that are imposed in such other state or nation upon corporations of the former state is retaliatory in character, and must be confined to cases fairly within its letter. Id.

11. A license to a foreign insurance company, issued by the superintendent of insurance, is not a bar to a proceeding in quo warranto on the ground that it is exercising franchises and privileges without authority of law. Id.

12. A foreign insurance company exercising franchises and privileges without authority of law may be ousted therefrom by a proceeding in quo warranto. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Corporations; essentials of. 183

Right to increased stock and stock dividends as between owner of capital and income; the English rule; how far such rule followed in this country; departures from English rule; right to subscribe for stock. 461

COTENANCY. See also REAL PROPERTY, 1.

One tenant in common has no lien against his cotenant's interest in the property for rents in excess of his share, collected and retained by such cotenant before partition of the land. Black v. Gosnell (Md.) 547

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Cotenancy; how far share of cotenant collecting rents is subject to lien in favor of his cotenant. 547

COUNTIES. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 5; ELECTION DISTRICTS, 7.

A board of county commissioners cannot bind or tie the hands of their successors in office by making a designation of newspapers for publications and printing which shall continue for longer than one year. Shelden v. Fox (Kan.) 257

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Counties; delegation of legislative power to county boards of supervisors. 161

COURTS.

1. Courts will not spend time in attempting to remedy errors in an apportionment of members of the Legislature among the inhabitants of the state, which injure no one and which raise nothing but abstract questions for adjudication. People, Carter, v. Rice (N. Y.) 536

2. A suit in a circuit court of the United States to foreclose a mortgage, and an unexecuted decree of foreclosure and sale, in which case the issue of certificates had been authorized, do not prevent a state court from taking jurisdiction of a suit by creditors of the mortgagor who are not parties to the suit in the Federal court, but who alleged in their bill that the mortgage and bonds secured thereby are fraudulent and void as well as the issue of certificates and the decree of foreclosure, although it may be that the relief sought cannot all be granted. Gay v. Brierfield Coal & I. Co. (Ala.) 564

COVENANT. See also CONTRACTS, 12; LANDLORD AND TENANT, 1, 2.

A remote grantee connected with the immediate grantee by an unbroken chain of warranty deeds has all the rights of the latter to sue the original grantor for the removal from the real estate of a barn which passed under the original deed. Leonard v. Clough (N. Y.) 805 CRIMINAL LAW. See also BIGAMY, 1.

1. That an acquittal was procured by bribery of the prosecuting attorney will not destroy the effect of a plea of former jeopardy, where the state was a party to the former prosecution and was represented throughout by its proper officer, while the proceedings up to and including the submission were regular. Shideler v. State (Ind.) 225

2. A convict may be sentenced to a prison located beyond the state, when it is authorized and required by statute. McKinney v. State (Wyo.) 710

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Criminal law; statute allowing plea of guilt in capital case. 358

CUSTOM. See also CIVIL RIGHTS, 2; DAMAGES, 8.

There is no presumption of knowledge on the part of an insurance company doing a general business throughout the United States, of a custom or usage as to what constitutes a "building" or "risk," which is peculiar to a city in a state foreign to its domicile, so as to make the custom an element of its contracts relating to property in such city, without proof that it had such knowledge. German American Ins. Co. v. Commercial F. Ins. Co. (Ala.) 291

DAMAGES. See also APPEAL AND ERROR, 12.

1. The value of a public schoolhouse built on land of an unknown owner in the expectation that he will permit such use, and with the intention, in case he will not, to acquire it by eminent domain, is not to be included in his compensation if it becomes necessary to condemn the land. Chase v. Jemmett (Utah) 805

2. Exemplary damages may be allowed for wantonly publishing a libel without inquiry or justifiable motive. Morning Journal Assn. v. Rutherford (C. C. App. 2d C.) 808

3. The custom of a newspaper to print stories of elopements and similar gossip whenever they have appeared in the columns of another paper, without any inquiry as to their truth, shows such reckless unconcern as to the mental anguish that may be caused by such publication as will warrant a jury in finding the publisher guilty of wanton negligence which will justify a verdict for punitive or exemplary damages. Id.

4. The measure of damages in case one believing that he has a right to convey real estate contracts in good faith; to do so, but is prevented from fulfilling his contract by failure of title, is the amount of the advance payment, with interest, and not the alleged profit which would have accrued from the purchase. Morgan v. Bell (Wash.) 614

5. Damages for breach by the carrier of a written contract under which cattle were shipped cannot be recovered in an action for 16 L. R. A.

breach of a prior oral contract to transport them at a certain time. Waters v. Richmond & D. R. Co. (N. C.) 884

6. Only compensatory damages can be recovered for ejecting a passenger without unreasonable force, if it is done in good faith, pursuant to rules, and upon due notice to him. Pins v. St. Paul City R. Co. (Minn.) 847

7. Damages for the refusal to permit a passenger to take a train which his ticket entitled him to take include the amount paid by him for another ticket, compensation for loss of time, necessary hotel expenses, and also compensation for any inconvenience suffered. Northern C. R. Co. v. O'Connor (Md.) 449

8. A passenger injured by negligence of the carrier is entitled to recover to the full extent of the injury so caused, without regard to whether, owing to his previous condition of health, he is more or less liable to injury. Purcell v. St. Paul City R. Co. (Minn.) 203

9. A verdict for $10,000 will not be set aside as excessive,—especially if approved by the trial judge,—where it is given for injuries by which a woman is made a cripple during life and subject to much pain and suffering. Skottowe v. Oregon, S. L. & U. N. R. Co. (Or.) 593

10. Impairment of health and suffering growing out of the death and premature birth of the child of a pregnant woman by reason of injuries negligently inflicted on her by a third person, which would not have attended its birth at the usual time either alive or dead, may be considered in estimating the damages to be awarded for such injury. Hawkins v. Front Street Cable R. Co. (Wash.) 806

11. Mere proof that an unborn child died and was prematurely delivered because of negligent injuries to its mother is not sufficient to establish her right to recover substantial damages for the injury. Id.

12. Loss of the society, companionship, and solace, of one's wife, is not an element of the damages which he can recover in case of her injury through another's negligence. Id.

13. Damages for loss or injury to the husband may properly be recovered in an action by husband and wife for a personal injury to her, in jurisdictions where property acquired by either is community property for which the one having the disposition of it must sue, since he is the only necessary plaintiff in the action, and may include in his demand all damages naturally flowing from the injury complained of. Id.

14. The earning power of a healthy man living on his income, for which damages on account of his death may be given to his administrator, may include his skill in the management of wealth or capacity to manage affairs, which would be of advantage to an estate. Skottowe v. Oregon, S. L. & U. N. R. Co. (Or.) 593

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Damages; the value of improvements made by one taking property by eminent domain as an element of damages; when improvement is consented to by owner, mortgagor, etc.; when construction of improvements is a trespass; effect of good faith or mistake of trespasser. 805

DANGEROUS AGENCIES. See FIREWORKS, NOTES AND BRIEFS; TELEPHONES.

DEATH. See also CONTRACTS, 15; DAMAGES, 14.

1. A negligent injury to one having an incurable disease, followed by his death, furnishes a good cause of action if the death was materially hastened by reason of the injury as an efficient cause, but not if death was inevitable in a short time from the disease, and the injury was so slight as to simply aggravate the disease, which remains the cause of death. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Northington (Tenn.) 268

2. A statute giving a right of action for the death of "any person" through the carelessness or criminal action of an agent, officer, or other employé of a railroad company, does not apply to a person killed by the negligence of a fellow servant. Lutz v. Atlantic & P. R. Co. (N. M.) 819

DEDICATION.

1. A dedication to the public of land for a park is effected by the owner of a tract which lies within an incorporated town, if he makes and records a map by which the tract is subdivided into blocks and lots which are bounded by streets connecting with streets of the town already laid out, marks a space thereon "park," and sells lots which, according to the map, face the park, holding out its existence as an inducement to purchasers. Archer v. Salinas City (Cal.) 145

2. Delay on the part of a town in using land which has been dedicated to it for a park will not impair its right thereto. Id.

3. Although acceptance is necessary in case of an offer to dedicate, actual dedication will vest title in the public without acceptance. Id.

4. A dedication to the public of a portion of land which is subject to a purchase-money mortgage will be superior to the claim of the mortgagee, if he accepts a reconveyance in satisfaction of the mortgage. Id.

DEED. See CONTRACTS, 4; WILLS, 2.

DEFINITIONS. See TAXES, 10.

DELEGATION OF POWER. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 5, 6.

DISCOUNT. See BANKS, 5, 6.

DISCRIMINATION. See LICENSE, 2.

DISEASE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Effect of previous disease of person injured, on liability for causing the injuries; causing death of diseased person; limitations and exceptions to the rule 268
16 L. R. A.

DIVIDENDS. See CORPORATIONS, 7, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

DIVORCE. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, 6-8, NOTES AND BRIEFS; JUDGMENT, 8; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 1.

DOGS. See ANIMALS; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 11.

DOMICIL. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, 6.

DOWER.

1. The right of dower extends to a share of the proceeds of mines although not opened until after the husband's death, where they are opened on lands held only for mining purposes and available only for the minerals, and the statutes give to the widow the "use during her natural life of one third of all the lands whereof her husband was seised" during marriage. Seager v. McCabe (Mich.) 247

2. A prior sale by a tenant in common of his undivided interest does not prevent the bar of his wife's inchoate right of dower by a subsequent sale in partition. Holley v. Glover (S. C.) 776

3. The inchoate right of dower of the wife of a tenant in common is defeated by a sale in partition of the common property, although she is not a party to the proceedings. Id.

4. A wife's inchoate right of dower may be released by her husband on his conveyance of the land, where she has given him a power of attorney under N. Y. Laws 1878, chap. 300, authorizing him to convey for her and in her name and as her act, and to sign, seal, execute, acknowledge, and deliver all necessary releases of dower and thirds. Wrunkow v. Oakley (N. Y.) 209

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Dower; release of inchoate right by attorney under power given by married woman. 209

Right to, in mines. 247

Effect of partition sale upon dower rights of one not a party. 776

DRAINS AND SEWERS. See also HIGHWAYS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

The power of municipal authorities over streets extends to the granting of permission to a private person to lay an under drain therein from his premises without consent of other persons who own abutting lots as well as the soil of the street over which the drain runs. Wood v. McGrath (Pa.) 715

DURESS. See also ASSUMPSIT, 2, 3.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Duress; by lien on real property. 876

EASEMENTS.

The right to fence a right of way is not given by a reservation in a deed, of "a reasonable right of way across the land." Sizer v. Quinlan (Wis.) 512

EJECTMENT.

A plaintiff in ejectment cannot rely upon a parol partition to establish his title to the cotenant's share of the premises. Sontag v. Bigelow (Ill.) 826

ELECTION DISTRICTS. See also CENSUS; EVIDENCE, 6; STATUTES, 1.

1. The discretion of the Legislature in making an apportionment of senatorial districts must be honestly and fairly exercised so as to preserve the equality of representation as nearly as may be; otherwise the apportionment will be unconstitutional. Giddings v. Blacker (Mich.) 402

2. There can be no legislative discretion to give a county of less population than another greater representation, under a constitution requiring representative districts to contain "as nearly as may be" an equal number of inhabitants. Houghton County v. Blacker (Mich.) 432

But see next case.

3. Discretion as to the apportionment is vested in the Legislature by a constitutional provision that members of Assembly shall be apportioned by it among the several counties of the state "as nearly as may be according to the number of their respective inhabitants," which the courts have no power to review unless it has been so abused as to clearly show an open and intended violation of the letter and spirit of the Constitution. People, Carter, v. Rice (N. Y.) 886

4. No abuse of the discretion vested in the Legislature as to the apportionment of members of Assembly is shown where each county has been given a member for every full ratio of representation which it contains, and the only inequalities alleged are in the distribution of the remaining members to counties having a smaller surplus over the ratio than other counties have; at least where the reason for such action was not partisan, and the fair inference is that it was absolutely necessary to secure the passage of the bill. Id.

5. A Legislature cannot be charged with unfairness in distributing the remaining members of Assembly among the counties after all full ratios are provided for, because it takes into account the losses sustained by the most populous counties by reason of the adoption of a certain ratio of representation rather than of some other more favorable to them, nor because it regards increases of population shown by the census. Id.

6. The provision of the New York Constitution requiring the omission of colored persons not taxed from the number of inhabitants in apportioning senate districts became inoperative when the Constitution was amended by striking out the provision limiting the liability of colored persons for taxes to those assessed upon real estate, and making the payment of taxes necessary to entitle them to vote; the plain intention of the people being to blot out all distinctions of a political nature between white and colored citizens. Id.

7. The Legislature has no power to divide a county in the apportionment of districts for the 16 L. R. A.

election of representatives, under the Michigan Constitution, which provides for the election of representatives by single districts equal, as nearly as may be, in population, and for which no township or city shall be divided; and also that if any county is entitled to more than one representative, the board of supervisors shall divide it into the requisite number of districts. Houghton County v. Blacker (Mich.) 432

8. An apportionment Act must be held entirely invalid where it divides a county in violation of the Constitution, and the effect of correcting the Act in this particular, and giving the county the representation to which it is entitled, would make one more representative than the Constitution permits. Id.

9. The words, "convenient and contiguous territory," in a constitutional provision as to the apportionment of election districts, do not mean contiguous in contact by land, when applied to counties which are composed of islands; and consequently Keweenaw and Isle Royal Counties in Michigan may be declared convenient and contiguous to other counties bordering on deep waters of the lake,—as, to Houghton County. Id.

10. Former apportionment Acts may be examined by the court when it is asked to set aside such an Act, for the purpose of finding a valid one which may be declared in force. People, Carter, v. Rice (N. Y.) 886

11. That the effect of setting aside an apportionment Act would be to cause every subsequent Act to be brought before the courts for review, which might happen at a critical time; to originate the greatest confusion as to an impending election, with a possible total suppression of it; and at all events to continue in force an Act containing greater inequalities than the one attacked,—is of itself sufficient to induce the court to say that only in case of plain and gross violation of the spirit and letter of the Constitution should it exercise such power. Id.

12. On holding an apportionment Act unconstitutional, election notices will be ordered to be given under the preceding Act if that was valid, unless a new Act shall be passed before it is necessary to give the notices. Houghton County v. Blacker (Mich.) 432

13. In holding an apportionment of senatorial districts unconstitutional, where the prior apportionment, which had been acquiesced in for three elections, was also subject to the same constitutional objections and was brought in question by the petition asking that notices be ordered to be given under it, the notices were ordered to be given under a still earlier apportionment Act the validity of which was not brought in question in those proceedings. Giddings v. Blacker (Mich.) 402

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Election districts; discretion of Legislature as to apportionment. 886

ELECTORS.

1. A state Legislature has power to direct that presidential electors shall be chosen by congressional districts, instead of by the state at large, under U. S. Const. art. 2, § 1, providing that each state shall choose electors "in such manner as the Legislature thereof may direct." McPherson v. Blacker (Mich.) 475

2. The constitutional provision as to the manner of choosing presidential electors is not affected by the 14th and 15th Amendments. Id.

8. Lack of any provision for filling the vacancy in case of the death of both an elector and an alternate elector does not make a statute providing for the election of presidential electors by congressional districts invalid. Id.

4. The invalidity of a provision as to the time of meeting of presidential electors, in a statute providing for the choice of such electors, which in that respect conflicts with an Act of Congress, does not make the whole Act inoperative. Id.

5. The lack of any provision in a statute providing for a choice of presidential electors by congressional districts, for a separate canvass of the votes cast in different electoral districts within one county, is not material, as the inspectors can designate the district in which an elector is voted for. Id.

6. Failure to provide for notice of the election of presidential electors is not a defect in a statute providing for such election by congressional districts, where the general statutes of the state sufficiently provide for notice of elections. Id.

ELECTRICAL USES AND APPLIANCES. See also HIGHWAYS, 4; TELEPHONES.

1. The failure of an electric-lighting company to have the "splices" on its wires perfectly insulated, as required by a city ordinance, constitutes negligence. Clements v. Louisiana Electric Light Co. (La.) 43

2. A person going on a roof to repair it, where an electric-light wire is stretched at such a height that the chances are that he will come in contact with it by going under it or by stepping over it, is not negligent in attempting to pass in either manner, if he exercises all necessary and prudent care in proportion to the danger. Id.

3. A person whose occupation brings him in proximity to the wires of an electric-lighting company has a right to believe that the wires have been insulated as required by an ordinance. Id.

4. A statute forbidding any other electric-light company to "lay or erect wires" for the purpose of carrying on its business, over or under any street, without consent of the authorities in any city or town in which a company is already engaged in furnishing electric light, impliedly forbids the maintenance or use, as well as the laying or erection, of such wires in streets; and the prohibition extends to wires in a street which were lawfully laid by a predecessor of the company, and to those laid by a company and sold to its customers, as well as to those which were laid and owned by the customers themselves, where these are mere devices to evade the statute, and the wires outside of the street lines are owned by the company. Attorney-General, Board of Gas & E. L. Comrs. v. Watworth Light & P. Co. (Mass.) 393

16 L. R. A.

EMINENT DOMAIN.

1. Condemnation of land for a private road to be laid out upon the application of a particular individual, and paid for and kept in repair by him, is for a public purpose where the road is in fact for public use by all who desire to use it. Latah County v. Peterson (Id.) 81

2. A private cemetery belonging to a religious corporation may be taken in condemnation proceedings for a public park, under N. Y. Laws 1887, chap. 820, giving power to condemn "any and all lands" within a district which includes the cemetery. Re Street Opening & Imp. Bd. (N. Y.) 180

3. The condemnation of a right of way for a railroad to be built by a manufacturing company to connect its manufacturing establishment with another railroad may be authorized by statute under S. C. Const. art. 1, § 28, declaring that private property shall not be taken or applied "for public use, or for the use of corporations, or for private use," without consent of the owner or just compensation, but providing that laws may secure to persons or corporations a right of way for works of internal improvement by payment of just compensation. Ex parte Bacot (S. C.) 588

4. A conveyance of a right of way across an infant's lands to a railroad company is not a dedication to public use without compensation because there was no money consideration, where it was made on a condition subsequent that a depot, station-house, and tank should be maintained upon the land. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Jordan (Miss.) 251

5. Authority given to a resident general guardian of an infant to agree with a railroad company upon the amount of damages for taking lands of the infant, or to release the claim or right to damages, does not require any condemnation of the property and ascertainment of the value before the guardian is authorized to make such agreement or release. Id.

6. A street railway in a street does not create an additional servitude. People, Kunze, v. Ft. Wayne & E. R. Co. (Mich.) 753

7. On the question whether or not a railway operated by a steam motor in a public street is an additional burden which an abutting owner may enjoin, the Michigan court is divided, two in the affirmative, two in the negative, and one holding that it is not settled. But it holds compensation must be made to the owner of the fee before a railway can be constructed along a highway by cutting and filling, using ties and T rails, and leaving a ditch on each side so as to practically block up for ordinary uses the portion of the highway where it is located. Nichols v. Ann Arbor & Y. Street R. Co. (Mich.) 871

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Eminent domain; constitutionality of condemnation proceedings to establish a private road; outlet for communication with the public; necessity of road, 81

- Condemnation of cemetery for public park. 180
 Sufficiency of notice to occupant only. 186

EQUITY.

1. A suit to compel a husband, if able, to support his wife, whom he has deserted and left destitute, is within the jurisdiction of equity,—especially where the Constitution provides that a speedy remedy shall be afforded for every injury of person, property, or character, and that right and justice shall be administered without sale, denial, or delay, while the statutes provide that a married woman shall have the same protection as a man for all her rights, and the same right to appeal in her own name alone to the courts of law or of equity. Edgerton v. Edgerton (Mont.) 94

2. Equity will not take jurisdiction of a suit seeking specific performance of a contract or damages for its breach, when, to the knowledge of plaintiff at the time of the commencement of the action and without fault of defendant, specific performance could not be enforced and there is no other ground for equitable interference. Morgan v. Bell (Wash.) 614

3. A suit in equity will lie to set aside a judgment quieting title to real estate, which was taken by default after notice by publication, where defendant had no actual notice of the action until the time for making a defense therein had elapsed, and plaintiff had no title to the property, but knowingly set out a false statement of cause of action in his complaint and in the affidavit for publication. Dunlap v. Steers (Cal.) 861

ESTOPPEL.

1. A village is estopped from denying the legal passage of an ordinance disconnecting part of its territory, after it has published the same in pamphlet form, and the town authorities have taken and maintained possession of such territory for several years, levied taxes, worked the roads, and built a bridge, while the village authorities have made no claim to jurisdiction over it. People, Colfax, v. Maxton (Ill.) 178

2. The publication in pamphlet form by village authorities of an ordinance is a sufficient affirmative act by the village on which to base an estoppel against denying its validity in case it is acted on, under a statute which provides that when ordinances are so printed the pamphlet shall be received as evidence of their passage and legal publication in all places without further proof. Id.

3. An estoppel may be the basis of a claim to establish a trust in land of which the defendants have both the legal title and the possession. Lindsay v. Cooper (Ala.) 813

4. Purchasers at a judicial sale, although for value and in good faith, are affected to the same extent as the person whose title they buy, by an estoppel in pais which prevented him from asserting the title. Id.

5. The silence of an administrator in respect to any individual title or claim to property sold by him in person as that of his intestate 26 L. R. A.

under order of the court, estops him and those who claim under him from afterwards setting up a legal title which he had at the time of the sale. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Estoppel; as to assertion of governmental power. 178

In pais upon defendant as basis for action to recover real estate. 818

EVIDENCE.Judicial notice.

1. Judicial notice will be taken that employes in mines and manufactories include but a part of those who are employed by others and who depend upon their daily labor for subsistence. Fraser v. People (Ill.) 493

2. Judicial notice may be taken of the length of time ordinarily required to complete an enumeration of the inhabitants of a state. People, Carter, v. Rice (N. Y.) 836

Presumptions and burden.

3. Plaintiff must show that he was not himself guilty of negligence, when the injury complained of could not have happened without the action of both parties. Clements v. Louisiana Electric Light Co. (La.) 43

4. A plaintiff administrator is not required in all cases to prove affirmatively that his intestate, killed at a railroad crossing, looked or listened for approaching trains. Hendrickson v. Great Northern R. Co. (Minn.) 261

5. No presumption of negligence on the part of a street-car company arises from the mere fact of injury, without his fault, to a passenger on one of its cars in consequence of a collision with a wagon on the highway. Hawkins v. Front Street Cable R. Co. (Wash.) 808

6. The court will not, in the absence of evidence on the question, presume the existence in one election district of more persons of a certain class which has been unlawfully included in the enumeration upon which an apportionment of members of the Legislature was founded than exist in other districts, for the purpose of establishing injury to the inhabitants of such district as a basis for setting aside the apportionment. People, Carter, v. Rice (N. Y.) 836

7. Where the statutes make real estate liable for taxes levied on personal property when they cannot be made out of the personalty, and direct the collector to select real estate for that purpose when it becomes necessary, it will be presumed, when the books show charges of unpaid personal taxes against land, that they were necessary because the taxes could not be made out of personalty, although it is not so stated on the return. Shelbyville Water Co. v. People, Craddock (Ill.) 505

8. A retail storekeeper who fails to return the watch and chain of a customer which is placed in his custody while the owner is trying on clothing has the burden of showing that he has exercised ordinary care for its safety, and of explaining his neglect to restore it. Woodruff v. Painter (Pa.) 451

9. The bound volumes of the legislative journals containing matter not contained in the journal as published from day to day, certified by the clerk, will be presumed to have been properly amended in such respect by authority of the Legislature, in determining whether a statute was duly passed. Detroit Common Council v. Rents (Mich.) 59

Documents.

10. That a bill of sale was acknowledged before a notary public there or elsewhere does not prove its execution in Missouri. Tittman v. Thornton (Mo.) 410

11. To entitle a bill of sale to admission in evidence, its execution must be proved according to the laws of the state where it is offered, notwithstanding it purports to have been executed in a state whose laws make acknowledgments of instruments of its class which have been recorded valid, and it is proved to have been recorded. Id.

12. A transcript of a record from another state properly authenticated by certificates of the judge and clerk of court as required by Act of Congress, which shows that the record is among those of the court of which they are officers, is prima facie admissible in evidence, although the record itself purports to belong to another court. It will be presumed to be in the right office until the contrary is made to appear. Id.

Parol.

13. A devise of land in the "northwest" quarter of a certain section of land cannot be shown by parol evidence to mean land in the southwest quarter, as such a change would amount to a reformation of the will. Bingel v. Vols (Ill.) 821

Opinions and conclusions.

14. One who takes a new certificate of deposit signed by a third person, instead of withdrawing his money, may testify that he would have withdrawn it if such person had not signed the certificate. Ballard v. Burton (Vt.) 664

15. A medical expert cannot, in an action to recover for injuries alleged to have been caused by a fall upon a defective sidewalk, be permitted to give his opinion as to the cause of the condition of a person in a hypothetical case stated to him, which embraces the evidence which has been introduced concerning the injured person, since it is a usurpation of the province of the jury. Jones v. Portland (Mich.) 487

16. That a physician is employed to examine a person who has been negligently injured, for the express purpose of giving his testimony in a suit to be brought for the injury, does not render such testimony incompetent; but that fact may be considered by the jury as affecting its weight. Id.

17. The opinions of railroad experts are not admissible on the question whether or not it is dangerous to run a train at a designated rate of speed, as that is a question which the jury are competent to decide. Fisher v. Oregon, S. L. & U. N. R. Co. (Or.) 519

Declarations.

18. Testimony as to statements made by the injured person to his attending physician, of 16 L. R. A.

how the accident happened, is not admissible in a suit to recover for alleged negligent injuries. Jones v. Portland (Mich.) 487

19. Testimony as to exclamations of pain, made by the injured person during the examination, cannot be given by a physician who has been employed to examine a person who contemplates suing for injuries received through another's negligence, for the express purpose of making him a witness in such suit. Id.

20. Testimony that, a short time after the alleged infliction of a personal injury, witness assisted the injured person to remove his coat, and that he complained of being hurt in the shoulder, is admissible in an action to recover for the injury, not as part of the res gesta, but as tending to show present pain and injury. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Murray (Ark.) 781

Relevancy.

21. Evidence that a note has been materially altered after execution is admissible on foreclosure of a mortgage securing it, under a general denial. Walton Plow Co. v. Campbell (Neb.) 463

22. Evidence of repairs to a place where an injury occurred is proper when admitted only for the purpose of showing acts of ownership or control over the place, and not as an admission of negligence. Skottow v. Oregon S. L. & U. N. R. Co. (Or.) 593

23. It is improper for counsel in an action to recover for injuries received by a fall on a sidewalk to offer, in the presence of the jury, to prove that other walks in the vicinity of where the accident occurred were defective, accompanying it by a positive statement that they are all unsafe; and it will be reversible error for the court to simply reject the offer without telling the jurors of its improper character and cautioning them not to be influenced by it. Jones v. Portland (Mich.) 487

24. Evidence of negligence in running the train is admissible under an allegation in the petition that plaintiff sustained injuries through the negligence of defendant's servants "while running, controlling, and managing its locomotive engine and train of cars. Gratiot v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Mo.) 189

25. Evidence that fires were repeatedly set out by sparks of unusual size from defendant's engines on that part of the line where the property was situated is admissible in an action to recover the value of property alleged to have been destroyed by fire set out by engines which cannot be identified, as tending to show general carelessness on the part of the company, when it has been shown that from the location of the destroyed property and the circumstances of the case the fire probably originated as alleged; but such proof must be confined to conditions existing at or about the time of the loss. Henderson v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. (Pa.) 290

26. On the question whether or not the drawing of traction engines over a bridge which had been built for many years was usual and ordinary, where there is proof of the passage of only one engine over it, evidence as to the passage of such engines over other bridges is inadmissible. Vermillion County v. Ohio

(Ind.) 223

27. Testimony as to the impressions upon the passenger's mind at the time of leaving the train, and his purpose in so doing, as to the actions of other passengers, and as to the possibility of real danger, is admissible upon the question of the prudence of his act, when he sues for injuries received, claiming that he was seeking to avoid imminent peril. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Murray (Ark.) 787

Weight and sufficiency.

28. Insolvency is shown prima facie so as to justify a suit in equity in a foreign state to reach property of a judgment debtor, by testimony of one of his neighbors that he owned a homestead of 5 acres on which he resided, a cow or two, and was reported to have a legacy in the foreign state, and of his attorney that he knew of no property owned by the debtor where the suit was brought. Tittman v. Thornton (Mo.) 410

29. The existence of a corporation whose ownership is alleged in an indictment is not sufficiently proved by evidence that certain persons were doing business under a company name and owned all the property of the company, and that a statute had been passed incorporating the company, where there is no further proof of any organization effected under the statute. State v. Murphy (R. I.) 550

30. A person was held not to be an innocent purchaser of land from heirs without notice that another person was also an heir, where he testified that he knew the latter well and was with him much in boyhood; also that he knew the mother for many years while she was living with her second husband, but did not know the relationship of the parties. Ross v. Morrow (Tex.) 542

31. Showing that loose boxes placed by the foreman of a gang of railroad laborers upon a car to be pushed along the track by a hand car, and remaining in his charge, came in contact with a station platform while the cars were in motion, causing injury to an employé on the hand car, makes out a prima facie case of negligence for which the company is responsible, without showing that the foreman could have prevented the boxes slipping, or that the slipping was not caused suddenly by a joint in the rails. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Northington (Tenn.) 268

32. Proof beyond a reasonable doubt is not necessary in an action to reform a written contract because of a mistake. Southard v. Ourley (N. Y.) 561

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Evidence; presumption as to exercise of due care by person found to have been killed by the alleged negligence of another; (a) presumption of care; application of presumption; question for court or jury; weight of presumption; overcoming presumption; (b) presumption of negligence; (c) where no presumption is allowed; burden of proof on plaintiff; burden on defendant. 261

Of negligence in setting fires by engines. 299
16 L. R. A.

Parol evidence of mistake in description of land devised. 821

EXECUTION. See REAL PROPERTY, 2.

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS. See also ACTION OR SUIT, 4; ESTOPPEL, 5.

1. An executor appointed by will cannot be rejected by the court except where the law has specially so provided. Smith's Appeal (Conn.) 538

2. A lack of honesty, integrity, and experience in business affairs, is not sufficient ground for rejecting an executor under a statute which allows the rejection of one who is "incapable to accept the trust." Id.

3. The vindication of the honor of his intestate is not a purpose for which an administrator can use funds of the estate by employing counsel to aid in prosecuting for murder one who killed the intestate and attacks his honor by matters which he alleges in justification of the crime. Woodard v. Woodard (S. C.) 748

4. Suit in a foreign state on a judgment recovered by an administrator in the state of his appointment may be maintained by him in his own name. Tittman v. Thornton (Mo.) 410

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Executor and administrator; requisite moral qualifications of. 538

EXPLOSIONS. See GAS, 1; INJUNCTION, 2.

FALSE IMPRISONMENT. See CARRIERS, 3.

FENCE. See EASEMENTS.

FIRE. See EVIDENCE, 25.

FIRE COMMISSIONERS. See OFFICERS, 10-12.

FIRE DEPARTMENT. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 11, 12.

FIREWORKS.

A voluntary spectator of a display of fireworks in a highway must be held to assume the risk of injury from accident without negligence, although the show is unauthorized. Seanton v. Wedger (Mass.) 895

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Fireworks; liability for injuries caused by the discharge of. 895

FISHERIES. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 8.

A lake wholly upon lands of a private owner, and connected with an unnavigable river only during times of high water, is included within a statutory prohibition against fishing with a seine during a certain part of the year in "any of the rivers, creeks, streams, ponds, lakes, sloughs, bayous, and other watercourses" within the state. People v. Bridges (Ill.) 684

FIXTURES. See also CONTRACTS 6, 7.

A barn placed by its owner upon his own land becomes real estate, although supported by stones resting upon the surface; and it will pass by any conveyance of the real estate. Leonard v. Clough (N. Y.) 805

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Fixtures; buildings as real estate. 806

FLATS. See WATERS.

FORGERY. See also INDICTMENT, ETC., 3.

Forgery is not a felony at common law. State v. Murphy (R. I.) 550

FRIGHT. See CARRIERS, 15.

FRUIT.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Classification of growing fruit as real or personal property. 108

GAS. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 7-10.

1. The explosion of nitro-glycerine in a gas well on one's own land, to increase the natural flow, is not an unlawful interference with the rights of other persons from whose land the gas is thereby drawn. People's Gas Co. v. Tyner (Ind.) 443

2. The agreement of a city to take gas for certain lamps for a specified time, and also for such additional lamps as the city council may from time to time direct, does not prevent the city from purchasing gas from any other company for any lamps except those specified. Vincennes v. Citizens Gaslight & C. Co. (Ind.) 485

3. An exclusive use of the streets of a city for gas pipes is not implied by an ordinance granting merely the privilege of laying gas mains and pipes, and also constituting a contract for a certain quantity of gas. Id.

GIFT. See CONTRACTS, 7.

GOODWILL.

1. Persons have no right to represent their business as the same formerly conducted by them, where that has been transferred, with all its assets, to other parties, although they have a right to do the same kind of business. Fish Bros. Wagon Co. v. Fish (Wis.) 453

2. The goodwill of a business, including the right to use trademarks, even where these consist of the names of individuals engaged in the business and of a picture representing such name, passes with a transfer of all the property and assets of the business, although not specifically mentioned. Id.

GUARDIAN AD LITEM. See INFANTS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

16 L. R. A.

GUARDIAN AND WARD. See EMINENT DOMAIN, 5.

HABITUAL CRIMINALS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 4.

HIGHWAYS. See also BRIDGES, 4; DRAINS AND SEWERS.

1. Lack of notice to the owner of premises, of proceedings to lay out a highway over them, is not fatal to jurisdiction if a tenant or other occupant was made a party and duly notified. Ryder v. Horsting (Ind.) 186

2. The grant of the right to lay a street railway in a street where the driveway is so narrow that but 8 feet 7½ inches will be left on each side of a street car for the passage of teams is not beyond the power of a city council. People, Kunes, v. Ft. Wayne & E. R. Co. (Mich.) 753

3. The regular use of a steam traction engine to draw heavy loads of stone from a quarry to a railroad, taking a train of two wagons at a time, and making two trips per day, each requiring from one hour to one hour and a half for one way, and sometimes stopping half an hour to get up steam, and frequently making much noise by blowing off steam,—constitutes an indictable nuisance where travel is thereby seriously hindered and women and children are afraid to drive that way; especially where the safety of bridges on the road is endangered by the heavy loads. Com. v. Allen (Pa.) 148

4. A traveler on a highway who stoops to pick up and throw out of the way a loose telephone wire which is hanging so as to endanger travelers is not, as matter of law, guilty of such negligence as to prevent him from recovering against the city for the injury received from the wire, which is charged with electricity, on the ground that it is a defect in the highway. Bourget v. Cambridge (Mass.) 605

5. The want of a barrier along a steep bank beside a highway is not the proximate cause of injury to a passenger in an omnibus which went over the bank while the horse drawing it was struggling to get up after repeated falls, each of which took it nearer to the bank, where the horse first fell in the middle of the street, which was in good condition. Herr v. Lebanon (Pa.) 106

6. The discontinuance of part of a street does not entitle a landowner to any damages if his access to the system of public streets remains substantially unimpaired, although he finds travel less convenient and his shop has suffered by the diversion of travel. Stanwood v. Malden (Mass.) 591

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Highways; damage of property-owner by discontinuance of. 591

Lawfulness of the use of steam traction engine on. 148

Use of, for railroad. 371

Right of one injured on, to proceed in the first instance against the one ultimately liable. 554

Power of municipality to authorize use of for private drain. 716

HOUSE OF CORRECTION.

1. The commitment of a child to a state reform school by a justice of the peace is not in violation of a constitutional provision giving jurisdiction in all matters of guardianship to the probate courts. State, Olson, v. Brown (Minn.) 691

2. A minor committed to the care and custody of a state reform school on the charge of incorrigibly vicious conduct is not "punished" or "imprisoned," within the meaning of constitutional provisions as to criminal prosecutions. Id.

HUSBAND AND WIFE. See also BILLS AND NOTES, 2; EQUITY, 1; JUDGMENT, 8; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 1.

1. A common-law marriage is not valid under a statute requiring a license for a marriage, and providing that certain persons shall be authorized to perform the ceremony, and expressly providing, further, that a marriage shall not be void because solemnized by a person not legally authorized to perform it if the parties to the marriage or either of them believe they are lawfully married, and also that marriages solemnized before or in any religious organization or congregation, according to the ritual or form commonly practiced therein, shall be valid. Re McLaughlin's Estate (Wash.) 699

2. A minor's marriage valid in the state where it is made is not invalid in the state of his residence because of the fact that he went out of the state to be married, for the sole purpose of evading a statutory provision requiring his father's consent. Com. v. Graham (Mass.) 578

3. An infant husband is entitled to his own wages so far as they are necessary for his own support and that of his wife and children, even if he married without his father's consent. Id.

4. A married woman cannot become her husband's partner in a mercantile business by virtue of a constitutional right to hold separate property, and of statutory provisions authorizing her to transfer her separate personal property and carry on any trade or business. Glickerson-Sloss Commission Co. v. Salinger (Ark.) 526

5. A partnership between husband and wife is not authorized by a statute providing that a wife may make contracts and incur liabilities as if unmarried, and giving her full power to manage and dispose of her own property, and also declaring that all laws which impose or recognize civil disabilities upon a wife that do not exist as to her husband are abolished. Seattle Bd. of Trade v. Hayden (Wash.) 580

6. The legal fiction that a wife's domicile follows that of her husband gives jurisdiction of a suit for divorce on the ground of the wife's desertion, to a court of a state to which the husband has removed and in which he has resided for the time required by statute, although the marriage took place in another state in which the wife still resides, and in which her desertion began, and in which service is made upon her. Loker v. Gerald (Mass.) 497

7. Acts causing mental suffering, although not affecting bodily health, may constitute extreme cruelty under Cal. Civ. Code, § 94, which defines it as the "infliction of grievous bodily injury or grievous mental suffering." Barnes v. Barnes (Cal.) 660

8. A cause of action for divorce is not taken away by the repeal of the statute under which it arose, without any saving clause, where this is accompanied by a new statute prescribing the same grounds for divorce although making the requirements less. Tufts v. Tufts (Utah) 482

9. A statutory provision for alimony when a divorce is granted does not by implication exclude a right of action to enforce a husband's obligation to furnish his wife maintenance independent of a proceeding for divorce. Edgerton v. Edgerton (Mont.) 94

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Husband and wife; partnership between. 526

Right of action for separate maintenance. 94

Domicil of wife for purpose of divorce suit. 497

Cruelty as cause for divorce. 660

ICE.

An appropriation of ice on a great pond belonging to the public is not made by one who has made no preparations to cut the ice except to dig a ditch the preceding fall for the purpose of floating in the ice, and who merely stakes out a portion of the pond in the nighttime, and serves notice the next morning of his claim thereto, as against another whose workmen are engaged in cutting it when the notice is served, and who had not only kept it free from snow and surface water, but had cut the lily-pads in the pond before the ice began to form, and who continued to cut the ice without regard to the notice and without any further action by the former. Barrett v. Rockport Ice Co. (Me.) 774

IGNORANCE OF LAW. See MAXIMS, 1.

INCOME. See CORPORATIONS, 7, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

INCOMPETENT PERSONS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Belief in spiritualism, witchcraft, etc., as affecting capacity to make will or deed. 677

INDICTMENT AND INFORMATION.

1. An information filed by the state's attorney is invalid under N. D. Const. § 97, art. 4, requiring all prosecutions to be carried on in the name and by the authority of the state, where the state is not named as a party, or any averment made, directly or indirectly, that defendant is prosecuted in the name or by authority of the state, although it does appear on its face that it was filed by the state's attorney. State v. Hasledahl (N. D.) 150

2. A verification by the state's attorney of an information filed in lieu of an indictment, under N. D. Laws 1890, chap. 71, § 8, is sufficient in form where it states that the allegations therein contained are true to his best knowledge, information, and belief. Id.

3. An indictment for forgery need not allege that the offense was feloniously committed. State v. Murphy (R. I.) 550

4. There is no duplicity in an indictment for forgery, by reason of an allegation that defendant had in his custody a false, forged, and counterfeit order, and did feloniously utter and publish the same as true, knowing it to be forged. Id.

5. An indictment charging an agreement to burn a building, and that in pursuance of such agreement the building was burned, is not bad for duplicity as charging both conspiracy to commit arson, and arson, since the conspiracy was merged in the consummated act of burning. Hoyt v. People (Ill.) 239

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Indictment; use of word "feloniously" in. 550

INFANTS. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 14; EMINENT DOMAIN, 5; HOUSE OF CORRECTION; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 8; TRIAL, 6.

1. A person becomes of age on the day before his twenty-first birthday. Ross v. Morrow (Tex.) 542

2. The statutory right of a parent to the custody of his children is not absolute. Whether or not he shall have it in case he is intemperate and shiftless will be determined by a consideration of their best interests. Re Lally (Iowa) 681

3. A widower, intemperate, without work, and with no property but a homestead, loses all right to the custody of his child in favor of one who legally adopts it, by leaving it at a neighbor's, substantially without clothing, with the promise to send for it in a few days, and then leaving the city and remaining away ten weeks without contributing anything toward its support; especially where his only resource for its support is the indefinite promise of the tenant of his homestead—a poor man—to support the child for the use of the property, which is not adequate compensation for the service. Id.

4. The alleged reformation of an intemperate widower is not sufficient to cause the restoration to him of his child, which has been adopted and given a good home by relatives, when such reformation, if it exists at all, must have occurred within a few weeks of his application for the child. Id.

5. A promise by an intemperate father to quit drinking is not sufficient to cause the withdrawal of his children from the custody of 16 L. R. A.

a competent guardian and their restoration to him. Id.

6. No notice to an infant is necessary in order to make valid the act of his general guardian, under statutory authority, in transferring a right of way across his lands to a railroad company. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Jordan (Miss.) 251

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Infants; control of guardian ad litem or next friend over action. 507

On what day a person becomes of age. 542

How far marriage of, works emancipation. 578

Commitment to reformatories without conviction of crime. 691

INJUNCTION.

1. The fact that an act which is dangerous to life and property constitutes a crime will not prevent an injunction against it on the application of a private citizen whose residence and family are endangered. People's Gas Co. v. Tyner (Ind.) 443

2. An injunction may be granted to prevent the explosion of nitro-glycerine in a gas well within a city, so near the residence of the complainant as to endanger life and property therein. Id.

3. Mere usurpation of corporate authority to construct a street railway will not entitle an abutting owner to maintain an injunction suit to prevent such construction. Nichols v. Ann Arbor & Y. Street R. Co. (Mich.) 371

4. An injunction against the slander of title of letters patent by falsely and maliciously charging infringement, and notifying plaintiff's prospective customers that they will be held responsible for using plaintiff's device, thereby injuring plaintiff's business by unfair competition,—will not be granted until the question of slander has been determined in an action at law. Flint v. Hutchinson Smokes Burner Co. (Mo.) 243

But see next case.

5. An injunction may be granted to restrain defendants from using a decree in a patent case, which they have obtained by fraud and collusion, in any way or form to influence or threaten any person from purchasing articles from the complainant, by claiming that the decree is an adjudication upon the merits as to the validity of the patent. Grand Rapids School Furniture Co. v. Haney School Furniture Co. (Mich.) 721

6. A full, complete, and adequate remedy at law for illegality of a tax, furnished by notice and opportunity to defend in the tax proceeding, will prevent an injunction against collection of the tax. Boyd v. Selma (Ala.) 729

7. On an application for a mere temporary injunction, the sufficiency of the complaint will not be tested as by a demurrer, if it presents a proper subject for investigation. People's Gas Co. v. Tyner (Ind.) 443

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Injunction; against false statement as to plaintiff's property or business. 243

INNKEEPERS.

1. One does not lose the character of guest at a hotel merely by inquiring the price of room and board before being assigned to a room, where no agreement is made as to the time of staying and no reduction made from the price charged to transient guests. Fay v. Pacific Imp. Co. (Cal.) 188

2. The fact that a hotel stands in enclosed grounds the gates of which are closed at night does not prevent it from being a public inn, when the patronage of the public generally is solicited. Id.

3. Jewelry daily worn by a woman who is a guest of a hotel need not be deposited with the innkeeper in order to make him liable for its loss by fire. Id.

INSOLVENCY.

A discharge under state insolvency laws will not release a judgment obtained in another state upon a contract made there, if the creditor does not participate in the insolvency proceedings, although he resides within the jurisdiction of the court granting the discharge, and the judgment appeared on the insolvent's schedule. Lowenberg v. Levine (Cal.) 159

INSURANCE. See also CORPORATIONS, 9-12.

1. A false warranty by an applicant for life insurance, that he has not been rejected by any other company, avoids a contract of which it becomes a part, although he believed it to be true, while the agent of the insurer knew it to be false, having received and forwarded the former application and been notified of its rejection, if the agent did not fraudulently conceal the fact from the applicant. Clemans v. Supreme Assem. R. S. of G. F. (N. Y.) 88

2. Under a clause requiring a suit within one year from the time of the "accidental injury," in a policy of accident insurance providing a weekly indemnity for the insured in case of such injury, and a death indemnity for his wife in case of his death therefrom, the limitation period for her suit begins to run at his death, and not at the time of the accident to him. Cooper v. United States Mut. Acci. Assn. (N. Y.) 188

3. There is not a loss of a foot, within the meaning of an accident insurance policy, where the foot is not even injured and can be used, when the person wears a "plaster jacket" to prevent an injury in another part of his body from affecting the use of the foot. Stever v. People's Mut. Acci. Ins. Assn. (Pa.) 446

4. Notice that three stores belonging to the same person are all located at the foot of the same street is not notice that they are all in the same building. German-American Ins. Co. v. Commercial F. Ins. Co. (Ala.) 291

5. The existence of brick partitions extending above the roof and dividing a building into stores or sections will not constitute each section a separate building or the goods therein a separate risk, within the meaning of a reinsurance contract limiting the amount of insurance to be placed on any one "building or 16 L. R. A.

risk," if all the sections are enclosed by a common exterior wall and are all under one management and devoted to the same use, while the floors of the different stories are on the same level and connected by large doors through the partitions. Id.

6. A policy of insurance for $200 on a storehouse and $3,800 on goods therein is so far severable that a forfeiture as to the building by breach of a condition as to the title to the land will not defeat the insurance on the goods. Coleman v. New Orleans Ins. Co. (Ohio) 174

7. Claiming exemption from liability for a loss on one ground will not prevent an insurance company from subsequently setting up another defense based upon facts of which, solely through the negligence of the insured, it was ignorant at the time of making its first defense. German-American Ins. Co. v. Commercial F. Ins. Co. (Ala.) 291

8. Failure of one insurance company to object to risks contained in schedules sent to it by another company, a certain amount of whose risks it has made a compact to reinsure, will not amount to an acquiescence on which the latter can rely in case they are not covered by the compact, since reliance may be placed on the good faith of the other company and its acting within the contract, without the necessity of making a personal investigation of the property covered by each schedule. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Insurance; effect of agent's knowledge of falsity of statements in application; agent's perversion of information by the insured; agent's falsely filling up blanks; misconstruction of facts by agent. 88

Limitation of time to bring suit for. 188

Severability of contract. 174

JOINT-STOCK COMPANY.

A joint stock company created solely by agreement of the members, and in which their individual rights and liabilities are not merged as in the case of a corporation, is not taxable on its capital as a "stock corporation." People, Winchester, v. Coleman (N. Y.) 188

JUDGMENT. See also EQUITY, 8; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 6; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 3, 4.

1. Service by publication alone, which is shown by the record to be the only service, does not give jurisdiction to render a personal judgment against the defendant in a bastardy proceeding, in the absence of a statute providing for such service. Moyer v. Bucks (Ind.) 281

2. A judgment in favor of a minor in an action brought by his father as next friend, which includes damages for loss of earning capacity from the time of injuries occasioned by defendant's negligence, is a bar to an action by the father personally to recover for loss of services of the son during minority. Baker v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. (Mich.) 154

3. A judgment of divorce cannot be collaterally attacked as void because the appearance of the wife by an attorney was authorized only by a letter of authority which her husband compelled her to write and sign, where such facts did not appear on the record. Edgerton v. Edgerton (Mont.) 94

See also HUSBAND AND WIFE, 6.

4. The suspension of a judgment pending an appeal under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1256, by entry of the words "Lien suspended on appeal," suspends the lien of the judgment pending the appeal, not only as to the property then subject to the lien of the judgment, but as to after-acquired property. Wronkow v. Oakley (N. Y.) 209

5. A judgment debtor who is in fact only a surety of a codefendant may, on payment of the judgment, take an assignment thereof which will be valid although there has been no adjudication of his suretyship and that fact is not indicated on the face of the judgment. Frank v. Fraylor (Ind.) 115

6. The assignment of a judgment which does not purport to be satisfied, to one of the judgment debtors, is sufficient to put a purchaser of a subsequent judgment on inquiry as to the rights of the assignee as surety. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Judgment; validity of personal judgments rendered upon constructive service of process; against nonresidents (1) in states other than where rendered, (2) in state where rendered; against residents; what property subject to, for alimony or costs. 281

Priority of lien of judgment or of prior unrecorded conveyance; in absence of express statutory definition; by virtue of statutes; effect of notice on rank of lien of judgment; priority of right of purchaser at sale under judgment; when judgment creditor purchases at sale. 669

Relief from, when rendered on publication of process. 561

Right of surety who has paid judgment to enforce it for his own benefit; at law; in equity; under statutes. 115

JUDICIAL SALE. See ESTOPPEL, 4.

JURY. See TRIAL, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.

1. A representation that the plumbing is in good order, made on the lease of a dwelling, although false, does not affect the liability of the lessee for rent, if the statement was made in the belief that it was true. Daly v. Wise (N. Y.) 236

2. A covenant that a dwelling is fit for residence is not implied on the lease of the whole of an unfurnished dwelling for a definite term, under a single contract which contains no covenant that the premises are in good repair, or that the lessor will put or keep them so. Id.

3. In a lease of a completely furnished dwelling-house for a summer season at a summer watering-place, there is an implied agreement that the house is fit for habitation without greater preparation than the tenant might reasonably be expected to make. Ingalls v. Hobbs (Mass.) 51

4. Bugs infesting a summer-house at a watering-place, which is hired already furnished for the season, may render it so unfit for habitation that the tenant may be relieved from the agreement. Id.

5. The risk of defects in a tenement building, such as unsafe outside steps, is assumed by one who goes there to attend a wake,—at least where there is nothing to show that he had an invitation or was in any way related to any of the occupants. Hart v. Cole (Mass.) 557

6. A landlord can forcibly eject a tenant without legal possession after the expiration of the tenancy, although he holds possession in good faith under color and reasonable claim of right. Allen v. Keily (R. I.) 793

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Landlord and tenant; misrepresentations as to condition of building. 236

Landlord's liability to third persons. 640

Liability of landlord to tenant for forcible expulsion after termination of tenancy; in England; the prevalent American rule; a different view. 798

LATERAL SUPPORT. See also MASTER AND SERVANT, 15.

One who promises the adjoining owner that in digging near the wall of the latter's building he will excavate and lay up his wall one section at a time is liable for the fall of the building, where, after laying one section of his wall, he causes the fall of the building by digging a long and dangerous trench without notice of his change of plan. Larson v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. (Mo.) 330

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Lateral support; excavations near neighbor's land. 330

LEGISLATURE. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 14.

LEVY AND SEIZURE. See also REAL PROPERTY, 2.

Blackberries while growing on the bushes are not subject to levy on execution as real property. Sparrow v. Pond (Minn.) 103

LIBEL AND SLANDER. See also DAMAGES, 2, 8; INJUNCTION, 4, 5.

Maliciously filing a mechanics' lien without authority of law, with intent to injure the business of the owner of the property, constitutes an actionable libel, where it results in damage by loss of credit and customers. Moore v. Rolin (Va.) 625

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also INJUNCTION.

Libel; by filing lien.

625

LICENSE. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 10; CONTRACTS, 10, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

1. A city cannot levy an occupation tax on persons not similarly taxed by the state under Tex. Const. art. 8, § 1, providing that such taxes by any county, city, or town "shall not exceed one half of the tax levied by the state for the same period on such profession or business." Hoefling v. San Antonio (Tex.) 608

2. A borough ordinance which discriminates against nonresidents by prohibiting all persons from peddling or selling goods from house to house without a license, which is fixed at so high a figure that it amounts to prohibition, but which excepts residents of the borough from its provisions, is void. The borough can have no better right to adopt discriminating trade regulations than the state has. Sayre v. Phillips (Pa.) 49

LIENS. See also ACTION OR SUIT, 8; LIBEL AND SLANDER.

1. Liens of subcontractors attach by relation as of the date of the commencement of the work, where a building is constructed under one entire contract between the owner and the original contractor; and they are entitled to a preference over a mortgage on the premises executed by the owner subsequent to that date. Glass v. Freeburg (Minn.) 335

2. A mechanics' lien cannot be preferred to a prior unrecorded mortgage, in the absence of any statutory provision to that effect, unless the mortgagee is estopped on equitable principles from asserting the lien of his mortgage as against the lien claimants. Miller v. Stoddard (Minn.) 268

3. Services by an architect in the preparation of drawings, plans, and specifications for a building, and in superintending its erection, are "work or labor upon . . . a building or improvement on land," within the meaning of a statute providing for mechanics' liens. Hughes v. Torgerson (Ala.) 600

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also JUDGMENT.

Relation back of subcontractor's lien to the date of that of the original contractor. 335

Right of architect to mechanics' lien; simply furnishing plans; superintending. 600

LIFE TENANTS. See CORPORATIONS, 7.

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS. See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, 8; INSURANCE, 2; TIME.

1. A general statute of limitations does not apply to an action for divorce. Tufts v. Tufts (Utah) 482

2. A right of action to establish an interest in property purchased at a judicial sale under an invalid title, for which purchase-money notes are given on receiving a bond for title, does not accrue until the notes are paid. Lindsay v. Cooper (Ala.) 818

3. An action upon the judgment of a sister state must be brought in Kansas within five 16 L. R. A.

years, or it will be barred. Rice v. Moore (Kan.) 198

4. The bar of the Statute of Limitations against a judgment rendered in another state is not removed by a revivor of the judgment in that state, without appearance by or service upon the defendant. Id.

LOST INSTRUMENTS.

An action at law on a lost negotiable note cannot be maintained. Butler v. Joyce (D. C.) 205 MAINTENANCE. See HUSBAND AND WIFE, 9, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

MANDAMUS.

1. An objection that a private citizen as relator in a petition for mandamus has not made any application to the attorney-general to institute the proceeding is not valid where the attorney-general is shown to be adverse to the application by his appearance for the respondent. Giddings v. Blacker (Mich.) 402

2. A writ of mandamus will not be issued to compel the secretary of state to receive and file a certificate of the vote of a corporation to change its name as provided by statute, where this would result in the use of the same name by two corporations, with a possible conflict of interests and litigation, under statutes which show an intention to prevent the use of the same name by two or more corporations. Illinois Watch Case Co. v. Pearson (Ill.) 429

MANUFACTURING. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 18.

MARRIAGE. See HUSBAND AND WIFE; WILLS, 1.

MASTER AND SERVANT. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 18; DEATH, 2.

1. A head brakeman of a construction train in the temporary absence of the conductor at a station has no implied authority to engage a bystander to get on the cars and assist in switching. Church v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (Minn.) 861

2. A person who gets on a freight train to assist in switching, on request of the head brakeman during the conductor's temporary absence, is a mere volunteer who assumes all the risks of the situation. Id.

3. A railroad company is liable for negligently loading a car with lumber or iron projecting over the end so as to make it dangerous to employes in coupling the car, and in negligently accepting such car for coupling and transportation in such unsafe condition, where a brakeman is injured in consequence thereof. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. v. Galvin (Fla.) 887

4. A brakeman on a freight train assumes the risk of injury from iron or lumber projecting over the end of a car which he is attempting to couple with another, where cars so loaded are frequently allowed in the train on which he works. Id.

5. The fact that loaded cars were received by a railroad company from another road does not relieve the company from liability for injuries to a brakeman, caused by the improper manner in which they were loaded. Dewey v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. (Mich.) 342

6. A master is liable for an injury to a servant, the proximate cause of which is the resultant of the combined negligence of the master himself and of a fellow servant. Lutz v. Atlantic & P. R. Co. (N. M.) 819

7. The maintenance of a telltale intended to warn brakemen of the approach of a train to a bridge, which is unsafe for brakemen on a portion of the cars, which are of unusual height, is a breach of the railroad company's duty to provide safe appliances, although it is safe for cars of the ordinary height. Darling v. New York, P. & B. R. Co. (R. I.) 648

8. A brakeman does not assume the risk of an unsafe telltale intended to give warning of approach to a bridge, and which should not be in itself a source of any danger,—especially where it is dangerous to brakemen on cars of more than ordinary height. Id.

9. A snowslide, being usually mingled with gravel and rock, is a dangerous obstruction to a railroad, distinct in nature from a snowdrift; and a section foreman having knowledge of such an obstruction to the track must give notice thereof to the managers of the road and to the conductor of an approaching train if he has opportunity. Fisher v. Oregon, S. L. & U. N. R. Co. (Or.) 519

10. The conductor of a train ordered to run as an extra to carry snow shovellers to a certain station beyond which the road is blockaded does not assume the risk of a snowslide between the stations on the trip he is ordered to run. Id.

11. A section foreman stands in place of his master in respect of the duty to give notice of a dangerous obstruction on the track, and is not as to his negligence in failing to do so a fellow servant of a conductor who is injured by reason of such obstruction. Id.

12. An inspector of cars is not a fellow servant of a brakeman so as to relieve the railroad company from liability for injury to the latter while coupling cars, caused by the negligent loading of a car so that lumber projected over the end. Dewey v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. (Mich.) 342

13. A conductor in charge of a railroad train, with a right to command and to control its movements, who leaves it standing on the main line along which another train due and expected by him has a right to pass, but which he fails to use ordinary care to warn or notify of such obstruction in its way, whereby a collision takes place, is not the fellow servant of a brakeman on the other train so as to relieve the company of liability for injury to the brakeman caused by the negligence of the conductor. Daniel v. Cheasapeake & O. R. Co. (W. Va.) 888

14. A yard master in lawful command and control of a train as a conductor for the occasion is a conductor within the meaning of the rule making him a vice-principal as regards a brakeman on another train with which his train has a collision. Id.

15. One who employs a contractor to excavate for a building is not relieved of liability for the fall of a building on adjacent premises caused by digging a trench too long and deep alongside the wall, by the fact that the work was done by a contractor, where the contract stipulated that the employer's engineer should be in charge of the work, with power to order the discharge of men who refused to obey his orders, and where by an authorized assistant he did in fact order the trench to be dug as it was dug. Larson v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. (Mo.) 830

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also CONTRACTS.

Master and servant; assumption of risk as to condition of railroad track. 519

The relation of the proximate-cause doctrine to the rule of liability of a master for injuries to his servant caused by the combined negligence of himself and a fellow servant; proximate cause; "a" proximate cause as distinguished from "the" proximate cause; right to consider relative negligence; liability exists where master's negligence was an essential element; cases where the negligence of the master is the efficient cause. 819

Who is a volunteer. 861

Liability of master for torts of servant. 126

MAXIMS.

1. The maxim that ignorance of law is no excuse for nonperformance of a contract has no application where the mistake is as to the laws of a state of the Union other than that of the contractor's domicile. Morgan v. Bell (Wash.) 614

2. Nemo debet esse iudex in propria sui causa. Kelly v. Lynchburg & D. R. Co. (N. C.) 514

3. Qui facit per alium facit per se. Union P. R. Co. v. Lapsley (C. C. App. 8th C.) 800

4. Volenti non fit injuria. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Minor (Miss.) 637

MERCHANT. See BAILMENT, 2.

MINES. See DOWER, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

MISTAKE. See also MAXIMS, 1.

Mistake as to the extent of his right, under the community law, to property which a man contracts to convey, is not a mistake of law from which equity will refuse to grant relief. Morgan v. Bell (Wash.) 614

MONOPOLIES. See ELECTRICAL USES AND APPLIANCES, 4.

MORTGAGE. See also ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS, 2; CONFLICT OF LAWS, 3; CONTRACTS, 18, 19; DEDICATION, 4; LIENS, 2; TAXES, 5-9, 19, 20, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Mortgage; release of mortgagor as surety

by mortgagee's dealing with vendee, who has assumed the mortgage. 85

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS. See also CEMETERY; LICENSE, 2.

1. A proposed amendment to a city charter may be amended at its second consideration by the city council, and then submitted to a vote of the people without further consideration by the council after another publication period of ten days, under a charter which provides that amendments to itself may be proposed in either House, and if agreed to they shall be entered on the journals and published for ten consecutive days, and shall then be resubmitted to each House and pursue the same course as is pursued by any ordinance, and if then agreed to and not vetoed, or if passed over a veto, shall be submitted to the voters for ratification. State, Wiesensthal, v. Denny (Wash.) 214

2. The existence of confusion on the part of the voters, and inability to decide which way to vote upon proposed amendments to a city charter, which are caused by the submission of so many at once, will not invalidate the election, although it is increased by splitting up the original propositions as adopted by the council and published, into more than twice as many for submission to the voters, if the notice of election accurately numbered and described the final subdivisions, and the ballots referred to the numbers so given. Id.

3. Needless separation in submitting them to the voters, of two proposed amendments to a city charter which are indispensable to each other, will not cause the rejection of either or both if each has received a majority of the vote and such separation is justified by the law. Id.

4. A city charter cannot require for its amendment a majority of all the voters voting at the election at which a proposed amendment is submitted, if the State Constitution provides for the ratification of such a proposed amendment by a majority of the qualified voters voting thereon. Id.

5. An ordinance which is in effect an offer by a city, when accepted, creates a contract to be construed and interpreted like any other written contract. Vincennes v. Citizens Gas-light Co. (Ind.) 485

6. The passage of an ordinance constituting an offer which is accepted as a contract, if the contract is included within the terms of a prior ordinance requiring proposals for work, is a repeal of the prior ordinance pro tanto. Id.

7. An ordinance granting the privilege to lay gas mains and pipes in the city streets for twenty-five years on certain conditions, containing a provision that the city shall take sufficient gas for certain lamps, without mentioning any other period, makes a contract to take the quantity of gas specified for a term of twenty-five years. Id.

8. A municipal contract for gas, being the exercise of a purely business power, is not void as a surrender of legislative power. Id.

9. A city has power to contract for a supply of gas or water for a reasonable period of time extending beyond the tenure of office of the individual members of the common council making such contract. Id.

10. Twenty-five years cannot be said to be an unreasonable time for which to contract for the supply of light or water to a city. Id.

11. A city is not liable at common law for the negligent acts of members of its fire department. Gillespie v. Lincoln (Neb.) 849

12. The reckless driving of a member of the city fire department while merely exercising a team of horses in the street on a ladder wagon or truck, by which he runs over and kills a child, does not render the city liable. Id.

13. The removal of a councilman from the ward for which he was elected to another ward of the same city will not of itself create a vacancy in his office, where the only constitutional provision as to the residence of municipal officers provides that they shall reside "within their respective counties, townships, and towns," while the statutes provide that a councilman must at the time of his election "be a resident of the ward, and in case of removal therefrom" the common council shall have power to declare his office vacant and order a special election to fill the vacancy. State, Hartford, v. Craig (Ind.) 683

14. A member of a city council is not an officer of the ward from which he is chosen, but of the entire city. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Municipal corporations; discrimination by municipality between its own residents and other residents of the same state. 49

Ordinance as contract. 485

Authority of Legislature to remove from trusteeship. 695

NAME. See CORPORATIONS, 3, 4; TRADE-MARKS.

NATURAL GAS.

Notes and briefs. 443

NEGLIGENCE. See also CARRIERS, 16-18; DEATH, 1; ELECTRICAL USES AND APPLIANCES, 1-3; FIREWORKS; HIGHWAYS, 4; LANDLORD AND TENANT, 5; TELEPHONES.

1. The violation of a duty specified by law is negligence. Clements v. Louisiana Electric Light Co. (La.) 48

2. To constitute contributory negligence of a person employed, in the presence of known danger, he must voluntarily and unnecessarily expose himself to it. Id.

3. Failure to use ordinary care to avoid injuring another after one becomes aware or ought to become aware of the other's danger will create a liability for injury thereby caused, although the other party had negligently exposed himself to the injury. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Kasen (Ohio) 674

4. Contributory negligence is not a defense to an action for wanton or reckless injuries. Florida Southern R. Co. v. Hirst (Fla.) 631

5. The negligence of the owner of a carriage in driving his team is not imputable to one riding with him at his invitation and who has no authority over him. Union P. R. Co. v. Lapeley (C. C. App. 8th C.) 800

6. Permitting the stairway in the rear of a private residence to become decayed and unsafe does not constitute a nuisance as to the occupant of an adjoining house, so as to entitle him to damages from its owner if he is injured while attempting to use it for purposes of his own. Sterger v. Van Siclen (N. Y.) 640

7. A property-owner owes no duty to one who goes upon his premises in search of a child who is accustomed to play there, to have stairways thereon in a safe condition, the neglect of which will render him liable for injuries received by such person in consequence of the breaking of a step. Id.

8. One who, without invitation and merely to pay a friendly call on the operator, visits a telegraph office located on railroad land near the track, in which office he was formerly employed and which is owned and occupied by a railroad company for its own purposes and convenience, although occasional messages are sent and received for outside parties for pay, is a mere voluntary licensee subject to the concomitant risks and perils, and no recovery can be had for his death caused by a collision of trains which wrecked the office, unless it was due to gross negligence of the agents or employés of the company. Manning v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. (W. Va.) 271

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also DISEASE.

Negligence; liability for injury to licensees on premises. 271

In escaping apparent danger. 787

Imputation of. 800

NEGROES. See CIVIL RIGHTS; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 9.

NEW TRIAL.

1. Surprise occasioned by the refusal to admit a bill of sale in evidence because not proved to have been properly executed is not a good cause for new trial, where such proof could have been procured by the use of ordinary diligence. Vittman v. Thornton (Mo.) 410

2. A joking remark to the jury, that they can have "all night if necessary," in answer to the foreman's promise to knock at a certain time and let the court know if they had agreed, made by an officer sent to inquire if there was prospect of agreement, is not to be regarded as a threat to keep them out all night, or as putting such a constraint upon them as to render their verdict void, where it does not appear that any prejudice resulted from it. Darling v. New York, P. & B. R. Co. (R. I.) 643

3. The affidavit of a juror to his belief that a message of the court and the remark of an officer influenced the verdict is not conclusive of the fact, even if it is to be held competent evidence. Id.

4. A motion for a new trial must be made 16 L. R. A.

within the time fixed by the statute, or all errors occurring at the trial are waived. McKinney v. State (Wyo.) 710

NEXT FRIEND. See INFANTS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

NITRO-GLYCERINE. See GAS, 1; INFUNCTION, 2.

NOTARY. See ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

NOTICE. See also EMINENT DOMAIN, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

1. Notice which a statute requires "to be served upon every person" must be a personal service, but is not required to be made in any particular mode if it is actually conveyed to the person to be notified. Wilson v. Trenton (N. J. Err. & App.) 200

2. Leaving a copy of a notice at a person's residence with a member of his family, without proof of actual delivery to him, is not sufficient compliance with a statute requiring notice "to be served upon every person." Id.

3. Mailing a copy of a notice of an assessment to the address of a nonresident is insufficient service under a statute requiring notice to nonresidents to be given by publication in a newspaper. Id.

NOVATION. See also PRINCIPAL AND SURETY.

A creditor who accepts a purchaser from his debtor as his own debtor thereby accepts him in place of the original debtor as the principal, with the latter as surety only; and by extending the time for payment by such purchaser without consent of the original debtor, he releases the latter. Union Store & Mach. Works v. Caswell (Kan.) 85

NUISANCES. See HIGHWAYS, 8; NEGLIGENCE, 6.

OCCUPATION TAX. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 10; LICENSE, 1.

OFFICERS. See also COUNTIES; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 13, 14.

1. A statute providing for the appointment, by the judges of a court, of the members of a bridge committee to have charge of the city's bridges, does not violate a constitutional provision that persons charged with official duties under one of the three departments of government shall not exercise powers confided to either of the other departments, on the ground that the appointment belongs to the executive department, even if this were true as to the appointment of officers generally, since such committeemen are mere agents of the city, and not officers within the meaning of the Constitution. State, Sherman, v. George (Or.) 737

2. The position of bridge committeeman is not an office within the meaning of a constitutional provision that no senator or representative shall, during the time for which he may have been elected, be eligible to an office the election to which is vested in the legislative assembly. Id.

8. Failure to take the oath of office within the time specified by law does not ipso facto create a vacancy which will prevent the officer from qualifying thereafter, if it is done before any steps are taken to declare the vacancy, although the statute declares that the office shall become vacant on refusal or neglect to take the oath within the time prescribed. State, Lysons, v. Ruff (Wash.) 140

4. A "sufficient cause" for the removal of a trustee of the state agricultural college, within the meaning of a statute, must be construed to mean one of the causes enumerated in the Constitution of the state, where that has specified the causes for removal. State, Hitchcock, v. Hewitt (S. D.) 418

5. A trustee of the state agricultural college appointed by the board of regents of education under S. D. Const. art. 14, § 4, is not liable to impeachment as a "state officer" under art. 16, § 8. Id.

6. An officer appointed for a term, subject to removal for specified causes, cannot be removed without notice of the cause assigned and opportunity given him to defend. Id.

7. Where the incumbent is elected or appointed for a definite term and is removable only for a specified cause, the power of removal cannot be exercised until there have been preferred against him specific charges, of which he shall have notice, and an opportunity afforded him to be heard in his defense. State, Hastings, v. Smith (Neb.) 791

8. Where by law there is no fixed term of office, and the incumbent holds during the pleasure of the appointing power, the power of removal is discretionary and may be exercised without notice or hearing. Id.

9. The provision of Neb. Const. art. 5, § 12, empowering the governor to remove all officers appointed by him, applies only to officers mentioned in the Constitution. Id.

10. By the charter of the city of Omaha the governor is authorized to remove members of the board of fire and police commissioners only for the cause therein named,—viz., official misconduct, and upon charges specifying the particular act or acts to be proved, and an opportunity to be heard in their own defense. Id.

11. The general provision in Omaha City Charter, § 172, for the removal of officers of the city by the district court, does not apply to members of the board of fire and police commissioners. Id.

12. The Nebraska Act approved April 9, 1891, by which the charter of Omaha was so amended as to provide for the appointment as fire and police commissioners of said city, of members of the three parties casting the largest vote at the last election, does not take effect until the expiration of the terms of office of the two commissioners who were appointed May, 1889. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Officers; vacancy in office by failure to file bond within the time prescribed. 140

Power of public officers to make contracts binding on their successors or for a term of years; for services of teachers, attorneys, or depositaries; for water, gas, etc. 257

16 L. R. A.

ORDINANCE. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 5, 6.

PARENT AND CHILD. See also INFANTS, 2-5; JUDGMENT, 2.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Parent and child; right of parent to sue for injury to child. 154

PARKS AND SQUARES. See DEDICATION, 1, 2.

PARTITION. See also ADVERSE POSSESSION, 1; DOWER, 2, 8; EJECTMENT; REAL PROPERTY, 1.

Possession of land under a mining lease is not adverse to the interests of the owners of the fee, so as to prevent partition between them. Haeussler v. Missouri Iron Co. (Mo.) 220

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also DOWER.

Partition; validity of agreement against right to. 220

Parol partition to give legal title or color of title. 826

PARTNERSHIP. See CONTRACTS, 5; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 4, 5.

PATENTS. See INJUNCTION, 4, 5.

PERSONAL PROPERTY. See FRUIT, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

PLEADING.

1. A count in quantum meruit is not necessary to permit a recovery for personal services in part performance of a contract which it has become impossible to complete, where the declaration contains the common counts for work and labor. Parker v. Macomber (R. I.) 858

2. The statutory rule that a statute of limitations may be pleaded without stating the facts, by a general statement that the cause of action is barred by a specified section of the statute, is not subject to an implied exception in the case of a statute as to the actions barred in another state. Allen v. Allen (Cal.) 646

3. A declaration for libel by filing a mechanics' lien need not aver that the lien has been ended in favor of the plaintiff. Moore v. Rolin (Va.) 625

4. Disclaimers in an action by writ of entry are conclusive as between the parties and their privies, as to the right and title of the demandants to the lands included in the disclaimers. Tuppan v. Boston Water-Power Co. (Mass.) 353

5. An objection that a disclaimer in an action by writ of entry was not filed at the same time with a plea of nul disseisin comes too late when first made at the argument. Id.

POLICE COMMISSIONERS. See OFFICERS, 10-12.

POWERS. See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, 1, 2.

An intent to execute a power of appointment does not appear in a will which makes no reference to the power, although the bequests somewhat exceed the amount of the testator's estate, and his relations with the donor are so intimate as to raise a presumption that he knew of the power. Cotting v. De Sar-tiges (R. I.) 867

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Powers; what constitutes execution of. 867

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS. See ELECTORS.

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT. See BILLS AND NOTES, 8, 4.

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY. See also BANKS, 4; JUDGMENT, 5, NOTES AND BRIEFS; NOVATION.

The purchaser of property who agrees to pay the whole or a part of the consideration to a creditor of the vendor becomes, as between himself and the vendor, the principal debtor, and the vendor only a surety. Union Stone & Mach. Works v. Caswell (Kan.) 85

PRIVATE ROADS. See EMINENT DOMAIN, 1, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

PROXIMATE CAUSE. See also CARRIERS, 19; DEATH, 1; HIGHWAYS, 5; TELEPHONES.

1. Negligence in stepping or falling from a train while moving at a high rate of speed is not the proximate cause of death, where the person was run over by a following train, where this could have been prevented by proper care of the railroad company's servants after they had become aware of his danger. Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Kassen (Ohio) 674

2. The proximate cause of the death of a railroad employé who was killed while in a caboose which was struck and splintered by a locomotive of another train was the negligence of the fellow servant in charge of the colliding train, and not the weakness and unsubstantial character of the caboose, which was merely a common box car. Lutz v. Atlantic & P. R. Co. (N. M.) 819

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also MASTER AND SERVANT.

Proximate cause; of injury resulting from fright, etc. 208

PUBLICATION. See ESTOPPEL, 2.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

1. Public schoolhouses are not liable to assessment for local improvements, under the general provision in a statute for the assessment of "all the real property situated in the district." Board of Improvement v. Little Rock School Dist. (Ark.) 418

2. A constitutional exemption of property 16 L. R. A.

used exclusively for public purposes—such as churches, schools, buildings, etc.—applies only to taxes for general purposes of revenue, and has no reference to special taxes or assessments for local improvements. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Public improvements; exemption from local assessments. 418

QUO WARRANTO. See CORPORATIONS, 12.

RAILROADS. See also BRIDGES, 4; MASTER AND SERVANT, 9; TRIAL, 7.

1. The general law upon the subject of highway crossings by railroads applies to such crossings by a railroad built, under the South Carolina statutes, merely to connect a manufacturing establishment with another railroad. Ex parte Bacot (S. C.) 586

2. Failure to give the signals required by law at a railroad crossing renders the company liable for injuries in consequence thereof to a person lawfully crossing the track in that vicinity, relying upon the performance by the railroad company of the duty to give such signals. Sanborn v. Detroit, B. O. & A. R. Co. (Mich.) 119

3. A private crossing of which the railroad company has knowledge, and which is used with its consent by men and teams in drawing logs, is not a railroad "crossing" within the meaning of 8 How. (Mich.) Stat. § 8375, at which signals by bell and whistle must be given. Id.

4. Failure of one crossing a railroad track at a dangerous highway crossing to look or listen for trains is not culpable or contributory negligence as matter of law, where his vigilance has been allayed by failure to sound a whistle or ring a bell on an approaching train. Hendrickson v. Great Northern R. Co. (Minn.) 261

5. A railroad company which has used reasonable care to avoid striking persons at a highway crossing is not liable for injuries so sustained. Id.

6. Continuing to approach a railroad crossing under the mistaken belief, honestly conceived after investigation, that an engine seen 800 or 1,000 yards away is standing on the track engaged in switching, when it is in fact coming towards the crossing at a rapid rate,—is not negligence as matter of law. Gratiot v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Mo.) 189

7. Running a train 80 to 60 miles an hour within the limits of a city whose ordinances forbid greater speed than 6 miles an hour is such negligence as to render the company liable for injuries to a traveler attempting, with due care, to pass over a highway crossing. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Railroads; at what railway crossings signals of trains are required; private crossings. 119

REAL PROPERTY. See also JUDGMENT, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

1. A stipulation against the institution of partition proceedings, made by cotenants who undertake to bind themselves, their heirs and assigns forever, not to institute such proceedings without the written consent of all the parties, is void because it is an unreasonable restraint upon the enjoyment and use of the property. Haeussler v. Missouri Iron Co. (Mo.) 220

2. An execution lien is superior to a prior unrecorded conveyance of which the creditor had no notice at the time of the levy; and notice thereof after the levy is immaterial. Blum v. Schwartze (Tex.) 668

RECEIVERS. See also BANKS, 2.

1. The issue of receivers' certificates which shall be a first lien on the mortgaged property cannot be authorized by the court in a suit to foreclose a mortgage on the property of a mere private corporation, such as a coal-mining company. Farmers Loan & T. Co. v. Grape Creek Coal Co. (C. C. S. D. Ill.) 608

2. A receiver of a railroad company is not obliged to complete the transportation of freight, or repay any part of the prepaid charges, although the freight had been taken by the railroad company with an advance payment of the freight for the whole distance under a contract which gave the shipper the right to take it off and have certain work done upon it at an intermediate point, where it was at the time of the receiver's appointment. Central Trust Co. v. Marietta & N. G. R. Co. (C. C. N. D. Ga.) 90

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Receiver; obligation on the contract of the party whose property he holds. 90

Power to permit receiver of a private corporation to create liens on its property. 608

RECORDS. See JUDGMENT, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

REFORMATION. See WILLS, 3.

REFORMATORIES. See INFANTS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

RESUME. Subjects discussed and points decided. 865

SCHOOLS. See PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

SEARCH. See ASSAULT.

SENATORIAL DISTRICTS. See ELECTION DISTRICTS.

SERVICE. See also NOTICE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Service; what constitutes personal service of papers. 200

SLANDER OF TITLE. See INJUNCTION, 4

16 L. R. A.

SNOWSLIDE. See MASTER AND SERVANT, 9-11.

SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

1. An action to enforce specific performance of a contract for the sale of land need not be brought in the county in which the land is situated, under a statute which requires actions to be so brought which are for the recovery of, for the possession of, for the partition of, for the foreclosure of a mortgage on, or for the determination of all questions affecting the titles of, or for any injuries to, real property. Morgan v. Bell (Wash.) 614

2. It is impossible for a man to perform a speculative contract to convey land which was community property, after the death of his wife and the descent of her interest to an infant four or five years old. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Specific performance; effect of inability to perform, upon jurisdiction of chancery; when plaintiff knows that performance cannot be enforced; when defendant disables himself pending action; when defendant has at any time rendered himself incapable of performing; general jurisdiction over damages; the effect of modern legislation; the effect of code provisions. 614

SPIRITUALISM. See CONTRACTS, 4.

STAIRWAY. See NEGLIGENCE, 6, 7.

STATUTES. See also ELECTION DISTRICTS, 8, 9; EVIDENCE, 9; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 8

1. An extraordinary session of the Legislature called by the governor for that purpose is a session within the meaning of a constitutional provision requiring the alteration of the districts from which members of the Legislature are elected, at the "first session after the return of every enumeration." People, Carter, v. Rice (N. Y.) 836

2. Discrepancies between a copy of a bill as printed in a supplement to the legislative journal, and the bound volume of the journal containing the bill as signed, will not invalidate the statute, where it affirmatively appears from the journals that the Legislature finally dealt with and passed some other bill than that contained in such supplement. Detroit Common Council v. Rente (Mich.) 59

3. A vote of the House to print a bill in the journal as a supplement makes the bill when so printed a part of the journal. Id.

4. The title, "An Act to Provide for the Promotion of Certain Corporations under General Laws," is sufficient to include the powers to be given to such corporations. Ex parte Haccot (S. C.) 586

5. The title, "An Act to Provide for the Election of Electors of President and Vice-President, etc.," sufficiently expresses the subject of an Act which provides for the election of alternate electors as well as electors. McPherson v. Blacker (Mich.) 475

6. A ballot-reform law should be construed to effectuate the objects in view in its enactment. Bowers v. Smith (Mo.) 754

7. Statutes transplanted from other countries should be construed in subordination to the constitution and laws of the state wherein adopted. Bowers v. Smith (Mo.) 754

8. The effects of a proposed interpretation of a law may properly be considered, to ascertain the probable intent of its framers respecting such interpretation. Id.

9. The result which may follow from one construction or another of a statute or constitution is always a potent factor, and is sometimes in and of itself conclusive as to the correct solution of the question. People, Carter, v. Rice (N. Y.) 886

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Statutes; effect of repeal on existing right of action. 483

STOREKEEPER. See BAILMENT, 2.

STREET RAILWAYS. See CARRIERS, 16-19, 27, 28; EMINENT DOMAIN, 6; HIGHWAYS, 2.

SUNDAY. See CONTRACTS, 11.

SUPERVISORS. See COUNTIES, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

TAXES. See also CONTRACTS, 19, 20; CORPORATIONS, 2; EVIDENCE, 7; JOINT-STOCK COMPANY.

1. The Ohio Act of April 15, 1889 (Ohio Rev. Stat. § 251a), requiring every railroad company to pay to the commissioner of railroads and telegraphs a "fee" of $1 per mile for each mile of track operated by it within the state, creates a tax in violation of Ohio Const. art. 12, § 2, requiring uniformity, and § 5, requiring the object of it to be stated. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. State (Ohio) 380

2. The domicile of the creditor is the situs, for the purpose of taxation, of negotiable promissory notes given for money loaned. Boyd v. Selma (Ala.) 729

3. Tangible movable property may be taxed where situate, under a special statute which provides for its taxation. Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors (La.) 56

4. A nonresident cannot be said to be a holder of property within a state by virtue of a debt which a resident owes him, so as to be taxable on such credit. Id.

5. A mortgage upon realty is sufficiently an interest in real estate to make it taxable in the state where the land is situated, although owned by a nonresident. Detroit Common Council v. Rents (Mich.) 59

6. Taxation of mortgages as real estate does not create illegal double taxation, although held by savings banks and representing deposits upon which the depositors are taxed. Id.

7. A provision that in case the mortgagee fails to pay his share of the tax it shall be paid by the mortgagor and the amount applied in reduction of the mortgage debt, contained in an Act providing for the separate taxation of the different interests in mortgaged real estate, is not void as requiring one man to pay the debt of another. Id.

16 L. R. A.

8. An agreement by a mortgagor to pay all assessments on all interests in the land will not be abridged or abrogated by a subsequent statute providing for the separate taxation of the different interests in mortgaged real estate. Id.

9. Failure to provide a method for apportioning the tax upon a mortgage covering lands lying in different taxing districts will not invalidate an Act providing for the separate taxation of the different interests in mortgaged real estate. The mortgage will be taxable in each district in proportion to the amount of land lying therein. Id.

10. Negotiable promissory notes for money loaned are "personal property" within the meaning of a charter authorizing taxation of such property. Boyd v. Selma (Ala.) 729

11. The water mains and electric wires of a water and light company are personal property for purposes of taxation. Shelbyville Water Co. v. People, Craddick (Ill.) 505

12. The rights and franchises of a water company are proper subjects for taxation under a statute requiring all property in the state not exempted to be taxed. Fond du Lac Water Co. v. Fond du Lac (Wis.) 581

Assessment and collection.

13. Failure to enter opposite the name of a personal-tax delinquent the cause of failure to collect the same, and make oath as to the truth of such cause and that the taxes remain unpaid, as required by Ill. Rev. Stat. 1891, chap. 120, § 170, may be corrected by amendment of the record at the hearing of a proceeding to collect the taxes out of real estate, under § 191 of that Act, which provides for supplying omissions of tax officers. Shelbyville Water Co. v. People, Craddick (Ill.) 505

14. The assessment for taxation of the lots whereon are the pumping-station and works of a water company, separate and apart from the water mains, franchises, and other property constituting its plant, is erroneous. Fond du Lac Water Co. v. Fond du Lac (Wis.) 581

15. The water mains, franchises, etc., of a water company are not properly assessed for taxation by an entry in the tax book of an assessment against the lots on which the pumping works are situated, by their numbers and that of the block in which they are situated; and such assessment cannot be enlarged or extended by parol proof of intention. Id.

16. The board of review cannot arbitrarily raise the valuation of property as fixed by the tax assessor, without evidence or against the evidence, under a statute requiring it to hear and examine any person who shall appear before it in reference to any assessment, and, when satisfied from the evidence that the assessment is wrong, to change it. Id.

17. The board of review has no authority to increase the assessment of property described upon the roll as certain lots in a certain block, so as to include the water mains, rights, and franchises of the water company which owns the lots and has located its pumping station upon them. Id.

18. The board of review cannot obviate a defect in the assessment of property so as to sustain an unjust and excessive valuation of it as described, by receiving proof of the value of property subject to taxation and alleged to have been intended by such description. Id.

19. A mortgagor's right to ask for the correction of the assessment of his interest, under a statute providing for the separate assessment of the different interests in mortgaged real estate, is sufficiently preserved by a clause providing for a correction of the assessment on sufficient cause shown by any person whose property is assessed. Detroit Common Council v. Rents (Mich.) 59

20. Permitting a sale of the fee upon non-payment of taxes upon a mortgagee's interest in land, without any provision for distinguishing the assessment under which the sale is made, although it may result in loss to the mortgagor because of the mortgagee's default, is not unlawful where the mortgagor may prevent a sale by paying the tax, and the sale is limited to a parcel sufficient to pay the tax. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Taxes; situs of property for taxation. 56
Power to tax mortgages; double taxation; where taxable: nonresident owners. 59

Situs for purpose of taxation of debts evidenced by notes and mortgages; in general; mortgages; notes; when held by agent residing in different state from principal. 729

TELEPHONES.

Injury caused by electricity generated by a thunder storm in a telephone wire which is negligently allowed to hang across a highway so low that a traveler comes in contact with it in the dark renders the telephone company liable, as the wire furnished the means by which the dangerous force was communicated and the injury caused. Southwestern Teleg. & Teleph. Co. v. Robinson (C. C. App. 5th O.) 545

TELLTALE. See MASTER AND SERVANT, 7, 8.

TENANT IN COMMON. See COTENANCY, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

THEATRES. See CIVIL RIGHTS; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 9.

TIME. See also INFANTS, 1.

The period of limitation of an action which accrues at a person's majority begins to run the day before his twenty-first birthday. That day is to be included in the computation of the time; and therefore a period limited by years will expire on the second day before his birthday anniversary. Ross v. Morrow (Tex.) 542

TRACTION ENGINES. See HIGHWAYS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

TRADEMARKS. See also GOODWILL, 2.

The words "Fish Bros. & Co." and the picture of a fish may be applied by brothers named 16 L. R. A.

"Fish" to vehicles manufactured by them, although such words and picture were previously used by them in a business which has now passed, with its good will and trademarks, to a corporation, provided their use is not such as to induce persons to buy their vehicles as and for those manufactured by the corporation. Fish Bros. Wagon Co. v. Fish (Wis.) 453

TRADENAME.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Rights in. 453

TRANSFER TICKET. See CARRIERS, 27, 28.

TREATIES. See ALIENS, NOTES AND BRIEFS; CONTRACTS, 12.

TRIAL.

1. The constitutional right of trial by jury does not extend to proceedings for the commitment of a minor to a reform school. State, Olson, v. Brown (Minn.) 691

2. A statute providing that, on confession in open court by one charged with murder, the court shall examine the witnesses and determine the degree of crime and pronounce sentence accordingly, is not in violation of a constitutional guaranty that "the right of trial by jury shall be inviolate." Craig v. State (Ohio) 358

3. On the discharge of a juror for sickness, and the drawing of another juror, under Dak. Comp. Laws, § 7401, which authorizes such drawing, or the discharge of the entire jury and the impaneling of another, only such peremptory challenges are allowed as have not been already exhausted in procuring the other eleven jurors. State v. Hasledahl (N. D.) 150

4. Where there is no controversy in regard to the facts or inferences that may be fairly drawn therefrom, the question of negligence is one of law for the court to determine. Manning v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. (W. Va.) 271

5. The question of negligence must be left to the jury when the facts or the inferences to be drawn from them are in any degree doubtful. Gratiot v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Mo.) 189

6. The question whether or not parents allowed their son to play about a railroad track and depot grounds, so as to be regarded as having contributed to injuries received by him there, is for the jury, where they testify that they had forbidden him so to do after receiving notice that such was his habit, and were ignorant that he was there, at the time he was hurt. Baker v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. (Mich.) 154

7. Failure of one approaching a railroad crossing to constantly look both ways for the approach of trains will not be pronounced negligence by the court. Gratiot v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Mo.) 189

8. Whether or not due care requires one who, after observation as to the safety of crossing a railroad track, has received the impression that no trains are approaching the crossing, to test the accuracy of such impression by further observation before acting upon it, is a question for the jury, and not for the court. Gratiot v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Mo.) 189

9. An instruction that it is the duty of a person attempting to cross a railroad track to exercise the degree of care and prudence that an ordinarily careful and prudent person would exercise under the circumstances is not erroneous because it fails to state what a man of ordinary prudence would do at such a time and place. Id.

10. To sustain the action of the trial court in overruling a demurrer to the evidence, which was based on the contention that it showed contributory negligence, it is not necessary to decide that there was no such negligence. Id.

11. When evidence is of such a character that it would be the duty of the court to set aside a verdict for one party, it will in the first instance direct a verdict for the other party. Lutz v. Atlantic & P. R. Co. (N. M.) 819

12. The court cannot instruct the jury that their verdict must not exceed a certain sum, although two former verdicts on the same evidence have been set aside as excessive and the verdict on a third trial is made conclusive by statute. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Minor (Miss.) 627

13. An instruction to find for plaintiff in an action by an employé for personal injuries, if his superior directed him to incur a danger of which he was ignorant, is erroneous where no such question is raised by the pleading. Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. v. Galvin (Fla.) 837

14. A charge that gross negligence will justify exemplary damages is incorrect where the term "gross" is not limited to wantonness or reckless indifference. Florida S. R. Co. v. Hirst (Fla.) 681

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Trial; coercion of disagreeing jury; by court; by bailiff in charge. 648

UNBORN CHILD. See DAMAGES, 11.

USURY. See also BANKS, 7.

An agreement by a mortgagor to pay all taxes upon the land, in addition to full legal interest upon the mortgage, is not usurious. Detroit Common Council v. Rente (Mich.) 59

VILLAGE. See ESTOPPEL, 1, 2.

VOLUNTEER. See MASTER AND SERVANT, 2.

VOTERS AND ELECTIONS. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 1-4.

1. Innocent irregularities of election officers, which are free of fraud and have not prevented a full and fair expression of the popular choice, will not vitiate the result of an election, unless the Legislature has expressly so declared. Bowers v. Smith (Mo.) 754

2. The reception by election judges of votes at two polling places in a precinct only about 75 feet apart, instead of at one, between which the voting is divided according to the alphabetical arrangement of the voters' names, does not invalidate the returns from that precinct. Id.

3. Where a candidate for office makes no timely objection to the ballot as published by the county clerk before an election (Mo. Rev. Stat. 1889, § 4778), the former cannot afterwards object to the result for any error of the clerk in admitting names upon the official ballot not properly entitled to be there. Id.

4. The "Australian Ballot Law" (Mo. Rev. Stat. 1889, chap. 60, art. 3) does not limit the range of choice of voters in Missouri to the persons nominated in the modes prescribed by it. Id.

5. The lack of any nomination does not prevent voting for a person, under a provision that "the voter may write or paste upon his ballot the name of any person for whom he desires to vote for any office." People, Bradley, v. Shaw (N. Y.) 606

6. The fact that paster ballots placed on ballots for town officers contain also the names of candidates for excise commissioners, who cannot lawfully be voted for on that ticket, will not justify the inspectors in refusing to count and declare them in stating the result, where these paster ballots were a part of those printed at private expense by candidates of an independent meeting or caucus, all of which were alike. Id.

7. A name written on an official ballot in place of the printed name of a candidate, which is erased, does not constitute a valid vote under the Louisiana statute requiring "that all the names of persons voted for shall be printed on one ticket or ballot." State, Miss. v. McElroy (La.) 278

8. An objection that a clause which provides that if any ballot shall have thereon a mark, sign, signature, or device other than permitted by the statute it shall be void, is unconstitutional because the voter may lose his vote by the fraud or neglect of those preparing the ballots, is not sound. The most stringent directions are given respecting the preparation of the official ballots, and the law presumes that they will be obeyed. State, Ransom, v. Black (N. J.) 769

9. The fact that a voter may be compelled, in exercising his right to vote, to deposit a ballot having upon it the name or style of a party of whose principles he disapproves, is not an illegal deprivation of a right to vote; for if a voter exercises his right to erase the names of all the candidates on the ticket, and inserts the names of persons who stand for an entirely different principle, the heading of the ticket becomes meaningless as an expression of the voter's sentiments. Id.

10. Clauses which provide that only those parties casting a certain percentage of the vote at the last election, and those parties presenting petitions signed by a certain number of voters, shall be entitled to official ballots, is a valid regulation to restrain the number of ballots to be printed and distributed within reasonable limits. Id.

11. The right to vote secured by the New Jersey Constitution can only become operative by legislation; and any reasonable legislative regulation for the purpose of securing an enforced secrecy of the ballot is not a deprivation of a right to vote. Id.

12. The clause of an election Act, prohibiting any electioneering on an election day within 100 feet of any polling-place, is a reasonable police regulation to secure good order about the polls. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Voters and elections; effect of irregularities in nomination papers or in voting under Australian ballot laws. 754

WATER-CLOSETS. See BUILDINGS, 1, 3.

WATERS.

Flats in the bed of a channel into which the tide flows, but from which it wholly ebbs at low water, where they are between separate channels of a fresh-water stream, are to be divided in Massachusetts, by analogy to lands on a fresh-water stream, between riparian owners, to whom the title thereto is given by the Colonial Ordinance of 1641-47, by straight lines from the points where the division lines of the owners end on the bank drawn to and at right angles with the centre line of the tidal channel at the ordinary stage of the waters. Tappan v. Boston Water Power Co. (Mass.) 853

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Waters; rules for division of flats. 16 I. R. A. 353

WATERWORKS. See TAXES, 11, 12, 14, 15.

WILLS.

1. A devise to a daughter "for and during her natural life, unless she shall be married, in which case her life estate shall cease," does not make an illegal condition in restraint of marriage, where the will contains nothing further to show any intent to prevent her marriage, but merely a disposition to provide her a home so long as she shall need it. Mann v. Jackson (Me.) 707

2. The inclusion of after-acquired property in an instrument of conveyance, and the reservation of all the property for the payment of the grantor's debts, will compel its construction as a will rather than as a deed, when its character must be determined from its face, —especially if it provides that it shall not take absolute effect until the grantor's death. Crocker v. Smith (Ala.) 576

3. A court of equity has no jurisdiction to reform a will. Bingel v. Vols (Ill.) 821

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Wills; provision to terminate on marriage of beneficiary. 707

WITNESSES.

An offer by defendant upon plaintiff's cross-examination, to show that she is an habitual litigant, is properly excluded. Palmeri v. Manhattan R. Co. (N. Y.) 186

L. R. A. CASES AS AUTHORITIES.

CASES IN 16 L. R. A.

16 L. R. A. 33, CLEMAN'S v. SUPREME ASSEMBLY R. S. G. F. 131 N. Y. 485, 30 N. E. 496.

Breach of warranty in insurance policy.

Cited in Foley v. Royal Arcanum, 78 Hun, 226, 28 N. Y. Supp. 952, holding that false answers to questions the answers to which have been warranted, avoid contract; Schane v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 76 App. Div. 274, 78 N. Y. Supp. 582, holding it not question for jury whether warranties in insurance application were material; Gaines v. Fidelity & C. Co. 93 App. Div. 531, 87 N. Y. Supp. 821, holding policy of accident insurance rendered void by breach of warranty that beneficiary was wife of insured.

Cited in footnote to Globe L. Ins. Asso. v. Wagner, 52 L. R. A. 649, which holds policy not avoided by false statement that none of applicant's brothers dead.

— As to encumbrances.

Cited in King v. Tioga County Patrons Fire Relief Asso. 35 App. Div. 59, 54 N. Y. Supp. 1057, holding false answer as to encumbrances on property voids policy because answer a warranty.

— As to health.

Cited in Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. v. McDaniel, 25 Ind. App. 618, 57 N. E. 645, holding false answer that insured had not consulted physician since date of original application voids policy; Brady v. Industrial Ben. Asso. 79 Hun, 158, 29 N. Y. Supp. 768, holding false answer as to health, breach of warranty voiding policy; Woehrle v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 21 Misc. 90, 46 N. Y. Supp. 862, holding false answer to question as to whether insured is in sound health voids policy, although he may not know it to be untrue; Boyle v. Northwestern Mut. Relief Asso. 95 Wis. 318, 70 N. W. 351, holding untrue answer as to sound health, though believed to be correct, voids policy; Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc. v. Llewellyn, 7 C. C. A. 581, 16 U. S. App. 405, 58 Fed. 942, holding verdict should have been directed for company where insured shown to have had delirium tremens, when application stated that he had not, and who died two months thereafter of heart failure after debauch.

Distinguished in Jennings v. Supreme Council L. A. Ben. Asso. 81 App. Div. 87, 81 N. Y. Supp. 90, stating that answers in medical examination were not warranties, but representations as to their truth to best of knowledge and belief.

— As to application for other insurance.

Cited in Silverman v. Empire L. Ins. Co. 24 Misc. 402, 53 N. Y. Supp. 407, holding false warranty as to declination by other insurance company voids policy; Clemans v. Supreme Assembly R. S. G. F. 50 N. Y. S. R. 520, 21 N. Y. Supp. 348, holding fraudulent concealment by agent of insurance company that application he had made for insured to another company had been declined prevents warranty from being false; Robinson v. Supreme Commandery, U. O. G. C. 38 Misc. 100, 77 N. Y. Supp. 111, holding answer given to question as propounded, in regard to other insurance, not false because only one of two other policies carried, mentioned; Aloe v. Mutual Reserve Life Asso. 147 Mo. 579, 49 S. W. 553, holding false answer to question whether insured had applied to other companies and been declined voids policy; Kemp v. Good Templars' Mut. Ben. Asso. 46 N. Y. S. R. 431, 19 N. Y. Supp. 435, holding verdict properly directed for insurer where insured warranted he had not been declined by any other company, though application declined without his knowledge.

Cited in note (55 L. R. A. 125, 127, 131, 135, 137) on forfeiture of life insurance by false representations as to previous applications for insurance.

Distinguished in Jacobs v. Northwestern Life Assur. Co. 30 App. Div. 286, 51 N. Y. Supp. 967, holding false statements inserted by agents and medical examiners after correct answer by insured, as to applications to other companies, estop insurance company.

— As to age.

Cited in McCarthy v. Catholic Knights, 102 Tenn. 352, 52 S. W. 142, holding policy not forfeited when insured gave false answer as to her age, when it appeared she did not know it.

When knowledge of agent imputed to principal.

Cited in Desmond v. Supreme Council, C. B. L. 51 App. Div. 94, 64 N. Y. Supp. 406, holding knowledge of chief examiner of insurance company that application of insured to another company had been declined not chargeable to insurer; Levell v. Royal Arcanum, 9 Misc. 260, 30 N. Y. Supp. 205, holding that knowledge by committee of society of false answers by insured cannot be imputed to society; Bennett v. Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co. 107 Tenn. 377, 64 S. W. 758, holding that insured can recover premiums paid on policy, where false answers written by medical examiner, although company would have been estopped thereby.

Cited in footnotes to Dailey v. Preferred Masonic Mut. Acci. Asso. 26 L. R. A. 171, which holds forfeiture prevented by secretary's knowledge of other insurance; Sternaman v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 57 L. R. A. 318, which denies insurer's right to rely on warranty by applicant that answers properly recorded, where medical examiner knew otherwise; Home Ins. Co. v. Mendenhall, 36 L. R. A. 374, which holds notice to insurance agent of material facts, notice to company; Home Ins. Co. v. Hancock, 52 L. R. A. 665, which holds statement that life tenant has fee-simple title to insured property will not avoid policy where agent knew facts. Wittenbrock v. Parker, 24 L. R. A. 197, which holds knowledge by one member of firm of lawyers while transacting firm business imputed to other members; Forward v. Continental Ins. Co. 25 L. R. A. 637, which holds agent's knowledge of bill of sale takes same out of operation of condition as to title and encumbrances; Michigan Shingle Co. v. State Invest. Ins. Co. 22 L. R. A. 319, which holds forfeiture for breach of warranty of clear space prevented by agent's knowledge.

16 L. R. A. 39, McCARN v. INTERNATIONAL & G. N. R. CO. 84 Tex. 352, 31 Am. St. Rep. 51, 19 S. W. 547.

Limitation of carrier's liability.

Cited in Hartley v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. 115 Iowa, 617, 89 N. W. 88, holding carrier not liable for horse injured on connecting line, when it had limited its liability to its own road; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wilbanks, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 495, 27 S. W. 302, holding limitation of liability to its own line does not relieve initial carrier from liability for miscarriage of freight by connecting line with which it is in partnership; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Williams, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 297, 23 S. W. 626, holding carrier not liable for failure to deliver cattle beyond its own line, if contract for liability limited to own road; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Mahula, 1 Tex. Civ. App. 185, 20 S. W. 1002, holding contract limiting liability to loss upon its own line inures to benefit of each carrier to end of route; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Ewing, 51 C. C. A. 687, 114 Fed. 1021 (dissenting opinion), as to limitation of carrier's liability to its own line; Fremont, E. & M. Valley R. Co. v. New York, C. & St. L. R. Co. (Union State Bank v. Fremont, E. & M. Valley R. Co.) 66 Neb. 165, 59 L. R. A. 941, footnote p. 939, sustaining initial carrier's right to limit liability to own line.

Cited in footnotes to Courteen v. Kanawha Despatch, 55 L. R. A. 182, which denies carrier's liability for accidental destruction of property while in warehouse on pier, awaiting arrival of vessel of connecting carrier; Taffe v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 58 L. R. A. 187, which denies initial carrier's liability under bill of lading beyond own line.

16 L. R. A. 43, CLEMENTS v. LOUISIANA ELECTRIC LIGHT CO. 44 La. Ann. 692, 32 Am. St. Rep. 348, 11 So. 51.

Survival of action.

Cited in American Sugar-Ref. Co. v. Johnson, 9 C. C. A. 120, 13 U. S. App. 681, 60 Fed. 513, holding that action for negligently causing death of employee survives for acts of omission as well as of commission.

Liability for negligence.

Cited in McGuire v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. 46 La. Ann. 1556, 16 So. 457, holding railroad liable for killing man not seen until he was right under wheels, although locomotive, with good headlight, was moving at man's walking gait; Mitchell v. Raleigh Electric Co. 129 N. C. 170, 55 L. R. A. 400, 85 Am. St. Rep. 735, 39 S. E. 801, holding each of two electric companies using same poles bound to see that its wires properly insulated to protect servants of either company; Henry v. Brackenridge Lumber Co. 48 La. Ann. 954, 20 So. 221, holding master not liable for death of employee caught in belting which he was lacing, where nothing is shown as to how accident happened; Rucker v. Sherman Oil & Cotton Co. 29 Tex. Civ. App. 420, 68 S. W. 818, holding owner of uninsulated electric wire liable for killing of one coming in contact therewith, while lawfully on awning; Geismann v. Missouri-Edison Electric Co. 173 Mo. 675, 73 S. W. 654, holding it to be duty of electric company to use every available precaution to keep wires properly insulated; Knowlton v. Des Moines Edison Light Co. 117 Iowa, 456, 90 N. W. 818, holding electric company liable for death of person, due to improper insulation of its wires; Snider v. New Orleans & C. R. Co. 48 La. Ann. 11, 18 So. 695, holding failure in duty to employ competent motorman not sufficient to support recovery for injury due to collision, unless caused thereby; Weider v. Illinois C. R. Co. 108 La. 157, 32 So. 366, holding carrier not liable on account of speed of train or failure to post lookout, where injured flagman would have been run over anyway.

Cited in footnotes to Illingsworth v. Boston Electric Light Co. 25 L. R. A. 552, which holds reasonable care to keep electric wires safe due towards persons licensed to approach them; Marino v. Lehmaier, 61 L. R. A. 812, which holds violation of penal statute against employing children of certain age in factory, negligence; Brown v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. 46 L. R. A. 745, which holds prima facie presumption of negligence from injury to boy by contact with exposed point of charged wire within few inches of small roof just below second-story window; Burt v. Douglas County Street R. Co. 18 L. R. A. 479, which holds company liable for electric shock of passenger, due to imperfect insulation; Moran v. Corliss Steam-Engine Co. 45 L. R. A. 267, which holds employer using defectively insulated wire with slight current liable for injury to employee, due to outside contact with dangerous current; Giraudi v. Electric Improv. Co. 28 L. R. A. 596, which holds failure to raise electric light wires on roof of hotel high enough to prevent shock, negligence; Jackson v. Wisconsin Teleph. Co. 26 L. R. A. 101, which holds connection of barn with flagstaff on other building by telephone wire renders company liable for loss of barn by lightning striking flagstaff.

Cited in notes (32 L. R. A. 400) on negligence as to electric wires on or in buildings; (46 L. R. A. 71, 99) on right of servant to recover damages from persons other than his master for injuries received in performance of duties.

Contributory negligence.

Cited in McLaughlin v. Louisville Electric Light Co. 100 Ky. 189, 34 L. R. A. 816, 37 S. W. 851, holding contributory negligence not shown by painter coming in contact while painting house, with electric wire improperly insulated, used for lighting; Bemiss v. New Orleans City & Lake R. Co. 47 La. Ann. 1675, 18 So. 711, holding it contributory negligence to step from one car of moving train to another car standing near; Perham v. Portland Electric Co. 33 Or. 472, 40 L. R. A. 808, 72 Am. St. Rep. 730, 53 Pac. 14, holding workman on top of bridge, killed by coming in contact with electric wires carrying high voltage, not guilty of contributory negligence because he crossed on top braces of bridge; Mitchell v. Raleigh Electric Co. 129 N. C. 172, 55 L. R. A. 400, 85 Am. St. Rep. 735, 39 S. E. 801, holding employee has right to presume electric light wires properly insulated; Indiana Natural Gas & Oil Co. v. O'Brien, 160 Ind. 276, 65 N. E. 918, holding plaintiff not required to negative knowledge of defective bridge in action for damages for resulting injury; Potts v. Shreveport Belt R. Co. 110 La. 6, 98 Am. St. Rep. 452, 34 So. 103, holding performance of dangerous duties of lineman's occupation not of itself contributory negligence.

Cited in note (49 L. R. A. 57) on contributory negligence in entering or remaining in employment.

Distinguished in Smart v. Louisiana Electric Light Co. 47 La. Ann. 873, 17 So. 346, holding electric light company not liable for death by shock from wire, of experienced lineman employed to alter position of two live wires.

Police power.

Cited in State, Cape May, D. B. & S. P. R. Co., Prosecutor, v. Cape May. 59 N. J. L. 403, 36 L. R. A. 655, 36 Atl. 696, holding ordinance requiring use of fenders on trolley cars reasonable.

Cited in footnote to State ex rel. Wisconsin Teleph. Co. v. Janesville Street R. Co. 22 L. R. A. 759, which upholds right to compel guard wires for uninsulated trolley wires crossing telephone wires.

Erection of wires carrying dangerous current.

Cited in footnote to Rutland Electric Light Co. v. Marble City Electric Light Co. 20 L. R. A. 821, which holds electric light company entitled to injunction against erection of wires carrying dangerous current.

16 L. R. A. 45, VOREIS v. NUSSBAUM, 131 Ind. 267, 31 N. E. 70.

Contracts of married women and contracts voidable by statute.

Cited in Leschen v. Guy, 149 Ind. 19, 48 N. E. 344, holding that notes and mortgage executed by married woman, for which shares of stock were issued to her husband, should be canceled; Bowles v. Trapp, 139 Ind. 56, 38 N. E. 406, holding married woman's contract as surety for husband, known to one advancing money, voidable though note reads "for my sole use and benefit;" Dickey v. Kalfsbeek, 20 Ind. App. 293, 50 N. E. 590, holding complaint need not plead statute in enforcing liability of married woman in conveyance of her separate property; Kniss v. Holbrook, 16 Ind. App. 231, 44 N. E. 563, holding maker of note given for patent right not absolutely void in hands of innocent purchaser; Irwin v. Marquett, 26 Ind. App. 393, 84 Am. St. Rep. 297, 59 N. E. 38, holding check given for winnings at gambling game void; John C. Groub Co. v. Smith, 31 Ind. App. 689, 68 N. E. 1030, holding action not maintainable against married woman as accommodation indorser of husband's note; Guy v. Liberenz, 160 Ind. 529, 65 N. E. 186, holding wife, signing note and mortgage with husband, surety only, where husband alone receives consideration.

Cited in footnote to Kitchen v. Chapin, 57 L. R. A. 914, which holds married woman liable on her guaranty of note owned by her and payable to her order.

Estoppel against statutory defense.

Cited in Galvin v. Britton, 151 Ind. 14, 49 N. E. 1064, holding estoppel to setting up suretyship shown where married woman induced party dealing with her husband to rely on his representations as to his ownership; Goff v. Hankins, 11 Ind. App. 460, 39 N. E. 294, holding married woman not estopped to assert pledge of her organ as surety for husband's debt, when pledgee knew fact of ownership; Cole v. Temple, 142 Ind. 502, 41 N. E. 942, holding married woman not estopped to assert invalidity of note and mortgage executed as surety for husband, where it appears on its face that she is tenant in common; Coats v. Gordon, 144 Ind. 22, 41 N. E. 1044, holding married woman not estopped under statute to assert invalidity of mortgage executed by herself and husband as tenants by entirety, though knowing it to be invalid.

Effect as to bona fide holders of statute declaring notes void.

Cited in footnote to Lynchburg Nat. Bank v. Scott Bros. 29 L. R. A. 827, which holds usury forming part of renewal note discounted at legal rate not available defense.

16 L. R. A. 49, SAYRE v. PHILLIPS, 148 Pa. 482, 33 Am. St. Rep. 842, 24 Atl. 76.
Validity of statutes in regulation of trade and police power.

Followed in Com. v. Zacharias, 3 Pa. Super. Ct. 264, 39 W. N. C. 409, holding act regulating sale of drugs, but exempting personal representatives and widows, invalid; Com. v. Zacharias, 181 Pa. 131, 40 W. N. C. 170, 37 Atl. 185, discussing invalidity of that part of act prohibiting carrying on of retail drug store without license, but excepting widows of pharmacists; Densmore v. Erie, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 518, 7 Pa. Dist. R. 358, holding license fee for riding bicycles, exacted of residents of locality only, not police regulation, and invalid; Ridley Park v. Citizens' Electric Light & P. Co. 7 Del. Co. Rep. 397, 9 Pa. Super. Ct. 619, holding that boroughs, equally with cities, can impose license tax on electric light poles erected in borough streets; Clark's Estate, 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 435, 44 W. N. C. 472, Affirming 7 Pa. Dist. R. 11, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 444, 41 W. N. C. 280, holding act providing that executors and trustees may include in account amount paid for bond of surety company as part of lawful expense, unlawful discrimination against individuals; Com. v. Mintz, 19 Pa. Super. Ct. 285, holding act regulating sales to junk-shop keepers and second-hand dealers, except when made by plumbers and house owners, valid; Wilkes-Barre v. Garabed, 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 307, holding that legislature, by incorporating municipality, imparts to it powers necessary to protection of persons and property, including power to prevent playing of musical instruments on street; Cairo v. Feuchter, 159 Ill. 102, 42 N. E. 308, holding license fee required of wholesale, and not of retail, liquor dealers unreasonable; State v. Montgomery, 94 Me. 201, 80 Am. St. Rep. 386, 47 Atl. 165, holding citizens of one state can go into another state to engage in lawful trade without molestation; Com. v. Densmore, 34 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 345, upholding act requiring licensing of automobiles, excepting machines in stock.

Cited in footnotes to Re Bohlen, 36 L. R. A. 618, which holds ordinance prohibiting future burial, except on lots already purchased, void for discrimination; Com. use of Titusville v. Clark, 57 L. R. A. 348, which holds void, exemption from license tax of contractors and real-estate dealers only, whose business less than $1,000; Knisely v. Cotterel, 50 L. R. A. 86, which sustains statute fixing different rates of license for retailers, wholesalers, and sellers on board of trade; Broadfoot v. Fayetteville, 39 L. R. A. 245, which sustains statute discriminating in favor of nonresidents of city as to allowing stock to run at large; Carrollton v. Bazzette, 31 L. R. A. 522, which holds ordinance requiring license from persons who "temporarily reside in city" before selling goods void for discrimination; Harrodsburg v. Renfro, 51 L. R. A. 897, which holds void, ordinance imposing greater license fee for sale of liquors on main street of town than elsewhere; Re Sipe, 17 L. R. A. 184, which holds invalid, ordinance against importing goods into city to sell at auction, except on paying license fee; Re Haskell, 32 L. R. A. 527, which sustains license for specified amount for retailers having fixed place of business in city, though heavier than that charged regular dealers at fixed places.

Distinguished in Com. v. Zacharias, 5 Pa. Dist. R. 477, holding act regulating sale of drugs, but exempting personal representatives and widows from provisions, valid police regulation.

— Peddlers.

Followed in Wilcox v. Knoxville, 2 Pa. Dist. R. 721, holding borough ordinance prohibiting nonresidents from peddling, void; Shamokin v. Flannigan, 156 Pa. 43, 26 Atl. 780, holding ordinance prohibiting peddling without license, excepting persons selling products of own farm or garden, invalid.

Cited in Com. v. Hance, 24 Pa. Co. Ct. 432, holding nonresident merchant soliciting orders within state not peddler under statute regulating sales by peddlers; Com. v. Snyder, 182 Pa. 633, 38 Atl. 356, holding local act which exacts heavy license fee of peddlers, but excepts those dealing exclusively with merchants of certain county, unjust discrimination; Com. v. Harmel, 166 Pa. 94, 27 L. R. A. 389, 36 W. N. C. 4, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 92, 30 Atl. 1036, holding statute regulating peddling of clocks by all persons, without discrimination, valid; Danville v. Weaver, 4 Pa. Dist. R. 769, 13 Lanc. L. Rev. 86, 13 Lanc. L. Rev. 246, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 18, 2 Lack. Legal News, 198, holding ordinance prohibiting peddling in streets, except certain kinds, and of these exacting license only from milk peddlers, valid; Com. v. Dunham, 4 Pa. Super. Ct. 77, holding act prohibiting sales by all hawkers and peddlers in certain county valid; Port Clinton v. Shafer, 5 Pa. Dist. R. 584, 14 Lanc. L. Rev. 29, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 69, holding ordinance requiring canvassers and peddlers to take out license, but excepting persons soliciting orders for manufactures beyond state boundary, invalid; Com. v. Wormser, 7 Pa. Dist. R. 320; Allentown v. Diefenderfer, 6 Northampton Co. Rep. 97, 7 Del. Co. Rep. 88; Wormser v. Allentown, 7 Northampton Co. Rep. 39, 8 Pa. Dist. R. 650; South Bethlehem v. Hackett, 12 Lanc. L. Rev. 199; West Pittston v. Dymond, 8 Kulp, 14,—holding borough ordinance prohibiting peddling without license, except by those holding mercantile licenses, invalid; Warren v. Lewis, 16 Pa. Co. Ct. 177, and Com. v. Hepner, 22 Pa. Co. Ct. 633, holding ordinance permitting sale of products by farmers, gardeners, and merchants with stores, without license imposed on all others of locality, invalid; State v. Mitchell, 97 Me. 73, 94 Am. St. Rep. 481, 53 Atl. 887, holding peddlers' license act, exempting from its provisions residents of towns paying taxes on stock to amount of $25, void.

Cited in footnote to State v. Garbroski, 56 L. R. A. 570, which holds void, statute exempting veterans from requirement for peddling license.

Distinguished in Com. v. Deinno, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 372, holding act forbidding hawking and peddling in certain county, but excepting those selling their own manufactures, valid; South Easton v. Moser, 14 Lanc. L. Rev. 238, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 346, holding farmer delivering milk to customers within borough limits not peddler within ordinance; Irwin v. Douglass, 30 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 107, 8 Pa. Dist. R. 506, holding proviso that license fee shall not be required of farmers, in ordinance requiring fee of peddlers, etc., not an exception.

— Canvassers.

Cited in Mechanicsburg v. Koons, 18 Lanc. L. Rev. 63, holding ordinance prohibiting any person from doing business without license, but exempting those selling to local business men, valid as tending to suppress hurtful competition; Cohen v. Plymouth, 7 Kulp, 102, holding ordinance requiring license to solicit orders for tea and coffee invalid; Brownback v. North Wales (Pa.) 49 L. R. A. 446, 45 Atl. 660, Affirming 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 230, 44 W. N. C. 260, which Reversed 16 Lanc. L. Rev. 511, 7 Pa. Dist. R. 326, holding ordinance requiring license fee from all persons soliciting orders for merchandise from house to house valid.

— Auctioneers.

Cited in Burnell v. Clark, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 102, holding act regulating sale of goods at auction is trade regulation discriminating against some in favor of other merchants; Wormser v. Easton, 6 Northampton Co. Rep. 129, holding ordinances requiring license fees from merchants selling or advertising to sell their goods as auction consignment, bankrupt assignment, fire, goods, etc., invalid discrimination.

16 L. R. A. 51, INGALLS v. HOBBS, 156 Mass. 348, 32 Am. St. Rep. 460, 31 N. E. 286.

Implied warranty in lease.

Cited in Jamison v. Ellsworth, 115 Iowa, 91, 87 N. W. 723, holding that lessee of farm cannot recover for insufficient water supply when no claim made that sufficient water supply impliedly warranted; Littlehale v. Osgood, 161 Mass. 343, 37 N. E. 375, holding question as to implied warranty that house was in good sanitary condition, not having been raised at trial, not available on appeal.

Cited in footnotes to Daly v. Wise, 16 L. R. A. 236, which holds no implied covenant that unfurnished dwelling leased is fit for residence; Angevine v. Knox-Goodrich, 18 L. R. A. 264, which denies implied warranty that house leased for dwelling is habitable.

Cited in note (33 L. R. A. 456) on implied covenant in lease as to fitness of property for purpose intended.

16 L. R. A. 53, GEORGIA SOUTHERN & F. R. CO. v. ASMORE, 88 Ga. 529, 15 S. E. 13.

Ejecting passenger for nonpayment of fare.

Cited in Phillips v. Southern R. Co. 114 Ga. 288, 40 S. E. 268, holding that passenger cannot be lawfully ejected for not paying extra fare when company made it impossible for him to purchase ticket; Coyle v. Southern R. Co. 112 Ga. 126, 37 S. E. 163, discussing question whether railway obliged to carry passenger after ejection, upon offering full fare; Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Strickland, 90 Ga. 568, 16 S. E. 352, holding it question for jury to determine whether passenger has used proper diligence in attempting to procure ticket before boarding train; Garrison v. United R. & Electric Co. 97 Md. 354, 99 Am. St. Rep. 452, 55 Atl. 371, upholding right of conductor to complete ejection of passenger refusing to pay fare, although, after stopping of car, friend offers to pay.

Cited in note (16 L. R. A. 55) on payment of back fare for distance already ridden as condition of being carried further.

16 L. R. A. 55, MANNING v. LOUISVILLE & N. R. CO. 95 Ala. 392, 36 Am. St. Rep. 225, 11 So. 8.

Right to eject passenger.

Cited in Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Adams, 60 Ill. App. 573, holding passenger may be rightfully ejected from train if he refuses to pay fare between stations for which he holds no ticket; McGhee v. Reynolds, 117 Ala. 420, 23 So. 68, holding that conductor can look to ticket as sole contract for right to ride, and, if void on face, can expel passenger for refusal to pay.

Cited in note (16 L. R. A. 53) on right of passenger to pay fare after train begins to stop for purpose of ejecting him.

16 L. R. A. 56, LIVERPOOL & L. & G. INS. CO. v. BOARD OF ASSESSORS, 44 La. Ann. 760, 11 So. 91.

Where property taxable.

Followed in Parker v. Strauss, 49 La. Ann. 1175, 22 So. 329, holding money deposited in bank to credit of nonresident firm to purchase cotton, taxable.

Cited in Clason v. New Orleans, 46 La. Ann. 4, 14 So. 306, holding money of non-resident firm deposited in bank to its credit for purchase of cotton, taxable where deposited; Bluefields Banana Co. v. New Orleans, 49 La. Ann. 46, 21 So. 627, holding money of nonresident corporation in hands of agent, taxable; State ex rel. Mechanics & T. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 47 La. Ann. 1545, 18 So. 519, holding bonds of another state, held there as security for insurance company's business, taxable at domicile of company; Railey v. Board of Assessors, 44 La. Ann. 769, 11 So. 93, holding tax on "credits" of nonresident void; State ex rel. Mechanics & T. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 47 La. Ann. 1508, 18 So. 462, holding premiums of insurance company in process of collection taxable where collected; New Orleans v. Stempel, 175 U. S. 313, 44 L. ed. 177, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110, holding credits in form of notes secured by mortgages in possession of nonresident's agent, to be reinvested when collected, taxable in his possession; Holland v. Silver Bow County, 15 Mont. 462, 27 L. R. A. 798, 39 Pac. 575, holding real estate mortgages owned by nonresident not taxable; Pyle v. Brenneman, 60 C. C. A. 411, 122 Fed. 789, holding bank deposit taxable at depositor's domicile.

Cited in footnotes to Grigsby Constr. Co. v. Freeman, 58 L. R. A. 349, which holds contractor's outfit, brought into state for use for several months in constructing railroad, taxable in state; Re Whiting, 34 L. R. A. 232, which holds bonds of foreign corporation within state, though owned by nonresident, subject to transfer tax; Myers v. Baltimore County, 34 L. R. A. 309, which sustains taxation of average amount of live stock received weekly by dealers.

Distinguished in Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 51 La. Ann. 1032, 45 L. R. A. 526, 72 Am. St. Rep. 483, 25 So. 970, holding uncollected premiums of nonresident insurance company not taxable.

16 L. R. A. 59, DETROIT v. RENTZ, 91 Mich. 78, 51 N. W. 787.

Taxation of real estate mortgages and other property.

Cited in Savings & Loan Soc. v. Multnomah County, 169 U. S. 428, 42 L. ed. 805, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 392, holding that mortgage interest may be taxed as real estate, though held by nonresident; Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 95 Mich. 467, 55 N. W. 112, holding act attempting to provide that banks and insurance companies shall not have deducted from assets amount of real estate mortgages contravenes right to uniformity of taxation; Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 91 Mich. 518, 52 N. W. 17, holding that value of mortgages assessed as real estate must be deducted from taxable net assets of insurance companies; Latham v. Board of Assessors, 91 Mich. 513, 52 N. W. 15, holding that assessors must assess to banks the mortgage interests they hold, and deduct value from value of capital stock; Michigan Sav. Bank v. Detroit, 107 Mich. 248, 65 N. W. 101, holding bank should have appealed for review of illegal assessment as provided by law, to entitle it to recover taxes paid under protest.

Cited in footnotes to San Gabriel Valley Land & Water Co. v. Witmer Bros. Co. 18 L. R. A. 465, which holds mortgage's duty to pay tax not discharged by assignment before tax levied; Allen v. National State Bank, 52 L. R. A. 760, which sustains right of state to tax nonresident mortgagee's interest in land within state; Fuller v. Kane, 34 L. R. A. 308, which holds stipulation for mortgagor paying all taxes does not bind him to pay taxes required of mortgagee by subsequent statute; Holland v. Silver Bow County, 27 L. R. A. 797, which holds not subject to taxation, real estate mortgage owned by nonresident; Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 16 L. R. A. 56, which holds nonresident not taxable for debt due from resident; Buck v. Miller, 37 L. R. A. 384, which holds money and securities retained in state in business of buying and selling property taxable there though owner domiciled elsewhere; Hamilton v. Wilson, 48 L. R. A. 238, which holds void, statute for taxation of personal judgments with specified exceptions.

Distinguished in Holland v. Silver Bow County, 15 Mont. 462, 27 L. R. A. 798, 39 Pac. 575, holding mortgages and other securities for debt held by nonresidents not subject to taxation; Adams v. Colonial & U. S. Mortg. Co. 82 Miss. 403, 100 Am. St. Rep. 633, 34 So. 482, holding money of nonresidents loaned in state not taxable.

Necessary formalities for valid act.

Cited in Cohn v. Kingsley, 5 Idaho, 454, 38 L. R. A. 92, 49 Pac. 985, dissenting opinion), majority holding journals of both houses must show affirmatively that constitutional provisions regarding passage of bills complied with; Norman v. Kentucky Bd. of Managers, 93 Ky. 576, 18 L. R. A. 566, 20 S. W. 901 (dissenting opinion), majority holding bill cannot become law unless two fifths of all members of legislature vote for it, vote taken by yeas and nays and entered in journal; New Hanover County v. Armour Packing Co. 135 N. C. 69, 47 S. E. 411, holding journals of Assembly conclusive evidence of passage of law.

Cited in note (23 L. R. A. 342) on conclusiveness of enrolled bill.

16 L. R. A. 81, LATAH COUNTY v. PETERSON, 3 Idaho, 398, 29 Pac. 1089.

Public ways and rights of way.

Cited in Towns v. Klamath County, 33 Or. 232, 53 Pac. 604, holding act providing for open public way to be laid out, paid for, and kept in repair by petitioner as public road, valid; Towns v. Klamath County, 33 Or. 232, 53 Pac. 604, upholding statute authorizing taking of property for public roads, upon petition.

Cited in footnotes to Bradley v. Pharr, 19 L. R. A. 647, which denies power to construct private railroad on public road; Bell v. Lamborn, 20 L. R. A. 241, which authorizes taking by eminent domain of right of way to carry water to electric light plant; Wisconsin Water Co. v. Winans, 20 L. R. A. 662, which denies water-supply company's right to condemn land for pipe line; Ex parte Bacot, 16 L. R. A. 586, which authorizes condemnation of right of way to connect manufacturing establishment with railroad; Paxton & H. Irrigating Canal & Land Co. v. Farmers' & M. Irrig. & Land Co. 29 L. R. A. 853, which holds condemnation of land for irrigating ditches to be "for" public purpose; Welton v. Dickson, 22 L. R. A. 496, which denies right to condemn land for private road from land cut off from public highway.

16 L. R. A. 85, UNION STOVE & MACH. WORKS v. CASWELL, 48 Kan. 689, 29 Pac. 1072.

Second appeal in 50 Kan. 780, 32 Pac. 362.

Principal debtor as surety.

Cited in Hall v. Johnston, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 114, 24 S. W. 861, holding extension by creditor of time for payment of indebtedness due from firm after retirement of partner releases him; Miller v. Kennedy, 12 S. D. 482, 81 N. W. 906, holding agreement by mortgagee with purchaser, against objection of mortgagor, to extend time of payment of mortgage assumed by purchaser discharges mortgagor; Mulvane v. Sedgley, 63 Kan. 112, 55 L. R. A. 555, footnote p. 552, 64 Pac. 1038, holding action on notes and to foreclose mortgage security barred when action against purchaser assuming mortgage barred by limitation: Bowling v. Garrett, 49 Kan. 520, 33 Am. St. Rep. 377, 31 Pac. 135, holding purchaser of real estate assuming mortgage indebtedness becomes principal debtor and mortgagor, surety.

16 L. R. A. 90, CENTRAL TRUST CO. v. MARIETTA & N. G. R. CO. 51 Fed. 15.

When receiver bound by previous agreements.

Cited in United States v. De Coursey, 82 Fed. 304, holding receiver, not party to tariff agreement in which railroad had entered, not criminally liable for failure to follow it: Commercial Pub. Co. v. Beckwith, 167 N. Y. 336, 60 N. E. 642, holding that receiver of publishing company who adopts its contracts incurs its obligations.

Cited in footnote to Bell v. American Protective League, 28 L. R. A. 452, which denies receiver's liability on covenants of lease as assignee of term.

16 L. R. A. 91, RICHMOND & D. R. CO. v. SCOTT, 88 Va. 958, 14 S. E. 763.

Negligence of passenger.

Cited in Georgia Southern & F. R. Co. v. Cartledge, 116 Ga. 170, 59 L. R. A. 122, 42 S. E. 405, holding negligent act of mail car employee, while passing letters out under grab on side of car, proximate cause of resulting injury to hand; Benedict v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 86 Minn. 228, 57 L. R. A. 641, 91 Am. St. Rep. 345, 90 N. W. 360, holding one thrusting his head beyond line of moving car, whereby his head comes in contact with post, negligent.

Cited in footnotes to Carrico v. West Virginia C. & P. R. Co. 24 L. R. A. 50, which holds that negligence in protruding arm from car window will not prevent recovery for injury if danger known to carrier; Benedict v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 57 L. R. A. 639, which holds exposure of body beyond side of moving train, by passenger on platform, negligence; Clark v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 36 L. R. A. 123, which holds slight projection of elbow from car window while passing through tunnel, negligence.

Negligence of carrier.

Cited in footnotes to Kird v. New Orleans & N. W. R. Co. 60 L. R. A. 727, which holds construction of freight platform so near track that passenger's elbow, protruding slightly, comes in contact, gross negligence; Elliott v. Newport Street R. Co. 23 L. R. A. 208, which holds passenger permitted to ride on footboard not bound to anticipate danger from trolley poles.

16 L. R. A. 94, EDGERTON v. EDGERTON, 12 Mont. 122, 33 Am. St. Rep. 557, 29 Pac. 966.

Collateral attack on judgments.

Followed in State ex rel. Giroux v. Giroux, 19 Mont. 158, 47 Pac. 798, holding decree of divorce by another state voidable only.

Cited in Johnson v. Puritan Min. Co. 19 Mont. 47, 47 Pac. 337, denying right to make collateral attack on judgment; Haupt v. Simington, 27 Mont. 485, 94 Am. St. Rep. 839, 71 Pac. 672, holding that judgment valid on its face cannot be attacked collaterally, although it may be void for want of service of summons.

Husband's liability for wife's support.

Cited in footnote to Kirk v. Chinstrand, 56 L. R. A. 333, which holds husband refusing to permit wife to live with him liable for her support where she chooses to live.

Appeal from orders for payment of alimony.

Cited in Lesh v. Lesh, 21 App. D. C. 485, holding order for payment of alimony pendente lite appealable.

16 L. R. A. 103, SPARROW v. POND, 49 Minn. 412, 32 Am. St. Rep. 571, 52 N. W. 36.

Levy on, and sale of, crops.

Cited in notes (23 L. R. A. 258, 259) on crops as personal property for purpose of levy and sale; (23 L. R. A. 452, 477) on sale or mortgage of future crops.

16 L. R. A. 106, HERR v. LEBANON, 149 Pa. 222, 34 Am. St. Rep. 603, 24 Atl. 207.

Proximate cause of injury.

Cited in Missouri P. R. Co. v. Columbia, 65 Kan. 400, 58 L. R. A. 404, 69 Pac. 338, holding severe gale proximate cause of grain doors being blown onto tracks, which resulted in derailment of engine, and injury; Storey v. New York, 29 App. Div. 321, 51 N. Y. Supp. 580, holding mound in street, caused by excavation of dirt, obstructing view of child and driver of cart approaching, not proximate cause of death of child, run over by cart; Habecker v. Lancaster Twp. 16 Lanc. L. Rev. 180, 9 Pa. Super. Ct. 556, 44 W. N. C. 53, holding breaking of hold-back strap proximate cause of horse veering to one side into unguarded quarry hole; Cage v. Franklin Twp. 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 538, holding township not liable for injury caused by horse balking and backing 70 feet. over unguarded wing wall of bridge; Closser v. Washington Twp. 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 126, holding that jury's finding that proximate cause of horse backing over embankment was narrowness of way and absence of guard rails justified recovery; Dixon v. Butler Twp. 4 Pa. Super. Ct. 340, 40 W. N. C. 212, holding township not liable for death caused by frightened horses. owing to absence of rail between highway and railway track; Swanson v. Crandall, 2 Pa. Super. Ct. 89, 39 W. N. C. 26, holding keeping of revolver in drawer, where child found and discharged it, not proximate cause of resulting injury; Boone v. East Norwegian Twp. 192 Pa. 209, 44 W. N. C. 285, 43 Atl. 1025, holding absence of guard rail at side of road proximate cause of accident, where horse kicked over shaft and went down embankment; Card v. Columbia Twp. 191 Pa. 270, 43 Atl. 217, holding township not liable where accident occurred by traces dropping from whiffletree, causing horses to run away and throw vehicle over unguarded bank; Schaeffer v. Jackson Twp. 150 Pa. 150, 18 L. R. A. 103, 30 Am. St. Rep. 792, 24 Atl. 629, holding defect in highway not proximate cause of injury to traveler thrown from buggy, where buggy wrecked by running horse before defect reached; Conner v. Fleer, 28 Pa. Co. Ct. 503, holding bars on windows, preventing one from escaping after discovery of danger, not proximate cause of injury by explosion; Pautz v. Plankinton Packing Co. 118 Wis. 51, 94 N. W. 654, holding defective wooden wheel, causing iron wheel to break, proximate cause of injury resulting therefrom.

Distinguished in Yoders v. Amwell Twp. 172 Pa. 456, 37 W. N. C. 513, 51 Am.

St. Rep. 750, 33 Atl. 1017, holding township not relieved for failure to put guard rails on bridge, off which horse backed vehicle, because such accident could not have been foreseen.

Contributory negligence.

Cited in Kitchen v. Union Twp. 171 Pa. 157, 33 Atl. 76, holding township not relieved from responsibility by reason of any concurring negligence of injured, when accident caused by frightened horse dashing over unguarded bank; Thayne v. Scranton Traction Co. 8 Pa. Super. Ct. 455 (dissenting opinion), majority holding presence of passenger on rear platform contributed to accident by which he was injured.

16 L. R. A. 108, LANGENBERG v. DECKER, 131 Ind. 471, 31 N. E. 100.

Limit of legislative, executive, and judicial powers.

Cited in Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 133 Ind. 658, 33 N. E. 432, and Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 133 Ind. 547, 18 L. R. A. 743, 33 N. E. 421, denying judicial powers to state board of tax commissioners; Re Sims, 54 Kan. 6, 25 L. R. A. 112, footnote p. 110, 45 Am. St. Rep. 261, 37 Pac. 135, declaring invalid, statute conferring on county attorney power to imprison for contempt; Ellis v. Steuben County, 153 Ind. 92, 54 N. E. 382, upholding, as not imposing judicial power, statute requiring county surveyor to inspect and accept drains; Purnell v. Mann, 105 Ky. 116, 50 S. W. 264, sustaining validity of act providing for election of county commissioners by state board of three members; Vigo County v. Stout, 136 Ind. 59, 22 L. R. A. 401, 35 N. E. 683, holding that court can, by order, regulate running of elevator in courthouse, and that county officials cannot discontinue its use; Re Huron, 58 Kan. 157, 36 L. R. A. 824, 62 Am. St. Rep. 614, 48 Pac. 574 (dissenting opinion), majority holding statute conferring on notary public power to commit witness for contempt, invalid; People ex rel. MacDonald v. Leubischer, 34 App. Div. 593, 54 N. Y. Supp. 869 (concurring opinion) holding commissioner appointed by another state to take deposition has no power to commit witness for contempt; Pratt v. Breckenridge, 112 Ky. 11, 65 S. W. 136, holding act, so far as providing for appointment of election commissioners by legislature, invalid.

Cited in footnotes to People ex rel. Kern v. Chase, 36 L. R. A. 105, which holds Torrens law unconstitutional as attempt to delegate judicial power to registrar of titles; Re Clark, 28 L. R. A. 242, which upholds right to summarily enforce answer by imprisoning witness; State ex rel. Ellis v. Thorne, 55 L. R. A. 956, which sustains statute for appointing commissioners by circuit judge to review and correct apportionment of state and county taxes.

16 L. R. A. 115, FRANK v. FRAYLOR, 130 Ind. 145, 29 N. E. 486.

Surety's right of subrogation and contribution.

Cited in Zimmerman v. Gaumer, 152 Ind. 563, 53 N. E. 829, holding that one defendant, assignee of judgment he has paid, cannot have execution until it is judicially settled that he is so entitled as against other defendants; Peirce v. Garrett, 65 Ill. App. 687, holding that surety who has paid mortgage can assign his right of subrogation to third party.

Cited in footnotes to Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Great Falls Opera House Co. 45 L. R. A. 285, which authorizes surety to take assignment of judgment paid by him as basis for contribution from cosureties; Pace v. Pace, 44 L. R. A. 459, which sustains right of surety paying obligation, to receive dividend on entire debt from cosurety's insolvent estate.

16 L. R. A. 119, SANBORN v. DETROIT, B. C. & A. R. CO. 91 Mich. 538, 52 N. W. 153.

Report of second appeal in 90 Mich. 2, 57 N. W. 1047.

Negligence in not giving signals at crossings.

Cited in Philadelphia & B. C. R. Co. v. Holden, 93 Md. 423, 40 Atl. 625, holding failure to blow whistle at station 2,000 feet from private crossing not negligence as to one using crossing; Loneragan v. Illinois C. R. Co. 87 Iowa, 762, 17 L. R. A. 258, 53 N. W. 236, holding railroad negligent in running train past team unloading on railway land, without ringing bell at crossing near by; Lau v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 120 Mich. 125, 79 N. W. 13 (dissenting opinion), majority holding bicyclist guilty of contributory negligence in not dismounting to look and listen when view obstructed, instead of assuming signals would be given.

Cited in footnotes to Vandewater v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 18 L. R. A. 772, which holds that engineer's failure to give statutory signals at crossing will not render company liable per se; Butcher v. West Virginia & P. R. Co. 18 L. R. A. 519, which holds company not liable for failure to give crossing signal unless injury proximate result; Czech v. Great Northern R. Co. 38 L. R. A. 302, which holds company liable for failure to give signals at particularly dangerous farm crossings, when required in exercise of reasonable care; Wragge v. South Carolina & G. R. Co. 33 L. R. A. 191, which holds company liable for failure to give crossing signal, contributing to collision; Lillstrom v. Northern P. R. Co. 20 L. R. A. 587, which holds, as highway crossing railroad, road openly used and recognized as such; Stewart v. Cincinnati, W. & M. R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 539, which holds railroad company continuing farm crossing required to use care to make it safe; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Bodine, 56 L. R. A. 506, which requires signals for peculiarly dangerous special train at private crossing used by public; Reynolds v. Great Northern R. Co. 29 L. R. A. 695, which denies duty to signal train's approach at private crossing as to one driving on highway parallel with track.

Cited in note (17 L. R. A. 254, 255) as to whose benefit signals by approaching trains are required by statute at railway crossings.

Admissibility of evidence.

Cited in Sanborn v. Detroit, B. C. & A. R. Co. 99 Mich. 2, 57 N. W. 1047, holding evidence that immediately after accident it was talked over by witnesses that statutory signal not given, properly rejected.

16 L. R. A. 130, STATE v. CUTSHALL, 110 N. C. 538, 15 S. E. 261.

Jurisdiction of crime.

Cited in State v. Buchanan, 130 N. C. 662, 41 S. E. 107, holding prisoner entitled to show crime charged was committed in another state by evidence of prosecution tending to establish such defense; State v. Hall, 114 N. C. 912, 28 L. R. A. 59, 41 Am. St. Rep. 822, 19 S. E. 602, holding that one shooting across border and killing person in another state cannot be convicted of murder in state from which shot fired; State v. Hall, 115 N. C. 817, 28 L. R. A. 292, 44 Am. St. Rep. 501, 20 S. E. 729, holding that one shooting across border and killing person in another state cannot be extradited as fugitive from justice from state where shot fired to state where murder committed; Watson's Petition, 19 R. I. 345, 33 Atl. 873, holding that bigamy can only be committed in county and state where second marriage takes place.

Cited in note (28 L. R. A. 60) on locality of crime committed by shooting or striking across state boundary.

Distinguished in State v. Caldwell, 115 N. C. 803, 20 S. E. 523, holding act valid which provides for punishment in county where death happens as result of violence inflicted, or poison administered, without state.

When person entitled to office.

Cited in State ex rel. Greene v. Owen, 125 N. C. 215, 34 S. E. 424, holding elected member of board of education entitled to office until expiration of term, notwithstanding amendments changing board; Walser ex rel. Wilson v. Jordan, 124 N. C. 709, 33 S. E. 139, holding clerk of court elected for term not expired entitled to hold his office as property under law of land, notwithstanding amendments abolishing office.

16 L. R. A. 136, PALMERI v. MANHATTAN R. CO. 133 N. Y. 261, 28 Am. St. Rep. 632, 30 N. E. 1001.

Liability of principal for torts of agents.

Cited in Flora v. Russell, 138 Ind. 161, 37 N. E. 593, holding that acts of railroad's agents in obtaining search warrant for tobacco which defendant accused of taking were acts of principal; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Henry, 55 Kan. 723, 29 L. R. A. 467, footnote p. 465, 41 Pac. 952, holding railroad liable for false imprisonment of passengers, caused by conductor acting in line of authority; Richberger v. American Exp. Co. 73 Miss. 169, 31 L. R. A. 391, 55 Am. St. Rep. 522, 18 So. 922, holding express company liable for maltreatment and abuse of customer by one of its servants immediately after delivery to him of receipt for amount of overcharge; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Luleich, 85 Ill. App. 652, holding railway liable for false arrest of passenger by request of conductor, for alleged passing of counterfeit money for fare; Murray v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 66 Conn. 519, 32 L. R. A. 539, 34 Atl. 506, holding railroad liable for negligence of servants of another road over which its train is running under contract, causing injury to passenger; Monnier v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 70 App. Div. 409, 75 N. Y. Supp. 521, holding railroad liable for ejection from train of passenger who refused to pay on train fare to his station, after inability to purchase ticket at station; McLeod v. New York, C. & St. L. R. Co. 72 App. Div. 119, 76 N. Y. Supp. 347, holding railroad liable for false arrest of passenger accused of theft by one of its detectives on train; Hart v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 65 App. Div. 495, 72 N. Y. Supp. 797, holding carrier liable for injury to passenger thrown by gripman from front platform of car he had safely boarded; Nowack v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 166 N. Y. 440, 54 L. R. A. 595, 82 Am. St. Rep. 691, 60 N. E. 32, holding evidence admissible against corporation that its agent attempted to bribe witnesses, where it was shown he was engaged to "see to the witnesses" and took this method to get evidence; Craven v. Bloomington, 54 App. Div. 269, 66 N. Y. Supp. 525, holding master liable for arrest caused by his driver, of one in whose rightful possession was oven which driver had delivered; Dupre v. Childs, 52 App. Div. 309, 65 N. Y. Supp. 179, holding restaurant keeper liable for arrest by its manager of guest leaving restaurant without being served, and not stopping at cashier's desk in accordance with rule; Warren v. Dennett, 17 Misc. 90, 39 N. Y. Supp. 830, holding restaurant keeper liable for false imprisonment of guest, arrested and held by police officer at request of manager; Van Siclen v. Jamaica Electric Light Co. 45 App. Div. 4, 61 N. Y. Supp. 210, holding company liable for trespass of its workmen in cutting trees to string wires under direction of its manager; Scott v. New York, 27 App. Div. 245, 50 N. Y. Supp. 191, holding city liable for agent's forcibly taking from passing boy, satchel mistakenly supposed to be one of those agent was engaged in removing to place of detention; Miller v. King, 21 App. Div. 200, 47 N. Y. Supp. 534 (concurring opinion), majority holding company not liable for expulsion from train of passenger with ticket to station at which train did not stop; O'Connell v. Samuel, 81 Hun, 360, 30 N. Y. Supp. 889, holding that agent of credit house, who assaulted woman resisting his entrance to house to retake possession of property, may have been within scope of authority; Tierney v. Syracuse, B. & N. Y. R. Co. 85 Hun, 152, 32 N. Y. Supp. 627, holding it question for jury whether switchman acting within scope of duty when, through mistake, he switches train onto siding; Lang v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 80 Hun, 277, 30 N. Y. Supp. 137, holding it for jury to determine whether brakeman on coal train, hitting boy in back with piece of coal, was within his duty in removing him from train; Penny v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 34 App. Div. 13, 53 N. Y. Supp. 1043, holding railroad not liable for arrest and detention of one not passenger, by detectives not in its employ or directed by it to make arrest; Franklin v. Third Ave. R. Co. 52 App. Div. 514, 65 N. Y. Supp. 434, holding that carrier was bound to protect passenger from brutal assault by conductor; Fogarty v. Wanamaker, 60 App. Div. 437, 69 N. Y. Supp. 883, holding sufficient, complaint for damages for false arrest and detention which alleged that it took place in defendant's store with sanction of superintendent while acting in his employ; Jenkins v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 29 App. Div. 16, 51 N. Y. Supp. 216, holding evidence of passenger's arrest, transportation in patrol wagon, and subsequent discharge admissible as bearing on damages for ejection from car; Gillespie v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 178 N. Y. 359, 66 L. R. A. 623, 70 N. E. 857, holding carrier liable for injury suffered by passenger through insulting and abusive language of conductor; Willis v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 76 App. Div. 344, 78 N. Y. Supp. 478, holding railway company liable for injuries due to assault and wrongful ejection of passenger; Markley v. Snow, 207 Pa. 452, 64 L. R. A. 687, footnote p. 685, 56 Atl. 999, holding partnership not liable for wrongful arrest of accused at instance of superintendent, three months after alleged crime; Collins v. Butler, 83 App. Div. 18, 81 N. Y. Supp. 1074, holding merchant liable for wrongful assault upon customer by clerk.

Cited in footnotes to Central R. Co. v. Brewer, 27 L. R. A. 63, which denies implied authority of street railway superintendent to cause arrest for giving counterfeit money; Eichengreen v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 31 L. R. A. 702, which holds carrier liable for false imprisonment procured by railroad detective; Little Rock Traction & Electric Co. v. Walker, 40 L. R. A. 473, which denies carrier's liability for arrest for nonpayment of fare of street car passenger by policeman called by conductor, who was only authorized to put delinquent passengers off car; Farber v. Missouri P. R. Co. 20 L. R. A. 350, which holds driving of trespasser from freight train by brakeman not to be within scope of employment; Staples v. Schmid, 19 L. R. A. 824, which holds salesman within scope of employment in causing arrest and search of person for stolen property; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v.

Cain, 28 L. R. A. 688, which holds officer's arrest of disorderly passenger without warrant, in response to telegram by conductor, who pointed out person to be arrested, not unlawful; Palmer v. Maine C. R. Co. 44 L. R. A. 673, which holds passenger's unreasonable refusal to tell whether name on mileage ticket is his own no justification for procuring his arrest.

Distinguished in Kennedy v. White, 91 App. Div. 478, 86 N. Y. Supp. 852, holding tenement owner not liable for injury caused by janitor throwing stick of wood at boy in street.

Carrier's liability for wrongful arrest of passenger by third persons.

Cited in footnote to Brunswick & W. R. Co. v. Ponder, 60 L. R. A. 714, which denies carrier's liability for failure to prevent illegal arrest by officers, or for stopping train to permit removal.

16 L. R. A. 138, COOPER v. UNITED STATES MUT. ACCI. ASSO. 132 N. Y. 334, 44 N. Y. S. R. 553, 28 Am. St. Rep. 581, 30 N. E. 833.

Limitation of action on policy.

Cited in Provident Fund Soc. v. Howell, 110 Ala. 510, 18 So. 105, holding that action on policy cannot be brought seven months after receipt of proofs of loss, when policy stipulated limitation of six months; McFarland v. Railway Officials & E. Acci. Asso. 5 Wyo. 145, 27 L. R. A. 55, 63 Am. St. Rep. 29, 38 Pac. 347, holding that limitation of action within one year from happening of alleged injury means from death of insured.

Cited in notes (47 L. R. A. 706) on stipulation limiting time for suit on insurance policy, when begins to run; (26 L. R. A. 112) as to when liability on accident insurance policy becomes fixed.

Failure to furnish proofs of loss or notice of accident or death.

Cited in Meagher v. Life Union, 65 Hun. 360, 20 N. Y. Supp. 247, holding beneficiary excused from furnishing proofs of loss, where company has refused to furnish blanks on ground policy void.

Cited in footnotes to Woodmen Acci. Asso. v. Byers, 55 L. R. A. 291, which holds failure to give notice of injury excused by derangement of insured; Foster v. Fidelity & C. Co. 40 L. R. A. 833, which holds twenty-nine days' delay in giving notice of accident fatal under policy requiring immediate notice; Trippe v. Provident Fund Soc. 22 L. R. A. 432, which holds time for giving notice of death runs from time when fact of death known.

16 L. R. A. 140, STATE ex rel. LYSONS v. RUFF, 4 Wash. 234, 29 Pac. 999.

Forfeiture and vacancies in office.

Cited in Duffy v. State, 60 Neb. 825, 84 N. W. 264, holding elected officer taking statutory, but not constitutional, oath in time does not forfeit office.

Cited in footnotes to State ex rel. Standish v. Boucher, 21 L. R. A. 539, which holds vacancy not created by senate's adjournment without confirming appointment of successor to officer holding over; State ex rel. Berge v. Lansing, 35 L. R. A. 124, which holds vacancy created by failure to file official bond in time; Re Drury, 39 Misc. 290, 79 N. Y. Supp. 498, holding office not forfeited by failure of town clerk elect to take and file oath of office within statutory time.

Criticized in State ex rel. Berge v. Lansing, 46 Neb. 524, 35 L. R. A. 128, 64 N.

W. 1104, holding office vacant ipso facto for failure to file bond within time directed by statute.

Powers of deputies.

Cited in Tower v. Welker, 93 Mich. 335, 53 N. W. 527, holding city clerk with power to administer oath may appoint a deputy with full power to perform all of his duties.

16 L. R. A. 143, REEVE v. FIRST NAT. BANK, 54 N. J. L. 208, 33 Am. St. Rep. 675, 23 Atl. 853.

When obligation personal or corporate.

Cited in Terhune v. Parrott, 59 N. J. L. 17, 35 Atl. 4, holding indorsement by party, "President of" etc., prima facie denotes personal liability; Simanton v. Vliet, 61 N. J. L. 597, 40 Atl. 595, holding parol evidence admissible to determine whether note signed by trustees was corporate or personal; Vliet v. Simanton, 63 N. J. L. 463, 43 Atl. 738, refusing to disturb verdict that note made and signed by trustees of grange was their personal obligation where note was ambiguous, and parol evidence was admitted to show intent of makers.

Cited in footnote to Kline v. Bank of Tescott, 18 L. R. A. 533, which holds extrinsic evidence admissible that indorsers described as directors and officers signed solely as corporate officers.

Cited in notes (19 L. R. A. 676) on personal liability of officers on note made for corporation; (20 L. R. A. 705) on admissibility of extrinsic evidence to show who is liable as maker of note.

16 L. R. A. 145, ARCHER v. SALINAS CITY, 93 Cal. 43, 28 Pac. 839.

Land dedicated to public.

Cited in Los Angeles v. Kysor, 125 Cal. 467, 58 Pac. 90, denying dedication of park to public when owners continued to deal with it, and no act of acceptance by city shown; Conkling v. Mackinaw City, 120 Mich. 77, 79 N. W. 6, holding dedication shown when owner of wild land plats it with lots and streets, indicating park, and sells lots with reference thereto, although formal acceptance not indicated; London & S. F. Bank v. Oakland, 33 C. C. A. 246, 61 U. S. App. 224, 90 Fed. 700, holding map duly filed and recorded, showing street, sufficient dedication to public when deeds refer to it and owners adopt it.

— Acceptance and reverter.

Cited in Anaheim v. Langenberger, 134 Cal. 610, 66 Pac. 855, holding action by city to quiet title to tract of land as public park twenty years after offer of dedication not evidence of acceptance; London & S. F. Bank v. Oakland, 33 C. C. A. 246, 61 U. S. App. 224, 90 Fed. 702, holding street accepted, when ordinance adopted setting forth stipulation which included part of it; Dallas v. Gibbs, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 278, 65 S. W. 81, holding that land dedicated for street vests in public upon acceptance by city; McAlpine v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. (Kan.) 64 L. R. A. 88, 75 Pac. 73, holding that land dedicated to public use does not revert because of mere misuse or nonuse.

Title by adverse possession and prescription.

Cited in Proctor v. San Francisco, 40 C. C. A. 401, 100 Fed. 351, holding evidence of title by adverse possession of land dedicated to public use does not sustain allegation of ownership in fee simple in ejectment; Southern P. Co. v. Hyatt, 132 Cal. 244, 54 L. R. A. 525, 64 Pac. 272, holding individuals cannot acquire prescriptive rights over railroad right of way.

16 L. R. A. 148, COM. v. ALLEN, 148 Pa. 358, 33 Am. St. Rep. 830, 23 Atl. 1115.

Unusual use of highways.

Cited in Missouri-Edison Electric Co. v. Weber, 102 Mo. App. 102, 76 S. W. 736, holding one driving unusually heavy load over street liable for breaking manholes owned by private corporations.

Care of highways and bridges.

Explained in Coulter v. Pine Twp. 164 Pa. 547, 35 W. N. C. 399, 30 Atl. 490, holding instruction proper that liability for collapse of bridge turns upon question whether traction engine, breaking through, had become the usual and ordinary mode of travel when bridge reconstructed.

Cited in Hardin County v. Coffman, 60 Ohio St. 534, 48 L. R. A. 458, 54 N. E. 1054, holding liability of highway commissioners for death of persons running traction engine over bridge depends upon whether they used ordinary care of reasonably prudent persons in their position, as to repair of bridge.

Cited in footnotes to Clulow v. McClelland, 17 L. R. A. 650, which holds township officer's ignorance of defect of bridge, not disclosed by examination by one intending to take traction engine over, not negligence; Hall v. Concord, 58 L. R. A. 455, which denies city's liability for negligent management of steam roller in repairing city street under supervision of state superintendent; Stewart v. California Improv. Co. 52 L. R. A. 205, which holds owner of steam roller liable for engineer's neglect to warn travelers, though roller hired by city.

Cited in note (39 L. R. A. 621) on municipal control over public nuisances upon public streets and highways created by street railroad and other electrical companies.

16 L. R. A. 150, STATE v. HASLEDAHL, 2 N. D. 521, 52 N. W. 315.

Report of second appeal in 3 N. D. 36, 53 N. W. 430, holding that new information can be filed to cure defect hitherto adjudged, without preliminary examination of accused.

Challenges to jury.

Cited in People v. Zeigler, 135 Cal. 464, 56 L. R. A. 893, footnote p. 882, 67 Pac. 754, holding defendant in murder trial entitled to full number of peremptory challenges where juror excused for sickness before jury fully impaneled.

When cause on trial.

Cited in Second Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 8 N. D. 55, 76 N. W. 504, which holds case was "tried" before statute went into effect, where testimony all in, although findings not signed until subsequently; State v. Kent, 5 N. D. 531, sub nom. State v. Pancoast, 35 L. R. A. 524, 67 N. W. 1052, construing statute to mean that trial had not begun when application was made for change of venue before jury impaneled; State v. Bronkol, 5 N. D. 513, 67 N. W. 680, which holds plea of jeopardy not sustained where jury discharged on motion of state's attorney before accused had pleaded to information.

Sufficiency of indictment.

Distinguished in State v. Thompson, 4 S. D. 99, 55 N. W. 725, sustaining indictment.

ment entitled in name of state against defendant, and found by grand jury under sanction of state's attorney; State v. Kerr, 3 N. D. 525, 58 N. W. 27, which holds indictment need not specifically set forth that prosecution is carried on in name and by authority of state, if fact appears indirectly, but certainly.

16 L. R. A. 154, BAKER v. FLINT & P. M. R. CO. 91 Mich. 298, 30 Am. St. Rep. 471, 51 N. W. 897.

Earnings of married women and minors.

Cited in Nieboer v. Detroit Electric R. Co. 128 Mich. 495, 87 N. W. 626 (dissenting opinion), as to correctness of receiving testimony as to wages earned by minor suing by next friend; Kucera v. Merrill Lumber Co. 91 Wis. 645, 65 N. W. 374, raising without deciding, question of estoppel on father by reason of waiver of right of action for loss of services of minor child; Chicago Screw Co. v. Weiss, 203 Ill. 542, 68 N. E. 54, Affirming 107 Ill. App. 46, holding right to earnings of minor relinquished by father suing for damages as next friend; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Jackson, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 343, 71 S. W. 991, holding that action for recovery by parent as next friend for loss of services during minority must clearly seek such recovery, to bar recovery therefor by parent; Daly v. Everett Pulp & Paper Co. 31 Wash. 259, 71 Pac. 1014, holding father participating in suit by son estopped from maintaining action for loss of services by reason of injury to latter.

Cited in footnote to Bagwell v. Atlanta Consol. Street R. Co. 47 L. R. A. 486, which holds action for injury to minor daughter should not be dismissed for her refusal, after attaining majority, to submit to physical examination.

Distinguished in Tunncliffe v. Bay Cities Consol. R. Co. 102 Mich. 628, 32 L. R. A. 145, 61 N. W. 11, which holds evidence by plaintiff, a married woman, of impairment of her earning capacity inadmissible because husband prima facie entitled to her earnings.

16 L. R. A. 159, LOWENBERG v. LEVINE, 93 Cal. 215, 28 Pac. 941.

16 L. R. A. 161, DOUGHERTY v. AUSTIN, 94 Cal. 601, 28 Pac. 834, 29 Pac. 1092.

Limitation upon powers of supervisors.

Cited in Agard v. Shaffer, 141 Cal. 727, 75 Pac. 343, holding unconstitutional, statute directing supervisors, when necessary, to provide additions to clerical force for specified work; Butte County v. Merrill, 141 Cal. 397, 74 Pac. 1036, holding county ordinance permitting tax collector to retain commission for collection of license taxes void.

Compensation of deputies.

Cited in San Francisco v. Broderick, 125 Cal. 193, 57 Pac. 887, denying right of county clerk to have audited, wages paid to additional copyists appointed by him under statute.

Delegation of power.

Cited in People ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Wheeler, 136 Cal. 655, 69 Pac. 435, which holds legislative duty of providing for election and fixing term of officers cannot be delegated to board of supervisors.

Cited in footnotes to Haigh v. Bell, 31 L. R. A. 131, which authorizes delegation to county court of exercise of police power of county; Pueblo County v. Smith, 33

L. R. A. 465, which sustains statute authorizing county commissioners to provide additional justices of peace when necessary.

Special legislation.

Cited in Tulare v. Hevren, 126 Cal. 232, 58 Pac. 530, denying validity of section of general statute confined to one of six classes of municipal corporations.

16 L. R. A. 174, COLEMAN v. NEW ORLEANS INS. CO. 49 Ohio St. 310, 34 Am. St. Rep. 565, 31 N. E. 279.

Severability of insurance contract.

Followed without discussion in Insurance Co. v. Cohn, 63 Ohio St. 597, 60 N. E. 1131.

Cited in Trabue v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. 121 Mo. 86, 23 L. R. A. 722, 42 Am. St. Rep. 523, 25 S. W. 848, holding severable policy not avoided as to personal property, because of additional word "entire" before policy; Phillips v. Ohio Farmer's Ins. Co. 13 Ohio C. C. 686, holding policy on real and personal property severable for breach of condition subsequent—as, by change of title; Phillips v. Ohio Farmer's Ins. Co. 13 Ohio C. C. 682, 683, holding policy covering both real and personal property severable, entitling insured to recover on personal; Georgia Home Ins. Co. v. McKinley, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 11, 37 S. W. 606, holding policy covering storehouse and merchandise severable.

Distinguished in Home Ins. Co. v. Connelly, 104 Tenn. 98, 56 S. W. 828, denying right to recover for loss of real property in severable policy, when insured fraudulently increased loss for personal property; Germania F. Ins. Co. v. Schild, 69 Ohio St. 140, 100 Am. St. Rep. 663, 68 N. E. 706, holding risk not severable where stipulation for forfeiture provided: "This entire policy shall be void."

16 L. R. A. 178, PEOPLE ex rel. COLFAX v. MAXTON, 139 Ill. 306, 28 N. E. 1074.

Estoppel.

Cited in Chicago v. Union Stock Yards & Transit Co. 164 Ill. 232, 35 L. R. A. 285, 45 N. E. 430, holding city estopped to deny that railroad acquired consent to lay tracks across street, after twenty years' use and expenditure in improvements at crossings; Maltman v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 72 Ill. App. 388, holding railroad estopped to allege that land it had applied for as street, for right of way, was not street; Doane v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. 165 Ill. 524, 36 L. R. A. 104, 56 Am. St. Rep. 265, 46 N. E. 520, holding that elevated railroad having availed itself of right to use street would be estopped from claiming structure unlawful.

Parties in mandamus proceedings.

Cited in People ex rel. Rinne v. Blocki, 203 Ill. 368, 67 N. E. 809, holding third party, interested in maintenance of switch tracks sought to be removed, properly made defendant in mandamus proceeding.

16 L. R. A. 180, Re STREET OPENING, 133 N. Y. 329, 45 N. Y. S. R. 213, 28 Am. St. Rep. 640, 31 N. E. 102.

Liability for disinterment of bodies.

Cited in note (42 L. R. A. 731) on liability for disinterment of dead bodies, and actions relating thereto.

16 L. R. A. 183, PEOPLE ex rel. WINCHESTER v. COLEMAN, 133 N. Y. 279, 45 N. Y. S. R. 217, 31 N. E. 96.

Joint stock associations and limited partnerships.

Cited in State ex rel. Railroad & Warehouse Commission v. United States Exp. Co. 81 Minn. 90, 50 L. R. A. 668, footnote p. 667, 83 Am. St. Rep. 366, 83 N. W. 465, denying right of state to compel foreign joint stock association to answer questions as to its interstate business; Messler v. Schwarzkopf, 35 Misc. 73, 71 N. Y. Supp. 241, granting plaintiff right to amend complaint by designating officer of joint stock association by proper title; Francis v. Taylor, 31 Misc. 188, 65 N. Y. Supp. 28, upholding right of joint stock association to dissolve by consent of its stockholders; Raymond v. Colton, 43 C. C. A. 508, 104 Fed. 226, upholding right of officers of joint stock association to sell its assets with approval of all interested; Cotton v. Raymond, 41 Misc. 583, 85 N. Y. Supp. 210, holding joint stock association dissolvable by court only for fraud in management, or for good cause shown; Blue Mountain Forest Asso. v. Borrowe, 71 N. H. 73, 51 Atl. 670, holding by-law of private corporations providing for assessments on capital stock to make up deficiency in income binding upon shareholders; Snyder v. Lindsey, 92 Hun, 433, 36 N. Y. Supp. 1037, holding action maintainable by member for dissolution of joint stock association.

Cited in footnotes to Rouse, H. & Co. v. Donovan, 27 L. R. A. 577, which holds valid, provision for execution against limited partners for unpaid subscriptions after return of execution against partnership; Edwards v. Warren Linoline & Gasoline Works, 38 L. R. A. 791, which holds partnership association organized under laws of Pennsylvania regarded as partnership instead of corporation in Massachusetts; State ex rel. Railroad & W. Commission v. Adams Exp. Co. 38 L. R. A. 225, which holds service on nonresident joint stock association properly made on local agent; State, Tide Water Pipe Co., Prosecutor, v. State Assessors, 27 L. R. A. 684, which holds limited partnership a corporation for purpose of taxation.

Cited in note (22 L. R. A. 478) on tax on partnership property.

Limited in Andrews Bros. Co. v. Youngstown Coke Co. 30 C. C. A. 295, 58 U. S. App. 444, 86 Fed. 587, retaining jurisdiction of Federal court over joint stock association, because of diversity of citizenship.

Shares in joint stock associations.

Cited in Re Jones, 172 N. Y. 579, 60 L. R. A. 477, footnote p. 476, 65 N. E. 570, Reversing 69 App. Div. 241, 74 N. Y. Supp. 702, sustaining transfer tax on shares of joint stock association as personalty, though invested in real estate; Lane v. Albertson, 78 App. Div. 616, 79 N. Y. Supp. 947, sustaining right of residuary legatee to shares of joint stock association willed to him, notwithstanding provision in articles as to sale or transfer by member; Gregg v. Sanford, 12 C. C. A. 526, 28 U. S. App. 313, 65 Fed. 153, denying right to tax shares of joint stock association under statute imposing tax on capital stock of "incorporated" companies.

Rights and liabilities of corporation and its members.

Cited in Niles v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 69 App. Div. 148, 74 N. Y. Supp. 617, denying to stockholder right to bring action individually for wrong done corporation; Camp Mfg. Co. v. Harriman, 18 Misc. 724, 43 N. Y. Supp. 673, and National Bank v. Dillingham, 147 N. Y. 611, 49 Am. St. Rep. 692, 42 N. E. 338, holding that liability of trustees of corporation for failure to file report is secondary.

Cited in notes (57 L. R. A. 75) on taxation of corporate franchise in United States; (58 L. R. A. 526) on taxation of capital stock of corporations in United States.

16 L. R. A. 186, RYDER v. HORSTING, 130 Ind. 104, 29 N. E. 567.

Right to notice in condemnation proceedings.

Cited in Aldredge v. School Dist. No. 16, 10 Okla. 698, 65 Pac. 96, holding owner of property to be taken for public use entitled to notice.

16 L. R. A. 188, FAY v. PACIFIC IMPROV. CO. 93 Cal. 253, 27 Am. St. Rep. 198, 26 Pac. 1099, 28 Pac. 943.

Liability for loss of personal property.

Cited in Pope v. Farmers' Union & Mill. Co. 130 Cal. 141, 53 L. R. A. 677, 80 Am. St. Rep. 87, 62 Pac. 384, sustaining right to recover value of wheat lost by fire, under contract with warehouseman to restore it, damage by elements excepted.

Cited in footnotes to Libby v. Maine C. R. Co. 20 L. R. A. 812, which holds unprecedented flood, causing washout of railroad culvert, act of God; Lang v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 20 L. R. A. 360, which holds theft or destruction of whiskey after train wrecked by flood not due to inevitable accident; Bradley Livery Co. v. Snook, 55 L. R. A. 208, which denies innkeeper's liability for team tied under shed without his attention being called to fact.

16 L. R. A. 189, GRATIOT v. MISSOURI P. R. CO. 116 Mo. 450, 21 S. W. 1094.

Liability for violating ordinance.

Cited in Hutchinson v. Missouri P. R. Co. 161 Mo. 253, 84 Am. St. Rep 710, 61 S. W. 635, holding that traveler has right to rely on obedience of railroad to ordinance regulating speed of train in city; Sullivan v. Missouri P. R. Co. 117 Mo. 245, 23 S. W. 149, holding that traveler may assume railroad employees are observing provisions of ordinance regulating speed of trains; Becker v. Schutte, 85 Mo. App. 63, holding action based on ordinance forbidding horse to be left unfastened in public street is one founded in common law; Jackson v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 157 Mo. 641, 80 Am. St. Rep. 650, 58 S. W. 32, upholding right to bring action for damages for death of husband, which resulted from running train at greater speed than ordinance provided; Ashby v. Elsberry & N. H. Gravel Road Co. 99 Mo. App. 185, 73 S. W. 229, holding failure to perform statutory duty as to construction of road, negligence, affording right of action for resulting injury.

Validity of ordinances.

Cited in Plattsburg v. Hagenbush, 98 Mo. App. 671, 73 S. W. 725, holding ordinance limiting speed of trains to 6 miles an hour in city unreasonable as to outskirts; Springfield v. Jacobs, 101 Mo. App. 342, 73 S. W. 1097, holding ordinance imposing tax of $50 per day on transient stores void.

When negligence question for jury.

Cited in Eberly v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 96 Mo. App. 369, 70 S. W. 381, leaving it to jury to determine question of contributory negligence of day laborer whose foot was crushed by iron dropped on it without warning or orders of foreman; Levin v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 140 Mo. 631, 41 S. W. 968, holding for jury question of contributory negligence in permitting child to escape for five minutes from mother's care; Kreis v. Missouri P. R. Co. 131 Mo. 545, 30 S. W. 310, holding that jury should determine liability of railroad upon conflicting evidence that employees saw woman negligently walking near track in time to have prevented accident; Weller v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 120 Mo. 648, 23 S. W. 1061, leaving to jury question of contributory negligence of traveler as to looking before driving over track, when headlight of locomotive might have been seen; Lamb v. Missouri P. R. Co. 147 Mo. 186, 48 S. W. 659, holding it for jury to determine question of contributory negligence of traveler who testified she stopped, looked, and listened before crossing track; Steube v. Christopher & S. Architectural Iron & Foundry Co. 85 Mo. App. 650, which holds for jury, question of contributory negligence of workman knocked from scaffold by iron strap dropped by fellow workman; Baird v. Citizens' R. Co. 146 Mo. 282, 48 S. W. 78, holding for jury, questions of negligence of gripman and contributory negligence of child crossing track; Kansas City-Leavenworth R. Co. v. Gallagher (Kan.) 64 L. R. A. 348, 75 Pac. 469, holding it question for jury whether traveler negligent in crossing street car track in front of approaching car; Campbell v. St. Louis & Suburban R. Co. 175 Mo. 172, 75 S. W. 86, holding question as to contributory negligence of one killed at crossing, properly submitted to jury; Paden v. Van Blarcom, 100 Mo. App. 194, 74 S. W. 124, holding negligence of one turning on gas in stove, from which explosion resulted, question for jury.

L. R. A. Au.—VOL. II.—65.

Cited in footnotes to Lorenz v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 753, which holds negligence of one pursuing cow, in not looking and listening before crossing railroad track, for jury; Western & A. R. Co. v. Ferguson, 54 L. R. A. 803, which holds recovery not prevented by failure to look when within 30 feet of track; Keenan v. Union Traction Co. 58 L. R. A. 217, which holds failure to look for train when within 35 feet of track, negligence.

Admissibility of and demurrer to evidence.

Cited in Paul v. Omaha & St. L. R. Co. 82 Mo. App. 505, admitting evidence of average earnings of traveling salesman selling on commission, as element of damage for injury.

Cited in footnote to Hopkins v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 32 L. R. A. 354, which sustains practice of demurring to evidence.

16 L. R. A. 198, RICE v. MOORE, 48 Kan. 590, 30 Am. St. Rep. 318, 30 Pac. 10.
Revivor of judgment.

Cited in Bankers L. Ins. Co. v. Robbins, 59 Neb. 173, 80 N. W. 484, permitting revivor of judgment more than five years after issuance of execution, because special limitation not applicable.

What law governs actions on judgments.

Cited in note (48 L. R. A. 633) as to when statute of limitations will govern action in another state or country.

16 L. R. A. 200, WILSON v. TRENTON, 53 N. J. L. 645, 23 Atl. 278.
Notice.

Cited in Blanchard v. Ely, 179 Mass. 588, 61 N. E. 218, holding service of demand by mail before enforcing lien for keeping horse, sufficient; Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Snyder, 56 N. J. L. 331, 28 Atl. 376, holding it error to exclude evidence of posting on bulletin notice of new regulation as affecting right to discharge employee of railroad; Bank of Columbia v. Portland, 41 Or. 7, 67 Pac. 1112, holding sufficient, notice of street improvement substantially complying with requirement of charter.

Cited in footnotes to Savings Bank v. Authier, 18 L. R. A. 498, which holds summons mailed defendant by third person, served by mistake, insufficient; Treftz v. Stahl, 18 L. R. A. 500, which holds defective service of notice of motion to place case on short-cause calendar, by leaving with occupant of office, waived by permitting trial without objection.

Validity of assessment.

Cited in State, Roebing. Prosecutor, v. Trenton, 58 N. J. L. 42, 32 Atl. 685, vacating assessment for benefits because not made in relation to increase in market value of property.

16 L. R. A. 203, PURCELL v. ST. PAUL CITY R. CO. 48 Minn. 134, 50 N. W. 1034.

Liability for injury due to mental shock.

Cited in Mitchell v. Rochester R. Co. 4 Misc. 581, 25 N. Y. Supp. 744, upholding liability for miscarriage as direct result of fright of woman nearly run down by horses of street railway while waiting to board another car; Mack v. South Bound R. Co. 52 S. C. 334, 40 L. R. A. 684, 68 Am. St. Rep. 913, 29 S. E. 905, which holds railroad liable for physical injuries, sustained by lad in jumping from track in fright at sudden approach of train; Sloane v. Southern California R. Co. 111 Cal. 682, 32 L. R. A. 197, 44 Pac. 320, sustaining judgment for damages to woman for nervous shock, superinduced by mental excitement due to being compelled to leave car on which rightfully a passenger; Watkins v. Kaolin Mfg. Co. 131 N. C. 542, 60 L. R. A. 620, 42 S. E. 983, sustaining right of action by woman for physical injury caused by fright due to throwing rock upon her house while blasting; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Roller, 49 L. R. A. 85, 41 C. C. A. 34, 100 Fed. 750, upholding instruction that recovery may be had for nervous shock caused by fright in railway collision; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Hayter, 93 Tex. 242, 47 L. R. A. 326, 77 Am. St. Rep. 856, 54 S. W. 944, sustaining judgment for damages from neurasthenia as result of mental shock to passenger in derailed car; Watson v. Dilts, 116 Iowa, 252, 57 L. R. A. 561, 93 Am. St. Rep. 239, 89 N. W. 1068, sustaining right of woman to recover for nervous prostration caused by fright at stealthy approach of defendant on husband's property; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Roller, 49 L. R. A. 85, 41 C. C. A. 40, 100 Fed. 755, upholding admissibility on question of fright or nervous shock of evidence of what was seen and heard by plaintiff after leaving car in railway wreck.

Cited in note (32 L. R. A. 143) on recovery of damages for miscarriage.

Distinguished in Nelson v. Crawford, 122 Mich. 470, 80 Am. St. Rep. 577, 81 N. W. 335, denying right of recovery for miscarriage superinduced by fright at man dressed in woman's clothes; Bucknam v. Great Northern R. Co. 76 Minn. 378, 79 N. W. 98, denying right of action for sickness of wife, caused by abusive and violent language to husband by railway employee; Sanderson v. Northern P. R. Co. 88 Minn. 166, 60 L. R. A. 405, 97 Am. St. Rep. 509, 92 N. W. 542, holding damages not recoverable for fright of mother, due to attempt of conductor to put child off train.

Disapproved in Spade v. Lynn & B. R. Co. 168 Mass. 290, 38 L. R. A. 514, 60

Am. St. Rep. 393, 47 N. E. 88, denying right of action for physical injuries due solely to fright and mental disturbance caused by negligence; Braun v. Craven, 175 Ill. 417, 42 L. R. A. 205, 51 N. E. 657, denying liability consequent on mere fright, superinducing nervous shock, if it could not be reasonably anticipated to result from action or language producing it.

Previous condition of health as affecting right of recovery for injury.

Cited in Watson v. Rinderknecht, 82 Minn. 239, 84 N. W. 798, holding victim of assault entitled to damages directly resulting from it, though more liable to suffer damage because of previous injury; Turner v. Nassau Electric R. Co. 41 App. Div. 217, 58 N. Y. Supp. 490, sustaining liability of railroad for death of traveler whose skull was fractured, precipitating delirium tremens, which was the direct cause of death.

Liability for mental suffering.

Cited in Kalen v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 18 Ind. App. 207, 63 Am. St. Rep. 343, 47 N. E. 694, denying liability for mental anguish unaccompanied by physical suffering; Newman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 54 Mo. App. 442, denying right to recover for mental anxiety induced by nondelivery of telegram; Cowan v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 122 Iowa, 382, 64 L. R. A. 549, 101 Am. St. Rep. 268, 98 N. W. 281, holding damages for mental anguish, resulting from negligent transmission of telegram, recoverable.

Cited in footnote to Haile v. Texas & P. R. Co. 23 L. R. A. 774, which denies liability for insanity resulting from shock and excitement, without bodily injury.

Distinguished in Chapman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 88 Ga. 771, 17 L. R. A. 433, 30 Am. St. Rep. 183, 15 S. E. 901, denying damages for mental anguish to receiver of delayed telegram announcing mortal illness of brother.

16 L. R. A. 205, BUTLER v. JOYCE, 9 Mackey, 191.

Right of recovery on lost instrument.

Cited in footnotes to Kirkwood v. First Nat. Bank, 24 L. R. A. 444, which holds indemnity bond required as condition for recovery on negotiable instrument lost before maturity; Haug v. Riley, 40 L. R. A. 244, which holds right to prove lost note by copy not taken away by statute; Bank of Gilby v. Farnsworth, 38 L. R. A. 843, which holds drawer of draft lost in mails during transportation from payee for collection discharged by delay in discovering loss.

16 L. R. A. 209, WRONKOW v. OAKLEY, 133 N. Y. 505, 28 Am. St. Rep. 661, 31 N. E. 521.

Release of dower.

Distinguished in Security Sav. Bank v. Smith, 38 Or. 77, 84 Am. St. Rep. 756, 62 Pac. 794, denying power to release inchoate right of dower under power of attorney to sell and mortgage "my lands."

16 L. R. A. 214, STATE ex rel. WIESENTHAL v. DENNY, 4 Wash. 135, 29 Pac. 991.

Municipal charters.

Cited in Reeves v. Anderson, 13 Wash. 22, 42 Pac. 625, holding right to make new charter included in right to "frame charter," though act concerning amendments invalid.

16 L. R. A. 220, HAUSSLER v. MISSOURI IRON CO. 110 Mo. 188, 33 Am. St. Rep. 431, 19 S. W. 75.

Adverse possession.

Cited in footnote to Davis v. Williams, 54 L. R. A. 749, which sustains agent's right to acquire adverse title to principal's property occupied as part of contract of service.

Partition.

Cited in footnotes to Caldwell v. Snyder, 35 L. R. A. 198, which holds right of devisee to partition precluded by provision of will; Crocker v. Cotting, 39 L. R. A. 215, which holds agreement against partitioning land not implied on purchase in common of land subject to easement belonging to purchaser.

16 L. R. A. 223, NICHOLSON v. NATIONAL BANK, 92 Ky. 251, 17 S. W. 627.

When negotiable paper purchased.

Cited in footnote to Warman v. First Nat. Bank, 49 L. R. A. 412, which holds bank discounting negotiable paper and placing amount to holder's credit as deposit not purchaser.

Usury.

Cited in footnote to Danforth v. National State Bank, 17 L. R. A. 622, which holds national bank prohibited from discounting paper at more than lawful rate of interest.

Cited in note (56 L. R. A. 679) on forfeiture or other effect of taking or reserving illegal interest by national bank.

16 L. R. A. 225, SHIDELER v. STATE, 120 Ind. 523, 28 Am. St. Rep. 206, 28 N. E. 537, 29 N. E. 36.

Bar of former conviction.

Cited in DeBord v. People, 27 Colo. 380, 83 Am. St. Rep. 89, 61 Pac. 599, which holds person accusing himself of assault before justice, and being fined, not in jeopardy so as to successfully defend against prosecution for same offense.

Cited in footnote to Cooper v. Com. 45 L. R. A. 216, which holds acquittal on criminal charge bar to prosecution for perjury in denying commission of offense.

16 L. R. A. 228, VERMILLION COUNTY v. CHIPPS, 131 Ind. 56, 29 N. E. 1060.
County liability for negligence.

Cited in note (39 L. R. A. 39) on liability of counties in actions for torts and negligence.

— Defective bridges.

Cited in Parke County v. Wagner, 138 Ind. 611, 38 N. E. 171, holding that county's liability for injury to horse because of negligence in keeping bridge in repair has become law of land; Jasper County v. Allman, 142 Ind. 577, 39 L. R. A. 62, 42 N. E. 206, denying implied liability of counties for damages for failure to keep bridges in repair; Bailey v. Lawrence County, 5 S. D. 398, 49 Am. St. Rep. 881, 59 N. W. 219, denying liability of county for failure to keep bridge in repair, although made its duty to repair; Johnson County v. Reinier, 18 Ind. App. 121, 47 N. E. 642, sustaining demurrer to complaint for want of facts when negligence in construction of bridge was failure to maintain railing; Reinhart v. Martin County, 9 Ind. App. 573, 37 N. E. 38, denying liability of county for failure to keep in repair bridge over ditch, which complaint showed not to be county bridge; Shelby County v. Blair, 8 Ind. App. 579, 36 N. E. 216, denying county's liability for acts of agents unless imposed by statute, but sustaining judgment for accident of bridge over mill race out of repair; Parke County v. Sappenfield, 6 Ind. App. 579, 33 N. E. 1012, affirming county's liability for failure to keep bridge and approaches in repair; Allen County v. Creviston, 133 Ind. 43, 32 N. E. 735, holding county liable in damages for causing by death, due to bridge, constructed of defective material, being allowed to become rotten; Bonebrake v. Huntington County, 141 Ind. 67, 40 N. E. 141, holding that bridge must have been constructed in anticipation of its use by traction engines to render county liable; Hardin County v. Coffman, 60 Ohio St. 535, 48 L. R. A. 458, footnote p. 455, 54 N. E. 1054, holding it question for jury whether use of bridge by traction engine should have been anticipated by commissioners.

— Defective roads.

Cited in Cones v. Benton County, 137 Ind. 406, 37 N. E. 272, holding county not liable for injuries due to defects in construction of free gravel roads.

— Defective buildings.

Cited in Vigo County v. Daily, 132 Ind. 74, 31 N. E. 531, which holds county not liable for negligence in care and control of courthouse; Morris v. Switzerland County, 131 Ind. 286, 31 N. E. 77, denying liability of county to a prisoner, for failure to keep jail in wholesome condition.

Contributory negligence.

Cited in Korrady v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 131 Ind. 263, 29 N. E. 1069, holding contributory negligence shown by traveler attempting to cross track in front of rapidly approaching train, which he saw; Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Grames, 8 Ind. App. 136, 34 N. E. 613, holding contributory negligence not shown where traveler at crossing was struck by train he could not have seen or heard on account of obstructions; Oleson v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 143 Ind. 408, 32 L. R. A. 150, 42 N. E. 736, upholding direction of verdict against traveler who, with unobstructed view, tried to drive across track in front of engine; Chicago v. Kohlhof, 64 Ill. App. 353, refusing to sustain judgment against city for injury due to breaking of board walk over which safe weighing 1,400 pounds was being moved.

Demurrer.

Cited in Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Heath, 22 Ind. App. 56, 53 N. E. 198, holding sustaining of demurrer to paragraph of answer harmless error, where all material facts provable under general denial.

Evidence of similar facts.

Cited in footnote to Bemis v. Temple, 26 L. R. A. 254, which upholds right to show effect on different horses of suspended flag.

Property in highways.

Cited in Missouri-Edison Electric Co. v. Weber, 102 Mo. App. 105, 76 S. W. 736, holding action maintainable by owner of manhole covers for their injury by unusually heavy load driven upon them.

16 L. R. A. 231, MOYER v. BUCKS, 2 Ind. App. 571, 50 Am. St. Rep. 251, 28 N. E. 992.

When personal judgment allowable.

Cited in Beckett v. State, 4 Ind. App. 137, 30 N. E. 536, declaring void, judgment in bastardy proceedings upon constructive notice not authorized by statute; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. State, 8 Ind. App. 387, 35 N. E. 916 (dissenting opinion), majority holding personal judgment proper against railroad in action to foreclose drainage lien; Jessup v. Jessup, 7 Ind. App. 577, 34 N. E. 1017, which holds guardian cannot be appointed for insane person without process served upon him or his production in court.

Cited in footnotes to Greenstreet v. Thornton, 27 L. R. A. 735, which holds void, decree based on summons against dead man; Cabanne v. Graf, 59 L. R. A. 735, which holds void, act authorizing service, in personal action against non-resident, on agent in charge of business in state without seizure of property.

Substituted service.

Cited in footnotes to Tillinghast v. Boston & P. R. Lumber Co. 22 L. R. A. 49, which holds insufficient, service in other state on foreign corporation after order of publication; Murray v. Murray, 37 L. R. A. 626, which holds jurisdiction to subject property within territorial jurisdiction of court acquired by service by publication and appointment of receiver; National Teleph. Mfg. Co. v. Du Bois, 30 L. R. A. 628, which declines jurisdiction on service by publication in suit by foreign corporation against nonresident; De La Montanya v. De La Montanya, 32 L. R. A. 82, which denies jurisdiction to award alimony and custody of children in divorce suit on constructive service; Bickerdike v. Allen, 29 L. R. A. 782, which holds mailing and publishing notice of proceeding to revive judgment sufficient as against resident who cannot be found; Kemper-Thomas Paper Co. v. Shyer, 58 L. R. A. 173, which denies right to execution against other property in state for unpaid part of judgment against nonresident served by attachment and publication; Capital City Bank v. Parent, 18 L. R. A. 240, which holds creditor's bill cannot be based on judgment for money only, in attachment suit against non-resident served by publication; Bernhardt v. Brown, 36 L. R. A. 402, which holds execution sale under judgment on service by publication invalid as to property not attached in action; Hartzell v. Vigen, 35 L. R. A. 451, which holds requirement, in cases of service by publication, that affidavit be made of jurisdiction of "subject of the action," relates to the controversy between the parties.

Cited in note (50 L. R. A. 577, 578) on what service of process is sufficient to constitute due process of law.

16 L. R. A. 236, DALY v. WISE, 132 N. Y. 306, 44 N. Y. S. R. 422, 30 N. E. 837.

False representations.

Cited in Stein v. Rice, 23 Misc. 350, 51 N. Y. Supp. 320, holding there was no fraudulent concealment of usual decrease in water supply justifying rescission of lease; Frank v. Bradley & C. Co. 42 App. Div. 181, 58 N. Y. Supp. 1032, sustaining right of action for deceit in representing cellar of house being sold "as dry as a nut," when in fact it was wet; Ryder v. Wall, 29 Misc. 381, 60 N. Y. Supp. 535, sustaining right to recover disbursements in repair of house purchased under contract by one relying on false statement of facts made innocently; Meserole v. Hoyt, 161 N. Y. 62, 55 N. E. 274, holding that leased premises may be abandoned, where cellar floor covered with water after rain and walls always damp; Mitchell v. Stewart, 187 Pa. 220, 40 Atl. 799, denying liability of lessor for explosion of gas in leased house, where secret defects or deficiency in gas apparatus not known; Beers v. Hamburg-American Packet Co. 62 Fed. 472, sustaining right to recover for false answer by agent of steamship company, upon which he knew booked passenger would rely; Kountze v. Kennedy, 72 Hun, 315, 25 N. Y. Supp. 682, which holds knowledge of falsity of representations by person making them, necessary element in action founded thereon; Meyers v. Rosenback, 5 Misc. 347, 25 N. Y. Supp. 521, holding evidence of false representations as to strength of building leased admissible in action for rent; Myers v. Rosenback, 13 Misc. 147, 34 N. Y. Supp. 63, upholding liability for false representations as to facts not known to be true; Prahar v. Tousey, 93 App. Div. 510, 87 N. Y. Supp. 845, holding lessee not relieved from contract where representations as to weight floors would bear were untrue.

Cited in footnote to Angevine v. Knox-Goodrich, 18 L. R. A. 264 which denies implied warranty that house leased for dwelling, habitable.

Cited in note (33 L. R. A. 453) on implied covenant in lease as to fitness of property for purpose intended.

Appeal when verdict directed.

Cited in Tallapoosa Lumber Co. v. Holbert, 5 App. Div. 561, 39 N. Y. Supp. 432, holding finding conclusive on appeal when all contested facts submitted to court; Howland v. Bates, 3 Misc. 610, 22 N. Y. Supp. 557, holding that on appeal from judgment directed without request to go to jury, only inquiry is whether evidence sufficient to sustain verdict; Mosher v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 12 Misc. 106, 33 N. Y. Supp. 85, holding that on appeal from judgment directed, essential facts assumed to have been found for successful party.

Distinguished in Sigua Iron Co. v. Greene, 31 C. C. A. 480, 59 U. S. App. 555, 88 Fed. 210, holding that plaintiff can contend that material facts are withdrawn from jury when court announces that only one question will be left to it, after denying motion to direct verdict.

Landlord's duty to disclose latent defects.

Cited in Smith v. Donnelly, 93 App. Div. 573, 87 N. Y. Supp. 893, holding landlord not absolutely liable for injury resulting from failure to call tenant's attention to latent defect in premises.

16 L. R. A. 239, HOYT v. PEOPLE, 140 Ill. 588, 30 N. E. 315.

Continuance in criminal cases.

Cited in Keating v. People, 160 Ill. 482, 43 N. E. 724, upholding validity of act regulating granting of continuances in criminal cases.

Cited in footnotes to Fanton v. State, 36 L. R. A. 158, which holds denial of continuance authorized by agreement for reading of statement as to what absent witnesses would testify to; Atkins v. Com. 32 L. R. A. 108, which authorizes denial of continuance on admission that absent witnesses will testify as alleged.

Conviction on uncorroborated evidence of accomplice.

Cited in Cohn v. People, 197 Ill. 484, 64 N. E. 306, refusing to sustain conviction for receiving stolen goods on uncorroborated evidence of the confessed thief; Conley v. People, 170 Ill. 593, 48 N. E. 911, refusing to sustain conviction for murder of illegitimate child on unsupported evidence of codefendant unable to distinguish between right and wrong; Campbell v. People, 159 Ill. 26, 50 Am. St. Rep. 134, 42 N. E. 123, holding guilt of murder of infant not established upon uncorroborated evidence of depraved woman accusing herself as accomplice, in connection with other circumstances.

Sufficiency of indictment.

Cited in Cochran v. People, 175 Ill. 31, 51 N. E. 845, holding indictment for procuring miscarriage insufficient where it alleges "certain instrument" was administered.

Distinguished in Graff v. People, 208 Ill. 324, 70 N. E. 299, upholding conviction for conspiracy to defraud insurance company, although arson charged as overt act.

16 L. R. A. 243, FLINT v. HUTCHINSON SMOKE BURNER CO. 110 Mo. 492, 33 Am. St. Rep. 476, 19 S. W. 804.

Slander of title.

Cited in Linville v. Rhoades, 73 Mo. App. 222, which holds malice charged in slander of title to land where allegation is that defendant "wrongfully, intentionally, and without just cause" made the statements; Thummel v. Holden, 149 Mo. 685, 51 S. W. 404, holding that court of equity has not power, as a rule, to restrain libel on title.

What questions for equity.

Cited in Chicago City R. Co. v. General Electric Co. 74 Ill. App. 474, refusing to enjoin alleged libelous and derogatory statements claimed to be circulated to destroy property rights of corporation; Walker v. Backus Heating Co. 97 Wis. 163, 72 N. W. 230, holding court of equity should not interfere in case which involves infringement of patents, until controverted questions settled at law.

Cited in footnotes to Shoemaker v. South Bend Spark Arrester Co. 22 L. R. A. 332, which authorizes injunction against false claim of title to patent; Dailey v. Superior Court, 32 L. R. A. 273, which denies right to enjoin play in theater, based on facts of criminal case on trial; Marlin Firearms Co. v. Shields, 59 L. R. A. 310, which denies right to injunction against publishing unjust and malicious criticism of manufactured article; Grand Rapids School Furniture Co. v. Haney School Furniture Co. 16 L. R. A. 721, which authorizes injunction against using decree in patent case, obtained by fraud and collusion; A. B. Farquhar Co. v. National Harrow Co. 49 L. R. A. 755, which sustains right to enjoin letters or notices by owner of patent to destroy another's business by threatening suit for infringement.

Cited in notes (28 L. R. A. 466) on injunction against strikes; (32 L. R. A. 833, 834) on constitutional freedom of speech and of the press.

16 L. R. A. 247, SEAGER v. McCABE, 92 Mich. 186, 52 N. W. 299.

Rights of dowress in oil and gas wells.

Cited in Higgins Oil & Fuel Co. v. Snow, 51 C. C. A. 273, 113 Fed. 439, holding dowress of $\frac{1}{8}$ of land entitled to accounting for oil taken from oil field by remaindermen to prejudice of her life estate; Stewart v. Tennant, 52 W. Va. 580, 44 S. E. 223 (dissenting opinion), majority holding widow has interest in oil taken from land before assignment of dower.

Cited in footnotes to Marshall v. Mellon, 35 L. R. A. 816, which holds life tenant's right to operate for oil and gas limited to operations begun before life tenancy accrued; Koen v. Bartlett, 31 L. R. A. 128, which holds royalty on oil and gas lease incident of life estate; Williamson v. Jones, 38 L. R. A. 694, which holds life tenant, who is also cotenant of reversion, liable to account for oil extracted under belief of sole ownership.

16 L. R. A. 251, LOUISVILLE, N. O. & T. R. CO. v. JORDAN, 69 Miss. 939, 34 Am. St. Rep. 599, 11 So. 111.

Service of process on infant.

Cited in footnote to Sloane v. Martin, 28 L. R. A. 347, which denies necessity of actual service on infants in suit for sale of land in which they have interest.

Limit of legislative power.

Cited in footnotes to People ex rel. Kern v. Chase, 36 L. R. A. 105, which holds Torrens law unconstitutional as attempt to delegate judicial power to registrar of titles; Board of Education v. State, 25 L. R. A. 770, which holds unconstitutional, act authorizing board of education to levy tax to pay claim for which no obligation exists.

16 L. R. A. 256, COM. v. GRAVES, 155 Mass. 163, 29 N. E. 579.

Habitual criminal statutes and ex post facto laws.

Followed in Sturtevant v. Com. 158 Mass. 599, 33 N. E. 648; Com. v. Cody, 165 Mass. 138, 42 N. E. 575, upholding validity of statute punishing habitual criminals, when date of larcenies in indictment subsequent to time statute went into effect; Com. v. Walker, 163 Mass. 228, 39 N. E. 1014, sustaining necessity of allegations of former convictions and sentences in indictment charging prisoner with being habitual criminal; McDonald v. Massachusetts, 180 U. S. 313, 45 L. ed. 547, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389, Affirming 173 Mass. 326, 73 Am. St. Rep. 293, 53 N. E. 874, upholding statute punishing habitual criminal; Re Miller, 110 Mich. 678, 34 L. R. A. 408, 64 Am. St. Rep. 376, 68 N. W. 990, upholding statute as not ex post facto, passed while prisoner serving one sentence, which deprived him of time allowance for second conviction after passage of act; Blackburn v. State, 50 Ohio St. 438, 36 N. E. 18, sustaining sentence for life under statute providing for punishment of habitual criminal, passed after two convictions; Iowa ex rel. Gregory v. Jones, 128 Fed. 628, holding law providing term of imprisonment for one twice convicted of larceny constitutional, although applying to former convictions before passage of act.

Cited in footnotes to People ex rel. Chandler v. McDonald, 29 L. R. A. 834, which holds statute not ex post facto for abrogating provision for change of magistrate or of venue for prejudice; State v. Kyle, 56 L. R. A. 115, which sustains statute authorizing prosecution by information of crimes already committed; People v. Hayes, 23 L. R. A. 830, which holds change in statute authorizing slighter punishment not ex post facto law; French v. Deane, 24 L. R. A. 388, which holds void, act giving right to punitive damages as to existing cause of action.

Cited in note (34 L. R. A. 399, 403) on enhancing penalty of crime when committed by habitual criminals or prior offenders.

16 L. R. A. 257, SHELDEN v. FOX, 48 Kan. 356, 29 Pac. 759.

Contracts by public officials beyond term of office.

Cited in Coffey County v. Smith, 50 Kan. 354, 32 Pac. 30, holding county board about to be dissolved by operation of law cannot contract for official newspaper for following year.

Cited in footnotes to Vincennes v. Citizens' Gaslight & Coke Co. 16 L. R. A. 485, which holds city empowered to contract for gas or water supply beyond term of office of members of council; McBean v. Fresno, 31 L. R. A. 794, which upholds contract for term beyond limit of municipal board making same; Gillan v. Normal School, 24 L. R. A. 336, which holds power of board of regents to remove normal school teacher at pleasure cannot be limited by by-law or contract of board; Millikin v. Edgar County, 18 L. R. A. 447, which holds contract to employ powerhouse keeper for term beyond term of supervisors unauthorized; Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L. R. A. 518, which holds that city may contract for water for period beyond terms of office of members of its legislative board.

16 L. R. A. 261, HENDRICKSON v. GREAT NORTHERN R. CO. 49 Minn. 245, 32 Am. St. Rep. 540, 51 N. W. 1044.

Negligence and presumptions as to.

Cited in Hendrickson v. Great Northern R. Co. 52 Minn. 341, 54 N. W. 189, holding contributory negligence of intestate question for jury, when only evidence of it is that he could have seen train on hill nearly 400 feet from crossing; Hooper v. Great Northern R. Co. 80 Minn. 401, 83 N. W. 440, sustaining verdict where brakeman was killed while uncoupling cars by negligence of engineer in failing to give signals before backing; Lane v. Missouri P. R. Co. 132 Mo. 31, 33 S. W. 1128 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that running away of team which bolted into train could not be laid to negligence of railroad.

Cited in footnotes to Ward v. Southern P. Co. 23 L. R. A. 715, which holds no presumption of company's negligence from finding of child's body on track; Parish v. Western & A. R. Co. 40 L. R. A. 364, which holds presumption of negligence from killing person on track overcome by showing that person sitting or lying on track at night; Donald v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 33 L. R. A. 492, which holds no presumption against railroad raised by failure to prove height of cars from which employee knocked by bridge; Dixon v. Plums, 20 L. R. A. 699, which upholds presumption of negligence arising from fall of chisel on sidewalk from scaffold; McLane v. Perkins, 43 L. R. A. 487, which denies presumption of freedom from contributory negligence of employee drowned while using leaky punt.

Duty to look and listen at crossing.

Cited in Woehrl v. Minnesota Transfer R. Co. 82 Minn. 169, 52 L. R. A. 352, footnote p. 349, 84 N. W. 791, relieving traveler of necessity of stopping to look and listen, when he knew it was customary to have flagman out of sight when track clear; Schneider v. Northern P. R. Co. 81 Minn. 386, 84 N. W. 124, refusing to hold one relieved from duty of looking at crossing, though he was relieved from listening, on account of noise; Klotz v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 68 Minn. 349, 71 N. W. 257, holding traveler not necessarily negligent at crossing when noises of mill close by, and whistling of engine, might have distracted attention; Struck v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 58 Minn. 300, 59 N. W. 1022, which holds failure of deceased to look and listen cannot be assumed when he was obliged to approach crossing through hollow, close to track; Tuthill v. Northern P. R. Co. 50 Minn. 115, 52 N. W. 384, leaving to jury question of contributory negligence of girl in charge of cattle not riding forward to crossing before cattle driven over; Ames v. Waterloo & C. F. Rapid Transit Co. 120 Iowa, 655, 95 N. W. 161 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that presumption of exercise of instinct of self preservation not affirmative evidence of due care at crossing.

Cited in footnotes to Lorenz v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 753, which holds negligence of one pursuing cow, in not looking and listening before crossing railroad track, for jury; Western & A. R. Co. v. Ferguson, 54 L. R. A. 803, which holds recovery not prevented by failure to look when within 30 feet of track; Van Anken v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 22 L. R. A. 33, which holds that failure to look and listen on dark night will not prevent recovery for injury by engine running backward; Betts v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 45 L. R. A. 261, which sustains right of person approaching crossing where train is receiving or discharging passengers, to rely on rule requiring other train to stop.

Burden of proof as to cause of death.

Cited in footnote to Anthony v. Mercantile Mut. Acci. Assn. 26 L. R. A. 406, which throws on insurance company burden of proving that accidental death was from excepted cause.

16 L. R. A. 268, LOUISVILLE & N. R. CO. v. NORTHINGTON, 91 Tenn. 56, 17 S. W. 880.

Safety of appliances.

Cited in Gann v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 101 Tenn. 380, 70 Am. St. Rep. 687, 47 S. W. 493, holding railroad liable for injury to employee from failure to provide safe appliances.

Assumption of risk.

Distinguished in Gann v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 101 Tenn. 387, 70 Am. St. Rep. 687, 47 S. W. 493, which holds section hand assumed risk of defective brake, of which defects he had previous knowledge.

Elements of damage.

Cited in footnote to Butler v. Manhattan R. Co. 26 L. R. A. 46, which holds miscarriage not element of recovery in action for personal injuries to wife.

Injuries accelerating death.

Cited in Meekins v. Norfolk & S. R. Co. 134 N. C. 219, 46 S. E. 493, holding injury hastening death from disease, actionable.

16 L. R. A. 271, MANNING v. CHESAPEAKE & O. R. CO. 36 W. Va. 329, 32 Am. St. Rep. 859, 15 S. E. 81.

Liability for injury to licensee.

Followed in Holland v. Sparks, 92 Ga. 759, 18 S. E. 990, sustaining nonsuit where boy standing some distance from track was killed by derailment of train.

Cited in Ritz v. Wheeling, 45 W. Va. 266, 43 L. R. A. 151, 31 S. E. 993, sustaining verdict directed for defendant, where child was drowned in city reservoir while trespassing; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 200 Ill. 124, 65 N. E. 656, Affirming 100 Ill. App. 596, holding party injured by falling over skid on unlighted platform, while on way to furnish meals to mail clerks, not mere licensee; Poling v. Ohio River R. Co. 38 W. Va. 660, 24 L. R. A. 222, 18 S. E. 782, setting aside verdict where decedent was a mere looker-on when struck by arm of mail crane broken off from moving train when postal clerk caught mail sack; Manlove v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 29 Ind. App. 699, 65 N. E. 212, holding carrier not liable for accidental killing of one using footpath with implied license; Snyder v. Philadelphia Co. (W. Va.) 63 L. R. A. 898, 46 S. E. 366, holding owner of oil well liable for injury to one using highway close by, through negligent blowing off of well.

Cited in footnotes to Benson v. Baltimore Traction Co. 20 L. R. A. 714, which denies right of recovery to student falling into uncovered vat while class inspecting power house under permission; Gibson v. Leonard, 17 L. R. A. 588, which holds owner not liable for injury to fire insurance patrolman entering burning building to save property; Ryerson v. Bathgate, 57 L. R. A. 303, which denies liability of owner for injury to one using premises for purpose not authorized by invitation.

Distinguished in Sesler v. Rolfe Coal & Coke Co. 51 W. Va. 321, 41 S. E. 216, holding owner liable for negligent injury to contractor repairing coal tippie.

Injury to employees.

Cited in Ketterman v. Dry Fork R. Co. 48 W. Va. 612, 37 S. E. 683, sustaining direction of verdict for defendant where loaded car, left on track, ran away and into hand car on which section hand was injured; Hopkins v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 96 Tenn. 436, 32 L. R. A. 362, 34 S. W. 1029, sustaining demurrer to evidence and dismissal of suit where deceased brakeman, after giving danger signal, fell from car upon sudden shutting off of steam by engineer.

16 L. R. A. 277, GANDOLFO v. HARTMAN, 49 Fed. 181.

Illegality of contracts.

Cited in footnote to Brooks v. Cooper, 21 L. R. A. 617, which holds void, contract between newspapers for alternate selection and division of profits of public printing.

Rights of aliens.

Cited in notes (31 L. R. A. 177) on alien's right to inherit; (31 L. R. A. 85) on effect of state Constitutions and statutes on question of inheritance by or from alien; (32 L. R. A. 177) on effect of treaties on alien's right to inherit.

16 L. R. A. 278, STATE ex rel. MIZE v. McELROY, 44 La. Ann. 796, 32 Am. St. Rep. 355, 11 So. 133.

Election acts and defective ballots.

Cited in Morris v. Board of Canvassers, 49 W. Va. 257, 38 S. E. 500, which holds provisions requiring names of candidates to be voted for to be in one column, mandatory.

Cited in footnotes to State ex rel. McCarthy v. Moore, 59 L. R. A. 447, which sustains prohibition against placing on official ballot, name of unsuccessful candidate for party nomination at primary election; Lindstrom v. Manistee County, 19 L. R. A. 172, which refuses to exclude ballot with unauthorized vignette; State ex rel. Phelan v. Walsh, 17 L. R. A. 364, in which various decisions as to validity of ballots are made; State ex rel. Baxter v. Ellis, 17 L. R. A. 382, which requires rejection in municipal election of ballots with device upon them; Eaton v. Brown, 17 L. R. A. 697, which holds void, ballot law prohibiting marking elsewhere of ballot marked opposite name of political party.

Cited in note (25 L. R. A. 484) on how far right to vote is absolute.

Criticized in State ex rel. Orr v. Fawcett, 17 Wash. 205, 49 Pac. 346, holding ballots marked on wrong side of name, or with waving lines, or where mistakes evidently intended to be corrected, should not be rejected.

16 L. R. A. 281, WILLIS v. ST. PAUL SANITATION CO. 48 Minn. 140, 31 Am. St. Rep. 626, 50 N. W. 1110.

Stockholder's Liability.

Cited in Eau Claire Nat. Bank v. Benson, 106 Wis. 630, 82 N. W. 604, declaring stockholder's liability joint and to be decided for benefit of all creditors in action in equity; Hanson v. Davison, 73 Minn. 461, 76 N. W. 254, permitting ancillary action by creditor of corporation to collect corporate debt out of property of nonresident stockholder; Straw & E. Mfg. Co. v. L. D. Kilbourne Boot & Shoe Co. 80 Minn. 138, 83 N. W. 36, upholding power of legislation to modify or change existing remedy against stockholders; Re Marshall Paper Co. 95 Fed. 423, holding that creditors may obtain judgment against bankrupt corporation as prerequisite to enforcing statutory liability of directors; Parker v. Carolina Sav. Bank, 53 S. C. 591, 69 Am. St. Rep. 888, 31 S. E. 673, holding liability of stockholders not dependent on their stock, but amount of their stock; Finney v. Guy, 106 Wis. 278, 49 L. R. A. 495, 82 N. W. 595 (dissenting opinion), majority refusing to enforce in ancillary action, liability of stockholder under laws of sister state with same provisions.

Title of act expressing subject.

Cited in State v. Courtney, 27 Mont. 385, 71 Pac. 308, upholding act as expressing its subject in title, where it amended sections of Political Code relating to liquor, and added a section "regarding licenses;" Kelly v. Minneapolis City, 57 Minn. 300, 26 L. R. A. 97, 47 Am. St. Rep. 605, 59 N. W. 304, holding subject relating to damages for changing grade of street and providing assessment, expressed in act "amending" section of city charter; Winters v. Duluth, 82 Minn. 130, 84 N. W. 788, holding words "other public grounds," following word "streets" in title of act, not indication that statute limited to public grounds of same kind as streets; South St. Paul v. Lamprecht Bros. Co. 31 C. C. A. 587, 60 U. S. App. 78, 88 Fed. 451, upholding act, as expressing but one subject in its title, "to Amend 'an Act to Incorporate' " city "and to Authorize said City to Issue Bonds;" Meul v. People, 198 Ill. 260, 64 N. E. 1106, declaring amendment including "wild fowl and birds" in game laws intended to protect birds other than game birds.

Effect of Constitution or statute on prior obligations.

Cited in Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Gardner, 177 U. S. 341, 44 L. ed. 798, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 656, holding self-executing provision of Constitution imposing liability on stockholders does not exempt stockholders of new corporation formed by consolidation of old ones.

Cited in footnotes to Kirkman v. Bird, 58 L. R. A. 670, which sustains as to prior obligations, statute exempting wages for sixty days preceding levy, International Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Hardy, 24 L. R. A. 284, which denies legislative power to change remedy for enforcing trust deed; Jones v. German Ins. Co. 46 L. R. A. 860, which sustains statute shortening time of insurance company's immunity from suit, without extending period of limitations; Criswell v. Montana C. R. Co. 33 L. R. A. 554, which holds act imposing liability on domestic railroad companies for fellow servant's negligence abrogated by adopting Constitution against special privileges to foreign corporations.

When Constitution self-executing.

Cited in State v. Kyle, 166 Mo. 302, 56 L. R. A. 120, footnote p. 115, 65 S. W. 763, declaring amendment that "no person shall be prosecuted criminally. . . otherwise than by indictment or information" self-executing; McKusick v. Seymour, S. & Co. 48 Minn. 167, 50 N. W. 1114, declaring section creating liability of stockholders for corporate debts self-executing, and such debts recoverable in sequestration proceeding; Nickerson v. Crawford, 74 Minn. 369, 73 Am. St. Rep. 354, 77 N. W. 292, holding provisions declaring property exempted from debt shall be liable for certain classes of debts, self-executing; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Ihlenberg, 34 L. R. A. 397, footnote p. 393, 21 C. C. A. 552, 43 U. S. App. 726, 75 Fed. 879, holding clause, that knowledge by employee injured of unsafe condition of machinery and appliances is no defense, self-executing; Anderson v. Whatcom County, 15 Wash. 53, 33 L. R. A. 140, footnote p. 137, 45 Pac. 665, holding provision that cities of certain population entitled to salaried justices of peace, self-executing; Whitman v. National Bank, 176 U. S. 562, 44 L. ed. 590, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 477, holding that words "shall be secured" declare liability of stockholders, and to that extent is self-executing; Lamborn v. Bell, 18 Colo. 349, 20 L. R. A. 242, 32 Pac. 989, upholding right to condemn right of way for ditch to convey water for private use under self-executing Constitution granting such right of way to all persons; Russell v. Ayer, 120 N. C. 196, 37 L. R. A. 251, 27 S. E. 133 (dissenting opinion), majority holding provisions that Assembly shall levy capitation tax not self-executing so as to overrule different ratio in statute; Middletown Nat. Bank v. Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. 62 C. C. A. 87, 127 Fed. 87, certifying questions to Supreme Court whether provision in state Constitution self-executing, there being no decision of state supreme court on question.

Cited in footnotes to Washingtonian Home v. Chicago, 29 L. R. A. 798, which holds constitutional prohibition of municipalities from making donation to private corporations, self-executing; People ex rel. McClelland v. Roberts, 31 L. R. A. 399, which holds unnecessary, re-enactment of civil service law after adoption of Constitution containing self-executing provisions.

16 L. R. A. 288, MILLER v. STODDARD, 50 Minn. 272, 52 N. W. 895.

Priority of liens.

Cited in Miller v. Stoddard, 54 Minn. 489, 56 N. W. 131, holding first mortgage superior to mechanics' liens, though unrecorded, but inferior to second mortgage, recorded, which is subordinate to mechanics' liens for work begun before made; Fletcher v. Kelly, 88 Iowa, 492, 21 L. R. A. 353, 55 N. W. 474, giving priority to unrecorded mortgage over mechanic's lien; Peninsular General Electric Co. v. Norris, 100 Mich. 505, 59 N. W. 151, holding mechanic's lien inferior to unrecorded lease; Noerenberg v. Johnson, 51 Minn. 79, 52 N. W. 1069, which holds unrecorded mortgage superior to mechanic's lien.

16 L. R. A. 291, GERMAN AMERICAN INS. CO. v. COMMERCIAL F. INS. CO. 95 Ala. 469, 11 So. 117.

Contracting with reference to custom.

Cited in Anderson v. Whittaker, 97 Ala. 692, 11 So. 919, which holds alleged custom in building houses in locality which permits all kinds of defects, unreasonable; Simon v. Johnson, 101 Ala. 373, 13 So. 491, holding that custom of paying traveling salesmen for goods ordered does not authorize payment to such agent unless principal shown to have had notice of it; Buyck v. Schwing, 100 Ala. 359, 14 So. 48, refusing to uphold instruction that parties contracted with reference to custom of insuring, when nothing shown as to length of time of custom or knowledge of one party as to its existence; Redwine v. Sides, 95 Ala. 569, 11 So. 210, which holds that parties contracted with reference to well-known custom in serving mare.

Reinsurance.

Cited in footnotes to Chalaron v. Insurance Co. of N. A. 36 L. R. A. 742, which holds that failure of original insurer to bear any part of risk, because entire cargo not put on board as expected, will not avoid reinsurance for fraud; Hunt v. New Hampshire Fire Underwriters' Asso. 38 L. R. A. 514, which holds reinsurer liable for whole amount of loss on insolvency of prior insurer.

16 L. R. A. 295, MT. MANSFIELD HOTEL CO. v. BAILEY, 64 Vt. 151, 24 Atl. 136.

Indorser's liability.

Cited in footnote to Leonard v. Olson, 35 L. R. A. 381, which requires notice to indorser of inability to make demand because of maker's removal from state.

16 L. R. A. 299, HENDERSON v. PHILADELPHIA & R. R. CO. 144 Pa. 461, 27 Am. St. Rep. 652, 22 Atl. 851.

Proof of similar acts of negligence.

Followed in Hygienic Plate Ice Mfg. Co. v. Raleigh & A. Air-Line R. Co. 126 N. C. 800, 36 S. E. 279, holding it error to admit evidence of other fires set by other engines before and after fire in question, where evidence clearly pointed to particular engine.

Approved in Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Johnson, 128 Ala. 295, 29 So. 771, holding evidence admissible that engines of defendant's road habitually threw large amount of sparks going up grade, where offending engine unidentified.

Cited in Thomas v. New York C. & St. L. R. Co. 182 Pa. 543, 41 W. N. C. 146, 38 Atl. 413, holding evidence admissible of fires set by certain engine on same day fire occurred on plaintiff's land; Van Steuben v. Central R. Co. 178 Pa. 377, 34 L. R. A. 580, 39 W. N. C. 221, 35 Atl. 992, holding admissible, evidence that sparks were thrown to considerable distance by certain engine, though provided with spark arrester; Matthews v. Pittsburg & L. E. R. Co. 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 15, admitting evidence that sparks causing fire were emitted from particular locomotive, notwithstanding testimony to sufficiency of spark arrester; Brown v. Benson, 101 Ga. 758, 29 S. E. 215, holding admissible, evidence of defective condition of locomotive in setting out fires two months, and also ten days, before fire in question; Thatcher v. Maine C. R. Co. 85 Me. 510, 27 Atl. 519, which holds evidence of fires set by several locomotives about time of fire in question admissible, before engine setting fire identified; First Nat. Bank v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 174 Ill. 41, 50 N. E. 1023, declaring inadmissible, evidence of fires set by other engines than that identified at other places on the line; Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. Gilmore, 22 Ind. App. 469, 53 N. E. 1078, holding it error to refuse instruction that, if evidence disclosed fire set by particular engine, testimony of other fires not set by that engine should be disregarded; Dunning v. Maine C. R. Co. 91 Me. 99, 64 Am. St. Rep. 208, 39 Atl. 352, which holds that when engine setting fire not fully identified, evidence that fires were set in vicinity by other locomotives admissible to show that fires may be set by locomotives; Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Ross, 24 Ind. App. 226, 56 N. E. 451, excluding evidence of other fires set by particular engine at other places, when it was not identified as engine setting this fire; Menominee River Sash & Door Co. v. Milwaukee & N. R. Co. 91 Wis. 463, 65 N. W. 176, which holds inadmissible, evidence of fire set to pine stump by particular engine, prior to fire in question, where sparks not shown to be of unusual size or thrown to unusual distance; Lake Street Elev. R. Co. v. Peterson, 93 Ill. App. 121, holding admissible, evidence that engines of defendant's road habitually threw large amount of sparks going up grade, when offending engine unidentified; Van Steuben v. Central R. Co. 178 Pa. 377, 34 L. R. A. 580, 39 W. N. C. 221, 35 Atl. 992, holding inadmissible, evidence of cinders falling from engines of elevated road fourteen months to two years before injury; Baker v. Hagey, 177 Pa. 140, 42 W. N. C. 302, 55 Am. St. Rep. 712, 35 Atl. 705, permitting evidence in action for injury, of prior discharges of steel from building where ingot steel broken by dynamite; Stephenson v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 20 Pa. Super. Ct. 164, holding negligence of railway in causing loss by fire provable by circumstantial evidence; Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Chittim, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 45, 71 S. W. 294, holding evidence of dropping of sparks by passing engines competent on question of cause of fire.

Cited in footnote to Bemis v. Temple, 26 L. R. A. 254, which upholds right to show effect on different horses of suspended flag.

Cited in note (17 L. R. A. 38) on effect of concurring negligence of third person on liability of one sued for negligently causing injury.

Rule as to appliances for safety.

Cited in Buente v. Pittsburg, A. & M. Traction Co. 2 Pa. Super. Ct. 190, stating rule as to pilots, fenders, and like appliances for safety to be adoption of best precautions in general use, and which experience has shown to be effectual; Fritsch v. New York & I. C. R. Co. 93 App. Div. 558, 87 N. Y. Supp. 942, holding that absence of fenders may be considered upon question of negligence in running over boy.

16 L. R. A. 305, LEONARD v. CLOUGH, 133 N. Y. 292, 31 N. E. 93.

What passes with conveyance.

Cited in Banta v. Merchant, 45 App. Div. 143, 61 N. Y. Supp. 218, holding that tenant in common can recover value of interest in crop growing on land of another, sold in partition with notice to purchaser that interest in crop reserved; Kirchman v. Lapp, 46 N. Y. S. R. 689, 19 N. Y. Supp. 831, which holds that play house constructed by boys upon no foundation and nailed to fence does not pass with deed of real estate; Hawver v. Wright, 21 Misc. 213, 79 N. Y. S. R. 659, 45 N. Y. Supp. 659, holding evidence of parol reservation of life interest in real estate conveyed by absolute deed inadmissible.

L. R. A. AN.—VOL. II.—66.

Cited in footnotes to Bald Eagle Valley R. Co. v. Nittany Valley R. Co. 29 L. R. A. 423, which holds intention of parties controlling in determining whether covenant runs with land; Peaks v. Hutchinson, 59 L. R. A. 279, which holds that building on stone posts, erected under parol agreement that it shall remain builder's, does not pass to bona fide purchaser of land; Beeler v. C. C. Mercantile Co. 60 L. R. A. 283, which holds that hotel building affixed to and conveyed with land cannot afterward become chattel by mere agreement of parties.

16 L. R. A. 308, HULL v. STATE, 29 Fla. 79, 30 Am. St. Rep. 95, 11 So. 97.

Legislative power over vested rights.

Followed in State ex rel. Stieff v. Bradshaw, 39 Fla. 141, 22 So. 296, holding purchaser at tax sale entitled to deed at expiration of redemption period, notwithstanding statute extending period.

Cited in State ex rel. Lewis v. Bradshaw, 35 Fla. 314, 17 So. 642, allowing mandamus to compel issuance of tax deed to which tax purchaser entitled prior to passage of act extending period of redemption; State ex rel. Waldo v. Fylpaa, 3 S. D. 588, 54 N. W. 599, holding act extending time for redemption of lands sold for taxes inapplicable to prior sales.

Cited in footnotes to Jones v. German Ins. Co. 46 L. R. A. 860, which sustains statute shortening time of insurance company's immunity from suit, without extending period of limitations; International Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Hardy, 24 L. R. A. 284, which denies legislative power to change remedy for enforcing trust deed; Kirkman v. Bird, 58 L. R. A. 670, which sustains, as to prior obligations, statute exempting wages for sixty days preceding levy.

16 L. R. A. 313, LOVETT v. STATE, 29 Fla. 384, 11 So. 176.

Jurisdiction of appellate court.

Cited in Underhill v. Jericho, 66 Vt. 186, 28 Atl. 879, holding that appellate court, having heard cause and remanded it to lower court, exhausted its jurisdiction; Brown v. State, 29 Fla. 498, 11 So. 181, which holds that appellate court has lost jurisdiction of cause after remittitur issued and filed in inferior court; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Grunthal, 39 Fla. 396, 22 So. 685, holding that application to correct record on certiorari must be made in time or it will be denied; French v. State, 85 Wis. 409, 21 L. R. A. 405, 39 Am. St. Rep. 855, 55 N. W. 566, holding record must show that one convicted of crime was present at trial and in court when verdict rendered or sentence pronounced; State v. Marsh, 134 N. C. 185, 47 S. E. 6, restoring criminal case to docket upon discovery that it was decided upon false record.

Distinguished in Glaser v. Hackett, 38 Fla. 89, 20 So. 820, which holds corrections to bill of exceptions must be made in lower court, and amended record brought up by certiorari.

16 L. R. A. 318, GULF, C. & S. F. R. CO. v. HENRY, 84 Tex. 678, 19 S. W. 870.

Passenger's rights on ticket.

Cited in Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Kinsley, 27 Ind. App. 147, 87 Am. St. Rep. 245, 60 N. E. 169, holding passenger purchasing ticket good for return on certain date, having begun return in time, cannot be refused carriage through fault of railroad employee, where compelled to change cars; International & G. N. R.

Co. v. Best, 93 Tex. 348, 55 S. W. 315, holding passenger not entitled to stop over on continuous passage ticket, notwithstanding statement to that effect by conductor.

Cited in footnote to Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Parry, 22 L. R. A. 251, which holds round-trip ticket by specified "branch," good on main line only on trains connecting with branch trains.

Cited in note (28 L. R. A. 776) on right of passenger to stop over.

16 L. R. A. 321, BINGEL v. VOLZ, 142 Ill. 214, 34 Am. St. Rep. 64, 31 N. E. 13.
Construction of wills.

Cited in Eckford v. Eckford, 91 Iowa, 62, 26 L. R. A. 373, footnote p. 270, 58 N. W. 1093 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that quarter section of land passes under devise erroneously describing quarter, but correctly describing section; Fox v. Fox, 102 Tenn. 85, 50 S. W. 765, holding surplus under will falling to improvident son not intended to be impressed with trusts and limitations defined in prior specific bequest to him; Re Young, 123 Cal. 344, 55 Pac. 1011, holding clause directing that two deeds be handed to husband of testatrix, and, on his death, to another person, does not devise land owned by her; Williams v. Williams, 189 Ill. 509, 59 N. E. 966, refusing to reform will by bringing together descriptions of three parcels of land in order to give effect to devise of land wrongly described; Henderson v. Harness, 176 Ill. 306, 52 N. E. 68, which holds devise to one for life, without intervention of trustee, subjects interest to lien of judgments against life tenant prior to death of testator; Perry v. Bowman, 151 Ill. 33, 37 N. E. 680, permitting evidence of what "certain real estate advanced" by testator was, to give effect to his intention; Schlottman v. Hoffman, 73 Miss. 198, 55 Am. St. Rep. 527, 18 So. 893, holding evidence admissible to explain whether figures used designated legacy of $5 or $500, and referring particularly to annotation in 16 L. R. A. 321; Vestal v. Garrett, 197 Ill. 405, 64 N. E. 345, holding evidence of extraneous facts inadmissible to vary unambiguous words of will; Re Lynch, 142 Cal. 377, 75 Pac. 1086, holding devise of land rendered ineffective by false description.

Cited in footnote to Whitcomb v. Rodman, 28 L. R. A. 149, which holds extrinsic evidence admissible to identify land devised by incorrect description.

Distinguished in Huffman v. Young, 170 Ill. 297, 49 N. E. 570, striking out of will certain false words in description of premises, in order to arrive at intention of testator.

16 L. R. A. 326, SONTAG v. BIGELOW, 142 Ill. 143, 31 N. E. 674.

Rights of cotenants.

Cited in Berry v. Seawall, 13 C. C. A. 110, 31 U. S. App. 30, 65 Fed. 751, holding that parol partition, acquiesced in for any considerable time, estops anyone joining in it and accepting exclusive possession, from asserting right in violation thereof; Brumback v. Brumback, 198 Ill. 76, 64 N. E. 741, holding that purchaser of interest of tenant in common acquires no rights against cotenant by possession, without actual notice that it is adverse; Converse v. Calumet River R. Co. 195 Ill. 207, 62 N. E. 887, which holds judgment in condemnation, followed by payment, is not color of title within statute of limitations; Rann v. McTiernan, 187 Ill. 197, 58 N. E. 390, which holds that parol partition to vest legal title in severalty must be accompanied by deed; Boyd v. Boyd, 176 Ill. 45, 68 Am. St. Rep.

169, 51 N. E. 782, holding possession not adverse where cotenant, a minor, had no knowledge of his rights, and assertion of title was not absolutely hostile to him; McMahon v. Torrence, 163 Ill. 282, 45 N. E. 269, refusing to recognize statute of limitations as bar to action for partition, where cotenant's interest was recognized within period; Van Buskirk v. Van Buskirk, 148 Ill. 24, 35 N. E. 383, which holds that trust results in favor of one of two brothers living on same property, who contributed half of purchase money toward purchase, where title taken in name of other brother, whether parol partition or not.

Cited in note (18 L. R. A. 789) on what title or interest will support action of ejectment.

16 L. R. A. 330, LARSON v. METROPOLITAN STREET R. CO. 110 Mo. 234, 33 Am. St. Rep. 439, 19 S. W. 416.

Liability for damage to landowner.

Cited in Mosier v. Oregon Nav. Co. 39 Or. 261, 87 Am. St. Rep. 652, 64 Pac. 453, holding railroad liable for sliding of earth of adjoining owner into excavation made by it while repairing right of way; Springfield Waterworks Co. v. Jenkins. 62 Mo. App. 82, holding that owner of land cannot affect natural flow of stream percolating into subterranean channel, so as to injure one whose springs are fed therefrom.

Duty to support building.

Cited in Delaney v. Bowman, 82 Mo. App. 256, holding that owner of building has right to rely on voluntary promise by adjoining owner that he will protect wall while excavating on own premises; Gildersleeve v. Hammond, 109 Mich. 439. 33 L. R. A. 52, 67 N. W. 519, holding owner of building relieved of necessity of shoring it up when adjoining owner promised to support it while excavating; Walters v. Hamilton, 75 Mo. App. 247, holding that owner of land has no natural easement for support of his building upon land of his neighbor; Eads v. Gains, 58 Mo. App. 501, upholding right of one excavating own land, to recover expenses of shoring up adjoining owner's wall after timely notice of intention to excavate; Gildersleeve v. Hammond, 109 Mich. 436, 33 L. R. A. 49, 67 N. W. 519, sustaining right of action for damages caused by fall of building standing nearly 5 feet from boundary in sandy soil, undermined by excavating on adjoining lot without supporting side of excavation; Davis v. Summerfield, 131 N. C. 353, 63 L. R. A. 493, footnote p. 493, 92 Am. St. Rep. 781, 42 S. E. 818, 45 S. E. 654, holding it to be duty of one about to excavate to notify adjoining owner of proposed extent thereof; Carpenter v. Reliance Realty Co. 103 Mo. App. 490, 77 S. W. 1004, holding duty devolves upon owner, upon notice of another's intention to excavate, to protect buildings.

Cited in footnote to Clemens v. Speed, 19 L. R. A. 240, which denies to party-wall owners, reciprocal easement from support of buildings.

Independent contractor.

Cited in Scott v. Springfield, 81 Mo. App. 325, holding city liable for negligent injury to contractor's servant when city's engineer had supervision, which included even discharge of employees; Independence v. Slack, 134 Mo. 78, 34 S. W. 1094, holding lot owner not liable for negligence of independent contractor laying sidewalk, because engaging person to supervise the work; Gayle v. Missouri Car &

Foundry Co. 177 Mo. 448, 76 S. W. 987, holding independent contractor not rendered servant by fact that work is supervised by employer.

Cited in footnotes to Pittsfield Cottonwear Mfg. Co. v. Pittsfield Shoe Co. 60 L. R. A. 116, which holds landlord liable to tenants of lower floor for injury from freezing of automatic fire extinguisher in portion retained by former, though building heated by independent contractor; Boomer v. Wilbur, 53 L. R. A. 172, which denies owner's liability for injury by fall of bricks through negligence of independent contractor repairing chimney; Peerless Mfg. Co. v. Bagley, 53 L. R. A. 285, which holds landlord liable for independent contractor's negligence in putting in automatic fire extinguisher; Hoff v. Shockley, 64 L. R. A. 538, which holds property owner not liable for injuries to traveler by negligent obstruction of street by independent contractor.

Res gestæ.

Cited in Eagle Constr. Co. v. Wabash R. Co. 71 Mo. App. 631, holding statements of one's servants while in act of conversion admissible.

16 L. R. A. 335, GLASS v. FREEBURG, 50 Minn. 386, 52 N. W. 900:

Priority of liens.

Cited in Wentworth v. Tubbs, 53 Minn. 395, 55 N. W. 543, declaring mechanic's lien for making plans in architect's office not superior to mortgage given before work on ground begun; Miller v. Stoddard, 54 Minn. 489, 56 N. W. 131, granting preference to mechanics' liens over mortgage executed after work begun.

Cited in footnotes to Smith v. Neubauer, 33 L. R. A. 685, which authorizes lien for materials furnished to subcontractors as well as to contractors; Hightower v. Bailey, 49 L. R. A. 255, which sustains lien to subcontractors or material men, irrespective of notice of claim or state of account between owner and principal contractor; Green v. Williams, 19 L. R. A. 478, which holds subcontractor's right to lien not lost by contractor's waiver or estoppel.

Distinguished in Gardner v. Leck, 52 Minn. 525, 54 N. W. 746, subordinating to all mechanics' liens mortgages made subsequent to work begun or material furnished on ground.

16 L. R. A. 337, JACKSONVILLE, T. & K. W. R. CO. v. GALVIN, 29 Fla. 636, 11 So. 231.

Liability of railroad for negligence.

Cited in Wilkinson v. Pensacola & A. R. Co. 35 Fla. 87, 17 So. 71, sustaining judgment for defendant where evidence failed to prove allegation that fireman threw piece of wood from passing train, by which traveler injured; Walsh v. Western R. Co. 34 Fla. 11, 15 So. 686, sustaining allegations of neglect in constructing track and in constructing cars so that plaintiff's intestate was thrown from his engine by train breaking apart.

Cited in footnote to Dewey v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 22 L. R. A. 292, which holds railroad company not liable for injury to brakeman by load projecting beyond end of flat car.

Who are fellow servants.

Cited in footnote to Dewey v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 16 L. R. A. 342, which holds car inspector and brakeman not fellow servants.

Cited in note (18 L. R. A. 794) on what constitutes common employment.

16 L. R. A. 342, DEWEY v. DETROIT, G. H. & M. R. CO. 97 Mich. 343, 52 N. W. 942.

Negligence of fellow servants.

Cited on rehearing in Dewey v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 97 Mich. 329, 22 L. R. A. 293, footnote p. 292, 37 Am. St. Rep. 348, 56 N. W. 756, holding company not liable for injury to brakeman from load projecting beyond end of flat car, due to negligence of inspector.

Cited in Beesley v. F. W. Wheeler & Co. 103 Mich. 212, 27 L. R. A. 271, 61 N. W. 658, holding that ship riveter cannot recover for injuries caused by negligence of carpenters in constructing scaffold.

Who are fellow servants.

Cited in footnotes to Clarke v. Pennsylvania Co. 17 L. R. A. 811, which holds section boss of one gang and member of another gang fellow servants; Buck v. New Jersey Zinc Co. 60 L. R. A. 453, which holds blacksmith in factory working link for chain to keep box of dump car in position, fellow servant of one using car.

Knowledge of danger as affecting liability.

Cited in notes (41 L. R. A. 123) on knowledge as element of employer's liability to injured servant.

Distinguished in Brennan v. Michigan C. R. Co. 93 Mich. 159, 53 N. W. 358, denying right of recovery for death of brakeman coupling cars loaded with logs, with knowledge of rule calling attention to method of transporting same, and requiring him to use stick.

Vice principalship.

Cited in note (54 L. R. A. 161) on vice principalship as determined with reference to character of act which caused injury.

16 L. R. A. 345, HEFFRON v. DETROIT CITY R. CO. 92 Mich. 406, 31 Am. St. Rep. 601, 52 N. W. 802.

Passenger's right of transportation.

Cited in Van Dusan v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 97 Mich. 442, 37 Am. St. Rep. 354, 56 N. W. 848, limiting recovery for peaceable ejection from train to value of return ticket passenger was deprived of by mistake of conductor; Jenkins v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 29 App. Div. 12, 51 N. Y. Supp. 216, holding acceptance of transfer ticket from one line of street to another does not alter rights of passenger who has paid his fare; Indianapolis Street R. Co. v. Wilson, 161 Ind. 187, 100 Am. St. Rep. 261, 66 N. E. 950 (dissenting opinion), majority holding ejection of passenger tendering transfer on wrong line, given through negligence of another conductor, unjustifiable; Brown v. Rapid R. Co. 130 Mich. 486, 90 N. W. 290, holding only extra fare paid after ejection recoverable by passenger tendering wrong coupon tickets on return trip, through mistake of first conductor.

Cited in footnotes to Pine v. St. Paul City R. Co. 16 L. R. A. 347, which holds passenger entitled to transportation over any line to which transfer ticket applicable; Nashville Street R. Co. v. Griffin, 49 L. R. A. 451, which denies authority to eject passenger who, after paying fare inside station, enters car which has stopped just outside station; Curtis v. Louisville City R. Co. 21 L. R. A. 649, which denies right to eject for nonpayment of fare, passenger receiving 45 cents as change for 50-cent piece; Mahoney v. Detroit Street R. Co. 18 L. R. A. 335, which authorizes ejection of one refusing to pay fare, and claiming right of carriage on transfer, without transfer ticket; O'Rourke v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 46 L. R. A. 614, which holds void, conditions on transfer check requiring passengers to ascertain correctness of date, time, and direction.

Wrongful disposition of street railway transfers.

Cited in footnote to Ex parte Lorenzen, 50 L. R. A. 55, which sustains penal ordinance against passenger selling or giving away street railway transfer.

16 L. R. A. 347, PINE v. ST. PAUL CITY R. CO. 50 Minn. 144, 52 N. W. 392.

Passenger's right of transportation.

Cited in Vicksburg R. Power & Mfg. Co. v. Marlett, 78 Miss. 874, 29 So. 62, refusing exemplary damages for ejecting passenger presenting unpunched transfer ticket; Percy v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 58 Mo. App. 79, upholding right of railway to expel passenger for failure to pay fare, when he boarded car at point not indicated on ticket; Appleby v. St. Paul City R. Co. 54 Minn. 171, 40 Am. St. Rep. 308, 55 N. W. 1117, holding passenger entitled to recover for expulsion from car which he had taken after one he had boarded with transfer had been withdrawn; Indianapolis Street R. Co. v. Wilson, 161 Ind. 181, 100 Am. St. Rep. 261, 66 N. E. 950 (dissenting opinion), majority holding ejection of passenger tendering transfer on wrong line, given through negligence of another conductor, unjustifiable.

Cited in footnotes to O'Rourke v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 46 L. R. A. 614, which holds void, conditions on transfer check requiring passengers to ascertain correctness of date, time, and direction; Mahoney v. Detroit Street R. Co. 18 L. R. A. 335, which authorizes ejection of one refusing to pay fare, and claiming right to carriage on transfer, without transfer ticket; Curtis v. Louisville City R. Co. 21 L. R. A. 649, which denies right to eject for nonpayment of fare, passenger receiving 45 cents as change for 50-cent piece; Nashville Street R. Co. v. Griffin, 49 L. R. A. 451, which denies authority to eject passenger who, after paying fare inside station, enters car which has stopped just outside station.

Restrictions as to use of street car transfers.

Cited in footnotes to Ex parte Lorenzen, 50 L. R. A. 55, which sustains penal ordinance against passenger selling or giving away street railway transfer; Heffron v. Detroit City R. Co. 16 L. R. A. 345, which holds restriction for use of street car transfer within fifteen minutes valid.

16 L. R. A. 349, GILLESPIE v. LINCOLN, 35 Neb. 34, 52 N. W. 811.

Liability of municipality in governmental capacity.

Cited in Ulrich v. St. Louis, 112 Mo. 148, 34 Am. St. Rep. 372, 20 S. W. 466, holding that workhouse inmate, kicked by mule which he was directed by superintendent to harness, cannot recover of city, though mule known by superintendent to be vicious; Shanewerk v. Ft. Worth, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 272, 32 S. W. 918, denying city's liability for injuries to engineer of fire engine negligently driven by its driver into hose cart while in discharge of duty; Saunders v. Ft. Madison, 111 Iowa, 105, 82 N. W. 428, holding city not liable for injury due to runaway horse frightened at wanton ringing of bell by fireman while passing engine house; Nicholson v. Detroit, 129 Mich. 256, 56 L. R. A. 605, 88 N. W. 695, denying liability of city for death of employee from smallpox contracted while tearing down small-pox hospital to erect another under statute requiring it; Esberg Cigar Co. v. Portland, 34 Or. 289, 43 L. R. A. 440, 75 Am. St. Rep. 651, 55 Pac. 961, holding city responsible for goods destroyed by bursting of water main in system from which it derives profit; Workman v. New York, 179 U. S. 580, 45 L. ed. 328, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212 (dissenting opinion), majority holding city liable for damages to owner of vessel run into by fire tug hastening to put out fire on vessel in harbor.

Management and control of police and fire departments.

Distinguished in State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Moores, 55 Neb. 519, 41 L. R. A. 637, 76 N. W. 175, declaring invalid, act authorizing governor to appoint police and fire commissioners in metropolitan cities.

When city estopped.

Cited in Philadelphia Mortg. & T. Co. v. Omaha, 63 Neb. 286, 57 L. R. A. 153, 89 Am. St. Rep. 442, 88 N. W. 523, refusing to estop municipality from collecting taxes due and unpaid, because by mistake they were marked paid on records.

16 L. R. A. 353, TAPPAN v. BOSTON WATER POWER CO. 157 Mass. 24, 31 N. E. 703.

Land under navigable stream.

Cited in People ex rel. Cornwall v. Woodruff, 30 App. Div. 47, 51 N. Y. Supp. 515, holding riparian owner taking grant from state of land under water in navigable river takes it subject to right of adjacent owner to receive grant of land under water adjacent to his upland; Forest River Lead Co. v. Salem, 165 Mass. 200, 42 N. E. 802, establishing boundary between towns for purpose of taxation at high-water mark of river, on one side thereof, in accordance with general repute and acquiescence.

Cited in notes (45 L. R. A. 239) on title to land between high and low water marks; (21 L. R. A. 777, 778) on division of water front, alluvion, and flats between adjoining riparian owners.

16 L. R. A. 358, CRAIG v. STATE, 49 Ohio St. 415, 30 N. E. 1120.

Form of indictment for murder.

Cited in State v. Almy, 67 N. H. 275, 22 L. R. A. 748, 28 Atl. 372, which holds that indictment alleging murder in same form as at common law will support verdict of guilty under act dividing it into degrees.

16 L. R. A. 361, DUNLAP v. STEERE, 92 Cal. 344, 27 Am. St. Rep. 143, 28 Pac. 563.

When judgment conclusive.

Cited in Sullivan v. Lumsden, 118 Cal. 668, 50 Pac. 777, granting repartition of lands where, by mistake of referee in former partition, there was division of lands to which there was no title.

Constructive service of process.

Cited in footnote to Capital City Bank v. Parent, 18 L. R. A. 240, which holds creditor's bill cannot be based on judgment for money only, when jurisdiction only obtained by attachment against nonresident.

Distinguished in Mulcahey v. Dow, 131 Cal. 77, 63 Pac. 158, which holds decree distributing estate of decedent a proceeding in rem and conclusive, unless appealed from, upon those with only constructive notice of hearing.

16 L. R. A. 367, COTTING v. DESARTIGES, 17 R. I. 668, 24 Atl. 530.

Execution of power under will.

Cited in Morffew v. San Francisco & S. R. R. Co. 107 Cal. 597, 40 Pac. 810, holding extrinsic evidence admissible to determine whether deed executed by donee of power, who had also an interest in fee; Mason v. Wheeler, 19 R. I. 23, 61 Am. St. Rep. 734, 31 Atl. 426, holding that testatrix did not intend to execute by will, power of disposition of real estate given to her in will of her mother, by use of words "real estate" in devise of residue; Lane v. Lane (Del.) 64 L. R. A. 865, 55 Atl. 184, holding that questions as to execution of power of appointment of personal property are to be decided by law of domicile of donor.

Cited in note (64 L. R. A. 865, 892) on what is sufficient execution by will of power of appointment.

Law governing beneficiary of gift or trust.

Cited in footnotes to First Nat. Bank v. National Broadway Bank, 42 L. R. A. 140, which holds interests of beneficiary governed by laws of state where trust created, trustee appointed, and parties interested reside; Hope v. Brewer, 18 L. R. A. 458, which holds valid, gift to charity in foreign country if valid therein.

16 L. R. A. 371, NICHOLS v. ANN ARBOR & Y. STREET R. CO. 87 Mich. 361, 49 N. W. 538.

Abutting owner's right in street.

Cited in Howe v. West End Street R. Co. 167 Mass. 50, 44 N. E. 386, holding construction of surface street railways under proper regulations not new undertaking entitling abutters to damages; Zehren v. Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. 99 Wis. 94, 41 L. R. A. 579, 67 Am. St. Rep. 844, 74 N. W. 538, holding street railway cannot change grade of highway to suit itself and cut off owner's right of access to property, through merely nominal act of town board; La Crosse City R. Co. v. Higbee, 107 Wis. 395, 51 L. R. A. 927, 83 N. W. 701, permitting trolley pole to be set in front of sidewalk without permission of owner of lot, where not materially interfering with convenience; Rische v. Texas Transp. Co. 27 Tex. Civ. App. 37, 66 S. W. 324, holding abutting owner entitled to damages occasioned property by use of street by railway for transporting freight.

Cited in footnote to Montgomery v. Santa Ana & W. R. Co. 25 L. R. A. 654, which holds railroad on street not additional burden.

Cited in note (17 L. R. A. 475, 478) on what use of street or highway constitutes additional burden.

Use of streets by railway.

Distinguished in Nieman v. Detroit Suburban Street R. Co. 103 Mich. 260, 61 N. W. 519, holding commercial character of electric street railway not determined merely by use of T-rail; Detroit, Ft. W. & B. I. R. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 127 Mich. 230, 62 L. R. A. 154, 86 N. W. 842, holding that street railway can be compelled to bear portion of expense necessary to maintain safeguards at crossing of its line by railroad.

16 L. R. A. 376, JOANNIN v. OGILVIE, 49 Minn. 564, 32 Am. St. Rep. 581, 52 N. W. 217.

What amounts to duress.

Cited in Minneapolis Land Co. v. McMillan, 79 Minn. 290, 82 N. W. 591, holding duress in making and indorsing notes not shown where bond against company, not due, was presented and payment demanded, with threat of having receiver appointed; American Baptist Missionary Union v. Hastings, 67 Minn. 308, 69 N. W. 1078, holding money paid to redeem property from tax sale involuntary, where there was no time to prove it invalid before tax title would become absolute; Minneapolis Stock-Yards & Packing Co. v. Cunningham, 59 Minn. 329, 61 N. W. 329, holding duress not shown in allegations that owner of building charged office rent after agreement to allow room rent free, when no threats of any kind alleged; Panton v. Duluth Gas & Water Co. 50 Minn. 177, 36 Am. St. Rep. 635, 52 N. W. 527, holding duress shown in act of water company threatening to shut off water supply of building unless amount demanded was paid, although owner claimed water meter defective; Vereycken v. Vanden Brooks, 102 Mich. 121, 60 N. W. 687, holding no duress shown where maker of note paid excess of interest demanded over agreed reduction for extension after foreclosure begun, because he could on hearing have shown amount due; Wells v. Adams, 88 Mo. App. 225, declaring it moral duress to compel one who has made a note secured by mortgage on real estate, to give large bonus to discharge debt before due, where, through fraud of mortgagee, privilege to pay after short period was not included; Pembroke v. Hayes, 114 Iowa, 578, 87 N. W. 492, refusing to interfere with verdict of jury that note was not paid under duress, when supported by evidence; Manning v. Poling, 114 Iowa, 23, 83 N. W. 895, holding payment of judgment to redeem land sold under it not involuntary when restraining order could have been obtained; First Nat. Bank v. Sargeant, 65 Neb. 604, 59 L. R. A. 300, footnote p. 296, 91 N. W. 595, holding refusal of grantee in deed given to secure debt, to reconvey to debtor to enable him to complete sale to purchaser, except upon payment in excess of amount due, duress.

Cited in footnotes to Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Hull, 25 L. R. A. 37, which upholds right to maintain suit for balance due on policy without tendering back less sum, accepted under threats of groundless prosecution; Flack v. National Bank of Commerce, 17 L. R. A. 583, which holds threat by bank to institute proceedings to collect unmatured note not duress.

Distinguished in Wessel v. D. S. B. Johnston Land & Mortg. Co. 3 N. D. 163, 44 Am. St. Rep. 529, 54 N. W. 922, which holds protest unavailing to make payment, not under duress in fact or in law, involuntary.

16 L. R. A. 379, STEEG v. ST. PAUL CITY R. CO. 50 Minn. 149, 52 N. W. 393.

Negligence in starting car.

Cited in Miller v. St. Paul City R. Co. 66 Minn. 193, 68 N. W. 862, sustaining verdict for plaintiff for injury from starting car and then stopping suddenly, so as to throw passenger on arm of seat, from which septicemia was induced; Citizens Street R. Co. v. Merl, 26 Ind. App. 291, 59 N. E. 491, holding carriers required to give passengers ample time to get on and off cars.

Cited in note (42 L. R. A. 294, 296) on starting car before passenger is seated.

16 L. R. A. 380, PITTSBURGH, C. & ST. L. R. CO. v. STATE, 49 Ohio St. 189, 30 N. E. 435.

Corporate taxation.

Cited in Ashley v. Ryan, 49 Ohio St. 525, 31 N. E. 721, which holds fee for filing articles of incorporation, based on percentage of capitalization, valid; Southern Gum Co. v. Laylin, 66 Ohio St. 597, 64 N. E. 564, holding tax based on percentage of capital stock a franchise tax, and not tax on property.

Cited in footnote to Knoxville & O. R. Co. v. Harris, 53 L. R. A. 921, which holds exemption from privilege tax not included in exemption from ad valorem tax.

Cited in note (60 L. R. A. 359) on constitutional equality in United States in relation to corporate taxation.

Governmental interference with private property.

Cited in Ellis v. Frazier, 38 Or. 471, 53 L. R. A. 458, 63 Pac. 642, declaring invalid, fixed tax on all bicycles, regardless of their value; State ex rel. Schwartz v. Ferris, 53 Ohio St. 335, 30 L. R. A. 223, 41 N. E. 579, declaring invalid, act to impose direct inheritance tax by taxing, at higher rate, right to succeed to estates of larger than those of smaller value; State v. Kleetzen, 8 N. D. 291, 78 N. W. 984, declaring invalid, act taxing occupation of hawking and peddling because not stating object of tax.

Cited in footnotes to Health Department v. Trinity Church, 27 L. R. A. 710, which upholds act compelling tenement-house owners to provide water on every floor; Sioux Falls v. Kirby, 25 L. R. A. 621, which holds void, ordinance making owner's right to improve and use property depend on decision of city inspector.

Distinguished in Mitchell v. Champaign County, 5 Ohio N. P. 159, upholding act providing for taxation for the suppression of mob violence.

16 L. R. A. 383, DANIEL v. CHESAPEAKE & O. R. CO. 36 W. Va. 397, 32 Am. St. Rep. 870, 15 S. E. 162.

Who are fellow servants.

Cited in Young v. West Virginia C. & P. R. Co. 42 W. Va. 125, 24 S. E. 615, holding brakeman on same freight train fellow servants; Haney v. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 38 W. Va. 578, 18 S. E. 748, holding telegraph operator of block system and conductor of extra train not fellow servants with workman on work train; Turner v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 40 W. Va. 690, 22 S. E. 83, which holds engineer and fireman of "wild" or special engine not fellow servants of section hand on track; Flannegan v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 40 W. Va. 440, 52 Am. St. Rep. 896, 21 S. E. 1028, holding telegraph operator controlling movements of trains in block not fellow servant of brakeman injured on one of such trains; Jackson v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 43 W. Va. 392, 46 L. R. A. 348, 27 S. E. 278, holding conductor and brakeman on freight train fellow servants.

Cited in footnotes to Palmer v. Michigan C. R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 637, which holds assistant roadmaster not fellow servant of gang of men working under him; Clarke v. Pennsylvania Co. 17 L. R. A. 811, which holds section boss of one gang and member of another gang fellow servants.

Cited in note (46 L. R. A. 355, 361) as to when conductor is deemed to be co-servant of other railroad employees.

Distinguished in Ward v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 39 W. Va. 50, 19 S. E. 339, holding brakeman and conductor coemployees as to matter of keeping lookout for signals, as required by rules of carrier.

Vice principalship.

Cited in note (51 L. R. A. 515, 516, 591, 621) on vice principalship considered with reference to superior rank of negligent servant.

Duty of master to provide for servants' safety.

Cited in Beall v. Pittsburgh C. & St. L. R. Co. 38 W. Va. 529, 18 S. E. 729, holding carrier not liable for injury to brakeman using brake without nut on standard to keep it down, where he could have observed defect; Core v. Ohio River R. Co. 38 W. Va. 469, 18 S. E. 596, holding carrier liable for injuries to brakeman, if due to engineer placing incompetent fireman in charge of engine.

16 L. R. A. 392, LAVALLE v. SOCIÉTÉ ST. JEAN BAPTISTE, 17 R. I. 680, 24 Atl. 467.

Fraternal benefit associations.

Cited in Pepin v. Societe St. Jean Baptiste, 24 R. I. 551, 60 L. R. A. 628, 54 Atl. 147, holding member of benefit society, duly notified of hearing of charges against him, and making no defense, properly expelled.

Cited in footnote to Wellenvoss v. Grand Lodge, K. of P. 40 L. R. A. 488, which denies power "of equity" to compel giving of secret password of grand lodge to delegate of subordinate lodge.

Cited in note (25 L. R. A. 150) on effect of expulsion from society to destroy right to insurance connected therewith.

Distinguished in Ebert v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 81 Minn. 127, 83 N. W. 506, holding association with large reserve, accumulating property, and with implied power to meet its obligations, more than fraternal benefit association.

16 L. R. A. 395, SCANLON v. WEDGER, 156 Mass. 462, 31 N. E. 642.

Dangerous agencies.

Cited in footnotes to Koelsch v. Philadelphia Co. 18 L. R. A. 759, which requires system of inspection by gas company which will insure reasonable promptness in detecting leaks; Knottnerus v. North Park Street R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 726, which holds roller coaster not dangerous agency making owner of pleasure resort where used liable for coaster owner's negligence.

Liability for injuries from fireworks.

Followed in Frost v. Josselyn, 180 Mass. 392, 62 N. E. 469, denying right of recovery of voluntary spectator injured at unauthorized display of fireworks in street.

Cited in footnotes to Aron v. Wausau, 40 L. R. A. 733, which denies city's liability for injury by explosion of cannon cracker on Fourth of July, in violation of ordinance; Fifield v. Phoenix, 24 L. R. A. 430, which denies city's liability for explosion of fireworks in street, under permit by city officer; Speir v. Brooklyn. 21 L. R. A. 641, which holds city liable for injury by explosion of fireworks during display made under mayor's permit; Bartlett v. Clarksburg, 43 L. R. A. 295, which denies liability of town for injuries from fireworks, etc., fired on streets with consent of town authorities; Wyllie v. Palmer, 19 L. R. A. 285, which holds dealer in fireworks furnishing assistant in discharging same not liable for negligence in discharge; Love v. Raleigh, 28 L. R. A. 192, which denies city's liability for acts of servants in managing fireworks; Madisonville v. Bishop, 57 L. R. A. 130, which holds city liable for injuries from fireworks by unorganized crowd of merry-makers.

16 L. R. A. 398, ATTY. GEN. ex rel. GAS & ELECTRIC LIGHT COMRS. v. WALTHAM LIGHT & POWER CO. 157 Mass. 86, 31 N. E. 482.

Power of legislature over public streets.

Cited in New England Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Boston Terminal Co. 182 Mass. 400, 65 N. E. 835, refusing land damages for terminating right to use street, by its discontinuance, for electric wire conduits.

16 L. R. A. 400, COM. v. ROBERTS, 155 Mass. 281, 29 N. E. 522.

Police power.

Cited in Health Department v. Trinity Church, 145 N. Y. 46, 27 L. R. A. 715, 45 Am. St. Rep. 579, 39 N. E. 833, upholding requirement that tenements previously erected be supplied with Croton water at owner's expense when health board so directed; Harrington v. Providence, 20 R. I. 239, 240, 38 L. R. A. 313, 38 Atl. 1, upholding act requiring drainage into sewer and discontinuance of cesspools and privy vaults; Cartwright v. Cohoes, 39 App. Div. 72, 56 N. Y. Supp. 731, holding regulation of board of health in relation to privy vaults reasonable; Com. v. Abbott, 160 Mass. 284, 35 N. E. 782, holding act forbidding maintenance of building not connected with public sewer, constitutional; Com. v. Danziger, 176 Mass. 291, 57 N. E. 461, declaring it to be within police power to regulate loaning of money on pledges of personal property; Sprigg v. Garrett Park, 39 Md. 413, 43 Atl. 813, holding that owner has no such vested right in cesspool that municipality cannot order its discontinuance; Newton v. Joyce, 166 Mass. 84, 55 Am. St. Rep. 385, 44 N. E. 116, holding that licensing stables is within police power; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. State, 47 Neb. 571, 41 L. R. A. 485, 53 Am. St. Rep. 557, 66 N. W. 624, holding ordinance directing railroad to repair portion of viaduct, valid exercise of police power; Tenement House Department v. Moeschen, 89 App. Div. 532, 85 N. Y. Supp. 704, upholding act requiring school sinks in New York city to be replaced by individual waterclosets.

Cited in footnote to Bostock v. Sams, 59 L. R. A. 282, which holds unauthorized, ordinance permitting refusal of permits for erecting buildings not conforming in size, appearance, etc., to existing buildings.

16 L. R. A. 402, GIDDINGS v. BLACKER, 93 Mich. 1, 52 N. W. 944.

Review of legislative and executive acts.

Cited in Denney v. State, 144 Ind. 509, 31 L. R. A. 729, 42 N. E. 929, assuming jurisdiction to determine validity of apportionment acts; Parker v. State, 133 Ind. 186, 18 L. R. A. 571, footnote p. 567, 32 N. E. 838, upholding jurisdiction to determine validity of apportionment act; Fesler v. Brayton, 145 Ind. 92, 32 L. R. A. 584, 44 N. E. 37 (dissenting opinion), majority upholding former apportionment act, although legislature failed to perform duty by passing unconstitutional acts on several occasions; Re Gunn, 50 Kan. 196, 19 L. R. A. 529, 32 Pac. 470, upholding jurisdiction to determine whether member of state legislature rightly under arrest of sergeant-at-arms; State ex rel. Morris v. Wrightson, 56 N. J. L. 188, 22 L. R. A. 550, 28 Atl. 56, upholding jurisdiction to determine constitutionality of act to regulate elections; State ex rel. Lamb v. Cunningham, 83 Wis. 130, 17 L. R. A. 164, 35 Am. St. Rep. 27, 53 N. W. 35, upholding jurisdiction of court on relation of private citizen to restrain secretary of state from publishing notices of election, when attorney general refused to act; Parameter v. Bourne, 8

Wash. 63, 35 Pac. 757 (dissenting opinion), majority holding court without jurisdiction to enjoin removal of county seat because of fraud in election therefor; People v. McClees, 20 Colo. 410, 26 L. R. A. 648, 38 Pac. 468, upholding jurisdiction of proceeding on relation of private citizen for injunction to restrain secretary of state from issuing certificate of election to district judges; People ex rel. Carter v. Rice, 135 N. Y. 521, 16 L. R. A. 857, footnote p. 838, 31 N. E. 921 (dissenting opinion), majority upholding apportionment act where, on account of invalidity of former acts, it might require election under act quarter of century old; People ex rel. Pond v. Monroe County, 65 Hun, 276, 19 N. Y. Supp. 978, sustaining right to review acts of apportionment; People ex rel. Woodyatt v. Thompson, 155 Ill. 475, 483, 40 N. E. 307, holding that legislature cannot be compelled to pass an apportionment act.

Cited in footnotes to Houghton County v. Blacker, 16 L. R. A. 432, which holds apportionment act unlawfully dividing county wholly void; State ex rel. Morris v. Wrightson, 22 L. R. A. 548, which holds constitutionality of apportionment act subject to judicial inquiry.

Distinguished in People ex rel. Woodyatt v. Thompson, 155 Ill. 475, 40 N. E. 307, sustaining formation of senatorial districts although they might have been made more nearly equal in number of inhabitants, and more compact.

Mandamus.

Cited in State ex rel. Winnie v. Stoddard, 25 Nev. 457, 51 L. R. A. 231, footnote p. 229, 62 Pac. 237, denying mandamus to compel county commissioners to issue notice of election for legislature where apportionment act subject to same objection as prior act; People ex rel. Pond v. Monroe County, 65 Hun, 265, 19 N. Y. Supp. 978, upholding, as proper remedy, writ of mandamus on relation of citizen and elector to compel supervisors to divide county into proper assembly districts; Brophy v. Schindler, 126 Mich. 348, 85 N. W. 1114, holding that relators had special interest in asking for mandamus to have bridge built, where boat had to be used to get children to school; People ex rel. Hillel Lodge, No. 72, I. O. B. B. v. Rose, 207 Ill. 375, 69 N. E. 762 (dissenting opinion), as to testing by mandamus, validity of act requiring annual reports from corporations.

16 L. R. A. 410, TITTMAN v. THORNTON, 107 Mo. 500, 17 S. W. 979.

Second appeal in 53 Mo. App. 513.

Suit in representative character.

Cited in Knoche v. Perry, 90 Mo. App. 485, holding that representative character of plaintiff need not be proved in action before justice of peace, merely because in his complaint he alleges he holds property in representative character.

16 L. R. A. 413. STATE ex rel. HITCHCOCK v. HEWITT, 3 S. D. 187, 44 Am. St. Rep. 788, 52 N. W. 875.

Rights of public officers.

Cited in State ex rel. Ayers v. Kipp, 10 S. D. 502, 74 N. W. 440, holding that tenure of office referred to in Constitution applies only to offices provided for, not to offices thereafter to be created by legislature; State ex rel. Moore v. Archibald, 5 N. D. 377, 66 N. W. 234, upholding jurisdiction of court to compel by mandamus, on relation of citizen, superintendent of public office to vacate office when attorney general has refused to apply for it; Pratt v. Police & Fire Comrs. 15

Utah, 12, 49 Pac. 747, holding that police board cannot arbitrarily remove chief of police without hearing; Snyder v. Emerson, 19 Utah, 325, 57 Pac. 300, denying right of compensation to one who is not shown to be de jure officer, although performing services for public board; McCully v. State, 102 Tenn. 521, 46 L. R. A. 571, 53 S. W. 134, holding that removal for "cause" contemplates charge, trial, and judgment.

Cited in footnote as to Re Advisory Opinion, 18 L. R. A. 594, which holds right to hold office not affected by suspension from same office during preceding term.

Cited in note (29 L. R. A. 384) on nature of directors, trustees, and officers of incorporated institutions belonging to state.

Mandamus.

Cited in note (58 L. R. A. 850) on original jurisdiction of court of last resort in mandamus cases.

16 L. R. A. 418, BOARD OF IMPROVEMENT v. SCHOOL DISTRICT, 56 Ark. 354, 35 Am. St. Rep. 108, 19 S. W. 969.

When public property assessable.

Cited in Pittsburg v. Sterrett Subdist. School, 204 Pa. 642, 61 L. R. A. 186, 54 Atl. 463, holding school district property exempt from local improvement assessment; Stiewel v. Fencing Dist. No. 6, 71 Ark. 21, 70 S. W. 308, holding county pauper farm exempt from local improvement assessment.

Cited in note (35 L. R. A. 39) on liability to local assessments for benefit, of property exempt from general taxation.

Distinguished in School District v. Board of Improvement, 65 Ark. 349, 46 S. W. 418, declaring school property, not actually and exclusively used for public purposes, not exempt from liability for improvement assessments; Edwards v. W. Constr. Co. v. Jasper Co. 117 Iowa, 374, 94 Am. St. Rep. 301, 90 N. W. 1006, holding, under statute, county property not exempt from local improvement assessments.

16 L. R. A. 423, BUCKLEY v. HUMASON, 50 Minn. 195, 36 Am. St. Rep. 637, 52 N. W. 385.

Validity of unlicensed contracts.

Cited in Fairly v. Wappoo Mills, 44 S. C. 253, 29 L. R. A. 225, footnote p. 215, 22 S. E. 108, sustaining right of unlicensed broker to recover commissions, when object of statute requiring license is to enforce payment of license tax by imposing penalty on person engaging in business. Richardson v. Brix, 94 Iowa, 629, 63 N. W. 325, refusing to unlicensed broker recovery of commission; Smith v. Robertson, 106 Ky. 474, 45 L. R. A. 511, footnote p. 510, 50 S. W. 852, denying right of recovery of owner of unlicensed stallion for service of same.

Cited in footnotes to Denning v. Yount, 50 L. R. A. 103, which denies right of unlicensed brokers to recover commissions; Randall v. Tuell, 38 L. R. A. 143, which denies right of unlicensed innholder to recover for board and lodging; Vermont Loan & T. Co. v. Hoffman, 37 L. R. A. 509, which holds loan of money without license valid, though misdemeanor under statute; Citizens' State Bank v. Nore, 60 L. R. A. 737, which authorizes recovery by bona fide purchaser of note for medical services by unlicensed practitioner; Black v. Security Mut. Life Asso.

54 L. R. A. 939, which denies right to commissions of one securing applications for insurance before license, although same granted before policies issued.

Recovery of price of property sold for illegal use.

Cited in footnote to Wind v. Iler, 27 L. R. A. 219, which holds statutory right to recover money paid on unlawful purchase not applicable to purchase valid in state where made.

16 L. R. A. 426, BROWN v. REPUBLICAN MOUNTAIN SILVER MINES, 17 Colo. 421, 30 Pac. 66.

Recovery for services of special character.

Cited in Taussig v. St. Louis & K. R. Co. 166 Mo. 35, 89 Am. St. Rep. 674, 65 S. W. 969, permitting recovery by director of railroad company for services as attorney at law, upon employment by general manager; Symmes v. Union Trust Co. 60 Fed. 867, holding that board of trustees of corporation can employ officer of company to get it out of financial straits, and agree to pay him for services; McCarthy v. Mt. Tecarte Land & Water Co. 111 Cal. 341, 43 Pac. 956, admitting evidence tending to show whether director was to receive compensation as superintendent or manager of corporation; Wagner v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. 177 Mo. 62, 75 S. W. 966, upholding right of engineer of one corporation, to recover reasonable value of services rendered another corporation engaged in joint enterprise.

Cited in footnote to Eaton v. Robinson, 29 L. R. A. 100, which requires officers to account for salaries voted and paid to deprive stockholders of rights.

Distinguished in Ruby Chief Min. & Mill. Co. v. Prentice, 25 Colo. 6, 52 Pac. 210, sustaining recovery for services by general manager or superintendent of mining company, who is also director.

16 L. R. A. 429, ILLINOIS WATCH CASE CO. v. PEARSON, 140 Ill. 423, 31 N. E. 400.

When mandamus will issue.

Cited in People ex rel. Dickinson v. Board of Trade, 193 Ill. 591, 62 N. E. 196, refusing mandamus to compel reinstating of member of board of trade; Harrison v. People, 97 Ill. App. 433 (dissenting opinion), majority granting writ to compel mayor of city to issue license for dramshop, where applicant complied with prerequisites.

Right to corporate name.

Cited in footnote to Paulino v. Portuguese Beneficial Asso. 20 L. R. A. 272, which holds corporate right to use of name cannot be annulled at suit of private person.

Distinguished in People ex rel. Traders' Ins. Co. v. Van Cleave, 183 Ill. 334, 47 L. R. A. 798, 55 N. E. 678, granting mandamus to compel issuance of license to foreign insurance company to do business with name similar to one in use.

16 L. R. A. 432, HOUGHTON COUNTY v. BLACKER, 92 Mich. 638, 52 N. W. 951.
Apportionment acts.

Cited in Denney v. State, 144 Ind. 509, 31 L. R. A. 729, 42 N. E. 929, holding that court has jurisdiction to decide validity of apportionment act; People ex rel. Woodyatt v. Thompson, 155 Ill. 483, 40 N. E. 307, holding legislature cannot be compelled to pass apportionment act; People ex rel. Carter v. Rice, 135 N. Y. 521, 16 L. R. A. 857, footnote p. 856, 31 N. E. 921 (dissenting opinion), majority upholding apportionment act when, otherwise it might require election to be held under act twenty-five years old; State ex rel. Winnie v. Stoddard, 25 Nev. 461, 51 L. R. A. 233, footnote p. 229, 62 Pac. 237, refusing mandamus to compel county commissioners to issue notice of election, where apportionment act subject to same objection as in prior act; Parmeter v. Bourne, 8 Wash. 63, 35 Pac. 757 (dissenting opinion), as to jurisdiction of court to determine validity of apportionment act.

Cited in footnotes to Parker v. State, 18 L. R. A. 567, which holds invalid, scheme for allowing county with less than unit of population to vote for two senators; State ex rel. Morris v. Wrightson, 22 L. R. A. 548, which holds constitutionality of apportionment act subject to judicial inquiry.

16 L. R. A. 437, JONES v. PORTLAND, 88 Mich. 598, 50 N. W. 731.

Compensation of witness as bearing upon competency.

Cited in Allen B. Wrisley Co. v. Burke, 203 Ill. 258, 67 N. E. 818, holding fact that examining physician was paid by party calling him as witness, competent.

Testimony of physicians.

Cited in McKormick v. West Bay City, 110 Mich. 271, 68 N. W. 148, denying admissibility of testimony of physician called to examine injured person just before trial, as to exclamations and conduct indicating suffering; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sheldon, 6 Kan. App. 350, 51 Pac. 808, holding it error to admit evidence of physician whether condition of plaintiff was direct result of collision; Davidson v. Cornell, 132 N. Y. 237, 30 N. E. 573; Consolidated Traction Co. v. Lambertson, 60 N. J. L. 454, 38 Atl. 683; Abbot v. Heath, 84 Wis. 321, 54 N. W. 574,—holding that physician called to examine injured person, to qualify as witness for him, cannot testify to statements made to him as to symptoms and condition.

Distinguished in Strudgeon v. Sand Beach, 107 Mich. 500, 65 N. W. 616, admitting testimony of exclamations of pain made by child of tender years, though after controversy begun; Heddlie v. City Electric R. Co. 112 Mich. 550, 70 N. W. 1096, holding testimony of physician admissible as to exclamations of pain uttered while treating injured person; Lacas v. Detroit City R. Co. 92 Mich. 417, 52 N. W. 745, admitting testimony of physician as to displacement of womb, as tending to show character of cause which might have produced injury; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Johnson, 95 Tex. 412, 67 S. W. 768, holding instinctive expressions of party, evidencing pain during examination by his own medical expert, admissible.

16 L. R. A. 443, PEOPLE'S GAS CO. v. TYNER, 131 Ind. 277, 31 Am. St. Rep. 433, 31 N. E. 59.

Right to increase flow of gas.

Followed in Greenfield Gas Co. v. People's Gas Co. 131 Ind. 599, 31 N. E. 61, and Tyner v. People's Gas Co. 131 Ind. 412, 31 N. E. 61, upholding right to explode nitro-glycerin in well to increase flow of gas.

Cited in footnote to Jones v. Forest Oil Co. 48 L. R. A. 748, which authorizes use of gas pump to increase production of oil well though production of adjoining wells diminished.

Ownership of oil and gas.

Cited in Williamson v. Jones, 39 W. Va. 258, 25 L. R. A. 233, 19 S. E. 436, holding petroleum in strata part of inheritance and that unlawful taking of it will be lasting damage to remainderman; Federal Oil Co. v. Western Oil Co. 57 C. C. A. 429, 121 Fed. 675, holding oil lease to be mere grant of use for purpose of prospecting.

Criticized in State v. Ohio Oil Co. 150 Ind. 30, 47 L. R. A. 632, 49 N. E. 809, holding that title to natural gas does not vest in any private owner until it is reduced to actual possession.

Wasting natural gas.

Cited in Ohio Oil Co. v. Indiana, 177 U. S. 206, 44 L. ed. 738, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576, sustaining act to prevent waste of natural gas; Townsend v. State, 147 Ind. 628, 37 L. R. A. 298, 62 Am. St. Rep. 477, 47 N. E. 19, sustaining conviction under statute prohibiting waste of natural gas.

Cited in note (29 L. R. A. 337) on liability for negligence in escape and explosion of gas.

Right of action dependent upon special damage.

Cited in Copper King v. Wabash Min. Co. 114 Fed. 993, granting temporary injunction restraining diversion of water, exclusive right to use of which belongs to another; Simpson v. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. 28 Ind. App. 352, 62 N. E. 753, granting injunction to restrain cutting off of lessor's supply of natural gas under lease; Ewing v. Webster City, 103 Iowa, 231, 72 N. W. 511, denying injunction to restrain city from enforcing ordinance compelling corn to be weighed on city scales, because it interferes somewhat with plaintiff's business; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Noftsgier, 148 Ind. 104, 47 N. E. 332, sustaining right of action for special damage to lot owner for building switch in highway; Pennsylvania Co. v. Stanley, 10 Ind. App. 424, 37 N. E. 288, awarding damages against railroad for closing one end of alley, by which access to rear of lots diminished.

Cited in note (37 L. R. A. 784) on whether court of equity can protect personal rights.

Injunction against acts punishable as crimes.

Cited in Columbian Athletic Club v. State, 143 Ind. 107, 28 L. R. A. 731, 52 Am. St. Rep. 407, 40 N. E. 914, granting injunction to prevent prize fighting, although act constitutes crime.

Cited in footnote to State v. O'Leary, 52 L. R. A. 299, which denies state's right to injunction to suppress gambling house.

Negligence in manufacture of explosives.

Cited in note (29 L. R. A. 721) on negligence in manufacture and storage of gun powder, nitro-glycerin, and other explosives.

16 L. R. A. 446, STEVER v. PEOPLE'S MUT. ACCL. INS. ASSO. 150 Pa. 132, 24 Atl. 662.

When full accident insurance allowed.

Cited in Fuller v. Locomotive Engineers' Mut. L. & Acci. Ins. Asso. 122 Mich. 551, 48 L. R. A. 87, footnote p. 86, 80 Am. St. Rep. 598, 81 N. W. 326, refusing full amount of insurance for amputation of only part of foot, though use lost, when policy reads for amputation "(whole hand or foot)."

Cited in footnotes to Lord v. American Mut. Acci. Asso. 26 L. R. A. 741, which holds it question for jury whether entire loss of hand caused by injury, without amputation above wrist; Mogé v. Société De Bienfaisance St. Jean Baptiste, 35 L. R. A. 736, which holds total blindness resulting from accident covered by policy.

Cited in note (38 L. R. A. 537) on what constitutes total disability of insured.

16 L. R. A. 449, NORTHERN C. R. CO. v. O'CONNER, 76 Md. 207, 35 Am. St. Rep. 422, 24 Atl. 449.

Carrier's duty of transportation.

Cited in footnote to United R. & Electric Co. v. Hardesty, 57 L. R. A. 276, which denies carrier's duty to accept coupon detached from commutation book.

16 L. R. A. 451, WOODRUFF v. PAINTER, 150 Pa. 91, 30 Am. St. Rep. 786, 24 Atl. 621.

Rights of parties to bailment.

Cited in McAllister v. Simon, 27 Misc. 217, 57 N. Y. Supp. 733, holding storekeeper not liable for loss of purse which does not actually or constructively come into his possession; Higman v. Camody, 112 Ala. 272, 57 Am. St. Rep. 33, 20 So. 480, holding bailee for hire liable for damages to barge which he continued to use after discovering serious leak.

Cited in footnotes to Sattler v. Hallock, 46 L. R. A. 679, which holds bailment, not sale, created by contract by which farmers deliver produce at their own factory for manufacture, and divide proceeds; Tombler v. Koelling, 27 L. R. A. 502, which holds check given to customer of bath house for valuables insufficient to show right thereto.

Distinguished in Hunter v. Reed, 12 Pa. Super. Ct. 114, holding rule that retail clothiers responsible for property of customer left in booth does not apply to diamond ring carried in fob pocket.

Storekeeper's duty to customer.

Cited in Polenske v. Lit Bros. 18 Pa. Super. Ct. 476, affirming judgment for personal injuries incurred by customer tripping over covered pipes extending about 2 inches above floor of department store.

16 L. R. A. 453, FISH BROS. WAGON CO. v. FISH, 82 Wis. 546, 33 Am. St. Rep. 72, 52 N. W. 595.

Trade-name, trade-mark, and good will.

Reaffirmed in Federal court in Fish Bros. Wagon Co. v. Fish Bros. Mfg. Co. 37 C. C. A. 146, 95 Fed. 458, holding prior judgment on merits as to right to use name conclusive as to all matters that might have been litigated.

Cited in Listman Mill Co. v. William Listman Mill Co. 88 Wis. 340, 43 Am. St. Rep. 907, 60 N. W. 261, granting injunction to restrain use of word "Marvel" for flour brand, which passed with good will in conveyance of business; Bank of Tomah v. Warren, 94 Wis. 160, 68 N. W. 549, enjoining use of name "Bank of Tomah" by rival bank after failure of other bank and sale by assignee of building, good will, and "name of Bank of Tomah;" Allegretti v. Allegretti Chocolate Cream Co. 177 Ill. 132, 52 N. E. 487, Affirming 76 Ill. App. 588, holding transfer of business from firm to corporation composed largely of former owners carried with it trade-name "Allegretti," without formal transfer; Fish Bros. Wagon Co. v. Fish Bros. Mfg. Co. 87 Fed. 205, enjoining use of word "genuine" by one of two firms entitled to manufacture wagons, as indicating that it alone is manufacturing the original wagons; Richmond Nervine Co. v. Richmond, 159 U. S. 302, 40 L. ed. 161, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30, holding portrait of one's self, used as trade-mark, assignable with business; Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. v. Graham, 98 Iowa, 610, 31 L. R. A. 139, 65 N. W. 837, holding fraternal insurance society seceding from lodge and becoming incorporated under name it formerly had, not entitled to exclusive use of that name; Robinson v. Storm, 103 Tenn. 55, 52 S. W. 880, enjoining use of man's own name in connection with liver regulator, which had become trade-name of another; Bissell Chilled Plow Works v. T. M. Bissell Plow Co. 121 Fed. 368, denying right of corporation to use trade-name "Bissell," before employed by another corporation to designate certain plow; Millsbaugh Laundry v. First Nat. Bank, 120 Iowa, 5, 94 N. W. 262, holding use of name "National Laundry, formerly owned by Millsbaugh," not conversion of name "Millsbaugh Laundry;" Slater v. Slater, 61 L. R. A. 796, which holds firm name not sole property of surviving partner.

Cited in footnotes to Brass & Iron Works Co. v. Payne, 19 L. R. A. 82, which holds good will of partnership transferred on dissolution, by one partner's transfer of interest to other partners; Watkins v. Landon, 19 L. R. A. 236, which holds purchaser of formula of unpatented medicine has no right to exclusively appropriate name of original manufacturer; Bagby & R. Co. v. Rivers, 40 L. R. A. 632, which denies assignability of continuing partner's right to use retiring partner's name; Slater v. Slater, 61 L. R. A. 796, which holds firm name an asset of partnership which executor of deceased partner has right to have sold; Millbrae Co. v. Taylor, 25 L. R. A. 193, which holds exclusive right to use name "Millbrae" not pass on division of milk business with partner; Knoedler v. Glaenger, 20 L. R. A. 733, which upholds right of vendor of good will to establish similar business in same place under own name; Chas. S. Higgins Co. v. Higgins Soap Co. 27 L. R. A. 42, which denies right to use name "Higgins Soap Co." where name "Chas. S. Higgins Co." previously used by manufacturers of soap; Lamb Knit-Goods Co. v. Lamb Glove & Mitten Co. 44 L. R. A. 841, which denies right to use own name so as to deceive public as to business rightfully engaged in by another.

Cited in note (46 L. R. A. 546) on transfer of trade-mark by bankruptcy or insolvency assignment.

16 L. R. A. 461, SPOONER v. PHILLIPS, 62 Conn. 62, 24 Atl. 524.

Rights of life tenants and remaindermen to accumulations of estate.

Cited in Mills v. Britton, 64 Conn. 12, 24 L. R. A. 537, footnote p. 536, 29 Atl. 231, holding forty shares of 4 per cent stock issued in place of twenty shares of 8 per cent stock, stock dividend belonging to capital going to remainderman; Greene v. Huntington, 73 Conn. 115, 46 Atl. 883, holding that rent and dividends from savings banks since death of life tenant, as income of trust, do not belong to estate of life tenant; Pritchitt v. Nashville Trust Co. 96 Tenn. 486, 33 L. R. A. 862, footnote p. 856, 36 S. W. 1064, holding life tenant entitled to stock dividends from net earnings of stock, after respective rights of life tenant and remainderman have attached.

Cited in footnotes to Quinn v. Safe Deposit & T. Co. 53 L. R. A. 169, which holds life tenant entitled to stock dividends made from sinking fund largely ac-accumulated during testator's life; McLouth v. Hunt, 39 L. R. A. 230, where life tenants entitled to stock certificates for accumulated earnings of or Hite v. Hite, 19 L. R. A. 173, which holds privilege of taking additional part of capital belonging to remainderman; Greene v. Greene, 35 L. R. A. 175, which requires apportionment between life tenants and remaindermen of trust fund recovered from insolvent's estate; Distinguished in Re App. Div. 432, 48 N. Y. Supp. 175, holding that as between life tenants and remaindermen, stock of new company, apportioned among shareholders of old company, represents capital, and cash and securities of old company dividends represent profits or income.

Disapproved in De Koven v. Alsop, 205 Ill. 313, 63 L. R. A. 590, 68 Ill. App. 208, holding that declared stock dividends go to remainderman.

Title to stock dividends.

Cited in footnote to Clark v. Campbell, 54 L. R. A. 508, which holds that stock by writing, providing for delivery on payment by certain date, is entitled to dividends till payment.

What constitutes income.

Cited in Re Murphy, 80 App. App. 242, 80 N. Y. Supp. 530, construing "interest" as used in bequest, to mean "income;" Smith v. Hooper, 95 Atl. 844, holding life tenant, bequeathed income from sum of money, is entitled to profits arising from sale of trust property.

16 L. R. A. 468, WALTON PLOW CO. v. CAMPBELL, 35 Neb. 173, 52

Alteration of instruments.

Cited in Courcamp v. Weber, 39 Neb. 539, 58 N. W. 187, holding that material alteration of note admissible to show it was made after execution without authority; Fisher v. Hutton, 44 Neb. 127, 62 N. W. 488, holding that immaterial alteration in written instrument does not invalidate it; v. Colby, 64 Neb. 219, 62 L. R. A. 394, footnote p. 393, 89 N. W. 84, holding that unauthorized insertion of word "gold" before dollars, material alteration of instrument; First Nat. Bank v. Laughlin, 4 N. D. 397, 61 N. W. 473, holding that change of words to make non-negotiable note negotiable, material alteration; v. Fellner, 9 Okla. 521, 60 Pac. 270, holding change of word "on" to "at" in original instrument reads, "purchase price of the buildings on lot 1, at lot 2, alteration."

Cited in footnotes to Simmons v. Atkinson & L. Co. 23 L. R. A. 403, which holds insertion of words "or bearer" and place of payment, material alteration; Brown v. Johnson Bros. 51 L. R. A. 403, which holds maker released by addition of name of other person as comaker; Gleason v. Hamilton, 121 N. D. 210, which holds mortgage not invalidated by alteration by attorney drafter without mortgagee's knowledge; Rochford v. McGee, 61 L. R. A. 335, which holds removal of note at foot of application for insurance, material alteration.

General denial.

Cited in Graves v. Norfolk Nat. Bank, 49 Neb. 438, 68 N. W. 68, holding that general denial puts in issue genuineness of indorsement in action against 16 L. R. R. 471, GULF, C. & S. F. R. CO. v. LOONEY, 85 Tex. 158, 34 Am. St. Rep. 787, 19 S. W. 1039.

Passenger's right of transportation.

Cited in Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. St. John, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 263, 35 S. W. 501, sustaining right of railway to limit its liability for transportation to its own line on excursion ticket; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Dennis, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 94, 23 S. W. 400, holding person induced to attend sale of lots by advertisement of reduced railroad rates should have reasonable time after sale to use limited ticket; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wright, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 470, 21 S. W. 399, holding journey must be completed within time limited, unless it be unreasonable; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Kinsley, 27 Ind. App. 146, 87 Am. St. Rep. 245, 60 N. E. 169, holding one with ticket for continuous passage, and obliged to change cars, a passenger when presenting same at gateway of railroad, notwithstanding doubt as to right of transportation on ticket; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Ewing, 51 C. C. A. 687, 114 Fed. 1021 (dissenting opinion), as to obligation of carrier, and liability for damage to passenger, extending only to its own line.

Cited in footnotes to Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Mulford, 35 L. R. A. 599, which denies liability of company selling tickets for failure of connecting roads to honor same; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Parry, 22 L. R. A. 251, which holds round-trip ticket by specified "branch," good on main line only on trains connecting with branch trains.

Distinguished in Rutherford v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. 28 Tex. Civ. App. 628, 67 S. W. 161, holding purchaser of excursion ticket beginning return trip within time limited entitled to ride thereon, although not reaching destination until after expiration thereof.

16 L. R. A. 475. McPHERSON v. BLACKER, 92 Mich. 377, 31 Am. St. Rep. 587, 51 N. W. 469.

Affirmed in 146 U. S. 1, 36 L. ed. 869, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 3.

Presidential electors state officers.

Cited in footnotes to Todd v. Johnson, 33 L. R. A. 399, which holds presidential electors state officers within provision for filling vacancies.

Validity of apportionment acts.

Cited in footnotes to State ex rel. Morris v. Wrightson, 22 L. R. A. 548, which holds that constitutionality of apportionment act is subject to judicial inquiry, and not mere political question; Houghton County v. Blacker, 16 L. R. A. 432, which holds apportionment act unlawfully dividing county wholly void; People ex rel. Carter v. Rice, 16 L. R. A. 836, which upholds apportionment of members of Assembly as against inequalities in distributing members, after each county given member for every full ratio of representation.

Contemporaneous construction.

Cited in Pfeiffer v. Board of Education, 118 Mich. 564, 42 L. R. A. 537, 77 N. W. 250, upholding reading of extracts from Bible in public schools as within contemplation of framers of Constitution; Pingree v. Auditor General, 120 Mich. 104, 44 L. R. A. 685, 78 N. W. 1025, refusing contemporaneous construction of statute relating to taxation, where taxation not uniform.

Statutes and ordinances valid in part.

Cited in Scott v. Flowers, 61 Neb. 623, 85 N. W. 857, upholding that part of statute committing children to industrial school which is not repugnant to Constitution; Morgan v. State, 64 Neb. 370, 90 N. W. 108, holding billiard ordinance valid as to license feature, although imposing small license fee not clearly expressed in title.

When statute takes effect.

Cited in Detroit v. Chapin, 108 Mich. 151, 37 L. R. A. 401, 66 N. W. 587 (dissenting opinion), majority holding act passed previous to last five days of session, and approved after adjournment and within ten days after passage, became law under Constitution.

Power to acquire railways.

Cited in Atty. Gen. ex rel. Barbour v. Pingree, 120 Mich. 571, 46 L. R. A. 417, 79 N. W. 814, declaring void, act permitting city council to appoint railway commission to acquire street railways.

Compensation of state officers.

Cited in Warner v. Auditor General, 129 Mich. 658, 89 N. W. 591, holding act providing additional compensation for certain state officers, acting as board of auditors, unconstitutional.

16 L. R. A. 482, TUFTS v. TUFTS, 8 Utah, 142, 30 Pac. 309.

Effect of repeal of statute on pending actions.

Cited in footnote to Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wells, 58 L. R. A. 651, which sustains statute repealing act allowing penalties, made applicable to pending actions.

16 L. R. A. 485, VINCENNES v. CITIZENS' GASLIGHT & COKE CO. 132 Ind. 114, 31 N. E. 573.

Time contract with city.

Cited in Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L. R. A. 525, 22 C. C. A. 183, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 283, holding twenty-one-year contract by city with water company for use of streets for mains, and for water rentals, reasonable; Michigan City v. Leeds, 24 Ind. App. 273, 55 N. E. 799, sustaining right of city to lease rooms for city offices for period of ten years.

Cited in footnote to Westminster Water Co. v. Westminster, 64 L. R. A. 630, which holds municipal corporation without power to enter into perpetual contract with water company for water supply.

Construction of contracts.

Cited in Gardner v. Caylor, 24 Ind. App. 525, 56 N. E. 134, and Diamond Plate Glass Co. v. Tennell, 22 Ind. App. 138, 52 N. E. 168, holding construction put upon lease by parties to it not binding where no ambiguity; Pikes Peak Power Co. v. Colorado Springs, 44 C. C. A. 343, 105 Fed. 11, and Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L. R. A. 525, 22 C. C. A. 182, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 282, holding city in its proprietary character governed by same rules in its contracts as individual or private corporation; Fidelity & C. Co. v. Teter, 136 Ind. 677, 36 N. E. 283, denying recovery for injury in falling from hay loft under policy insuring against hazard of travel as passenger of common carrier; Rosen- berry v. Fidelity & C. Co. 14 Ind. App. 630, 43 N. E. 317, denying recovery of "indemnity" to representatives of insured dying some time after, but as result of, injury; Ragsdale v. Barnett, 10 Ind. App. 492, 37 N. E. 1109, construing antenuptial contract to give surviving husband life interest in personal property, with remainder to heirs of wife; Kennedy v. Kennedy, 150 Ind. 644, 50 N. E. 756, holding antenuptial agreement may determine rights of wife in land of husband without alluding to her rights under law; Cambria Iron Co. v. Union Trust Co. 154 Ind. 301, 48 L. R. A. 46, 55 N. E. 745, holding that conditions in franchise ordinance relating to paving between tracks of street railway cannot be read as covenants on part of city.

Distinguished in Ralya v. Atkins, 157 Ind. 335, 61 N. E. 726, holding that unambiguous written contract cannot be altered by allegations of different construction put on it by parties.

Power of courts to review discretionary action of board.

Cited in Fidelity Trust & G. Co. v. Fowler Water Co. 113 Fed. 567, holding action of board of trustees in making contracts for water supply of city cannot be reviewed by courts, in absence of fraud or abuse of discretion.

16 L. R. A. 400, CREAMER v. WEST END STREET R. CO. 156 Mass. 320, 32 Am. St. Rep. 456, 31 N. E. 391.

Who are passengers.

Cited in Mitchell v. Rochester R. Co. 4 Misc. 576, 25 N. Y. Supp. 744, holding one about to board car, and injured by fright at approaching car on same line, not passenger; Donovan v. Hartford Street R. Co. 65 Conn. 214, 29 L. R. A. 300, 32 Atl. 350, holding relation of carrier and passenger does not exist where woman was run into on crossing as car was slowing up to take her aboard; Baltimore Traction Co. v. State, 78 Md. 427, 28 Atl. 397, holding one attempting to board rapidly moving street car not a passenger; Bigelow v. West End Street R. Co. 161 Mass. 395, 37 N. E. 367, holding one alighting from car stopped at crossing on her signal, and injured by stepping off into excavation, not passenger; Smith v. City & Suburban R. Co. 29 Or. 546, 46 Pac. 136; Gargan v. West End Street R. Co. 176 Mass. 107, 49 L. R. A. 422, footnote p. 421, 79 Am. St. Rep. 298, 57 N. E. 217; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Walsh, 78 Ill. App. 599,—holding relation of carrier and passenger ceases as soon as passenger alights from car stopped at safe place; Chattanooga Electric R. Co. v. Boddy, 105 Tenn. 670, 51 L. R. A. 886, footnote p. 885, 58 S. W. 646, holding relation of carrier and passenger terminates when passenger steps from car to ground at street crossing.

Distinguished in Augusta R. Co. v. Glover, 92 Ga. 148, 18 S. E. 406, sustaining verdict for death of boy killed while alighting upon parallel track, by another car; Keator v. Scranton Traction Co. 191 Pa. 108, 71 Am. St. Rep. 758, 43 Atl. 86, holding one passing in highway from one street car to another with transfer, a passenger.

Duty of street railway as to safety of passengers.

Cited in Palmer v. Winston-Salem R. & Elec. Co. 131 N. C. 251, 42 S. E. 604, holding street railway not liable for assault by motorman after injured man had ceased to be passenger; Conway v. Lewiston & A. H. R. Co. 87 Me. 287, 32 Atl. 901, holding erroneous, instruction that street railway company must in any event provide safe place for passenger to alight; Finseth v. Suburban R.

Co. 32 Or. 4, 39 L. R. A. 518, 51 Pac. 84, holding that jury should determine whether temporary passageway built by street railway company from walk over submerged street to track was reasonably safe.

Contributory negligence.

Cited in Kelly v. Wakefield & S. Street R. Co. 175 Mass. 333, 56 N. E. 285, holding it contributory negligence to drive onto track without looking for car which might have passed behind impenetrable line of trees; Robbins v. Springfield Street R. Co. 165 Mass. 37, 42 N. E. 334, holding rule of looking and listening before crossing track of street railway not necessarily applicable because electricity is used; Mathes v. Lowell, L. & H. Street R. Co. 177 Mass. 420, 59 N. E. 77, sustaining direction of verdict for defendant where deceased attempted to cross street ahead of street car plainly seen approaching at rapid rate; Everett v. Los Angeles Consol. Electric R. Co. 115 Cal. 125, 34 L. R. A. 356, 43 Pac. 209, denying right of recovery for death of bicyclist riding in street car track, and killed by following car; Laufer v. Bridgeport Traction Co. 68 Conn. 493, 37 L. R. A. 539, 37 Atl. 379, sustaining judgment for injury by street car to man compelled to drive onto one track from another on narrow drawbridge; Sewell v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 171 Mass. 303, 50 N. E. 541, denying right of recovery to boy of thirteen riding headlong, without looking, into passing train at crossing; McGee v. Consolidated Street R. Co. 102 Mich. 115, 26 L. R. A. 304, 47 Am. St. Rep. 507, 60 N. W. 293, denying right of recovery for injury where traveler failed to look before crossing in front of lighted street car; Atlanta Consol. Street R. Co. v. Bates, 103 Ga. 352, 30 S. E. 41, holding it for jury to determine contributory negligence of deaf man struck by car on parallel track while in act of alighting; Ames v. Waterloo & C. F. Rapid Transit Co. 120 Iowa. 643, 95 N. W. 161, holding one killed in crossing track with unobstructed view conclusively presumed negligent; Gleason v. Worcester Consol. Street R. Co. 184 Mass. 291, 68 N. E. 225, holding affirmative proof that one killed by stepping in front of car used due care, requisite to recovery.

Cited in note (38 L. R. A. 787) on negligence in getting on or off moving street car.

16 L. R. A. 492, FRORER v. PEOPLE. 141 Ill. 171, 31 N. E. 395.

Police power and right of contract.

Cited in Bailey v. People, 190 Ill. 33, 54 L. R. A. 840, 83 Am. St. Rep. 116, 60 N. E. 98, holding privilege to contract for right to use property is a liberty and property right; State ex rel. Zillmer v. Kreutzberg, 114 Wis. 543, 58 L. R. A. 754, 91 Am. St. Rep. 934, 90 N. W. 1098, declaring statute invalid which forbids employer to discharge employee because member of labor organization; Adams v. Brennan, 177 Ill. 200, 42 L. R. A. 720, 69 Am. St. Rep. 222, 52 N. E. 314, holding invalid, attempted contract for employment of union workmen only by public school board, entered into under agreement with trades union; Com. v. Vrooman, 164 Pa. 309, 35 W. N. C. 98, 44 Am. St. Rep. 603, 30 Atl. 217, Reversing 15 Pa. Co. Ct. 95, 3 Pa. Dist. R. 342, declaring valid, act prohibiting issue of policies for fire and lightning insurance except by corporations; Ruhstrat v. People, 185 Ill. 140, 49 L. R. A. 183, 76 Am. St. Rep. 30, 57 N. E. 41, holding invalid, act prohibiting use of national flag for advertising purposes; People ex rel. Mellhany v. Chicago Live Stock Exchange, 170 Ill. 567, 39 L. R. A. 376, 62 Am. St. Rep. 104, 48 N. E. 1062, holding invalid, by-law of commercial Exchange attempting to restrict employment of solicitors, as restriction on freedom of trade and business; Chicago v. Netcher, 183 Ill. 110, 48 L. R. A. 264, 75 Am. St. Rep. 93, 55 N. E. 707, holding ordinances prohibiting sale of certain foodstuffs by department stores not regulation of sale as health measure; State v. Dalton, 22 R. I. 86, 48 L. R. A. 780, 84 Am. St. Rep. 818, 46 Atl. 234, refusing to sustain act prohibiting giving of trading stamps as under police power; Eden v. People, 161 Ill. 303, 32 L. R. A. 662, 52 Am. St. Rep. 365, 43 N. E. 1108, holding act to close barber shops on Sunday not within police power; Booth v. People, 186 Ill. 48, 50 L. R. A. 763, 78 Am. St. Rep. 229, 57 N. E. 798, upholding statute against gambling options, although it includes kinds of property not before subject to options; Swigart v. People, 50 Ill. App. 187, holding section of criminal act prohibiting gaming within 2 miles of certain fairs not repealed by act to prohibit bookmaking and pool-selling; State v. Smiley, 65 Kan. 284, 69 Pac. 199, holding "anti-trust" laws valid.

Distinguished in Meadowcroft v. People, 163 Ill. 63, 35 L. R. A. 179, 54 Am. St. Rep. 447, 45 N. E. 303, sustaining conviction under act forbidding taking of deposits by insolvent bank; State v. Nelson, 52 Ohio St. 103, 26 L. R. A. 320, 39 N. E. 22, upholding act requiring owners and operators of street cars to provide for well-being of employees.

— As to hours.

Cited in Low v. Rees Printing Co. 41 Neb. 141, 24 L. R. A. 708, 43 Am. St. Rep. 670, 59 N. W. 362, declaring unconstitutional, sections of act limiting hours of work except of farm and domestic laborers; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 104, 29 L. R. A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454, declaring void, section of act providing that women shall work only eight hours a day; State v. Holden, 14 Utah, 93, 37 L. R. A. 107, 46 Pac. 756, holding valid, act limiting hours of laborers in underground mines; Re Morgan, 26 Colo. 443, 47 L. R. A. 64, 77 Am. St. Rep. 269, 58 Pac. 1071, holding act limiting working hours in underground mines invalid.

— As to wages.

Cited in Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 71, 22 L. R. A. 341, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 35 N. E. 62, holding invalid, act which requires monthly payment of wages by certain kinds of corporations; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 319, 21 L. R. A. 805, 22 S. W. 350, and State v. Haun, 61 Kan. 158, 47 L. R. A. 374, 59 Pac. 340, holding invalid, act requiring payment to laborers in money only; State v. Peel Splint Coal Co. 36 W. Va. 851, 17 L. R. A. 401, 15 S. E. 1000 (dissenting opinions), majority sustaining acts providing for payment of wages in money only, and requiring payment for mining coal before screening; Com. v. Brown, 8 Pa. Super. Ct. 355, 43 W. N. C. 75, holding invalid, act making it unlawful for owners and operators of mines to screen coal before weighing and crediting amount to miner; Ramsey v. People, 142 Ill. 384, 17 L. R. A. 854, 32 N. E. 364, and Re House Bill No. 203, 21 Colo. 28, 39 Pac. 431, declaring invalid, act compelling payment at pit mouth for all coal unscreened; Harding v. People, 160 Ill. 404, 32 L. R. A. 447, 52 Am. St. Rep. 344, 43 N. E. 624, holding unconstitutional, act requiring weighing of coal before screening, where coal is to be shipped by rail or water; People ex rel. Rodgers v. Coler, 166 N. Y. 19, 52 L. R. A. 822, 82 Am. St. Rep. 605, 59 N. E. 716, holding void, act fixing compensation city must pay for labor or other services; Leep v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 58 Ark. 420, 23 L. R. A. 269, 41 Am. St. Rep. 109, 25 S. W. 75.

holding act requiring payment of wages due employee upon discharge, and providing, as penalty for default, for continuance of wages until paid, unconstitutional as to private persons, but valid as to corporations; Luman v. Hitchens Bros. Co. 90 Md. 26, 46 L. R. A. 396, 44 Atl. 1051, holding invalid, act prohibiting mining and railroad corporations from selling goods and merchandise to their employees; Whitebreast Fuel Co. v. People, 175 Ill. 54, 51 N. E. 853, holding that provisions of act for payment of coal miners "at such prices as may be agreed upon by respective parties" do not apply to contract for payment on different basis than specified in act; Leischke v. Miller, 100 Ill. App. 141, holding act requiring all claims in suit before justice to be brought forward by each party, or be barred, not applicable to suit for wages; Mallin v. Wenham, 209 Ill. 256, 65 L. R. A. 605, 101 Am. St. Rep. 233, 70 N. E. 564, and Brewer v. Griesheimer, 104 Ill. App. 331, holding assignment by workman of unearned wages not contrary to public policy; Dixon v. Poe, 159 Ind. 497, 60 L. R. A. 310, 95 Am. St. Rep. 309, 65 N. E. 518, holding act prohibiting payment of miners in trade checks unconstitutional; Kellyville Coal Co. v. Harrier, 207 Ill. 627, 99 Am. St. Rep. 240, 69 N. E. 927, holding unconstitutional, act prohibiting employers from setting off debts against claims for wages.

Cited in note (28 L. R. A. 274) on validity and effect of statutes requiring wages to be paid in lawful money.

Discrimination.

Cited in Bailey v. People, 190 Ill. 33, 54 L. R. A. 840, 83 Am. St. Rep. 116, 60 N. E. 98, holding invalid, provisions in act restricting number of persons sleeping in same room of lodging house, because aimed at lodging houses only; Johnson v. Goodyear Min. Co. 127 Cal. 15, 47 L. R. A. 343, 78 Am. St. Rep. 17, 59 Pac. 304, holding invalid, act giving preference to liens of laborers for corporation over all other liens; Waters v. Wolf, 162 Pa. 168, 42 Am. St. Rep. 815, 29 Atl. 646, which holds invalid, act giving lien for work and material contracted for by subcontractor, notwithstanding agreement between owner and contractor; Palmer v. Tingle, 55 Ohio St. 445, 45 N. E. 313, holding invalid, mechanic's lien act giving lien for labor and materials under contract with contractor; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 164, 41 L. ed. 671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, holding invalid, act giving attorney's fees in successful suits against railroad companies.

Distinguished in Vogel v. Pekoc, 157 Ill. 344, 30 L. R. A. 494, 42 N. E. 386, declaring valid, act providing for attorney's fee in successful suits by workmen for wages.

16 L. R. A. 497, LOKER v. GERALD, 157 Mass. 42, 34 Am. St. Rep. 252, 31 N. E. 709.

Jurisdiction.

Cited in Chase v. Henry, 166 Mass. 581, 55 Am. St. Rep. 423, 44 N. E. 983 (dissenting opinion), majority holding discharge in insolvency no bar to action on debt due partnership, one member of which never resided in state where discharge granted.

— Of action for divorce.

Cited in footnotes to Miller v. Miller, 24 L. R. A. 137, which holds requirement of two years' residence to give jurisdiction of suit for divorce not applicable to suit for alimony; Kempson v. Kempson, 58 L. R. A. 484, which sustains jurisdiction in state where parties married and wife resides, of suit to enjoin fraudulent divorce suit by husband in other state.

Cited in notes (59 L. R. A. 164) on conflict of laws on subject of divorce; (19 L. R. A. 815) on validity of decree of divorce obtained on publication or service out of state, where defendant did not appear; (19 L. R. A. 518) on validity of divorce decree granted by court of foreign country.

Distinguished in Dickinson v. Dickinson, 167 Mass. 476, 45 N. E. 1091, sustaining divorce by woman from husband who went to another state, obtained divorce, and returned to state to reside.

Criticized in Hekking v. Pfaff, 82 Fed. 405, holding subsequent marriage of one divorced by court of another state having no jurisdiction over him does not operate in any way to prevent his denying jurisdiction of suit to award alimony.

Domicil of married woman.

Cited in footnotes to Re Wickes, 49 L. R. A. 138, which denies right of woman placing husband in home for incurables, to acquire separate domicil; Atherton v. Atherton, 40 L. R. A. 291, which holds matrimonial domicil of wife leaving husband for cruelty may be changed by removal to other state.

16 L. R. A. 500, DELAFOILE v. STATE, 54 N. J. L. 381, 24 Atl. 557.

Right of arrest.

Cited in Com. v. Krubeck, 8 Pa. Dist. R. 523, 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 38, 5 Lack. Legal News, 345, holding that peace officer cannot enter private inclosure and arrest person making noise, unless affray occurring or imminent.

Cited in footnotes to Cabell v. Arnold, 22 L. R. A. 87, which holds deputy marshal not justified in making arrest on warrant in marshal's hands; State v. Lewis, 19 L. R. A. 449, which denies officer's right to arrest for breach of peace not committed in his presence.

Cited in note (51 L. R. A. 216) on liability of officer for making arrest.

16 L. R. A. 505, SHELBYVILLE WATER CO. v. PEOPLE, 140 Ill. 545, 30 N. E. 678.

Waterworks as personal property.

Cited in Smith v. Chicago, 107 Ill. App. 278, holding that private system of waterworks in dedicated streets did not pass to city upon annexation of territory containing same.

When and where property taxable.

Cited in Knopf v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co. 197 Ill. 214, 64 N. E. 340, holding elevated railroads are railroads for purposes of taxation, to be assessed by state board and not locally.

Cited in footnotes to Paris v. Norway Water Co. 21 L. R. A. 525, which holds water mains, pipes, etc., taxable where located; Fond du Lac Water Co. v. Fond du Lac, 16 L. R. A. 581, which holds assessment of pumping station and works, apart from water mains, franchises, and other property constituting water plant, erroneous.

Cited in note (60 L. R. A. 855) on taxation of municipal waterworks.

Presumption of performance of public duty.

Cited in Cairo, V. & C. R. Co. v. Mathews 152 Ill. 155, 38 N. E. 623, holding presumption that collector attempted to collect tax out of personal property not rebutted by testimony of deputy that he made no effort to so collect; Adams v. Osgood, 60 Neb. 782, 84 N. W. 257, assuming that board of equalization did its duty in holding sessions in years when taxes complained of were laid.

Distinguished in Mt. Carmel Light & Water Co. v. People, 166 Ill. 202, 46 N. E. 722, holding that personal property tax cannot be charged to real estate when it is admitted by collector that he made no attempt to collect it from personal property.

Amendment of record.

Cited in Hoover v. People, 171 Ill. 187, 49 N. E. 367, holding that copy of ordinance authorizing improvement can be filed by order of court before hearing, as amendment to report of clerk.

16 L. R. A. 507, EIDAM v. FINNEGAN, 48 Minn. 53, 50 N. W. 933.

Stipulations, admissions, and waivers in actions.

Cited in Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Pavay, 57 Kan. 529, 46 Pac. 969, holding client bound by stipulations of attorney continuing case, and providing for conclusiveness of judgment in certain events; Stone v. Bank of Commerce, 174 U. S. 422, 43 L. ed. 1032, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, Reversing 88 Fed. 405, denying authority of attorney to bind party until he has been retained as such in action begun; Grand Lodge, I. O. of F. S. of I. v. Ohnstein, 110 Ill. App. 329, holding promise of attorney to one claimant to pay claim upon discontinuance of suit, if other claimant successful, binding on client; Brown v. Arnold, 127 Fed. 392, holding attorney employed to defend action, without power, after judgment and termination of term of court, to bind client by stipulation.

Cited in note (32 L. R. A. 678, 679) on admissions and waivers of fiduciaries in actions.

16 L. R. A. 510, MINOT v. RUSS, 156 Mass. 458, 32 Am. St. Rep. 472, 31 N. E. 489.

Liability of drawer of check.

Followed without discussion in Randolph Nat. Bank v. Hornblower, 160 Mass. 402, 35 N. E. 850.

Cited in Oyster & Fish Co. v. National Lafayette Bank, 51 Ohio St. 113, 46 Am. St. Rep. 560, 36 N. E. 833, holding drawer of check having it certified liable to payee on failure of drawee before presentment.

16 L. R. A. 512, SIZER v. QUINLAN, 82 Wis. 390, 33 Am. St. Rep. 55, 52 N. W. 590.

Right of owner of soil subject to way.

Cited in Dyer v. Walker, 99 Wis. 408, 75 N. W. 79, and Wille v. Bartz, 88 Wis. 428, 60 N. W. 789, holding that owner of land may maintain gate across right of way over it if it does not unreasonably interfere with way; Boyd v. Bloom, 152 Ind. 154, 52 N. E. 751, holding that grant of "free and undisturbed right to use" way does not prevent maintenance of gates across it, not interfering with use.

16 L. R. A. 514, KELLY v. LYNCHBURG & D. R. CO. 110 N. C. 431, 15 S. E. 200.

16 L. R. A. 516, MUTUAL ACCI. ASSO. v. JACOBS, 141 Ill. 261, 33 Am. St. Rep. 302, 31 N. E. 414.

Trust funds and bank deposits.

Cited in Whitbeck v. Ramsay, 74 Ill. App. 544, holding that sureties of state treasurer cannot recover from administrator of his estate money withdrawn by him and mingled with funds of estate, until they identify it as special deposit; Woodhouse v. Crandall, 197 Ill. 110, 58 L. R. A. 387, footnote p. 385, 64 N. E. 292, Reversing 99 Ill. App. 555, holding that special deposit in trust need not be identified specifically, if the money is in the bank, though mingled with other funds; Lang v. Metzger, 101 Ill. App. 387, holding that owner of misapplied trust fund, to make it charge on real estate taken by executor, must show that the money was invested in the property; Weir v. Mowe, 81 Ill. App. 297, holding that fund deposited in bank and used indiscriminately by banker cannot be said to be represented by overdrafts; Seiter v. Mowe, 182 Ill. 356, 55 N. E. 526, Affirming 81 Ill. App. 353, holding that money of cestui qui trust cannot be followed into hands of assignee of insolvent trustee, who has mingled it with own funds; Kneisley v. Weir, 81 Ill. App. 257, holding owner of trust fund mingled with other funds in bank not preferred over other creditors of general fund; Moninger v. Security Title & T. Co. 90 Ill. App. 249, holding that trust fund mingled with general funds has lost its identity as specific trust fund; Lanterman v. Travous, 174 Ill. 464, 51 N. E. 805, Affirming 73 Ill. App. 678, holding that insolvency of depositing bank, known to it, does not make depositor whose funds are mingled with other depositors a preferred creditor; Bayor v. American Trust & Sav. Bank, 157 Ill. 69, 41 N. E. 622, holding that mere promise by banker, unfulfilled, to keep deposit in separate package, does not make it special deposit; Clemmer v. Drovers' Nat. Bank, 157 Ill. 215, 41 N. E. 728, Reversing 57 Ill. App. 110, holding that bank decreed to be trustee of deposit in action in which it invoked equitable jurisdiction cannot deny that jurisdiction in action to have fund distributed; Geuder & P. Mfg. Co. v. American Trust & Sav. Bank, 51 Ill. App. 350, holding drawer of check payable to its order and indorsed for deposit with banker's firm to credit of drawer is entitled to its return on insolvency of depositor; Bayor v. Schaffner, 51 Ill. App. 185, holding that deposit of money mingled with funds of bank passes to assignee of bank notwithstanding certificate of deposit.

Cited in footnotes to Beal v. Somerville, 17 L. R. A. 291, which holds no title to check passes by depositing for collection; Merchants Nat. Bank v. Guilmartin, 17 L. R. A. 322, which holds special deposit accepted for depositor's accommodation, gratuitous; State ex rel. First Nat. Bank v. Bartley, 23 L. R. A. 67, which holds as loan, money deposited on open account subject to check; Heironimus v. Sweeney, 33 L. R. A. 99, which requires repayment of special deposit with savings institution before regular depositors are entitled to dividend; Leaphart v. Commercial Bank, 33 L. R. A. 700, which holds money deposited in bank by one described as "manager" subject to check; Allibone v. Ames, 33 L. R. A. 585, which holds deposit of public money by county treasurer in bank designated as depository not unlawful loan; Muhlenberg v. Northwest Loan & T. Co. 29 L. R. A. 667, which denies equitable lien of special depositor on funds of bank in hands of receiver; Kimmel v. Dickson, 25 L. R. A. 309, which holds trust fund constituted by deposit in bank for payment to specific person on presentation of deed; Anderson v. Pacific Bank, 32 L. R. A. 479, which holds deposit of gold coin in pledge, to secure obligation on bail bond, special.

Distinguished in Anderson v. Pacific Bank, 112 Cal. 602, 32 L. R. A. 480, 53 Am. St. Rep. 228, 44 Pac. 1063, holding that money deposited with bank to secure it from loss for furnishing bail is special deposit which bank cannot mingle with common funds without consent of depositor.

16 L. R. A. 519, FISHER v. OREGON SHORT LINE & U. N. R. CO. 22 Or. 533, 30 Pac. 425.

Expert testimony.

Cited in First Nat. Bank v. Fire Asso. 33 Or. 181, 53 Pac. 8, holding expert testimony employed where question of science, art, or trade involved, and witness possesses especial skill or knowledge therein; Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Woodell, 38 Or. 299, 61 Pac. 837, holding opinion evidence admissible on cultivation of sugar beets where preliminary examination disclosed witness had cultivated them one year and observed growth another.

Who are fellow servants.

Cited in Wellston Coal Co. v. Smith, 65 Ohio St. 77, 55 L. R. A. 102, 87 Am. St. Rep. 547, 61 N. E. 143, holding that mine boss cannot delegate his duties to miner so that latter in that capacity is fellow servant of other miners; Brunell v. Southern P. Co. 34 Or. 265, 56 Pac. 129, holding section hands, men operating hand car, and overseer of surfacing gang of railroad, fellow servants; Mast v. Kern, 34 Or. 251, 75 Am. St. Rep. 580, 54 Pac. 950, holding superintendent and manager of quarry fellow servant of workman with whom he is engaged in blasting.

Cited in footnotes to Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Andrews, 17 L. R. A. 190, which holds conductor and engineer fellow servants of brakeman on other train; Palmer v. Michigan C. R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 637, which holds assistant roadmaster not fellow servant of gang of men working under him; Clarke v. Pennsylvania Co. 17 L. R. A. 811, which holds section boss of one gang and member of another gang fellow servants.

Cited in note (18 L. R. A. 794) on what constitutes common employment.

Bills of exceptions.

Cited in Beeman v. Hamlin, 23 Or. 319, 31 Pac. 707, declaring bill of exceptions should not contain whole proceedings on trial in extenso.

Master's liability to servant.

Cited in notes (54 L. R. A. 103) on vice principalship as determined with reference to character of act which caused injury; (17 L. R. A. 607) on reliance upon orders as affecting contributory negligence of employee; (41 L. R. A. 45) on knowledge as element of employer's liability to injured servant.

16 L. R. A. 526, GILKERSON-SLOSS COMMISSION CO. v. SALINGER, 56 Ark. 294, 35 Am. St. Rep. 105, 19 S. W. 747.

Husband's liability for antenuptial debts of wife.

Cited in Kies v. Young, 64 Ark. 385, 62 Am. St. Rep. 198, 42 S. W. 669, holding married man liable for antenuptial debts of wife, where married woman's act did not expressly relieve him.

Husband and wife as copartners.

Cited in Haggett v. Hurley, 91 Me. 557, 41 L. R. A. 367, footnote p. 362, 40 Atl. 561, holding that married woman cannot enter into partnership with husband so as to subject her separate estate to partnership debts; Hoaglin v. Henderson, 119 Iowa, 725, 61 L. R. A. 758, footnote p. 756, 97 Am. St. Rep. 335, 94 N. W. 247, sustaining wife's right to enter into partnership agreement with husband.

Cited in footnotes to Seattle Board of Trade v. Hayden, 16 L. R. A. 530, which holds partnership between husband and wife not authorized; Fuller & F. Co. v. McHenry, 18 L. R. A. 512, which denies wife's right to become husband's partner.

16 L. R. A. 530, SEATTLE BD. OF TRADE v. HAYDEN, 4 Wash. 263, 31 Am. St. Rep. 919, 30 Pac. 87, 32 Pac. 224.

Partnership contracts between husband and wife.

Cited in Haggett v. Hurley, 91 Me. 558, 41 L. R. A. 367, 40 Atl. 561, holding that married woman cannot become partner of husband so as to subject her separate property to partnership debts.

Cited in footnote to Fuller & F. Co. v. McHenry, 18 L. R. A. 512, which denies wife's right to become husband's partner.

Cited in note (16 L. R. A. 527) on partnership between husband and wife in business.

Disapproved in Hoaglin v. Henderson, 119 Iowa, 728, 61 L. R. A. 759, 97 Am. St. Rep. 335, 94 N. W. 247, sustaining wife's right to enter into partnership agreement with husband.

16 L. R. A. 538, SMITH'S APPEAL, 61 Conn. 420, 24 Atl. 273.

Disqualification of executor.

Cited in Kidd v. Bates, 120 Ala. 85, 41 L. R. A. 155, 74 Am. St. Rep. 17, 23 So. 735, holding disabilities mentioned in statute the only ones which authorize refusal of issue of letters testamentary to executor named in will; Terry's Appeal, 67 Conn. 184, 34 Atl. 1032, holding that executor, capable of service, accepting trust and qualifying, should have sole administration of estate; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Smith, 74 Conn. 627, 51 Atl. 609, denying right of foreign trust company to act as executor; Saxe v. Saxe, 119 Wis. 561, 97 N. W. 187, holding that letters testamentary must be issued to executor named in will, if legally competent.

Cited in footnote to Kidd v. Bates, 41 L. R. A. 154, which holds that disputed indebtedness to estate does not disqualify one as executor.

16 L. R. A. 542, ROSS v. MORROW, 85 Tex. 172, 19 S. W. 1090.

Innocent purchasers.

Cited in New York & T. Land Co. v. Hyland, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 609, 28 S. W. 206, holding that innocent purchaser from part of heirs to exclusion of others must show both ignorance of, and diligence to ascertain, their existence.

Computation of time.

Cited in Linhart v. State, 33 Tex. Crim. Rep. 508, 27 S. W. 260, holding boy thirteen years old on day before thirteenth anniversary of birth.

Cited in footnote to Montoya de Antonio v. Miller, 21 L. R. A. 699, which holds that marriage does not make girl of legal age.

Cited in note (49 L. R. A. 215) on rule as to first and last days in computation of time.

16 L. R. A. 545, SOUTHWESTERN TELEG. & TELEPH. CO. v. ROBINSON, 1 C. C. A. 684, 2 U. S. App. 205, 50 Fed. 810.

Proximate cause of injury.

Cited in Ahern v. Oregon Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 24 Or. 293, 22 L. R. A. 640, footnote p. 635, 33 Pac. 403, holding negligence in leaving telephone wire where it is touched by traveler on sidewalk, proximate cause of injury.

Concurrent causes.

Cited in Selleck v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 93 Mich. 379, 18 L. R. A. 157, 53 N. W. 556, holding smoke and steam enveloping train concurrent causes, leaving it for jury to determine whether horses were frightened by train so enveloped.

Liability for negligence in employment of dangerous agencies.

Cited in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. State, 82 Md. 312, 31 L. R. A. 576, 51 Am. St. Rep. 464, 33 Atl. 763, holding telegraph company prima facie liable for injury from contact with broken wire hanging across feed wire of electric railway.

Cited in footnotes to Haynes v. Raleigh Gas Co. 26 L. R. A. 810, which holds negligence shown by guy wire charged with deadly current hanging to ground from tree; Illingsworth v. Boston Electric Light Co. 25 L. R. A. 552, which holds reasonable care to keep electric wires safe, due towards persons licensed to approach them; Knottnerus v. North Park Street R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 726, which holds roller coaster not dangerous agency making owner of pleasure resort where used liable for coaster owner's negligence; Jackson v. Wisconsin Teleph. Co. 26 L. R. A. 101, which holds connection of barn with flag-staff on other building by telephone wire renders company liable for loss of barn by lightning striking flag-staff; Burt v. Douglas County Street R. Co. 18 L. R. A. 479, which holds company liable for electric shock of passenger due to imperfect insulation; Koelsch v. Philadelphia Co. 18 L. R. A. 759, which requires system of inspection by gas company which will insure reasonable promptness in detecting leaks; Rutland Electric Light Co. v. Marble City Electric Light Co. 20 L. R. A. 821, which holds electric light company entitled to injunction against erection of wires carrying dangerous current.

Cited in note (31 L. R. A. 588) on liability for injuries by electric wire in highways.

16 L. R. A. 547, FLACK v. GOSNELL, 76 Md. 88, 35 Am. St. Rep. 413, 24 Atl. 414.

Liability of cotenant to account for rent and profits.

Cited in note (28 L. R. A. 841. 849) on liability of cotenant to account for use and occupation, and rent and profits.

Distribution of estate.

Distinguished in Gosnell v. Flack, 76 Md. 427, 18 L. R. A. 160, 25 Atl. 411, holding that distributee of estate, who is also debtor, cannot receive his share without payment of debt.

16 L. R. A. 550, STATE v. MURPHY, 17 R. I. 698, 24 Atl. 473.

Duplicity in indictment.

Cited in State v. Fidler, 148 Ind. 222, 47 N. E. 464, holding charging several things conjunctively in single count which, disjunctively, make a crime, not duplicity.

16 L. R. A. 554, GATES v. PENNSYLVANIA R. CO. 150 Pa. 50, 24 Atl. 638.

Report of second appeal in 154 Pa. 571, 32 W. N. C. 334, 26 Atl. 598.

Liability due to defective bridge.

Cited in Smith v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 201 Pa. 134, 50 Atl. 829, holding railroad not liable for death by negligent construction of bridge by railroad, which occurred long after acceptance of bridge by borough; Wetherbee v. Michigan C. R. Co. 122 Mich. 4, 80 N. W. 787, holding railroad company not liable for injury due to defective planking in bridge erected by it over tracks, under agreement with city, after bridge passed under control of city; Francis v. Franklin Twp. 179 Pa. 201, 36 Atl. 202, holding duty to repair bridge to have been transferred from township to county, and county liable for unsafe condition.

Joint liability.

Cited in Aiken v. Philadelphia, 9 Pa. Super. Ct. 506, 43 W. N. C. 503, holding that injured party can bring action against city for injury in driving into unguarded ditch, if city ultimately liable; Fowler v. Jersey Shore, 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 373, holding injured party can elect which of two, jointly liable, he will proceed against; Rahenkamp v. United Traction Co. 14 Pa. Super. Ct. 640, holding that one of two street railways jointly and severally liable cannot defend by alleging that suit can be brought against other, who can settle with it; Dutton v. Lansdowne, 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 210, 44 W. N. C. 293, 7 Del. Co. Rep. 402, holding that parties jointly and severally liable for negligence may be joined in same action; Com. v. Philadelphia, H. & P. R. Co. 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 210, holding ordinance requiring railroad company to keep watchman at crossing in open country unreasonable.

16 L. R. A. 557, HART v. COLE, 156 Mass. 475, 31 N. E. 644.

Liability for injury to trespassers or licensees.

Cited in Coupe v. Platt, 172 Mass. 459, 70 Am. St. Rep. 293, 52 N. E. 526, sustaining recovery against owner for personal injuries to visitor of tenant calling on latter's invitation; Blackstone v. Chelmsford Foundry Co. 170 Mass. 322, 49 N. E. 635, holding employee of owner, injured on uncompleted staircase of house which contractor has not turned over, mere licensee; Ganley v. Hall, 158 Mass. 514, 47 N. E. 416, denying right of recovery to mere licensees for damages for slipping on ice formed by water which dripped from defective gutters of tenement; Barman v. Spencer (Ind.) 44 L. R. A. 818, 49 N. E. 9, holding that guest at private residence has right of action against owner, where he fell into unguarded well at night on way to privy; Wilcox v. Zane, 167 Mass. 306, 45 N. E. 923, holding owner of building liable for injury to servant of tenant, due to breaking of rotten board on roof used in common by tenants as drying ground; Cumberland Teleg. & Teleph. Co. v. Martin, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 789, 63 L. R. A. 470, 76 S. W. 394, holding telephone company not liable for death of pedestrian killed by lightning conducted under store porch by uninsulated wire.

Cited in footnotes to Baddeley v. Shea, 33 L. R. A. 747, which denies liability for injury to man refusing assistance in carrying trunk, by breaking of platform in apparently good condition; Benson v. Baltimore Traction Co. 20 L. R. A. 714, which denies recovery to student falling into uncovered vat while class inspecting power house under permission; Fellows v. Gilhuber, 17 L. R. A. 578, which holds lessor of hotel not liable for injury to guest by defective awning; Sterger v. Van Siclen, 16 L. R. A. 640, which holds property owner not required to have stairways safe as to person on premises in search of child; McGinley v. Alliance Trust Co. 56 L. R. A. 334, which holds lessor of apartment house retaining control of stairways liable for injury to tenants from lack of repair of stair railing; Ryerson v. Bathgate, 57 L. R. A. 308, which denies liability of owner for injury to one using premises for purpose not authorized by invitation.

Cited in note (23 L. R. A. 157) on landlord's liability as to condition of part of premises not controlled by tenant.

Distinguished in Parsons v. Manser, 119 Iowa, 93, 62 L. R. A. 135, 97 Am. St. Rep. 283, 93 N. W. 86, holding owner of bees liable for injuries resulting from attack upon horses standing in road.

16 L. R. A. 558, YOUNGER v. JUDAH, 111 Mo. 303, 33 Am. St. Rep. 527, 19 S. W. 1109.

Violation of civil rights act.

Cited in Chilton v. St. Louis & I. M. R. Co. 114 Mo. 92, 19 L. R. A. 271, 21 S. W. 457, holding regulation of railroad forbidding negroes to ride in same cars with whites reasonable, where safe and commodious cars for them are provided.

Cited in footnote to Cecil v. Green, 32 L. R. A. 566, which holds drug store where soda water is sold not place of accommodation and amusement within civil rights act.

16 L. R. A. 561, SOUTHARD v. CURLEY, 134 N. Y. 148, 30 Am. St. Rep. 642, 31 N. E. 330.

Reformation of contract.

Cited in Weed v. Whitehead, 1 App. Div. 195, 37 N. Y. Supp. 178; Santa Clara Female Academy v. Delaware Ins. Co. 93 Wis. 67, 66 N. W. 1140; Koen v. Kerns, 47 W. Va. 580, 35 S. E. 902; Johnstown Min. Co. v. Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co. 60 App. Div. 347, 70 N. Y. Supp. 257; Simpkins v. Taylor, 81 Hun, 468, 31 N. Y. Supp. 169; Christopher & T. Street R. Co. v. Twenty-third Street R. Co. 149 N. Y. 58, 43 N. E. 538. Affirming 78 Hun, 467, 29 N. Y. Supp. 233; Dougherty v. Lion F. Ins. Co. 41 Misc. 287, 84 N. Y. Supp. 10; McGuigan v. Gaines, 71 Ark. 617, 77 S. W. 52,—declaring evidence required to reform written contract on ground of mistake must be of "most substantial and convincing character;" Kelley v. Root, 74 App. Div. 505, 77 N. Y. Supp. 431 (dissenting opinion), majority holding right to have contract of sale of stock reformed not shown, although it does not embody entire contract; Jamaica Sav. Bank v. Taylor, 72 App. Div. 568, 76 N. Y. Supp. 790, holding that right to reform land contract for mutual mistake in description does not require more than satisfactory preponderance of evidence; Burt v. Quackenbush, 72 App. Div. 549, 75 N. Y. Supp. 1031, refusing to reform condition of agreement to procure "building loan or other loan," where evidence does not disclose mutual mistake; Darmour v.

Chapman, 2 App. Div. 115, 37 N. Y. Supp. 674, permitting reformation for mutual mistake of bond which should have contained certain condition as provided by declaration of trust; Webb v. Morrison, 92 Hun, 605, 37 N. Y. Supp. 449, reforming and enforcing contract for purchase of land; Cortland Howe Ventilating Stove Co. v. Howe, 92 Hun, 117, 36 N. Y. Supp. 701, reforming contract where evidence disclosed fact that instrument did not contain actual agreement; Stern v. Ladew, 47 App. Div. 340, 62 N. Y. Supp. 267, holding that mutual mistake as to price of hides in contract must be established by party asserting it; Greene v. Smith, 13 App. Div. 465, 43 N. Y. Supp. 610, refusing to reform contract inserting important provisions, on contradictory evidence of parties to it, when it has existed twenty years unchallenged; Doane v. Dunham, 64 Neb. 136, 89 N. W. 640, holding parol evidence of resulting trust, upon conveyance of land by husband to wife, must be clear and convincing.

Evidence required to establish gift causa mortis.

Cited in Reynolds v. Reynolds, 20 Misc. 257, 45 N. Y. Supp. 338, which holds gift causa mortis may be established by fair preponderance of evidence; Gibbs v. Carnahan, 4 Misc. 567, 25 N. Y. Supp. 786, holding that gift causa mortis does not require to be proved by "clearest, strongest, and most unequivocal evidence;" Cook v. Dowling, 6 Misc. 273, 26 N. Y. Supp. 764, which holds burden of proof to establish right of possession of bonds is on executor of decedent, where it is claimed they had been given to the one in possession of them.

16 L. R. A. 564, GAY v. BRIERFIELD COAL & I. CO. 94 Ala. 303, 33 Am. St. Rep. 122, 11 So. 353.

Right of widow under foreclosure.

Cited in McDough v. Sweetser, 97 Ala. 364, 19 L. R. A. 471, 12 So. 162, holding that widow who has not been made party to foreclosure proceedings has same rights as she would have had before proceedings begun.

Actions pending in courts of concurrent jurisdiction.

Cited in Rodgers v. Pitt, 96 Fed. 677, holding that state and Federal courts do not belong to same system, in so far as jurisdiction is concurrent; Craig v. Hoge, 95 Va. 280, 28 S. E. 317, and Troy Fertilizer Co. v. Prestwood, 116 Ala. 123, 22 So. 262, holding that court will not attempt to interfere with proceedings first instituted in another court of concurrent jurisdiction; Southern Granite Co. v. Wadsworth, 115 Ala. 575, 22 So. 157, refusing to entertain jurisdiction of action against receiver appointed by Federal court; Gardner v. Caldwell, 16 Mont. 233, 40 Pac. 590, holding that judgment creditor has no right to levy execution on property of debtor in custody of receiver in another judicial district; Turrentine v. Blackwood, 125 Ala. 441, 82 Am. St. Rep. 254, 28 So. 95, holding that state court will not interfere with bankrupt's property when Federal court has acquired jurisdiction; Gay v. Briersfield Coal & I. Co. 106 Ala. 620, 17 So. 618, holding that creditors can reach all of debtor's property in hands of alleged fraudulent purchasers, when latter shall have ceased to hold it under claim bond executed in another court; Williams v. Dismukes, 106 Ala. 409, 17 So. 620, holding that property in custody of law under process of one court cannot be seized under process of another court of co-ordinate jurisdiction; George v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 101 Ala. 623, 14 So. 752, holding that court of equity has jurisdiction to enjoin use of stock of one railroad by another, though that rail road is in hands of receiver appointed by another court; Rodgers v. Pitt, 96 Fed. 670, upholding jurisdiction of Federal court where state court had not exclusive possession of property, and no process against property had been issued, or receiver appointed, or injunction granted.

Distinguished in Leigh v. Green, 62 Neb. 354, 89 Am. St. Rep. 751, 86 N. W. 1093, holding that tax lien foreclosure may be prosecuted to sale of land, notwithstanding pending action in Federal court wherein lands have been levied upon under attachment; Parsons v. Snider, 42 W. Va. 520, 26 S. E. 285, holding that giving notice by trustee of sale of property in trust deed does not prevent court's taking possession, to administer for benefit of lienors.

Judgment on appeal.

Cited in Ft. Payne Furnace Co. v. Ft. Payne Coal & I. Co. 96 Ala. 476, 38 Am. St. Rep. 109, 11 So. 439, refusing to dismiss bill when it is not clear whether facts authorize amendment of bill to give it equity.

Creditors' actions.

Cited in Alabama Iron & Steel Co. v. McKeever, 112 Ala. 143, 20 So. 84, holding that simple contract creditor may file bill to reach assets of insolvent debtor fraudulently conveyed, or in respect to which suit has been brought to hinder and delay creditors; First Nat. Bank v. Pullen, 120 Ala. 642, 29 So. 685, holding that stranger to collusive judgment may attack it collaterally when it imperils his rights in subject-matter.

Power of receiver to create liens.

Cited in note (16 L. R. A. 603) on power to permit receiver of private corporations to create lien on its property.

16 L. R. A. 576, CROCKER v. SMITH, 94 Ala. 295, 10 So. 258.

When instrument will or deed.

Cited in Abney v. Moore, 106 Ala. 134, 18 So. 60, holding instrument in form of deed, not witnessed, delivered to children named as grantees and stating title to vest on them at death, deed, not will; Murray v. Cazier, 23 Ind. App. 603, 53 N. E. 476, holding attempted disposition of rents in lease after husband's death testamentary, requiring statutory formalities; Moore v. Campbell, 102 Ala. 452, 14 So. 780, holding parol trust cannot take effect as testamentary bequest or devise; Kelly v. Richardson, 100 Ala. 595, 13 So. 785, holding instrument making gift of real estate, but retaining use during life, void as deed, but operative as codicil if formally executed; Tuttle v. Raish, 116 Iowa, 335, 90 N. W. 66, construing instrument in form of deed to be attempt at testamentary disposition of property.

Cited in footnote to Ferris v. Neville. 54 L. R. A. 464, which holds sufficient, paper executed as will, stating that it is good to specified person for specified amount from writer's estate.

16 L. R. A. 578, COM. v. GRAHAM, 157 Mass. 73, 34 Am. St. Rep. 255, 31 N. E. 706.

Validity of extraterritorial marriage.

Cited in Tyler v. Tyler, 170 Mass. 151, 48 N. E. 1075, holding marriage by divorced people outside of state, to evade its laws, void under statute: Jackson

v. Jackson, 82 Md. 30, 34 L. R. A. 775, 33 Atl. 317, sustaining common-law marriage, valid when consummated; State ex rel. Wilkinson v. Dellinger, 126 N. C. 465, 35 S. E. 819, holding that marriage of female after reaching marriageable age emancipates her from parental control.

Cited in footnotes to Jackson v. Jackson, 34 L. R. A. 773, which sustains marriage, valid in state where contracted; State ex rel. Scott v. Lowell, 46 L. R. A. 440, which denies father's right to prevent girl, marrying under statutory age, from living with her husband if she so elects; Norman v. Norman, 42 L. R. A. 343, which holds marriage on high seas by parties leaving land to evade laws of residence invalid; Re Stull, 39 L. R. A. 539, which holds invalid, marriage between man and paramour in other state to avoid laws of domicile.

Cited in note (57 L. R. A. 172) on conflict of laws as to validity of marriage.

Rights and liabilities of infants.

Cited in Peck v. Cain, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 40, 63 S. W. 177, holding infant leasing premises for term of years not liable for rent after abandonment.

16 L. R. A. 581, FOND DU LAC WATER CO. v. FOND DU LAC, 82 Wis. 322, 52 N. W. 439.

Assessment of property of quasi-public corporation.

Cited in State ex rel. Milwaukee Street R. Co. v. Anderson, 90 Wis. 563, 63 N. W. 746, holding that franchise of street railway and property necessary for its use and enjoyment are to be assessed as an entirety; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 125 Mich. 692, 84 Am. St. Rep. 589, 85 N. W. 96, upholding assessment of tangible property of street railway as enhanced by its franchise; Monroe Waterworks Co. v. Monroe, 110 Wis. 19, 85 N. W. 685, holding that contract between city and water company to pay part of taxes against company as rental cannot be enforced where this part cannot be separated from whole; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Milwaukee, 89 Wis. 514, 28 L. R. A. 254, 62 N. W. 417, holding provision of city charter relating to taxation does not authorize assessment for local improvement on tracks and right of way of railroad; State ex rel. Ashland Water Co. v. Wharton, 115 Wis. 461, 91 N. W. 976, holding assessment of entire property of water company valid, although classed as real estate; Merrill R. & Lighting Co. v. Merrill, 119 Wis. 256, 96 N. W. 686, holding land leased, "owned" within meaning of statute relating to taxation of street railways.

Cited in footnote to Paris v. Norway Water Co. 21 L. R. A. 525, which holds water mains, pipes, etc., taxable where located.

Cited in notes (60 L. R. A. 851) on taxation of municipal waterworks; (17 L. R. A. 93) on what property is part of corporate franchise for purposes of taxation; (57 L. R. A. 38, 46) on taxation of corporate franchise in United States; (60 L. R. A. 333) on constitutional equality in United States in relation to corporate franchise.

Liens on property of quasi-public corporation.

Cited in National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Co. 52 Fed. 45, holding plant for water supply of city an entirety, and lien cannot be maintained on piping alone, but attaches to entire plant; Chapman Valve Mfg. Co. v. Oconto Water Co. 89 Wis. 273, 46 Am. St. Rep. 830, 60 N. W. 1004, refusing mechanic's lien on either portion or entire plant of public water supply company; Pittsburg Testing Laboratory v. Milwaukee Electric R. & Light Co. 110 Wis. 643, 84 Am. St. Rep. 948, 86 N. W. 592, holding lien may be enforced against such property of railway as not necessary to use as railway; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Co. 52 Fed. 56, holding that franchise of water supply company, being inseparable from its plant, may be sold to enforce mechanic's lien; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto City Water Supply Co. 51 C. C. A. 473, 113 Fed. 801, holding lien laws of state have no application to city water supply companies.

Distinguished in State ex rel. Milwaukee Street R. Co. v. Anderson, 90 Wis. 568, 63 N. W. 746, holding that assessment of power houses and lots separately from franchises of company rendered tax void.

Review of assessment.

Cited in Brown v. Oneida County, 103 Wis. 158, 79 N. W. 216, declaring tax illegal when board of review, without evidence, arbitrarily raised assessor's valuation; State ex rel. John R. Davis Lumber Co. v. Sackett, 117 Wis. 585, 94 N. W. 314, holding change in assessor's valuation of logs, by board of review, without sufficient evidence, invalid.

16 L. R. A. 586, Ex parte BACOT, 36 S. C. 125, 15 S. E. 204.

Right of condemnation.

Cited in Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Morehouse, 112 Wis. 13, 56 L. R. A. 245, 88 Am. St. Rep. 918, 87 N. W. 849, sustaining right to condemn land for spur of railway for use of single industry; Leitzsey v. Columbia Water Power Co. 47 S. C. 479, 34 L. R. A. 220, 25 S. E. 744, holding that statute directing improvement of canal and construction of dam to raise water included right to condemn land necessary for those purposes; Boyd v. Winnsboro Granite Co. 66 S. C. 439, 45 S. E. 10, holding charter of private corporation amended by later Constitution and statute, so as to take away right to acquire property by condemnation.

Cited in footnote to Re Rhode Island Suburban R. Co. 52 L. R. A. 879, which denies power to condemn land for power house and coal pockets in city 5 miles from street railway lines.

Subject of act expressed in title.

Cited in Hill v. Abbeville, 59 S. C. 408, 38 S. E. 11 (circuit court decree, affirmed on appeal), prescribing powers to be exercised by municipal corporations, which was entitled "an act relating to the powers of certain corporations."

Cited in note (55 L. R. A. 839) on power of legislature to enact a Code or compilation of laws, or amend many or undesignated sections thereof by single statute.

Supervisory control over inferior tribunal.

Cited in note (51 L. R. A. 66) on superintending control and supervisory jurisdiction of superior over inferior or subordinate tribunal.

16 L. R. A. 591, STANWOOD v. MALDEN, 157 Mass. 17, 31 N. E. 702.

Damages for diminishing value of land.

Cited in Rand v. Boston, 164 Mass. 356, 41 N. E. 484, denying right of recovery for lessening value of land by obstruction of light, air, etc., by building embankment on land on opposite side of street; Cram v. Laconia, 71 N. H. 48, 57 L. R. A. 286, 51 Atl. 635; Dantzer v. Indianapolis Union R. Co. 141 Ind. 614, 34 L. R. A. 772, 50 Am. St. Rep. 343, 39 N. E. 223; Newton v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 72 Conn. 428, 44 Atl. 813; Re Melon Street (Pa.) 38 L. R. A. 278, 38 Atl. 482, Reversing 1 Pa. Super. Ct. 79,—holding abutting owner on street discontinued at another point not damaged where he has free access to lot; Buhl v. Fort Street Union Depot Co. 98 Mich. 604, 23 L. R. A. 395, 57 N. W. 829, holding that inconvenience of abutting owner on street, another portion of which is discontinued, being common with all other abutters, is damnum absque injuria; Sawyer v. Com. 182 Mass. 247, 59 L. R. A. 727, 65 N. E. 52, holding business not property within statute providing for jury trial to determine damage in case of injury to property by exercise of right of eminent domain; Taft v. Com. 158 Mass. 548, 35 N. E. 1046, discussing measure of damages for diminution in value of land because of sewer under public way; Wellington v. Boston & M. R. Co. 158 Mass. 189, 33 N. E. 393, denying damages for narrowing private way, to owners not on way or having easement in it; Emerson v. Somerville, 166 Mass. 117, 44 N. E. 110, holding owner of buildings erected on land of another, without right to purchase it, not entitled to damages for taking of such land for park after notice to remove buildings; Natick Gas-light Co. v. Natick, 175 Mass. 250, 56 N. E. 292, holding town liable to abutting owner only for diminution in value of his land because of discontinuance of way, due to right to keep its main pipe in street; Sears v. Street Comrs. 180 Mass. 282, 62 L. R. A. 149, 62 N. E. 397, holding failure to provide for loss of value by diversion of travel due to public improvement, no objection to constitutionality of act providing for it; Robinson v. Brown, 182 Mass. 268, 65 N. E. 377, holding action not maintainable by abutting owner for damages for obstructions to way not opposite his premises; Putnam v. Boston & P. R. Co. 182 Mass. 354, 65 N. E. 790, upholding right of abutter to recover damages for temporary cutting off of access to streets of city by obstruction not in front of his property.

Cited in note (26 L. R. A. 664) on effect of abandonment of highway.

Criticized in Lincoln v. Com. 164 Mass. 375, 41 N. E. 489, sustaining damages to land by taking adjoining land for construction of sewer.

Assessments for improvements.

Cited in Lincoln v. Street Comrs. 176 Mass. 213, 57 N. E. 356, holding evidence inadmissible that other estates, not assessed, were benefited, if those benefits were common to all and not special.

Right of way by prescription.

Cited in Hamlen v. Keith, 171 Mass. 81, 50 N. E. 462, refusing to enjoin extension of front of building on ground of public right of way by prescription or dedication.

16 L. R. A. 593, SKOTTOWE v. OREGON SHORT LINE & U. N. R. CO. 22 Or. 430, 30 Pac. 222.

Duty to provide safe ways, stations, and platforms.

Cited in Haselton v. Portsmouth, K. & Y. Street R. Co. 71 N. H. 591, 53 Atl. 1016, holding street railway must maintain platform which it uses for passengers in reasonably safe condition, although it may be within limits of highway; Union P. R. Co. v. Evans, 52 Neb. 54, 71 N. W. 1062, holding railway must keep approach to platform reasonably safe for passengers; Georgia Southern & F. R. Co. v. Cartledge, 116 Ga. 166, 59 L. R. A. 120, footnote p. 118, 42 S. E. 405, holding evidence inadmissible that after injury railway moved further from track, post used for letter-pouch grab.

Cited in footnotes to Hunter v. Weston, 17 L. R. A. 633, which holds alley existing only on city plat not within ordinance prohibiting uncovered excavaton near alley; Graeff v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 23 L. R. A. 607, which denies negligence of carrier in constructing door in such a way as not to prevent stranger's rude act in pushing it against person while hurrying to train.

Cited in note (24 L. R. A. 521) as to when person who has started for train becomes passenger.

16 L. R. A. 600, HUGHES v. TORGERSON, 96 Ala. 346, 38 Am. St. Rep. 105, 11 So. 209.

Rights of lienors.

Cited in Little Rock, H. S. & T. R. Co. v. Spencer, 65 Ark. 203, 42 L. R. A. 342, 47 S. W. 196, holding that lien can be established without showing work was done with claimant's own hands; Post v. Miles, 7 N. M. 332, 34 Pac. 586 (dissenting opinion), majority holding mechanic's lien notice complying exactly with statute sufficient, although infant heirs of former owner not named.

Cited in notes (62 L. R. A. 370) on mechanics' liens upon buildings distinct from land; (18 L. R. A. 310) on who are laborers, employees, or servants within meaning of statutes giving them preferences.

16 L. R. A. 603, FARMERS LOAN & T. CO. v. GRAPE CREEK COAL CO. 50 Fed. 481.

Priority of liens or claims.

Cited in Doe v. Northwestern Coal & Transp. Co. 78 Fed. 73; Newton v. Eagle & P. Mfg. Co. 76 Fed. 419; Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. v. Roanoke Iron Co. 68 Fed. 626; Hanna v. State Trust Co. 30 L. R. A. 204, 16 C. C. A. 590, 36 U. S. App. 61, 70 Fed. 6; Hooper v. Central Trust Co. 81 Md. 591, 29 L. R. A. 272, 32 Atl. 505; United States Invest. Corp. v. Portland Hospital, 40 Or. 533, 56 L. R. A. 629, 67 Pac. 194; International Trust Co. v. United Coal Co. 27 Colo. 257, 83 Am. St. Rep. 59, 60 Pac. 621; Baltimore Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Alderson, 32 C. C. A. 547, 61 U. S. App. 636, 90 Fed. 147.—refusing to authorize issue of certificates by receiver of private corporation, which will be paramount lien as against existing lienors; Snively v. Loomis Coal Co. 69 Fed. 205, denying priority of claims for labor and materials to mining company over mortgage bonds or vendor's lien.

Cited in footnotes to St. Louis Trust Co. v. Riley, 30 L. R. A. 456, which denies right to prefer claim for personal injuries over mortgage debt in receiver's earnings; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Crawford, 28 L. R. A. 761, which holds earning of railroad while operated by receiver subject to equitable lien for company's indebtedness; Hanna v. State Trust Co. 30 L. R. A. 201, which denies power to authorize receiver to borrow money to carry on business by issuing certificates superior to first mortgage; United States Invest. Corp. v. Portland Hospital, 56 L. R. A. 627, which denies authority of receiver continuing operation of hospital, to contract debts taking precedence over prior claims; Drennen & Co. v. Mercantile Trust & D. Co. 39 L. R. A. 623, which holds employee of manufacturing or mining company entitled to priority for wages earned within six months before receiver appointed; Whitely v. Central Trust Co. 34 L. R. A. 303, which holds preference to railroad mortgages not gained by paying judgment for damages against company by surety on supersedeas bond.

Distinguished in Laughlin v. United States Rolling-Stock Co. 64 Fed. 26, refusing priority of lien to holders of certificates of receivers of private corporation.

16 L. R. A. 605, BOURGET v. CAMBRIDGE, 156 Mass. 391, 31 N. E. 390.

Right, duties, and liabilities as to use of electricity or water.

Cited in Bourget v. Cambridge, 159 Mass. 389, 34 N. E. 455, holding city liable for defect in highway caused by loosely hanging wire, though defect caused by another.

Cited in footnotes to Burt v. Douglas County Street R. Co. 18 L. R. A. 479, which holds company liable for electric shock of passenger, due to imperfect insulation; Rutland Electric Light Co. v. Marble City Electric Light Co. 20 L. R. A. 821, which holds electric light company entitled to injunction against erection of wires carrying dangerous current; Illingsworth v. Boston Electric Light Co. 25 L. R. A. 552, which holds reasonable care to keep electric wires safe, due towards persons licensed to approach them; Ahern v. Oregon Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 22 L. R. A. 635, which holds telephone company liable for injury from electric wire left hanging on electric light company's pole; Haynes v. Raleigh Gas Co. 26 L. R. A. 810, which holds negligence shown by guy wire charged with deadly current hanging to ground from tree; Jackson v. Wisconsin Teleph. Co. 26 L. R. A. 101, which holds connection of barn with flag-staff on other building by telephone wire renders company liable for loss of barn by lightning striking flag-staff.

Cited in note (31 L. R. A. 574, 589) on liability for injuries by electric wires in highways.

Distinguished in Greenville v. Jones, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 81, 45 S. W. 970, which holds city not liable for damage to building by use of water at water station erected without its consent, although it has failed to remove nuisance.

Negligence of travelers in touching electric wires.

Cited in Klages v. Gillette-Herzog Mfg. Co. 86 Minn. 466, 90 N. W. 1117, holding contributory negligence not shown by one attracted to spot attempting to push loose part of derrick cable, charged with electricity, from street into gutter.

16 L. R. A. 606, PEOPLE ex rel. BRADLEY v. SHAW, 133 N. Y. 493, 31 N. E. 512.

Validity of ballots and elections.

Cited in State ex rel. Crow v. Hostetter, 137 Mo. 645, 38 L. R. A. 216, 59 Am. St. Rep. 515, 39 S. W. 270, holding that electors are not restricted to names or offices printed on official ballot; Sanner v. Patton, 155 Ill. 565, 40 N. E. 290, holding legal ballots, cast for person not nominated, but whose name was written in blank space on printed ticket; Montgomery v. O'Dell, 67 Hun. 176, 22 N. Y. Supp. 412, holding ballot pasted on regular official ballot valid, although person voted for not regularly nominated; State ex rel. Norton v. Van Camp, 36 Neb. 105, 54 N. W. 113, holding court cannot go behind returns of canvassing board in mandamus proceeding; People ex rel. Goring v. Wappingers Falls, 144 N. Y. 619, 39 N. E. 641, sustaining right of voter to write or paste on official ballot office omitted, and name of person voter wishes to fill it; People ex rel. Bradley v. Essex County, 69 Hun. 407, 23 N. Y. Supp. 654, holding board of supervisors cannot determine contest to seat of duly elected and qualified member, after rights substantially passed on by court of appeals; Re Hirsh, 14 Misc. 382, 36 N. Y. Supp. 19, holding court cannot pass upon ballots as marked for identification, unless challenged and returned as marked; People ex rel. Howard v. Erie County, 42 App. Div. 514, 59 N. Y. Supp. 476, holding that right of supervisor who has received certificate of election to seat on board must be determined by mandamus; People ex rel. Bush v. McKenzie, 66 Hun, 270, 48 N. Y. S. R. 793, 21 N. Y. Supp. 279, holding inspectors of election not authorized to attach ballots to statement of result unless election officer or watcher at canvass declares his belief that they were marked for identification; Re McDade, 43 App. Div. 315, 60 N. Y. Supp. 333, doubting whether ballots "protested on account of parties" were "marked for identification."

Cited in footnotes to State ex rel. Phelan v. Walsh, 17 L. R. A. 364, in which various decisions as to validity of ballots are made; Lindstrom v. Manistee County, 19 L. R. A. 172, which refuses to exclude ballot with unauthorized vignette; State ex rel. Baxter v. Ellis, 17 L. R. A. 382, which requires rejection of ballots with device upon them in municipal election; Eaton v. Brown, 17 L. R. A. 697, which holds void, ballot law prohibiting marking elsewhere of ballot marked opposite name of political party; Re Contested Election, 27 L. R. A. 234, which denies right to paste slip ticket over printed matter on ballot; Chamberlin v. Wood, 56 L. R. A. 187, which authorizes limitation of votes to candidates whose names on official ballot.

Distinguished in Fletcher v. Wall, 172 Ill. 434, 40 L. R. A. 621, footnote p. 617, 50 N. E. 230, upholding action of board of canvassers in rejecting pasted ballots; State ex rel. Bennett v. Barber, 4 Wyo. 81, 32 Pac. 14, holding that validity of election cannot be determined when mandamus is asked by one elected to office, to compel canvass of returns; Vallier v. Brakke, 7 S. D. 553, 64 N. W. 1119, refusing rehearing where elector did not follow directions of election law in voting for candidate.

Disapproved in Chamberlain v. Wood, 15 S. D. 227, 56 L. R. A. 190, 91 Am. St. Rep. 674, 88 N. W. 109, limiting right to vote to candidates on official ballot, unless right to vote for others secured by Constitution.

Title to and possession of office.

Cited in Williams v. Boynton, 71 Hun, 316, 25 N. Y. Supp. 60, holding member of public board not officer de facto whose claims to office have been denied by court of last resort; Re Bradley, 141 N. Y. 530, 36 N. E. 598, holding one who has received certificate of election to office, and qualified, entitled to delivery of books and money from predecessor.

16 L. R. A. 608, HOEFLING v. SAN ANTONIO, 85 Tex. 228, 20 S. W. 85.

Right to levy tax.

Cited in Ex parte Terrell, 40 Tex. Crim. Rep. 30, 48 S. W. 504, denying power of city to levy occupation tax upon business not taxed by state.

Recovery of illegal taxes.

Cited in footnote to St. Anthony & D. Elevator Co. v. Soucie, 50 L. R. A. 262, which sustains right to recover illegal taxes paid under protest to prevent tax collector's sale of personal property.

16 L. R. A. 611, STATE ex rel. ATTY. GEN. v. FIDELITY & C. INS. CO. 49 Ohio St. 440, 34 Am. St. Rep. 573, 31 N. E. 658.

Right of foreign corporation to do business in state.

Cited in People ex rel. Traders' Ins. Co. v. Van Cleave, 183 Ill. 335, 47 L. R. A. 798, 55 N. E. 698, holding that superintendent of insurance cannot refuse license to foreign insurance company because of similarity of name with that of domestic company.

Cited in notes (24 L. R. A. 304) on restrictions on business of foreign insurance companies; (24 L. R. A. 295) on recognition or exclusion of foreign corporations.

What is necessary to create corporation.

Cited in footnote to Slocum v. Head, 50 L. R. A. 324, which holds persons attempting to incorporate by filing original articles instead of copies entitled to all rights of corporation as to persons dealing with them as such.

16 L. R. A. 614, MORGAN v. BELL, 3 Wash. 554, 28 Pac. 925.

Mistake as to legal rights.

Cited in Cunningham v. Duncan, 4 Wash. 508, 30 Pac. 647, holding one not aware of inability of other party to convey, entitled to recover money paid on contract after action begun for specific performance; Morgan v. Morgan, 10 Wash. 122, 38 Pac. 1054 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that statute of limitations had run against action by divorced wife, resident of another state, against former husband to set aside deed of community land, although ignorant of law of land at time of conveyance; Ormsby v. Graham, 123 Iowa, 209, 98 N. W. 724, holding vendee not entitled to specific performance of contract to convey title which vendor does not possess.

Cited in footnote to Alton v. First Nat. Bank, 18 L. R. A. 144, which denies indorsee's right to recover back amount paid under mistaken belief as to liability.

Distinguished in Konnerup v. Frandsen, 8 Wash. 555, 36 Pac. 493, upholding right to specific performance of contract to convey community land where wife encouraged and consented to contract, ratified performance, and accepted benefits.

Damages.

Cited in Engstrom v. Merriam, 25 Wash. 77, 64 Pac. 914, holding measure of damages for failure to give possession of leased premises for new business is difference between rent and rental value; West Coast Mfg. & Invest. Co. v. West Coast Improv. Co. 31 Wash. 613, 72 Pac. 455, holding damages for breach of warranty to be proportionate value of part of land as to which title failed to whole tract.

Cited in notes (20 L. R. A. 757) on damages in lieu of injunction; (52 L. R. A. 241) on loss of profits of sale or purchase as damages.

Right to jury trial.

Cited in Goldthwait v. Lynch, 9 Utah, 191, 33 Pac. 699, holding that action for damages for breach of contract is one at law, to be tried by jury where such trial demanded.

16 L. R. A. 625, MOORE v. ROLIN, 89 Va. 107, 15 S. E. 520.

16 L. R. A. 627, ILLINOIS C. R. CO. v. MINOR, 69 Miss. 710, 11 So. 101.

Carrier's liability to passengers.

Cited in Tall v. Baltimore Steam Packet Co. 90 Md. 254, 47 L. R. A. 122, footnote p. 120, 44 Atl. 1007, holding carrier not liable for shooting of passenger by fellow passenger quarreling over game of cards; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Shields, 9 Tex. Civ. App. 656, 28 S. W. 709, holding that railway employee must exercise highest care and diligence to prevent jug or alcohol from being spilled in car, so that it shall not ignite and burn passenger.

Cited in footnotes to United R. & Electric Co. v. State, 54 L. R. A. 942, which holds carrier liable for injuries inflicted on passenger by drunken passenger permitted to return and remain after removal; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Jefferson, 17 L. R. A. 571, which holds colored passenger entitled with white passenger to protection; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Boyle, 59 L. R. A. 104, which denies carrier's liability for shooting of passenger by negro tramp attempting to escape from arrest for stealing ride; Sullivan v. Jefferson Ave. R. Co. 32 L. R. A. 167, which denies carrier's liability for injury to passenger whose dress ignites by match carelessly thrown by other passenger.

Cited in note (55 L. R. A. 719) on carrier's liability for assault on passenger by strikers, mob, or third persons.

Objections to instructions.

Cited in Alexander v. Flood, 77 Miss. 926, 28 So. 787, refusing to consider objections to instructions not made in court below.

16 L. R. A. 631, FLORIDA SOUTHERN R. CO. v. HIRST, 30 Fla. 1, 32 Am. St. Rep. 17, 11 So. 506.

Direction of verdict.

Cited in De Graffenried v. Wallace, 2 Ind. Terr. 662, 53 S. W. 452, holding that court, in setting aside verdict for plaintiff, should direct verdict for defendant; De Graffenried v. Wallace, 2 Ind. Terr. 662, 53 S. W. 452, holding that court should direct verdict for defendant, if evidence such that contrary verdict should be set aside.

Relation of carrier and passenger.

Cited in Jackson v. Grand Ave. R. Co. 118 Mo. 220, 24 S. W. 192, holding it not unreasonable that passengers should acquaint themselves with rules adopted for their safety; Berry v. Missouri P. R. Co. 124 Mo. 304, 25 S. W. 229 (dissenting opinion), as to right of public to determine when an exigency may demand suspension of rules of railway company; Rawlings v. Wabash R. Co. 97 Mo. App. 518, 71 S. W. 534, holding passenger entitled to recover for inconvenience, loss of time, labor, and necessary expense caused by being carried beyond station.

Negligence of passenger.

Cited in footnote to Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 61 L. R. A. 410, which denies negligence of white passenger in riding in car set apart for negroes.

Risks assumed by passenger.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 311) on what risk is assumed by passenger on freight train.

Meaning of gross negligence.

Cited in Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Foxworth, 41 Fla. 59, 79 Am. St. Rep. 149, 25 So. 338, upholding instruction using term "gross negligence" where it appears that it was not intended to imply that injury was due to sole fault of defendant; Ames v. Waterloo & C. F. Rapid Transit Co. 120 Iowa, 665, 95 N. W. 161 (dissenting opinion), as to liability in case of gross negligence.

Wilful injury.

Cited in Aiken v. Holyoke Street R. Co. 184 Mass. 272, 68 N. E. 238, holding failure of one injured to exercise due care, no defense to action for wanton and wilful injury.

Injuries due to joint negligence of plaintiff and defendant.

Cited in Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Foxworth, 41 Fla. 56, 79 Am. St. Rep. 149, 25 So. 338, holding that statute allowing recovery for injuries due to negligence of railroad company, contributed to by one injured, applies to action brought by latter's representative.

Punitive damages.

Cited in Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Mooney, 40 Fla. 35, 24 So. 148, refusing punitive damage to employees injured through carelessness, not wanton, reckless indifference of engineer of shifting engine.

16 L. R. A. 640, STERGER v. VAN SICLEN, 132 N. Y. 499, 28 Am. St. Rep. 594, 30 N. E. 987.

Liability for injury to licensee or trespasser.

Cited in Flanagan v. Atlantic Alcatraz Asphalt Co. 37 App. Div. 480, 56 N. Y. Supp. 18, holding owner not liable to servant of contractor doing work on premises and injured by fall of gate while engaged on business of his own; Reynolds v. Van Beuren, 155 N. Y. 125, 42 L. R. A. 131, 49 N. E. 263, denying right of recovery against advertisers using sign-board on building, for injuries due to fall of sign; McCann v. Thilemann, 36 Misc. 148, 72 N. Y. Supp. 1076, holding that owner of vacant, unfenced lot who does not object to use of way over it is only required to protect mere licensee from wanton, wilful injury; Wells v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 34 Misc. 46, 68 N. Y. Supp. 305, holding that elevated railroad company owes duty to licensee to avoid running him down with locomotive; Greene v. Linton, 7 Misc. 274, 27 N. Y. Supp. 891, holding owner of vacant lots not liable for drowning of child in cesspool at some distance from street; Moran v. Pullman Palace Car Co. 134 Mo. 652, 33 L. R. A. 759, 56 Am. St. Rep. 543, 36 S. W. 659, holding owner of premises on which pond of water accumulated not liable for drowning of lad playing in pond; Dobbins v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 91 Tex. 63, 38 L. R. A. 575, 66 Am. St. Rep. 856, 41 S. W. 62, holding railway company not liable for drowning of infant in pool of water allowed to accumulate on its right of way; Huebner v. Hammond, 80 App. Div. 129, 80 N. Y. Supp. 295 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that longshoreman has no right of recovery for injury due to uptilted grating on lighter, upon which he was sent by his foreman without request from crew of lighter; Speckman v. Boehm, 36 App. Div. 264, 56 N. Y. Supp. 758, holding erroneous, instruction that lessor liable though he "did not actually know of decayed condition of floor" of basement into which injured party was sent by tenant of another floor; Jehle v. Ellicott Square Co. 31 App. Div. 345, 52 N. Y. Supp. 366, sustaining nonsuit against owner where person killed was employee of independent contractor using elevator in uncompleted and unaccepted building; Sunderlin v. Hollister, 4 App. Div. 486, 38 N. Y. Supp. 682, holding it error to dismiss complaint when evidence disclosed that plaintiff fell into unguarded elevator hole while in store to make purchase. McNeven v. Arnett, 4 App. Div. 137, 38 N. Y. Supp. 759, refusing recovery for death of trespasser falling from runway across excavation near sidewalk; Castoriano v. Miller, 15 Misc. 255, 71 N. Y. S. R. 471, 36 N. Y. Supp. 419, which holds brewery not liable for injury to child scalded by falling into slop box while going through passageway where he had no business to be; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Beavers, 113 Ga. 413, 54 L. R. A. 321, 39 S. E. 82, holding owner of lot not bound to guard excavation from children coming upon it as mere trespassers; Clapp v. La Grill, 103 Tenn. 174, 52 S. W. 134, holding owner not liable for injuries to one rightfully on premises and stepping on grating that gave way and let him into cellar, when owner could not have known condition with ordinary care; Deyo v. Kingston Consol. R. Co. 94 App. Div. 584, 88 N. Y. Supp. 487 (dissenting opinion), majority holding street car company not liable for negligence of servant of independent contractor firing skyrocket injuring spectator paying way into public park; Cumberland Teleg. & Teleph. Co. v. Martin, 25 Ky. L. Rep. 789, 63 L. R. A. 470, 76 S. W. 394, holding telephone company not liable for death of pedestrian by lightning conducted by uninsulated wire under stone porch.

Cited in footnote to Benson v. Baltimore Traction Co. 20 L. R. A. 714, which denies recovery to student falling into uncovered vat while class inspecting power house under permission.

Duty of owner to keep premises reasonably safe.

Cited in Fogarty v. Bogart, 59 App. Div. 119, 69 N. Y. Supp. 47, holding that owner of apartment house owes duty of keeping place reasonably safe for one coming to inquire about rooms; McGovern v. Standard Oil Co. 11 App. Div. 593, 42 N. Y. Supp. 595, sustaining verdict for death of brakeman swept off car passing under cross-beam placed within 4 feet of top of car; Taylor v. Constable, 57 Hun, 373, 10 N. Y. Supp. 607, holding that overseer, directed by commissioner of highways to repair bridge, may recover for personal injuries in breaking of bridge while driving across with loaded wagon; Barrett v. Lake Ontario Beach Improv. Co. 68 App. Div. 613, 74 N. Y. Supp. 301 (dissenting opinion), majority holding company not liable for death of boy falling from toboggan slide by slipping beneath lower strip of guard railing; Frank v. Mandel, 76 App. Div. 418, 78 N. Y. Supp. 855; Brady v. Klein, 133 Mich. 426, 62 L. R. A. 911, 95 N. W. 557, holding that covenant of landlord to repair does not inure to benefit of guest or licensee of tenant.

Cited in footnote to Baddeley v. Shea, 33 L. R. A. 747, which denies liability for injury to man refusing assistance in carrying trunk, by breaking of platform in apparently good condition.

Distinguished in Delaney v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 78 Hun, 396, 29 N. Y. Supp. 226, holding lessees of wharves in New York bound to keep them in repair for public safety, and to give warning when they are being repaired.

16 L. R. A. 643, DARLING v. NEW YORK, P. & B. R. CO. 17 R. I. 708, 24 Atl. 462.

Contributory negligence.

Cited in Whipple v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 19 R. I. 592, 61 Am. St. Rep. 796, 35 Atl. 305, holding injury to brakeman brushed from ladder of car by telegraph pole too near track not due to his negligence, where he had no warning of its proximity; Nicholas v. Peck, 21 R. I. 406, 43 Atl. 1038, holding it contributory negligence to walk into defect in sidewalk, perfectly obvious, in broad daylight; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Rowan, 55 Kan. 286, 39 Pac. 1010, holding it for jury to determine negligence of brakeman killed by striking beams of low bridge while on top of high furniture car, when no warning had been given.

Cited in note (41 L. R. A. 38) on knowledge as element of employer's liability to injured servant.

Distinguished in Piper v. Cambria Iron Co. 78 Md. 252, 27 Atl. 939, which holds master not liable for injury to employee who stepped into space between car and platform while unloading car.

Coercion of jury.

Cited in Edwards v. Murray, 5 Wyo. 159, 38 Pac. 681, refusing reversal because bailiff answered question of jurymen as to when judge would call them into court: "I suppose, some time next week."

Cited in footnote to People v. Sheldon, 41 L. R. A. 644, which holds jury coerced where they have been kept for eighty-four hours in small room, without beds, and have reason to believe still further detention liable unless they agree.

16 L. R. A. 646, ALLEN v. ALLEN, 95 Cal. 184, 30 Pac. 213.

When rights are vested.

Cited in Falconer v. Simmons, 51 W. Va. 176, 41 S. E. 193, holding party has no vested right in writ of certiorari granted on strength of former decision which has been overruled; Weston v. Ralston, 48 W. Va. 190, 36 S. E. 446, holding that property cannot vest under decision which is later declared erroneous; Allen v. Allen, 38 C. C. A. 338, 97 Fed. 527, holding that equitable action in Federal court cannot be maintained to set aside judgment in state court because of impairment of obligation.

Cited in footnote to Gross v. Whitley County, 58 L. R. A. 394, which denies county treasurer's right to compensation under statute in force during first term, for services during second term under different statute.

Effect of statute of limitation of another state upon right of action.

Cited in note (48 L. R. A. 637) as to when statute of limitations will govern actions in another state or country.

When court decision part of contract.

Cited in footnotes to Haskett v. Maxey, 19 L. R. A. 379, which holds construction of statute of descents at time heirs give quitclaim becomes part of contract.

16 L. R. A. 655, DAVIS v. BRONSON, 2 N. D. 300, 33 Am. St. Rep. 783, 50 N. W. 836.

Repudiation or rescission of contracts.

Cited in Gibbons v. Bente, 51 Minn. 505, 22 L. R. A. 85, footnote p. 83, 53 N. W. 756, holding that party to executory contract may stop performance, subject to compensate other party in damages for breach; Ault v. Dustin, 100 Tenn. 383, 45 S. W. 981, holding that party to contract for manufacture of rope can renounce it, and manufacturer cannot complete and recover, but must sue for damages for breach; Ward v. American Health Food Co. 119 Wis. 25, 96 N. W. 388, holding recovery upon breach of executory advertising contract limited to damages sustained thereby; McCall Co. v. Jennings, 26 Utah, 465, 73 Pac. 639, holding vendee under executory contract of sale liable on breach only for resulting damages.

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 70) on right to rescind or abandon contract because of other party's default.

Distinguished in P. P. Emory Mfg. Co. v. Salomon, 178 Mass. 584, 60 N. E. 377, holding that anticipatory notice of intention not to fulfil contract to deliver goods by certain date does not bind other party as conclusive of failure; Stanford v. McGill, 6 N. D. 567, 38 L. R. A. 771, 72 N. W. 938, holding rescission of contract before performance not breach, but dispenses with offer to perform.

Damages for breach of contract.

Cited in Southern Cotton-Oil Co. v. Heflin, 39 C. C. A. 551, 99 Fed. 345, holding measure of damages on breach of contract for failure to take cotton-seed meal is difference between contract price and market price; Oklahoma Vinegar Co. v. Carter, 116 Ga. 145, 59 L. R. A. 124, footnote p. 122, 94 Am. St. Rep. 112, 42 S. E. 378, holding damages for breach, only remedy of vendor receiving notice before shipment that goods will not be received.

Distinguished in Martin v. Meles, 179 Mass. 118, 60 N. E. 397, holding damages for repudiation of contract fixed when demand made under contract.

Construction of contracts.

Cited in Davis v. Ravenna Creamery Co. 48 Neb. 478, 67 N. W. 436, holding subscribers to contract to secure erection of creamery liable to extent of subscription only.

Disapproved in Gibbons v. Bente, 51 Minn. 507, 22 L. R. A. 85, 53 N. W. 756, holding obligation of subscriber to pay for erection of creamery is several and independent, but obligation of all subscribers is, in other respects, joint.

16 L. R. A. 660, BARNES v. BARNES, 95 Cal. 171, 30 Pac. 298.

Dismissal of action.

Cited in Boyd v. Steele, 6 Idaho, 633, 59 Pac. 21, holding dismissal of action not defeated by failure of clerk to enter formal judgment.

Mental suffering and cruelty as ground for divorce.

Cited in Smith v. Smith, 124 Cal. 652, 57 Pac. 573, holding that complaint contains no cause of action for extreme cruelty, when allegation is that coarse epithets were applied to woman who was accused of want of chastity; Curl v. Curl, 130 Cal. 639, 63 Pac. 65, holding it question of fact whether grievous mental anguish was caused by conduct of wife intimately associating with another man; Mahnken v. Mahnken, 9 N. D. 191, 82 N. W. 870, holding grievous mental suffering sufficient for divorce, although there be no bodily injury; Ring v. Ring (Ga.) 62 L. R. A. 884, 44 S. E. 861, holding habitual and intemperate use of morphine not "cruel treatment" authorizing divorce.

Cited in footnote to Maddox v. Maddox, 52 L. R. A. 628, which denies right to divorce for cruelty from failure to provide suitable dwelling house, clothing, and food.

16 L. R. A. 664, BALLARD v. BURTON, 64 Vt. 387, 24 Atl. 769.

Sufficiency of consideration.

Cited in Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Taylor, 66 Vt. 577, 29 Atl. 1012, holding that surrender of "trade paper," to take in lieu thereof note secured by mortgage, is sufficient consideration to bind mortgagor as to his false representations, made in such transaction.

When indorser bound on certificate of deposit.

Cited in footnote to Towle v. Starz, 36 L. R. A. 463, which requires demand on last day of grace on expiration of six months on certificate of deposit containing provision for leaving money on deposit six months, and not bearing interest after maturity.

Distinguished in Jackson v. McInnis, 33 Or. 531, 43 L. R. A. 129, 72 Am. St. Rep. 755, 54 Pac. 884, holding demand of payment on receiver of insolvent bank and notice of nonpayment insufficient to bind indorser of certificate of deposit issued by bank before insolvency.

Time of payment.

Cited in Citizens Sav. Bank & T. Co. v. Rabbitt, 71 Vt. 186, 44 Atl. 71, holding silence as to time of extension of note and time of payment by guarantor leaves construction to be reasonable time as to both.

Judgment by appellate court.

Cited in Miltimore v. Bottom, 66 Vt. 172, 28 Atl. 872, holding that appellate court, on reversal, may render such judgment as lower court should have rendered.

Parol evidence to explain indorsement.

Cited in Young v. Sehon, 53 W. Va. 137, 62 L. R. A. 505, 97 Am. St. Rep. 970, 44 S. E. 136, holding parol evidence admissible to explain liability of promisee and another as indorsers of non-negotiable note; Lyndon Sav. Bank v. International Co. 75 Vt. 231, 54 Atl. 191, holding that real obligation of indorser in blank on promissory note may be shown by parol.

16 L. R. A. 668, BLUM v. SCHWARTZ (Tex.) 20 S. W. 54.

Protection of bona fide purchaser at judicial sale.

Cited in note (21 L. R. A. 34, 54) on how far purchaser at execution or judicial sale is protected as bona fide purchaser.

16 L. R. A. 674, CINCINNATI, H. & D. R. CO. v. KASSEN, 49 Ohio St. 230, 31 N. E. 282.

Liability for failure to avoid accident.

Cited in Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Schade, 15 Ohio C. C. 433, sustaining verdict for plaintiff where jury might have found that engineer was not keeping careful watch and failed to give signals on approaching crossing; Summit Coal Co. v. Shaw, 16 Ind. App. 16, 44 N. E. 676, holding erroneous, instruction that plaintiff's negligence will not prevent recovery if defendant could have avoided accident, if not limited to negligence after becoming aware of other's danger; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Hellenthal, 31 C. C. A. 418, 60 U. S. App. 156, 88 Fed. 120, holding it proper to submit to jury question whether engineer could not have stopped train after first becoming aware of child on track; Gahagan v. Boston & M. R. Co. 70 N. H. 450, 50 Atl. 146, sustaining nonsuit where there was nothing in man's appearance or gait to indicate to engineer of approaching train that he was not fully aware of danger of crossing ahead of train; Snyder v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 60 Ohio St. 497, 54 N. E. 475, holding railroad owes duty to station agent necessarily on track, to keep lookout so as to prevent his being run down by train giving no warning of its approach.

Distinguished in Erie R. Co. v. McCormick, 69 Ohio St. 53, 68 N. E. 571, holding knowledge of engineer in time to prevent accident necessary to support recovery for injury to one on track.

Proximate cause.

Cited in Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ehlert, 19 Ohio C. C. 183, holding negligence of railway employees in failing to give warning of approaching train to one negligently standing close to track, proximate cause of death.

Cited in footnote to Daniels v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 62 L. R. A. 751, which holds carrier not liable for death by suicide of one rendered insane by negligent injury; Southern R. Co. v. Webb, 59 L. R. A. 109, which holds negligent jolting of train, hurling passenger through door on track insensible, cause of death by train of other company; Western R. Co. v. Mutch, 21 L. R. A. 316, which holds excessive speed not proximate cause of death of boy attempting to catch on train; People v. Lewis, 45 L. R. A. 783, which holds that suicide of person mortally wounded does not relieve assailant from guilt of manslaughter.

Contributory negligence.

Cited in Schweinfurth v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 60 Ohio St. 223, 54 N. E. 89, holding erroneous, instruction that verdict must be for defendant if negligence, however slight, of plaintiff contributed to accident; Krause v. Morgan, 53 Ohio St. 37, 40 N. E. 886, holding that miner must be free from negligence to make operator liable for injury due to explosion of fire damp under statute giving right of action.

Duty of carrier toward disabled passenger.

Cited in footnote to Reed v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 44 L. R. A. 823, which requires railroad company to stop and rescue passenger fallen or thrown from train, only when possible without risk of collision.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 328) on exposure of drunken passenger to danger by ejection from car.

Last clear chance.

Cited in footnote to Baltimore Consol. R. Co. v. Armstrong, 54 L. R. A. 424, which denies liability towards one caught between two street cars by becoming confused after assenting to motorman's instructions as to reaching safe place.

Cited in note (55 L. R. A. 458) on doctrine of last clear chance.

Distinguished in Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Redding, 140 Ind. 104, 34 L. R. A. 768, 39 N. E. 921, holding carrier not guilty of wanton neglect of duty in not stopping freight train on up grade to remove boy who had jumped on car and fallen from and under it.

16 L. R. A. 677, LEWIS v. ARBUCKLE, 85 Iowa, 335, 52 N. W. 237.

Legality of acts as affected by insanity or undue influence.

Cited in Chambers v. Brady, 100 Iowa, 627, 69 N. W. 1015, refusing to set aside deed of parent to child where grantor, of undoubted soundness of mind, lived with grantee, who took care of him in sickness and in health; Ramsdell v. Ramsdell, 128 Mich. 116, 87 N. W. 81, sustaining deed by insane person executed in lucid interval.

Cited in footnotes to Orchardson v. Cofield, 40 L. R. A. 256, which holds will prompted by delusion, induced by belief in spiritualism, that beneficiary gifted with spiritual powers invalid; People v. Gilman, 46 L. R. A. 218, which holds conspiracy to cheat by materializing seances of professed medium punishable, though obvious humbug.

Cited in note (37 L. R. A. 270) on what are insane delusions.

16 L. R. A. 681, Re LALLY, 85 Iowa, 49, 51 N. W. 1155.

Custody, education, and welfare of child.

Cited in Hadley v. Forrest, 112 Iowa, 126, 83 N. W. 822, refusing custody of her child to divorced woman of loose character, and without means, seeking to obtain it from lady in whose care it had been left; State v. Bailey, 157 Ind. 330, 59 L. R. A. 437, 61 N. E. 730, holding that parent may be compelled by statute to educate child; Miller v. Miller, 123 Iowa, 169, 98 N. W. 631, holding abandonment of child by parent not made out in absence of adoption proceedings, by declaration of father at death of wife.

Cited in footnotes to Hibbette v. Bains, 51 L. R. A. 839, which sustains father's right to custody of child, notwithstanding assent to wife's deathbed contract to give custody to her relatives; Stapleton v. Poynter, 53 L. R. A. 784, which upholds custody of child taken against its will from wealthy grandparent and given to parent of moral habits; People v. Ewer, 25 L. R. A. 794, which holds valid, act prohibiting employment of girls under fourteen as dancers or in theatrical exhibitions; Re Reiss, 25 L. R. A. 798, which denies power of court to compel father to send children to visit their grandmother; Kelsey v. Green, 38 L. R. A. 471, which denies absolute right of guardian appointed on father's application, as against guardian appointed in other state where child actually resides; Anderson v. Young, 44 L. R. A. 277, which sustains court's power to uphold, in interest of child, custody held under void agreement with parent; State ex rel. Lasserre v. Michel, 54 L. R. A. 927, which denies father's absolute right to custody of minor child; Re Young, 36 L. R. A. 224, which upholds grandparents' right to custody of children to exclusion of father's sister appointed guardian by his will.

16 L. R. A. 684, PEOPLE v. BRIDGES, 142 Ill. 30, 31 N. E. 115.

Fish and game laws affecting private rights.

Cited in State v. Theriault, 70 Vt. 624, 43 L. R. A. 293, 67 Am. St. Rep. 695, 41 Atl. 1030, holding valid, act prohibiting fishing for a certain period in private streams in which fish placed by fish commissioner; Peters v. State, 96 Tenn. 688, 33 L. R. A. 115, footnote p. 114, 36 S. W. 399, holding act to protect fish, affecting all waters, valid notwithstanding private ownership of bodies of water; People v. Duxtater, 75 Hun. 477, 27 N. Y. Supp. 481, holding that exclusive right of fishing in lake connecting with navigable river, emptying into large lake, is subordinate to regulations prescribed by legislature for general good; Re Eberle, 98 Fed. 297, holding valid, statute requiring payment of license fee by nonresident for privilege of hunting.

Cited in footnotes to State v. McGuire, 21 L. R. A. 478, which holds having in possession during close season fish previously caught not an offense; State v. Mrozinski, 27 L. R. A. 76, which holds valid, absolute prohibition against taking fish otherwise than by hook and line, with specified exceptions.

Cited in notes (39 L. R. A. 585) on governmental control over right of fishery; (60 L. R. A. 500, 501, 502, 512) in right to fish.

Distinguished in People v. Miner, 144 Ill. 312, 19 L. R. A. 348, 33 N. E. 40, which holds party is twice put in jeopardy under statute giving right of appeal from acquittal in criminal case for illegal fishing.

16 L. R. A. 688, STATE ex rel. HARTFORD v. CRAIG, 132 Ind. 54, 32 Am. St. Rep. 237, 31 N. E. 352.

What "town" or "city" includes.

Cited in Indianapolis v. Higgins, 141 Ind. 9, 40 N. E. 671, declaring word "town" to be generic, including cities, in act prohibiting driving on sidewalks.

Cited in footnote to Gibson v. Wood, 43 L. R. A. 699, which holds residence in suburb before annexation, residence within city for purpose of determining eligibility to city office.

16 L. R. A. 689, JENKINS v. BALLANTYNE, 8 Utah, 245, 30 Pac. 760.

Police power over, and property in, dogs.

Cited in Hagerstown v. Witmer, 86 Md. 302, 39 L. R. A. 664, 37 Atl. 965, holding ordinance providing that dogs running at large shall be impounded and, if not redeemed, killed, reasonable police regulation; Fox v. Mohawk & H. River Humane Soc. 165 N. Y. 521, 51 L. R. A. 684, 80 Am. St. Rep. 767, 59 N. E. 353, upholding statute requiring payment of license fee to society for prevention of cruelty to animals by owners of dogs within cities of certain size; Sentnell v. New Orleans & C. R. Co. 166 U. S. 704, 41 L. ed. 1171, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693, holding statute within police power of state which enacts that dogs, to be protected, must be placed on assessment rolls, and that owner cannot recover greater value for killing them than that he has thus fixed. Walker v. Towle, 156 Ind. 642, 53 L. R. A. 751, 59 N. E. 20, holding valid, ordinance requiring dogs to be muzzled, and making it duty of certain officers to kill dogs unmuzzled; Salley v. Manchester & A. R. Co. 54 S. C. 485, 71 Am. St. Rep. 810, 32 S. E. 526, sustaining property right in dogs sufficient to maintain action for killing them on railway tracks.

Cited in footnotes to Bowers v. Horan, 17 L. R. A. 773, which holds that barking and chasing of cats and tracking newly painted porch will not justify killing of dog; Nehr v. State, 17 L. R. A. 771, which authorizes killing of dog without collar; Gibson v. Harrison, 54 L. R. A. 268, which holds exaction of fee of $1.50 for privilege of keeping dog authorized by statute; Hodges v. Causey, 48 L. R. A. 95, which denies right to kill trespassing dog whose owner notified to keep him from premises.

Cited in notes (37 L. R. A. 659) on liability of railroad for killing dogs; (40 L. R. A. 510) on property rights in dogs.

16 L. R. A. 691, STATE ex rel. OLSON v. BROWN, 50 Minn. 353, 36 Am. St. Rep. 651, 52 N. W. 935.

Reform schools.

Cited in Re Sanders, 53 Kan. 200, 23 L. R. A. 606, footnote p. 603, 36 Pac. 348, holding that probate judge cannot commit boy under sixteen to reformatory, without his consent and against objection of parents; State ex rel. Schulman v. Phillips, 73 Minn. 79, 75 N. W. 1029, upholding act relating to training school for boys and girls as not providing for cruel, unusual, or unequal punishment.

Cited in footnote to People ex rel. Bradley v. Illinois State Reformatory, 23 L. R. A. 139, which holds lawful, committal of infants to reformatory with maximum sentence, subject to reduction; Re Knowack, 44 L. R. A. 699, which sustains power of supreme court to restore to parents children committed to charitable institution.

Writ of habeas corpus sought on constitutional grounds.

Cited in note (39 L. R. A. 456) on decision against constitutional right as nullity subject to collateral attack.

Jury trial.

Cited in footnote to Hall v. Armstrong, 20 L. R. A. 366, which denies right to jury trial in actions of book account.

16 L. R. A. 695, COLUMBUS v. COLUMBUS, 82 Wis. 374, 52 N. W. 425.

Legislative control of municipalities.

Cited in note (48 L. R. A. 488) on power of legislature to impose burdens on municipalities and to control their local administration and property.

16 L. R. A. 699, Re McLAUGHLIN, 4 Wash. 570, 30 Pac. 651.

When marriage consummated.

Followed in Kelley v. Kitsap County, 5 Wash. 523, 32 Pac. 554, holding issue of white man and Indian woman, who was bought from her relatives for few dollars, cannot inherit father's estate.

Cited in Re Smith, 4 Wash. 703, 17 L. R. A. 574, 39 Pac. 1059, holding lawful marriage not instituted by cohabitation so as to entitle woman as to administration as widow; Re Wilbur, 14 Wash. 246, 44 Pac. 262, declaring invalid, marriage between white man and Indian woman according to Indian customs; Re Wilbur, 8 Wash. 41, 40 Am. St. Rep. 886, 35 Pac. 407, holding marriage between white man and Indian, void under territorial law, not validated by cohabitation after repeal of law; Hatch v. Ferguson, 57 Fed. 971, holding right to dispose by will of land acquired during cohabitation, but before marriage, not affected by community property law.

Cited in footnotes to Hilton v. Roylance, 58 L. R. A. 723, which sustains sealing for time and eternity under Mormon marriage ceremony; Nims v. Thompson, 17 L. R. A. 847, which holds marriage shown by evidence; University of Michigan v. McGuckin, 57 L. R. A. 917, which holds lawful marriage shown between persons whose cohabitation originally meretricious, by continued cohabitation after disability removed, and birth of children baptized as legitimate.

Disapproved in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Procter, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 303, 25 S. W. 811, holding that girl under eighteen cannot marry without parent's consent, a statutory license, or ceremony.

Common-law marriage.

Cited in Offield v. Davis, 100 Va. 258, 40 S. E. 910, holding common-law marriage void under statute requiring license; Re Strauthers, 34 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 340, holding children of common-law marriage in Virginia, illegitimate.

16 L. R. A. 707, MANN v. JACKSON, 84 Me. 400, 30 Am. St. Rep. 358, 24 Atl. 886.

What is restraint on marriage.

Cited in footnotes to King v. King, 52 L. R. A. 157, which authorizes recovery on fully executed promise to care for person for life, though accompanied by void promise not to marry; Herd v. Catron, 37 L. R. A. 731, which sustains condition in devise to widow that remarriage shall terminate estate; Ransdell v. Boston, 43 L. R. A. 526, which sustains condition in will that gift to son shall be for life only, unless divorce procured in pending suit.

16 L. R. A. 710, McKINNEY v. STATE, 3 Wyo. 719, 30 Pac. 293.

16 L. R. A. 715, WOOD v. McGRATH, 150 Pa. 451, 24 Atl. 682.

Municipal power over streets and drainage.

Cited in Flynn v. Shenandoah, 3 Lack. Legal News, 284, 19 Pa. Co. Ct. 626, holding that borough may empty drainage, and permit private citizens to drain into natural stream, if flowage not unreasonably increased; Boyden v. Walkley, 113 Mich. 612, 71 N. W. 1099, permitting private citizen to construct private sewer at own expense in streets, if city has no sewer system; Middletown Drainage Co. v. Middletown, 1 Dauphin Co. Rep. 112, holding that borough can grant to private citizen right to lay drainage pipes in streets; Sandy Lake v. Sandy Lake & S. Gas. Co. 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 240, holding that borough can permit private citizens to lay gas pipes under its streets.

Injunctions.

Cited in Hafer v. Guynan, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 330, 7 Pa. Dist. R. 26, refusing to enjoin as nuisance use of church turned into boiler shop near to railway upon which trains run night and day; Gitt v. Hanover, 12 Lanc. L. Rev. 374, 4 Pa. Dist. R. 608, enjoining borough from cutting down tree in sidewalk as widened because not in pursuance of general ordinance.

Distinguished in Com. ex rel. Tyrone v. Stevens, 178 Pa. 562, 39 W. N. C. 376, 36 Atl. 166, upholding right to enjoin construction of wall in stream, increasing danger from floods.

16 L. R. A. 719, ROTHSCHILD v. DOUGHER, 85 Tex. 332, 34 Am. St. Rep. 811, 20 S. W. 142.

Acknowledgment before interested party.

Cited in Baxter v. Howell, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 201, 26 S. W. 453, holding that chattel mortgage cannot be acknowledged before one of beneficiaries under it; Miles v. Kelley, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 153, 40 S. W. 499, denying validity of contract to create mechanic's lien on homestead property in favor of association, where acknowledgment was taken before officer of association; Kothe v. Krag-Reynolds Co. 20 Ind. App. 301, 50 N. E. 594, holding acknowledgment of chattel mortgage to corporation void when taken by its secretary; Bexar Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Heady, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 156, 57 S. W. 583, holding that disqualification of notary to take acknowledgment when interested is not affected by lack of constitutional provision relating to it; Iron Belt Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Groves, 96 Va. 140, 31 S. E. 23, denying validity to trust deed in which acknowledgment was taken before trustee, although he was ignorant of fact that he was named in it; Silcock v. Baker, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 509, 61 S. W. 939, holding deed of married woman, acknowledged before husband, void.

Cited in note (33 L. R. A. 334, 337) on right of interested persons to take acknowledgment.

16 L. R. A. 721, GRAND RAPIDS SCHOOL FURNITURE CO. v. HANEY SCHOOL FURNITURE CO. 92 Mich. 558, 31 Am. St. Rep. 611, 52 N. W. 1009.

Libel of manufactured article.

Cited in footnote to Marlin Firearms Co. v. Shields, 59 L. R. A. 310, which denies right to injunction against publishing unjust and malicious criticism of manufactured article.

16 L. R. A. 723, REECE v. KYLE, 49 Ohio St. 475, 31 N. E. 747.

What is champerty.

Cited in Brown v. Ginn, 66 Ohio St. 325, 64 N. E. 123, holding agreement by attorney to prosecute suit in own name, take all risks and assume all expenses, receiving compensation of recovery, champertous; Getchell v. Weday, 2 Ohio N. P. 390, holding agreement to obtain evidence and judgment in consideration of assignment of part of said judgment, champertous; Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Volkert, 58 Ohio St. 372, 50 N. E. 924, holding contract to perform further legal services, if error proceedings instituted after judgment obtained, not champertous.

Cited in footnotes to Irwin v. Curie, 58 L. R. A. 830, which sustains right of person placing demands in attorney's hands to recover agreed compensation, though statute forbids such agreements; Newman v. Freitas, 50 L. R. A. 548, which holds void, contract to pay attorney one third of all amounts recovered in divorce suit; Croco v. Oregon Short-Line R. Co. 44 L. R. A. 285, which authorizes agreement that attorney's compensation shall depend on successes and be payable out of proceeds of litigation; Johnson v. Van Wyck, 41 L. R. A. 520, which holds agreement by attorney to prosecute suit at own expense for half of recovery, champertous.

16 L. R. A. 729, BOYD v. SELMA, 96 Ala. 144, 11 So. 393.

Situs of taxable property.

Followed in State v. Kidd, 125 Ala. 420, 28 So. 480, holding that situs of shares of stock for purpose of taxation is owner's domicile.

Cited in Re Fair, 128 Cal. 614, 61 Pac. 184, holding negotiable railroad bonds taxable at residence of owner; State v. Scottish-American Mortg. Co. 76 Minn. 162, 78 N. W. 962, holding notes held by nonresident, but secured by mortgages on residents' real estate, not taxable, though loan negotiated by local agents; National Dredging Co. v. State, 99 Ala. 467, 12 So. 720, holding personal property within and used in state, owned by nonresident, taxable where found; Buck v. Miller, 147 Ind. 595, 37 L. R. A. 388, 62 Am. St. Rep. 436, 47 N. E. 8, holding that, for taxation, term "personal property" includes bonds, notes, choses in action, and other evidences of credits, and that their situs is place where used in business.

Cited in footnotes to Re Whiting, 34 L. R. A. 232, which holds bonds of foreign corporation within state, though owned by nonresident, subject to transfer tax; Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 45 L. R. A. 524, which holds situs of debt due nonresident is at creditor's domicile for purpose of taxation; Allen v. National State Bank, 52 L. R. A. 760, which sustains right of state to tax nonresident mortgagee's interest in land within state; Kingman County v. Leonard, 34 L. R. A. 810, which denies right under statute to tax judgments owned by nonresidents.

Situs of property for garnishment.

Cited in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Nash, 118 Ala. 486, 41 L. R. A. 332, 72 Am. St. Rep. 181, 23 So. 825, holding that situs of debt for purpose of garnishment is domicile of creditor.

Defenses in actions on tax bills.

Cited in Verdin v. St. Louis, 131 Mo. 116, 33 S. W. 480 (dissenting opinion), as to right of taxpayer in possession of land, if sued, to resist action on ground of invalidity of ordinance.

16 L. R. A. 737, STATE ex rel. SHERMAN v. GEORGE, 22 Or. 142, 29 Am. St. Rep. 586, 29 Pac. 356.

Power of appointment to office.

Cited in State ex rel. Wagner v. Compson, 34 Or. 28, 54 Pac. 349, and Eddy v. Kincaid, 28 Or. 558, 41 Pac. 156, upholding right of legislature to appoint railroad commissioners; State ex rel. Trauger v. Nash, 66 Ohio St. 619, 64 N. E. 558, holding that where power of appointment to fill vacancy has been delegated to legislature by people, direction to governor to perform duty makes it purely ministerial; Atty. Gen. ex rel. Maybury v. Bolger, 128 Mich. 360, 87 N. W. 366, upholding act providing for appointment of park commissioner by common council of city.

Cited in footnotes to Johnson v. State, 38 L. R. A. 373, which holds void, statute depriving governor of power to appoint judges of inferior court by changing its name; People ex rel. Richardson v. Henderson, 22 L. R. A. 751, which denies inherent power of the executive to appoint officers; Fox v. McDonald, 21 L. R. A. 529, which holds power to appoint to office to fill vacancy not inherent in governor.

Legislative power over local indebtedness.

Cited in Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Oswego Twp. 7 C. C. A. 678, 19 U. S. App. 321, 59 Fed. 67, holding valid, act authorizing township to scale down and refund bonded indebtedness; Simon v. Northup, 27 Or. 496, 30 L. R. A. 175, 40 Pac. 560, upholding act to create debt against city without its consent, for acquiring bridges and ferries.

16 L. R. A. 743, WOODARD v. WOODARD, 36 S. C. 118, 15 S. E. 355.

16 L. R. A. 745, BATES v. BABCOCK, 95 Cal. 479, 29 Am. St. Rep. 133, 30 Pac. 605.

Objections to complaint after judgment.

Cited in South San Bernardino Land & Improv. Co. v. San Bernardino Nat. Bank, 127 Cal. 247, 59 Pac. 699, holding defendant not having appealed from judgment cannot object to complaint, unless so defective that judgment cannot be sustained.

Partnership property in land.

Cited in Smith v. Putnam, 107 Wis. 162, 82 N. W. 1077, holding that contract for partnership dealing in land is within statute of frauds unless fully executed as to such land, when rights of parties may be enforced; Moran v. McInerney, 129 Cal. 31, 61 Pac. 575, holding that, in action for dissolution of copartnership, real estate should be treated as personal property, and sold to pay debts, and residue distributed.

Cited in note (27 L. R. A. 466, 477) as to when real estate will be considered partnership property.

Parol agreements within statute of frauds.

Cited in footnote to Greenwood v. Law, 19 L. R. A. 688, which holds parol agreement to sell and assign bond and mortgage within statute of frauds.

16 L. R. A. 752, PEOPLE ex rel. KUNZE v. FT. WAYNE & E. R. CO. 92 Mich. 522, 52 N. W. 1010.

What use of street is additional servitude.

Followed in Dean v. Ann Arbor Street R. Co. 93 Mich. 331, 53 N. W. 396, holding that electric street railway may not be added servitude on abutting land; Birmingham Traction Co. v. Birmingham R. & Electric Co. 119 Ala. 142, 43 L. R. A. 235, 24 So. 502; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 56 Fed. 874; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L. R. A. 674, 12 C. C. A. 372, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 636,—holding street railway but improved mode of street use and does not impose additional servitude on land of abutting owners; Nieman v. Detroit Suburban Street R. Co. 103 Mich. 259, 61 N. W. 519, holding that electric street railway may be constructed without condemning right of way; People v. Eaton, 100 Mich. 212, 24 L. R. A. 723, 59 N. W. 145, holding placing of telegraph poles not additional servitude on land of abutter on public street; Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 56 Fed. 880, holding that function of city is merely to consent, upon conditions, that street railway companies may exercise state franchise; Peck v. Schenectady R. Co. 170 N. Y. 312, 63 N. E. 357 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that putting electric road in street adds servitude on abutting owners; Detroit, Ft. Wayne & B. I. R. Co. v. Railroad Comrs. 127 Mich. 235, 62 L. R. A. 156, 86 N. W. 842 (dissenting opinion), on point that street railway does not create additional servitude.

Cited in note (17 L. R. A. 477) on what use of street or highway constitutes additional burden.

Compensation for erection of embankment in street.

Cited in footnote to Rauenstein v. New York, L. & W. R. Co. 18 L. R. A. 768, which denies liability to abutter for embankment to change grade, necessitated by railroad embankment in intersecting street.

Validity of public contracts.

Cited in Lewick v. Glazier, 116 Mich. 500, 74 N. W. 717, holding contract for water supply for village valid, though it creates monopoly.

Quo warranto.

Cited in Atty. Gen. v. Detroit Suburban R. Co. 96 Mich. 69, 55 N. W. 562, holding interest of people not sufficient to support quo warranto where municipality has power to grant and has granted, right of way to street railway company.

16 L. R. A. 754, BOWERS v. SMITH, 111 Mo. 45, 33 Am. St. Rep. 491, 20 S. W. 101.

Election laws and validity of elections.

Cited in State ex rel. Bennett v. Barber, 4 Wyo. 82, 32 Pac. 14, holding statutory requirement for making and filing certificate of nominations of candidates, mandatory; Cook v. Fisher, 100 Iowa, 35, 69 N. W. 264, holding election law mandatory on clerk preparing ballot, but should not operate to defeat election; Miller v. Pennoyer, 23 Or. 375, 31 Pac. 830, holding that voters cannot be disfranchised by error of county official in printing same name on official ballot under two different groups of electors; Tebbe v. Smith, 108 Cal. 108, 49 Am. St. Rep. 68, 41 Pac. 454, holding ballots marked with cross to right of name, but not in square, not invalid where ballot law not mandatory on that point; Atty. Gen. ex rel. Reynolds v. May, 99 Mich. 546, 25 L. R. A. 328, 58 N. W. 483, upholding act providing that no one can be assisted in marking his ballot until he first swears he cannot read English; Stackpole v. Hallahan, 16 Mont. 54, 28 L. R. A. 508, footnote p. 502, 40 Pac. 80, refusing to declare election invalid because of certain defects in nominating certificates; Boyd v. Mills, 53 Kan. 608, 25 L. R. A. 491, 42 Am. St. Rep. 306, 37 Pac. 16, refusing to invalidate election in township where, through mistake of officials, ballots of other color than white were used by all electors alike; Lynip v. Buckner, 22 Nev. 439, 30 L. R. A. 357, 41 Pac. 762, holding that strips of paper and numbers of unintentionally left on ballots by official, without knowledge of voters, will not disfranchise; Parker v. Hughes, 64 Kan. 241, 56 L. R. A. 279, 91 Am. St. Rep. 216, 67 Pac. 637 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that ballots marked to distinguish them, contrary to provisions making such marks criminal, cannot be counted; Morris v. Board of Canvassers, 49 W. Va. 263, 38 S. E. 500, declaring mandatory, provision that but one ballot shall be used and names of all candidates voted for must be on that ballot; Jones v. State, 153 Ind. 447, 55 N. E. 229, refusing to invalidate election of town trustee because his ticket did not have emblem or device at head, although it was official; Com. v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 192, 63 N. E. 421, which holds caucus meeting legal when there was present a warden de facto, though elected just before caucus; Cole v. Tucker, 164 Mass. 488, 29 L. R. A. 670, 41 N. E. 681, sustaining act requiring use of official ballot; Kirkpatrick v. Deegans, 53 W. Va. 286, 44 S. E. 465, holding act requiring poll clerks to write names on back of each election ballot sheet, mandatory; Stone v. Gregory, 110 Ky. 503, 61 S. W. 1002, holding election not invalidated because of immaterial mistake in question submitted.

Cited in footnotes to Ellis v. May, 25 L. R. A. 325, which holds reasonable, requirement of oath of inability to read before allowing another to mark ballot; Todd v. Election Comrs. 29 L. R. A. 330, which upholds requirement against candidate having name on official ballot more than once; State, Ransom, Prosecutor, v. Black, 16 L. R. A. 769, which holds act limiting right to representation on official ballot to political parties casting certain percentage of vote at last election, and to those presenting petitions, valid; Taylor v. Bleakley, 28 L. R. A. 683, which holds mandatory, provision against counting ballot not marked as required by statute.

Raising objection to election.

Cited in Schuler v. Hogan, 168 Ill. 377, 48 N. E. 195; State ex rel. Hewen v. Elliott, 17 Wash. 23, 48 Pac. 734; State ex rel. Crawford v. Norris, 37 Neb. 313, 55 N. W. 1086; Lewis v. Boynton, 25 Colo. 492, 55 Pac. 732.—holding that contestant cannot raise objections to an election, thereby defeating will of electors, when he has neglected to avail himself of opportunity presented by election law; Baker v. Scott, 4 Idaho, 601, 43 Pac. 76, holding objection that name of successful candidate was improperly placed on official ballot too late after election.

Construction of adopted statute.

Cited in footnote to Wolf v. Youbert, 21 L. R. A. 772, which requires application in construing adopted statute of construction of courts of state from which adopted.

16 L. R. A. 769, STATE, RANSOM, PROSECUTOR, v. BLACK, 54 N. J. L. 446, 4 Atl. 489, 1021.

Election laws and right to vote.

Followed without discussion in State ex rel. Ransom v. Black, 65 N. J. L. 688.

Cited in State ex rel. Lamar v. Dillon, 32 Fla. 580, 22 L. R. A. 137, 14 So. 383, holding that election for city officer may be regulated by legislature, constitutional provisions not applying; State ex rel. Lamar v. Dillon, 32 Fla. 561, 22 L. R. A. 132, 14 So. 383, holding voting a privilege, and not a right; Morris v. Board of Canvassers, 49 W. Va. 264, 38 S. E. 500, upholding statute requiring voters to use only one ballot, which must contain names of all persons he votes for; May & T. Hardware Co. v. Birmingham, 123 Ala. 325, 26 So. 537, holding valid, provision requiring voters, voting against amendment, to strike out words "For . . . Amendment;" State ex rel. Runge v. Anderson, 100 Wis. 533, 42 L. R. A. 243, 76 N. W. 482, upholding act prohibiting political party from being represented on official ballot unless it polled at preceding election 2 per cent of vote; State ex rel. Plimmer v. Poston, 58 Ohio St. 633, 42 L. R. A. 238, footnote p. 237, 51 N. E. 150, holding valid, act requiring certified nomination to be made by convention representing political party polling at least 1 per cent of entire vote cast in state; Atty. Gen. ex rel. Reynolds v. May, 99 Mich. 546, 25 L. R. A. 328, 58 N. W. 483, holding it reasonable restriction of right to vote to require voter to swear he cannot read English before allowing another to mark his ballot; Cole v. Tucker, 164 Mass. 488, 29 L. R. A. 669, 41 N. E. 681, upholding statute making official ballot compulsory for city officers and optional for town officers; Ladd v. Holmes, 40 Or. 181, 91 Am. St. Rep. 457, 66 Pac. 714, holding valid, act limiting right of party electors to vote at primaries of their own parties; Com. v. Rogers, 181 Mass. 187, 63 N. E. 421, holding valid, act relating to voting lists at caucuses; Bliss v. Woolley, 68 N. J. L. 55, 52 Atl. 835, holding ballots furnished electors by municipal clerk under his construction of law, to be treated as valid.

Cited in footnote to Britton v. Election Comrs. 51 L. R. A. 115, which holds void, law depriving members of political party, polling less than 3 per cent of votes at preceding election, of right to nominate candidates; Lindstrom v. Manistee County, 19 L. R. A. 172, which refuses to exclude ballot with unauthorized vignette; State ex rel. Baxter v. Ellis, 17 L. R. A. 382, which requires rejection of ballots with device upon them in municipal election; State ex rel. McCarthy v. Moore, 59 L. R. A. 447, which sustains prohibition against placing on official ballot, name of unsuccessful candidate for party nomination at primary election; Chamberlin v. Wood, 56 L. R. A. 187, which authorizes limitation of votes to candidates whose names on official ballot; Brewer v. McClelland, 17 L. R. A. 845, which holds statute requiring notice of claim to be legal voter, from persons residing less than six months in county, void; Eaton v. Brown, 17 L. R. A. 697, which holds void, ballot law prohibiting marking elsewhere of ballot marked opposite name of political party.

Cited in notes (25 L. R. A. 484) on how far right to vote is absolute; (47 L. R. A. 807) on marking official ballot.

16 L. R. A. 774, BARRETT v. ROCKPORT ICE CO. 84 Me. 155, 24 Atl. 802.

Appropriation of ice.

Cited in Becker v. Hall, 116 Iowa, 591, 56 L. R. A. 574, footnote p. 573, 88 N. W. 324, holding that staking of banks of stream, and marking staking, or cleaning ice before thick enough to harvest, does not amount to appropriation.

Cited in footnote to Mansfield v. Place, 18 L. R. A. 39, which holds prescriptive right to entire ice on pond acquired by cutting from any points desired; Marsh v. McNider, 20 L. R. A. 333, which authorizes sale by tenant of right to cut ice on running stream; Eidemiller Ice Co. v. Guthrie, 28 L. R. A. 581, which holds right to take ice from pond in non-navigable stream in owner of land as against owner of pond with right of flowage; Concord Mfg. Co. v. Robertson, 18 L. R. A. 679, which holds littoral proprietor's right to cut ice on great pond not exclusive; Sanborn v. People's Ice Co. 51 L. R. A. 829, which holds taking of ice in large quantities from public lake not exercise of common right in its waters.

16 L. R. A. 776, HOLLEY v. GLOVER, 36 S. C. 404, 31 Am. St. Rep. 883, 15 S. E. 605.

Dower rights as property.

Cited in Gaffney v. Jefferies, 59 S. C. 569, 53 L. R. A. 920, footnote p. 918, 82 Am. St. Rep. 860, 38 S. E. 216, holding wife's dower right not barred by partition in kind between alienee of husband and other cotenants; Chouteau v. Missouri P. R. Co. 122 Mo. 394, 30 S. W. 299, holding inchoate dower interest not property which cannot be extinguished by condemnation proceedings against husband; Haggerty v. Wagner, 148 Ind. 650, 39 L. R. A. 392, 48 N. E. 366, holding that partition sale extinguishes inchoate right of dower of wife of cotenant not made party; Woman's Club Corp. v. Reed, 111 Ky. 811, 64 S. W. 739, holding wife's right of dower not passed on sale of husband's interest in land.

Cited in note (18 L. R. A. 76) on power of husband or his creditors to defeat wife's right of dower.

Conclusiveness of decree in partition.

Cited in Norwood v. Gregg, 67 S. C. 228, 45 S. E. 163, holding parties to partition suit bound by decree as to land included in description.

16 L. R. A. 787, ST. LOUIS & S. F. R. CO. v. MURRAY, 55 Ark. 248, 29 Am. St. Rep. 32, 18 S. W. 50.

Care of passenger required of carrier.

Cited in St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Rexroad, 59 Ark. 185, 26 S. W. 1037, holding erroneous instruction that railway liable if conductor in passing out of car might, with reasonable care, have seen child in charge of mother, yet injured her by closing door; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Sweet, 60 Ark. 557, 31 S. W. 571, holding "highest degree of care" is that which prudent and cautious man would exercise consistent with mode of conveyance and practical operation of railroad.

What is negligence in emergency.

Cited in St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Touhey, 67 Ark. 216, 77 Am. St. Rep. 109, 54 S. W. 577, holding, in cases of emergency, passenger justified in jumping from car if person of reasonable firmness and prudence would be so justified; Western Maryland R. Co. v. State, 95 Md. 647, 53 Atl. 969, holding sleeping driver, waked suddenly and told to jump from car derailed by breaking of axle, justified in doing as told.

Res gestæ.

Cited in Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Roller, 49 L. R. A. 89, 41 C. C. A. 40, 100 Fed. 756, holding admissible, evidence of what passenger and injured woman saw and heard after accident.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 749) on how near main transaction declarations must be made in order to constitute part of res gestæ.

16 L. R. A. 791, STATE ex rel. HASTINGS v. SMITH, 35 Neb. 13, 52 N. W. 700. Qualification, appointment, suspension, and removal of officers.

Cited in State ex rel. Churchill v. Hay, 45 Neb. 329, 63 N. W. 821, holding governor's power of removal administrative, and not judicial so as to be determined or reviewed by court; State ex rel. Churchill v. Bemis, 45 Neb. 737, 64 N. W. 348, holding valid, act making party affiliation a qualification for office; State ex rel. Horne v. Holcomb, 46 Neb. 94, 64 N. W. 437, sustaining contemporaneous construction of Constitution as to appointment of officers to institution for blind; State ex rel. Wheeler v. Stuht, 52 Neb. 226, 71 N. W. 941, discussing validity of act limiting qualification of persons entitled to appointment of police commissioner; People ex rel. Engley v. Martin, 19 Colo. 579, 24 L. R. A. 205, 36 Pac. 543, holding governor's order stating cause for removal of members of fire and police board exclusive and conclusive evidence of such cause; Hartigan v. West Virginia University, 49 W. Va. 51, 38 S. E. 698 (dissenting opinion), majority holding professor removable without notice by board of regents.

Cited in footnote to Re Advisory Opinion, 18 L. R. A. 594, which holds right to hold office not affected by suspension from same office during preceding term.

Distinguished in State ex rel. Gapen v. Somers, 35 Neb. 325, 53 N. W. 146, which holds city officers may be removed without charges where they are removable by mayor at pleasure.

16 L. R. A. 798, ALLEN v. KEILY, 17 R. I. 731, 33 Am. St. Rep. 905, 24 Atl. 776. Right to eject tenant.

Cited in footnotes to Irwin v. Hess, 35 L. R. A. 415, which holds as damages for wrongful ousting of tenant from part of farm, difference in rental value with and without such part; Smith v. Detroit Loan & Bldg. Asso. 39 L. R. A. 410, which sustains landlord's right of peaceable re-entry after default and notice that lease terminated.

Cited in note (55 L. R. A. 259) on liability for ejecting sick tenant, lodger, or other occupant from building when right of occupancy has terminated.

16 L. R. A. 800, UNION P. R. CO. v. LAPSLEY, 2 C. C. A. 149, 4 U. S. App. 542, 51 Fed. 174.

Imputed negligence.

Cited in Pyle v. Clark, 25 C. C. A. 193, 49 U. S. App. 260, 79 Fed. 748, and Turnpike Co. v. Yates, 108 Tenn. 440, 67 S. W. 69, holding negligence of driver cannot be imputed to person whom he is driving gratuitously; Chicago, St. P. & K. C. R. Co. v. Chambers, 15 C. C. A. 332, 32 U. S. App. 253, 68 Fed. 152, holding negligence of fellow servant not imputable to engineer killed at grade crossing by engine of another road; Honey v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 59 Fed. 425, holding negligence of wife struck by train at crossing not imputable to her husband who had preceded her; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Devore, 52 C. C. A. 82, 114 Fed. 160, holding negligence of father in driving, imputable to child held in its mother's arms; Duval v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 134 N. C. 343, 65 L. R. A. 727, 100 Am. St. Rep. 830, 46 S. E. 750, holding negligence of father not imputable to daughter riding with him; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Dougherty, 110 Ill. App. 206, and Farley v. Wilmington & N. C. Electric R. Co. 3 Penn. (Del.) 586, 52 Atl. 543, holding negligence of driver not imputable to gratuitous passenger.

Cited in footnotes to Mullen v. Owosso, 23 L. R. A. 693, which holds negligence of driver of private carriage imputable to woman voluntarily riding with him; Koplit v. St. Paul, 58 L. R. A. 74, which holds negligence of omnibus driver not imputable to member of picnic party carried; Illinois C. R. Co. v. McLeod, 52 L. R. A. 954, which holds hirer of driver and team bound to check driver's attempt to cross track without stopping or listening for train.

Distinguished in Chicago G. W. R. Co. v. Kowalski, 34 C. C. A. 4, 92 Fed. 313, holding that parent's fault cannot be imputed to infant in arms, suing in own right.

16 L. R. A. 803, MORNING JOURNAL ASSO. v. RUTHERFORD, 2 C. C. A. 354, 1 U. S. App. 296, 51 Fed. 513.

Malice in libel.

Followed in Smith v. Sun Printing & Pub. Asso. 5 C. C. A. 94, 14 U. S. App. 173, 55 Fed. 243, holding proper instruction that law implies malice, where there follows statement as to distinction between actual and implied malice and of rule when no actual malice shown.

Damages.

Cited in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 9 C. C. A. 320, 22 U. S. App. 102, 60 Fed. 999, holding proper instruction that measure of damages for injury to car was difference in value of car before accident and its value after accident and before being dismantled; Smith v. Matthews, 6 Misc. 168, 27 N. Y. Supp. 120, sustaining large verdict where proprietors of newspaper gave agent discretionary power of publishing or rejecting charge that married woman had eloped; Press Pub. Co. v. McDonald, 26 L. R. A. 535, 11 C. C. A. 162, 26 U. S. App. 167, 63 Fed. 245, holding that punitive damages may be awarded when libel published with "criminal indifference to civil obligations;" Burdick v. Missouri P. R. Co. 123 Mo. 250, 26 L. R. A. 400, footnote p. 385, 45 Am. St. Rep. 528, 27 S. W. 453 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that plaintiff may be required to remit excess in amount of damages awarded, as condition of affirmance; Butler v. Barrett, 130 Fed. 944, holding that punitive damages may be awarded for publication of libel copied from another paper.

What proper cross-examination.

Cited in Post Pub. Co. v. Hallam. 8 C. C. A. 207, 16 U. S. App. 613, 59 Fed. 536, holding it proper cross-examination to show that proprietor stated he ran paper sensationally to increase circulation.

16 L. R. A. 805, CHASE v. JEMMETT, 8 Utah, 231, 30 Pac. 757.

Proper compensation in condemnation.

Cited in footnotes to Becker v. Philadelphia & R. Terminal R. Co. 35 L. R. A. 583, which holds diminution in profits and value of merchandise by removal of business through condemnation of land not element of damages; St. Louis, K. & S. W. R. Co. v. Nyce, 48 L. R. A. 241, which holds purchaser on foreclosure of land on which railroad in course of construction entitled only to value of land on subsequent condemnation of right of way.

16 L. R. A. 808, HAWKINS v. FRONT STREET CABLE R. CO. 3 Wash. 592, 28 Am. St. Rep. 72, 28 Pac. 1021.

Presumption of negligence.

Cited in Chicago City R. Co. v. Rood, 163 Ill. 484, 54 Am. St. Rep. 478, 45 N. E. 238, holding mere fact of injury to passenger in street car not prima facie evidence of negligence on part of carrier; Klepsch v. Donald, 8 Wash. 164, 35 Pac. 621, holding that hurling of rock nearly a thousand feet, killing man in house, is prima facie proof of negligence in managing blast.

Cited in footnotes to Budd v. United Carriage Co. 27 L. R. A. 279, which holds running and kicking of team to public carriage makes prima facie case of negligence as to passenger; Dixon v. Pluns, 20 L. R. A. 699, which holds presumption of negligence arising from fall of chisel on sidewalk from scaffold; Springer v. Ford, 52 L. R. A. 930, which sustains presumption of negligence from injury to passenger by unexplained breaking of elevator appliance.

Negligence of passenger on street car.

Cited in footnote to Sweetland v. Lynn & B. R. Co. 51 L. R. A. 783, which sustains rule forbidding passengers to ride on front platform of electric car; North Chicago Street R. Co. v. Baur, 45 L. R. A. 108, which holds standing on street car platform with back against dashboard not necessarily negligent; Third Ave. R. Co. v. Barton, 52 L. R. A. 471, which denies right of passenger on running board of street car to recover for injuries by contact with pillar near track while passing around conductor.

Physician's liability for death.

Cited in footnote to Lathrope v. Flood, 57 L. R. A. 215, which denies physician's liability for death of child by abandoning mother during confinement.

Injuries causing premature delivery of child.

Cited in Plonty v. Murphy, 82 Minn. 271, 84 N. W. 1005, holding it not necessary in action for assault on pregnant woman, causing miscarriage, to show there was great pain and more impairment of health than in natural delivery.

Damages.

Cited in Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Baumgarten, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 258, 72 S. W. 78, holding measure of damages for personal injury to wife, to be mental and physical pain suffered and impairment of capacity to labor.

Cited in notes (32 L. R. A. 142) on recovery of damages for miscarriage; (26 L. R. A. 396) on power of appellate court to interfere with verdict for excessive damages.

16 L. R. A. 813, LINDSAY v. COOPER, 94 Ala. 170, 33 Am. St. Rep. 105, 11 So. 325.

When estoppel arises.

Cited in Cooper v. Lindsay, 109 Ala. 340, 19 So. 379, holding infant distributee of estate not estopped on coming of age, to claim share in land upon which another distributee had taken mortgage; Ricketts v. Croom, 102 Ala. 336, 14 So. 637, holding partner inducing purchase of his half interest in partnership by false representation that other's interest unencumbered estopped to set up mortgage thereon; Goetter v. Norman Bros. 107 Ala. 596, 19 So. 56, holding that estoppel binds one claiming under person estopped; Freeman v. Brown, 96 Ala. 304, 11 So. 249, holding mortgagee estopped to set up lien of mortgage against purchaser of land, knowing he relied on statement that mortgage released, and assisting in sale without informing him to contrary; Stephenson v. Marsalis, 11 Tex. Civ. App. 171, 33 S. W. 383, holding that heirs, including minors, cannot accept proceeds of unauthorized sale of land by administrator, and then recover land without returning money; Hundley v. Chadick, 109 Ala. 586, 19 So. 845, holding one estopped to deny partnership not existing, not estopped to bring action on attachment bond made payable to such partnership.

Distinguished in Formby v. Hood, 119 Ala. 235, 24 So. 359, holding that estoppel does not arise where one claiming property sold by another does not wilfully conceal his title and his statements were not intended to deceive purchaser.

Laches.

Cited in Rainey v. McQueen, 121 Ala. 194, 25 So. 920, holding one suing to redeem from mortgage not chargeable with laches if action begun within reasonable time after coming of age.

Rule of caveat emptor.

Cited in Electric Lighting Co. v. Rust, 117 Ala. 691, 23 So. 751, holding that purchaser at execution sale acquires only such interest as was possessed by execution debtor, and is bound by mortgage executed prior to sale; Ezzell v. Brown, 121 Ala. 154, 25 So. 832, holding that rule of caveat emptor applies to judicial sales; Clemmons v. Cox, 114 Ala. 355, 21 So. 426, holding that purchaser at execution sale takes title subject to pre-existing equities; Milner & K. Co. v. DeLoach Mill Mfg. Co. 139 Ala. 651, 101 Am. St. Rep. 63, 36 So. 765, denying right of bona fide purchaser at attachment sale to hold property as against real owner.

16 L. R. A. 819, LUTZ v. ATLANTIC & P. R. CO. 6 N. M. 496, 30 Pac. 912.

Liability for injury due to fellow servant.

Cited in Maher v. Union P. D. & G. R. Co. 45 C. C. A. 302, 106 Fed. 310, holding injury due to negligence of fellow servants, and not to despatcher, when train backed from siding into main track in spite of orders; Miller v. Coffin, 19 R. I. 170, 36 Atl. 6, holding statute giving right of action for death of anyone, whether or not a passenger, in care of carriers, does not apply to employee killed by negligence of fellow servant.

Master's liability.

Cited in McGinn v. McCormick, 109 La. 402, 33 So. 382, holding master liable to servant for injury due to defective hand-car, combined with negligence of fellow servant.

Cited in footnotes to Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Laack, 18 L. R. A. 215, which L. R. A. AU.—VOL. II.—70.

authorizes recovery by servant returning to protect master's property, for injury due to master's negligence concurring with unforeseen cause; Noble v. Bessemer S. S. Co. 54 L. R. A. 456, which holds master liable for injury by defective tool, though defect known to fellow servant procuring tool; Loveless v. Standard Gold Min. Co. 50 L. R. A. 596, which holds master liable for injury from combined negligence of himself and fellow servant.

Cited in note (54 L. R. A. 168) on vice principalship as determined with reference to character of act which caused injury.

Proximate cause.

Cited in footnotes to Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Elliott, 20 L. R. A. 582, as to proximate cause of injury to shipper while stepping from stock car to caboose; Western R. Co. v. Mutch, 21 L. R. A. 316, which holds excessive speed not proximate cause of death of boy attempting to catch on train; McKenna v. Baessler, 17 L. R. A. 310, which holds original fire proximate cause of destruction of property by back fire; People v. Lewis, 45 L. R. A. 783, which holds suicide of person mortally wounded does not relieve assailant from guilt of manslaughter.

16 L. R. A. 834, WATERS v. RICHMOND & D. R. CO. 110 N. C. 338, 14 S. E. 802.

Liability for church subscription made on Sunday.

Cited in footnote to First M. E. Church v. Donnell, 46 L. R. A. 858, which sustains subscription to church indebtedness made on Sunday.

Duty to furnish cars to shippers.

Cited in note (43 L. R. A. 228) on duty of railroad company to furnish cars to shippers.

Excuse for breach of contract.

Cited in Crystal Ice Co. v. Wylie, 60 Kan. 109, 68 Pac. 1086, holding alleged intended illegal use no defense to action for breach of contract to furnish ice; Darlington v. Missouri P. R. Co. 99 Mo. App. 18, 72 S. W. 122, holding condition of weather no excuse for breach of contract as to unloading cars.

Carrier's liability to passenger.

Cited in McNeill v. Durham & C. R. Co. 135 N. C. 724, 47 S. E. 765 (dissenting opinion), majority holding railroad company liable for injury to gratuitous passenger riding contrary to law.

16 L. R. A. 836, PEOPLE ex rel. CARTER v. RICE, 135 N. Y. 473, 31 N. E. 921.

When apportionment valid.

Cited in Baird v. Kings County, 138 N. Y. 105, 20 L. R. A. 83, 33 N. E. 827, holding apportionment of representatives for assembly districts among counties according to population means that it shall be equal; Baird v. Kings County, 138 N. Y. 113, 20 L. R. A. 83, 33 N. E. 827, holding equality of representation should be, as nearly as may be with regard to convenience and contiguity of territory, indivisibility of town and number of inhabitants; Re Smith, 90 Hun. 572, 36 N. Y. Supp. 40, holding that apportionment of towns in assembly districts should have been the reverse of that made, where it is apparent that reversal would make number of voters more nearly equal; Re Whitney, 142 N. Y. 533, 60 N. Y. S. R. 110, 37 N. E. 621, holding harmless, error in apportioning assembly districts by which alien as well as voting population were included; State ex rel. Winnie v. Stoddard, 25 Nev. 458, 51 L. R. A. 232, footnote p. 229, 62 Pac. 237, denying mandamus to compel issuance of notice of election under prior apportionment act, where same objection as to constitutionality appears as in later act; Re Baird, 142 N. Y. 529, 60 N. Y. S. R. 105, 37 N. E. 619, refusing to set aside apportionment of assembly districts because wards of city were divided; Parker v. State, 133 Ind. 189, 18 L. R. A. 572, 32 N. E. 836, holding that apportioning state into assembly districts is legislative, but that apportionment can be passed on by court; Denney v. State, 144 Ind. 509, 31 L. R. A. 729, 42 N. E. 929, holding that unconstitutional apportionment law may be declared void, notwithstanding it is exercise of political power.

Cited in footnotes to Farrelly v. Cole, 44 L. R. A. 464, which holds division of state into legislative districts designed for future elections, and not to affect title to officer of members; People ex rel. Baird v. Broom, 20 L. R. A. 81, which requires discretion of supervisors in dividing county into assembly districts to be honest and fair; State ex rel. Morris v. Wrightson, 22 L. R. A. 548, which holds constitutionality of apportionment act subject of judicial inquiry; Parker v. State, 18 L. R. A. 567, which holds invalid, scheme for allowing county with less than unit of population to vote for two senators.

Distinguished in People ex rel. Woodyatt v. Thompson, 155 Ill. 475, 40 N. E. 307, refusing to sustain apportionment where it was made without any regard to requirement that it should be made according to county lines.

Validity and construction of statutes.

Cited in Re Brenner, 35 Misc. 215, 70 N. Y. Supp. 744, holding that invalidity of act providing for commissioner of jurors must be shown by those asserting it; Reilly v. Gray, 77 Hun. 410, 28 N. Y. Supp. 811, holding that constitutional prohibition of lotteries does not apply to pool selling; Pearce v. Stephens, 18 App. Div. 106, 79 N. Y. S. R. 422, 45 N. Y. Supp. 422, sustaining act providing that two police commissioners of county shall not belong to same political party; New York Bd. Fire Underwriters v. Whipple & Co. 2 App. Div. 365, 37 N. Y. Supp. 712, holding right to levy assessment upon persons engaged in insurance business in a city, within police power; Swikehard v. Michels, 81 Hun. 330, 30 N. Y. Supp. 1135, affirming 8 Misc. 573, 29 N. Y. Supp. 777, holding that local statute providing for sewer not invalid, because sewer constructed incidentally to carry off surface water and drain low land; Roland Park Co. v. State, 80 Md. 453, 31 Atl. 298, holding consequence which may result in inequality or injustice potent factor in construction of act, and sometimes conclusive of its meaning; Re McGinness, 13 Misc. 717, 35 N. Y. Supp. 820, holding that legislature exceeded powers in changing boundaries of certain counties; Rathbone v. Wirth, 150 N. Y. 509, 34 L. R. A. 426, 45 N. E. 15 (dissenting opinion), majority holding act discriminating between parties as to eligibility to membership in certain board, unconstitutional; Bell v. Gaynor, 14 Misc. 339, 36 N. Y. Supp. 122 (dissenting opinion), as to presumption of constitutionality of act relating to milk cans; People v. Lochner, 177 N. Y. 150, 101 Am. St. Rep. 775, 69 N. E. 373, holding constitutional, act limiting hours of labor in bakeries or confectionery establishments.

Subject expressed in title.

Cited in Parfitt v. Ferguson, 3 App. Div. 196, 38 N. Y. Supp. 466, sustaining so much of act relating to lighting town as is expressed in its title.

Constitutional provision as to population.

Cited in Re Silkman, 88 App. Div. 109, 84 N. Y. Supp. 1025 (concurring opinion), as to question whether word "population" as used in Constitution includes all inhabitants of state.

Actions affecting public rights.

Cited in footnote to State ex rel. Lamb v. Cunningham, 17 L. R. A. 145, which grants private application to restrain publication of election notice on attorney general's refusal to sue.

16 L. R. A. 858, PARKER v. MACOMBER, 17 R. I. 674, 24 Atl. 464.

Recovery where performance prevented by intervening impossibility.

Cited in footnotes to Ontario Deciduous Fruit Growers' Asso. v. Cutting Fruit Packing Co. 53 L. R. A. 681, which denies liability for failure to deliver specified quantity of fruit contracted for, from failure of crop, due to unusual climatic conditions; Pinkham v. Libby, 49 L. R. A. 693, which denies right to recover amount paid for fruitless service of stallion under agreement for its return, prevented by its death; Angus v. Scully, 49 L. R. A. 562, which sustains right to recover under contract to move building, destroyed by fire before work completed; Pengra v. Wheeler, 21 L. R. A. 726, which holds lessor released from covenant to repair leased dams within specified time by impossibility of making repair; Remy v. Olds, 21 L. R. A. 645, which denies right to recover on contract, performance of which prevented by act of God; Board of Education v. Townsend, 52 L. R. A. 868, which holds blowing down of schoolhouse not excuse from contract to remove and rebuild; Lorillard v. Clyde, 24 L. R. A. 113, which holds dissolution of corporation defense to guaranty of dividends for term of years; Genet v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 19 L. R. A. 127, which holds agreement implied that lessee will not wilfully incapacitate itself to take out more than minimum quantity of coal per year; Hughes v. Gross, 32 L. R. A. 620, which holds contract of employment by firm not dissolved by death of member.

Cited in notes (24 L. R. A. 235) on effect of part performance of contract for services; (23 L. R. A. 712, 713) on effect on contract of death of party thereto.

16 L. R. A. 861, CHURCH v. CHICAGO, M. & ST. P. R. CO. 50 Minn. 218, 52 N. W. 647.

Liability for injury to volunteer.

Cited in Evarts v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 56 Minn. 146, 22 L. R. A. 666, 45 Am. St. Rep. 460, 57 N. W. 459, holding railway bound to at least same care towards volunteer assistant as in case of trespasser; Langan v. Tyler, 51 C. C. A. 507, 114 Fed. 720, holding that no liability arises against owner for death of volunteer assistant of defendant's servant while taking apart electrical machine; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Ginley, 100 Tenn. 478, 45 S. W. 348, holding that conductor has, by implication, authority to ask outsiders to stop runaway car; McGill v. Maine & N. H. Granite Co. 70 N. H. 128, 85 Am. St. Rep. 618, 46 Atl. 684, refusing recovery to man run over by runaway cars he was trying to stop, because acting outside of line of duty; Cleveland Terminal & Valley R. Co. v. Marsh, 63 Ohio St. 246, 52 L. R. A. 146, 58 N. E. 821, holding that one assisting servant at latter's request, acting in his own behalf, is also regarded as present upon company's sufferance; Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Argo, 82 Ill. App. 676, holding railroad not bound to look out for volunteer yard clerk and baggage man, acting as substitute with consent of station agent who was without authority to employ; Wagen v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 80 Minn. 95, 82 N. W. 1107, holding that relation of master and servant does not arise by implication because station agent, without authority, directs volunteer to go on train as baggage man.

Cited in footnote to Mitchell-Tranter Co. v. Ehmet, 55 L. R. A. 710, which authorizes recovery for injury during noon intermission to servant removing broken timbers at superior's direction.

Cited in note (22 L. R. A. 663) on assumption by volunteer of risks of service.

The annotation in 16 L. R. A. 861, was referred to with approval in Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. R. Co. v. Finnell, 108 Ky. 138, 57 L. R. A. 267, 55 S. W. 902, holding railroad company not liable for fatal injury to one voluntarily assisting brakeman.

•

3 6105 063 243 864

